A Description of LONDON in General.

CHAP. I.

The Situation, Extent, Antiquity, Name, and Buildings of
L O N D O N.

LONDON.

Its Situation.

LONDON is the Metropolis of Great Britain, the Seat of her Monarchs, the largest in Extent, the fairest built, the most populous, and best inhabited City in Europe, or, perhaps, in the whole World; nor yields it to any in the Advantages of Trade and Commerce. It lies in 51 Degrees 30 Minutes of North Latitude, in the County of Middlesex, on a wholesome Soil, mixt with Gravel and Sand, and is, the greatest Part of it, built on a Hill with an easy Ascent, no less pleasantly than conveniently situated on the River Thames, at a Place where it is cast into a Crescent, or Half Moon, so that each Part may enjoy the Benefit of the River, and yet not be far distant from one another. The said River divides the Cities of London and Westminster from the Borough of Southwark; but there is a Communication between them by a magnificent Stone Bridge, supported by 19 Arches, called London-Bridge, with Houses and Shops thereon, which make it appear more like a Street than a Bridge.

BRIDGE.

THIS

THIS great City is about 60 Miles distant from the Sea, and therefore not in Danger of being surprized by the Fleets of foreign Enemies; nor is it annoyed by the moist Vapours of the Sea; yet it is near enough to have Ships of the greatest Burthen brought into its very Bosom, by the Help of the Tide, every 12 Hours. On the North Side it is very much shelter'd from the cold Winds by Hampstead, Highgate, and the rising Grounds of Islington; but lies open to the more kindly West.

Sea-Coal forbidden to be used in the City by Edward I.

It was formerly thought to contribute much to the Preservation of the healthy and good Air of the City, that nothing was burnt in it but Wood and Charcoal, even in Trades that used great Quantities of Firing; but, about the latter End of the Reign of Edward I. Brewers, Dyers, and other Artificers, beginning to use Sea Coal, in or near the City, several Prelates, Nobles, Commoners, and other Inhabitants of That, and the Village of Southwark, Wapping, and East Smithfield, complained thereof, as a publick Nuisance, to the King, who prohibited the Burning Sea Coal by Proclamation. Which being disobeyed by many, for their private Lucre, upon a Second Complaint he issued out a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, to enquire of all such, who burned Sea-Coal against his Proclamation, within the City, or Parts adjacent, and to punish them for the First Offence, by large Fines; and for the Second by demolishing their Furnaces, Kilns, &c. wherein they burnt the said Coals.

For this End also, Provision was formerly made against Stinks and annoying Smells, arising from killing Beasts in the City; which was once thought to have occasioned a grievous Plague there, in the Reign of Edward III. who, to prevent the like Infection, sent his Command, about the Year 1361, to the Mayor and Sheriffs, to suffer no Butcher to kill his Cattle nearer the City than Stratford, or Knightsbridge. This is not observed now, nor indeed seems it necessary since the new Building of London; for the Streets, Lanes, &c. being wider, the Air is not so much pent up, nor consequently so liable to Infection as before; besides, the Markets are now removed out of the Streets, made commodious, and have proper Methods taken to keep them clean, of which we shall speak in another Place.

THE Extent of London from East to West, that is, from Limehouse to the End of Totbill-street, Westminster, is about seven Miles and a half; but its Breadth, from North to South, is not above two Miles and a half, even where it is broadest, as from the End of St. Leonard's Shoreditch to the farthest End of Blackman-street in Southwark.

THE Author of a late Calculation says, London, upon a Medium, is seven Miles long, and one Mile and a Quarter broad; which make an Area of near nine Square Miles. How great an Improvement is this since the Time of Queen Elizabeth, if what Sir William Petty says be right, That when he wrote, about the Year 1686, it was then computed to be seven Times bigger than in her Reign?

As to the Populousness of the City, take the following Conjectures. James Howel, Esq; who wrote an History of London, saith, That in the Year 1636, King Charles I. sent to the Lord Mayor to make a Scrutiny what Number of Papists and Strangers were in the City, and that Sir Edward Bromfield, then Mayor, took Occasion from thence to make a Cense, or Computation, of the People, who were, Men, Women and Children, found to be 700,000, that lived only within the Bars of the Jurisdiction; and it was judged, he said, by all probable Supputation, That London had more, by a third Part, when he published his Book, which was somewhat above twenty Years after. The City of Westminster, and all the Suburbs without the Lord Mayor's Jurisdiction, and the Buildings contiguous, contained at least as many more: So that taking all together he reckoned the Number of Souls might amount to above one Million and a half: But this Computation was very much too high.

Sir William Petty beforementioned, a Member of the Royal Society, observed, That there were, Anno 1682, 84,000 tenanted Houses in London; which, at eight Persons in each, make 672,000; but he fixed it to a somewhat less Number, and believed there were about 670,000 Souls in London, at that Time.

By London he meant the Houses within the Walls, with the Liberties thereof; Westminster, the Borough of Southwark, and so much of the Ground of Middlesex and Surrey as had Houses built thereon contiguous to the rest.

THE Author of the Present State of Great Britain, in the last Edition, published in the Year 1731, reckons there are about 124,000 Dwelling-Houses in London; which Calculation we have Reason to believe is pretty exact, from several Enquiries we have made by different Methods. Now, according to Sir William Petty's Computation of eight to a House, the whole Number of Inhabitants in London will amount to 992,000: And to prove whether or no Sir William's Computation was right, we made the following Experiment; we took the Number of Inhabitants in 150 Houses promiscuously at three several Times, and always in different Places, and found the Produce to be 1200, within a very small Number over or under, each Time, which is at the Rate of eight to a House as aforesaid; and if this Calculation answers in three Times 150 Houses, taken in such a Manner, we may suppose it will answer in any Number.

By a Computation of the Burials and Christenings in this City, we may be able to compare the Bigness and Populousness of it with other great Cities in the World. As for Example, in the Year 1707, the Christenings in the Imperial City Vienna, amounted to 3963, and the Burials to 4354; whereas the Christenings in London, the same Year, were 16,066, and the Burials 21,600.

To add no more on this Head, the Account of Burials in the last Year, viz. from the 14th of December 1731 to the 12th of December 1732, (whereby may be computed the Number of Souls in London and Westminster, as well as the Increase of them) was,

In the 97 Parishes within the Walls	2224
In the 19 Parishes without the Walls	6994
In the 20 Out Parishes in Middlesex and Surrey	8742
In the 10 Parishes in the City and Suburbs of Westminster	5398
Burials in all	23,358

AND this we may suppose a very moderate Year, since but three Years before, viz. 1729, there died no less than 29,722.

LONDON has been compared to Paris, now one of the most flourishing Cities in Europe, and is said to exceed it in all the following Particulars. I. In the Number, Wealth and great Estates of the Inhabitants, the Number of their Servants, and Splendor of their Equipages. II. In the Wholesomeness of the Air. III. In the more cleanly and convenient Way of Living. IV. In the Preference of the River Thames to the Seine, being both pleasanter and more navigable, its Water wholesomer, and for the great Bridge of London, built over it. V. In the Shipping and Foreign Trade; London therein exceeding both Paris and Roan. VI. In the Cheapness of all the most necessary Sorts of Food, and the great Variety and Plenty of

Its Populousness.

of all Sorts of Drink. VII. In the Goodness and Cheapness of Fewel. VIII. In the Magnificence of the Churches; no one at Paris being so large as St. Paul's, nor so beautiful as K. Henry the VIIIth's Chapel. IX. In the Courts of Justice, the Inns of Court, and Chancery, and the Lawyers Chambers. And lastly, In the Hospitals, so many and so richly endow'd. M. Paschoud, in his Treatise on Geography, says, That Paris is, at most, but two Thirds as big as London; Amsterdam one Fourth; Rome and Venice one Fifth; Lions one Sixth; Toulouse one Seventh; Rouen one Ninth; Dublin one Ninth; and Bristol one Twelfth.

The Original of LONDON.

As to the Original and Antiquity of London, as the Roman Writers, to do Honour to the City of Rome, deduced the Original of That from the Gods, so Geffrey of Monmouth, the Welsh Historian would give the same Glory to the famous City of London, and reporteth, that Brute, who was lineally descended from Aeneas, the Son of Venus, about the Year of the World 2855, and 1108 Years before the Nativity of Christ, did build this City near unto the River now called Thames, and named it Troynovant, or Trenovant. But herein, as Livy, the most famous Historian among the Romans, saith, Antiquity is pardonable, and hath an especial Privilege, by interlacing divine Matters with human, to make the first Foundations of Cities more honourable, more sacred, and as it were of greater Majesty.

THIS Tradition, concerning the antient Foundation of the City, by Brute, was of such Credit that it is asserted in an old Tract, preserved in the Archives of the Chamber of London, which is transcribed into Liber Albus, and long before that by Horn, in his old Book of Laws and Customs, called Liber Horn. And a Copy of this Tract was taken out of the City Books by the Lord Mayor and Aldermens Special Order, and sent to King Henry VI. in the Seventh Year of his Reign; which Copy yet remains among the Records of the Tower, in the following Words.

An old Tract asserting Brute to be the Founder.

Inter nobiles Urbes Orbis, &c. " Among the noble Cities of the World which Fame cries up, " the City of London, the only Seat of the Realm " of England, is the principal, which widely " spreads abroad the Rumour of its Name. It is " happy for the Wholesomeness of the Air, for " the Christian Religion, for its most worthy Liberty, and most antient Foundation. For, according to the Credit of Chronicles, it is considerably older than Rome, being built by Brute, after the Likeness of great Troy, before that was built by Romulus and Remus. Whence to this Day it useth and enjoyeth the antient City of Troy's Liberties, Rights and Customs. For it hath a Senatorial Dignity, with smaller Magistrates. And it hath Annual Sheriffs instead of Consuls. For whosoever repair thither, of whatsoever Condition they be, whether Free or Servants, they obtain there the Refuge of Defence and Freedom. Almost all the Bishops, Abbots, and Nobles of England, are, as it were, Citizens and Freemen of this City, having their noble Inns here.

THESE and many more Matters of Remark, concerning this most noble City, remain in a very old Book, called Recordatorium Civitatis: And in the Book called Speculum.

GEFFREY of Monmouth saith, That King Lud about 1060 Years after, not only repaired this City, but enlarged the same with fair Buildings, Towers, and Walls, and, after his own Name, called it Caire-Lud, or Lud's-Town. And the strong Gate, which he built in the West Part of the City, he likewise called Ludgate; and that in Process of Time, by a Coalition of the two Words, Lud's Town, and a softening the Sound, it took the Name of LONDON; but Cambden and others will have it called Llongdin; a British Word, answering to the Saxon Word Shipton [Shipton] that is a Town of Ships: And indeed none hath more Right to take that Name than this City, with Respect to its commodious Situation for Shipping on so fine and Navigable a River as the Thames, which swelling at certain Hours with the Ocean Tides, by a deep and safe Channel, is sufficient to bring up Ships of the greatest Burthen to her Sides, and thereby furnisheth her Inhabitants with Riches from every Part of the known World. The following are Cambden's Words, according to Bishop Gibson's Translation.

Etymology of the Word LONDON.

VOL. I.

" TACITUS, Ptolemy and Antoninus call it Londinium and Longidinium; Ammianus, Lundinum and Augusta; Stephanus, in his Book of Cities, Λονδωνιον; our British Lundayn; the old Saxons, Loncen-ceayten, Loncen-byng, Loncen-þyc; Foreigners, Londra and Londres; our own Nation LONDON; the Fabulous Writers, Troja Nova, Dinas Belin, i. e. The City of Belin, and Caer-Lud, from one King Luddus, whom they affirm to have given it both Being and Name; but as for those new broached Names and Originals, as also Erasmus's Conjecture, that it came from Lindum, a City of Rhodes, I leave them to those that are inclinable to admire them. For my own Part, since Cæsar and Strabo have told me that the antient Britons call'd such Woods or Groves as they fenced with Trees they had cut down, Cities, or Towns, and since, I have been informed that in the British they call such Places Llhwyn; I am almost of this Opinion that London is, by Way of Eminence, simply called a City, or a City in a Wood. But if that do not hit, give me Leave, without the Charge of Inconstancy, to guess once more, that it had its Name from the same Original that it had its Growth and Glory; I mean Ships, call'd by British Llong; so that London is as much as to say, an Harbour, or City of Ships. For the Britons term a City Dinas, which the Latins turn'd into Dinum: Upon which Account it is called in one Place Longidinium; and in a Song of an antient British Bard Llongporth, i. e. a Port or Harbour for Ships, and by the same Word, Bologne in France, in Ptolemy Gessoriacum Navale, is turn'd by the British Glossary, Bolung Long. For several Cities have had their Names from Shipping, as Naupactus, Naupliamos, Nauplia, Navalia Augusti, &c. None of which can lay better Claim to the Name of an Harbour than our LONDON.

THIS City was in no small Repute, being built by the first Founder of the British Empire, and honoured with the Sepulchre of divers of their Kings, as Brute, Lochrine, Cunodagius, and Gorbodus, Fathers of Ferrex and Porrex, who were the Last of the Line of Brute.

MULMUTIUS Dunwallo, Son of Cloton, Duke of Cornwall, having vanquished his Competitors, and established himself in the Throne, caused a Temple to be erected, called The Temple of Peace, on, or near the Place where Blackwell-Hall, or as some will have it, St. Paul's now stands.

A Temple built to Peace by Mulmutius Dunwallo.

BELINUS, the Son of Dunwallo, built an Haven in Troynovant, with a Gate over it, which Place still bears the Name of Beline's-gate, or Billingsgate; on this Gate was set a Brazen Vessel that contained the Ashes of his Body burnt after his Death.

An Haven built by Belinus.

THE said Belinus is supposed to have built the Tower of London, and to have appointed three chief Pontiffs to superintend all Religious Affairs throughout the Kingdom; whereof one had his See in London, and the other two in York and Carleon: But, there being very little left upon Record, we cannot say more concerning these British

B

King L U D. tish Princes before King LUD, the eldest Son of Hely, who began his Reign about 69 Years before the Birth of Christ. He was a Prince much commended by Historians for his great Valour, noble Deeds, and Liberality; for amending the Laws of the Country; and for repairing this City, erecting therein many fair Buildings, and encompassing it with a Stone Wall. In the West Part he built a strong Gate, as was said before, called Ludgate, where are now standing, in Niches, the Statues of this good King, and his two Sons, one on each Side of him, he having been buried near thereunto, after an honourable Reign, in a Temple of his own building.

LUD had two Sons, Androgeus and Theomantius, [or Temanticus,] who not being of a fit Age to govern, at their Father's Death, Cassibellan their Uncle, seized on the Crown. It was about the eighth Year of his Reign that Julius Caesar arrived in Britain, which he soon conquered; in what Manner he thus relates in his own Commentaries.

JULIUS CÆSAR arrives in BRITAIN.

Routs the BRITONS.

"CÆSAR, having landed his Army, and chose a convenient Place to encamp in, enquired of the Prisoners, where the Enemy was lodged; and between Three and Four in the Morning, having left 10 Cohorts and 300 Horse, under the Command of Q. Artius, to secure the Navy, he marched towards the Britons; being the less uneasy for his Fleet, because he left them at Anchor on a smooth and open Shore: He had not marched 12 Miles, before he saw the Enemy, who, having posted their Horse and Chariots on the Banks of the River, gave us Battle, and endeavoured to oppose our Passage, but were repulsed by our Cavalry, and obliged to retire to the Woods, notwithstanding the Advantage of the Ground. Here they had a Post well fortify'd, where Art and Nature had equally play'd their Parts, a Barricado which they had formerly built, during the Times of their Civil Wars: All the Passages to it were block'd up by Heaps of Trees, which were cut down for that Purpose; they never ventured out of this Place but in small Parties, and prevented the Romans from entering; but the Soldiers of the Seventh Legion having cast themselves into a Testudo, and thrown up a Mount against their Works, took the Place, and expelled them the Woods, without receiving many Wounds: But Cæsar would not permit them to follow the Pursuit, because he knew not the Country; and the Day being already far spent, he resolved to bestow the rest of it in fortifying his Camp.

A Storm shatters the Roman Fleet.

"THE next Morning early, Cæsar, having divided his Army into three Battalions, sent both his Horse and Foot to pursue the Enemy: They had not travelled far, before they came within Sight of the British Rear; at which Instant there arrived a Party of Horse from Q. Artius, to acquaint Cæsar, that the Night before there had happened a dreadful Storm, which had shatter'd almost all his Navy, and cast the Ships upon the Shore, spight of their Anchors and Cables; nor was all the Mariners and Pilots were able to do, sufficient to oppose the Fury of the Wind, which had done the Fleet a considerable Damage.

CÆSAR refits his Navy and causes it to be haul'd up to dry Land.

"UPON this Intelligence, Cæsar, recalling his Legions and Cavalry from their intended Journey, return'd to his Fleet, where he was an Eye-Witness of the Misfortunes he had received an Account of; for 40 Ships were entirely lost, and he saw the rest could not be refitted, without infinite Trouble: Wherefore, having chosen some Carpenters from amongst the Legions, and writ for others to Gaul, he sent Labienus Orders to build as many Ships as he could with those Legions he had there: And though

"he found it would be a very troublesome Business, yet he thought it most convenient to have the Fleet haul'd up to Land, and inclosed within the Fortifications of the Camp: To effect this Design, the Soldiers labour'd 10 Days and Nights, without Intermision; when having drawn his Shipping to Shore, and strongly fortified his Camp, leaving the same Guard as formerly, he returned to the Place where he had desisted from pursuing the Enemy. Here he found far greater Numbers of the Britons assembled, than he left at his Return to the Fleet.

"BY general Consent the whole Management of the War was left to the Care of Cassivellaunus, whose Territories were divided by the River Thames from the Sea Coasts, and extended fourscore Miles into the Island; for tho' he had formerly made War on the Rest of his Country-Men, yet upon our Arrival they all united, and pitched upon him as the fittest Person to direct them at so important a Conjunction.

CASSIVELLAUNUS made Generalissimo of the BRITONS.

"THE Enemy's Horse and Chariots, had a sharp Skirmish with our Men during their March; but the Romans repulsing them from all Sides; drove them into the Woods, and having slain a great many, pursued the rest so far, till they lost some of their own Party: The Britons not long after returning, whilst the Romans, who little expected them, were fortifying their Camp, made a sudden Sally out of the Woods, and fell upon our advanced Guard; whereupon Cæsar detach'd the two first Cohorts of his Legions to their Assistance: These Cohorts were drawn up very near each other; but the Enemy, whilst our Men were surprized with their new Way of Fighting, boldly broke through the Midst of them, and returned again without receiving any Loss. Q. Labeo Durus lost his Life in this Action; but at last some fresh Cohorts coming up to their Relief, the Britons were repulsed.

The BRITONS attack the ROMANS whilst on their March; but are repulsed.

They return.

And are again repulsed.

"THE Day after the Enemy lodged themselves in the Hills at a considerable Distance from our Camp, but seldom appeared, not being so eager at Skirmishing with our Cavalry as formerly; but about Noon, when Cæsar had dispatched three Legions, and all the Cavalry under the Command of C. Trebonius to forage, on a sudden they assailed our Foragers from all Sides, falling in with the Legions and their Standards; but the Romans returning their Charge very briskly, beat them back again, nor did our Cavalry desist from the Pursuit till they had entirely routed them; depending on the Legions, who followed close after to sustain them in Case of Necessity.

The BRITONS attack the ROMAN Foragers.

But are routed with considerable Loss.

"AFTER this, Cæsar march'd his Army into the Confines of Cassivellaunus, towards the Thames, which River is only fordable in one Place, and that with great Difficulty: So soon as he came thither he saw the Enemy's Forces drawn up in a considerable Body on the opposite Bank, which was fortified with sharp Stakes, the Britons had likewise driven many Piles of the same Kind into the Bottom of the River, whose Tops were covered, by the Water. Cæsar having Intelligence of this from the Prisoners and Deserters, sent his Cavalry before, commanding the Legions to follow close after them; and with such Expedition did they perform his Orders, though the Water took them up to the Neck, that the Enemy, not being able to sustain their Assault, forsook the Banks and fled.

Puts CASSIVELLAUNUS again to Flight.

"Thus Cassivellaunus, having lost all Hopes of Success by a Battle, disbanded the greatest Part of his Forces, and retaining only about 4000 Chariots, observed our Motions from Time

Who disbands
Part of his Army, and retires
to the Woods.

" Time to Time, keeping himself at some Dis" tance in the Woods, or such Places where the " Romans had no Access; from those Countries
" he knew we designed to march to, he took " care to carry off the Cattle and Natives before" hand into the Woods; and whenever our Ca" valry ventured a little too far to lay the Coun" try Waste, being well acquainted with all the " Roads and By-ways, he would detach a Party
" of his Chariots out of the Woods to attack us;
" nor could our Horse engage them without great " Danger, which prevented our making such Ex" cursions as we would have done otherwise.

" IN the mean Time the Trinobantes, who " possess one of the most considerable Provinces in
" the Island, sent Ambassadors to Cæsar, promi" sing to deliver themselves up to his Disposal,
" and submit to his Commands, desiring withal
" that he would please to defend Mandubratius
" from the Oppression of Cassivellaunus, and send " him to them for their King and Governor:
" This Manubratius was the Son of Imanuentius,
" who formerly possessing that Kingdom, was " slain by Cassivellaunus, and to avoid his Fa" ther's Fate had fled to Cæsar, who promised
" him Protection: Cæsar granted their Request,
" but demanded forty Hostages from them, and
" Corn for his Army; which Conditions they rea" dily performed.

What the BRITONS
called a Town.

" THE Trinobantes thus protected, from their " Enemies, and secured by his Orders from be" ing plunder'd by his Soldiers, the Cenimagi,
" Segontiaci, Ancalites, Bibroci, and Cassi sub" mitted themselves likewise by their Ambassa" dors to Cæsar. From these he had Intelligence " that Cassivellaunus's Town, which was fortified
" with Woods and Marshes, and stored with " Plenty of Men and Cattle, was but a small
" Distance from his Camp; for the Britons call a " thick Wood, surrounded with a Ditch and for" tified with a Rampier, a Town, which they re" tire to when they are apprehensive of Incursions
" from their Neighbours; thither he marched
" with his Legions, and found the Place well se" cured both by Art and Nature; however, he
" endeavoured to storm it in two several Places,
" and the Enemy being no longer able to sustain
" the Fury of the Assault, fled out at another " Part of the Wood; here we found vast Quanti" ties of Cattle, and many of the Britons, who " endeavoured to make their Escape, being over-
" taken, lost their Lives.

" CASSIVELLAUNUS, in the mean " Time, sent Ambassadors to Kent, which lies

" Kings, Cingetorix, Carnilius, Taximagulus,
" and Segonax, whom he commanded to attack
" our Camp, where the Navy was laid up, with " all the Forces they could raise: But as soon as " they arrived there, our Men made a Sally, kil" led several of them, took Lugotorix, one of their " chief Commanders, Prisoner, and returned safe
" again into their Trenches. Cassivellaunus, up" on the News of this Defeat, reflecting on the " many Losses he had received, how his Country
" was laid Waste, but above all that several Pro" vinces had already forsaken the general Alli" ance, sent Ambassadors to treat of a Surren" der, who were introduced by Comius of Arras:
" Cæsar designing to quarter that Winter in Gaul,
" to prevent sudden Insurrections there, because
" the Summer was already far spent, and the Re" mainder might easily be spun out by Delays,
" demanded Hostages, and appointed the yearly " Tribute which the Britons should pay to the " People of Rome; not forgetting strictly to pro" hibit any Injury being done to Mandubratius, or
" the Trinobantes.

ses a yearly Tribute on the BRITONS.

" HAVING received the Hostages, he march-
" ed his Army back again to the Sea Shore,

" where he found his Fleet refitted, and caused it " to be launched; he soon after set Sail, and ar" rived safe in Gaul.

THE Trinobantes, mentioned by Cæsar, being the People of Essex and Middlesex are supposed by some to have taken their Name from the City
Trenovant, from the Resemblance there is in the Sound of those two Words; but many other Authors, as well as Cæsar, do affirm that the Brit-tons, before the Arrival of the Romans, had no Cities that were artificially built with Houses, or strongly walled with Stone.

Julius Agricola, the Roman Lieutenant, in the Time of Domitian, was the first, who, by exhorting the Britons publickly, and assisting them privately, prevailed with them to build Houses for themselves, Temples to their Gods, and Courts for the Administration of Justice; to bring up the Children of their Noblemen in the Study of Letters and Humanity; and to apparel themselves in the Fashion of the Romans; whereas before they,
for the most Part, went naked, and only painted their Bodies.

NOTWITHSTANDING what Geffrey of Monmouth, and other Writers have said, it does not appear that our City of London was walled with Stone in the Beginning of the Roman Government here; for Anno Domini 296, when Alectus the Tyrant was slain in the Field, the Franks easily enter'd London, and had sacked the same, if, at that very Instant, certain Bands of the Roman Soldiers had not been brought by the River Thames to its Relief, who slew those Franks in every Street of the City: But there is no Doubt but that it was walled during the Time they were here, because we find many Towns of less Note were so, as Richborough, or Rickborough-Ryptacester in the Isle of Thanet, Sandwich in Kent, Verulamium near St. Alban's in Hertfordshire, Cilcester in Hampshire, Wroxcester in Shropshire,
Kencester in Herefordshire, Ribchester, seven Miles above Preston, on the Water of Ribble, Aldeburg, a Mile from Boroughbridge, on Wathe-ling-street, on Ure River, and others.

NOR was any Thing wanting to the Glory of London, but the Name of a Free-City or Colony;
but that was not for the Interest of the Romans;
therefore they made her a Prefecture. Such were those Cities where Marts were kept, and Justice administer'd; and for their Magistrates, they were annually sent them from the Senate at Rome; for the Execution of their Laws, the Administration of Justice, the Collecting their Tributes and Taxes, &c. Tacitus, who, the first of all Authors calls it LONDINIUM, says, 'That, altho' no Colony of the Romans, yet it was most famous for the great Multitude of Merchants, for its Provisions and Intercourse, about 62 Years after Christ: At which Time, in that notable Revolt of the Britons from Nero, in which Seventy Thousand Romans and their Confederates were slain, this City, Suetonius Paulinus, the Roman Lieutenant having abandoned it as not then fortified, with Verulam, near St. Alban's, and Maldon, all famous Places, were ransacked and spoiled.

It has been a Question among the Learned, in what State and Reputation London was in at the Time of the Romans. Cambden says, 'That it was of the Nature of a Prefecture, and not a Colony.'
The late Bishop of Worcester, Dr. Stillingfleet, in his Antiquities of London, is of another Opinion;
and shews that there were several Sorts of Colonies.
First, Civil Colonies, that is, such as consisted only of Roman Citizens. Secondly, Military Colonies; when the Veteran Soldiers were settled together by Way of a Colony. Such a Colony of Veterans was at Camalodunum, at York, at Chef-ster, at Caerleon, &c. Thirdly, there were mixt Colonies, where Roman Citizens and Natives joined together: And, tho' without the Name, yet they

they had the Privileges of a Colony. Of the last Sort he concluded LONDON to have been; which, in Tacitus's Time, was nobile Emporium, a Place of great Advantage in its Situation for Trade: And therefore apt to draw both Romans and Natives together. It had all the Encouragement that the Residence of the Roman Governor could give it, and that was sufficient to make the City so great in a small Time, that, altho' it was first built in Claudius's Reign, yet in Nero's it might be too large for Suetonius Paulinus to hazard his Army in defending it. For wheresoever there was a new Province made, there was great Occasion for such an Emporium, or Place of Trading to be set up; the Citizens of Rome making mighty Improvements of their Estates, by sending their Money into new Provinces.

Annal Lib. 14.

Mr. OWEN, a learned Welshman, in a Manuscript called Vindiciæ Britannicæ, which Mr. Strype says he hath seen, proves, in Opposition to Bishop Stillingfleet, that London was a great City before the Romans came hither; and vindicates therein our British History, which speaks of Cassibelan's besieging London, when the Trinobantes invited Cæsar over; and that his Landing had obliged him to raise the Siege. For this Purpose, he takes Notice of what Tacitus hath said of this Place. Cognomento quidem Coloniae non insigne, &c. "That it was not dignified indeed with the Name of a Colony, but most famous for Abundance of Merchants and Provisions." Whence that Author observes, First, That London was at that Time, about the fifth of Nero, renowned for all Manner of Provisions and Necessaries for the Supplying an Army; and that it seemed, by Tacitus's Words, to have been the great Treasury of the Riches of the Kingdom, as it is now. Secondly, That considering it abounded with Merchants, it seems to have been then what it is now, the chief Trading City of the Island.

CÆSAR speaks of the British Merchants in Gaul, who traded in Tin and Lead with the Phœnicians and Greeks; they refined and transported it by the Isle of Wight into Gaul, and thence on Horseback, by Land, in thirty Days, or thereabouts, to Marseilles. This Trade flourished here long before the Romans knew the Island: Therefore, if Cities do rise by Merchandize, London must be much more antient than the Time of Cæsar, and its Situation being advantageous for Trade, being the Centre of the British Merchandize, we may conclude it was the antient Emporium of the British Trade with the Gauls, Phœnicians, and Greeks.

STILLINGFLEET says, That it grew into a City by the Romans trading into this Country: And why not as well by the Trade of the Greeks and Phœnicians?

FROM what Tacitus says, London must have been a Place of Strength when Suetonius Paulinus, in his Return from Mona, i. e. Anglesey, marched with so much Resolution through the Midst of the Enemy's Country, to possess himself of it, with an Intention to make it the Seat of the War; but not finding there so considerable a Number of Roman Forces as he expected, he alter'd his Purpose, and chose to preserve the Rest with the Loss of one Town. This may serve for an Argument to prove the Bigness of London at that Time; for he had then about Ten Thousand Men well armed, but that Number it seems were not sufficient to defend it. Tacitus mentions it as a very pleasant Place, and says, The Sweetness of the Place tempted some to stay behind, who were all cut off by Boadicia. And, indeed, there is no Reason to think the Romans built the City of London, where there was neither a Colony, nor a Municipium, as the Bishop of Worcester seems to allow. Besides it doth not appear that they had built any Cities in Britain at that Time: Not even Camalodunum, which was a Roman Colony; nor Verulamium, a Free City, enjoying their own municipal Laws, by Consent of the Romans. Nor is it probable, that, in so short a Time, as from Julius Cæsar to Nero, in whose Reign Tacitus gives the former Account, London could become so famous for her Merchants and Provisions. Neither do the Roman Histories give any Account why Trinobantum should in so few Years change its Name to that of London; but the British History accounts for it, in what is said of Lud, Brother to Cassibelan, viz. That he renewed the Walls of it, and called it LUD-DIN, that is, the City of LUD, or Llwyd, which, easily changed into Lundin. The Bishop of Worcester does not pretend to derive London from any Latin Word; a Presumption that it is not of Roman Original. Ammianus Marcellinus, who flourished Anno Domini 380, called it Vetustum Oppidum, An antient Town, and makes it the City of the Trinobantes; calling it Lundinum.

THE learned Welshman, aforementioned, observeth the Antiquity of London by a Coin of the Emperor Claudius relating to Britain, which Cambden speaks of: It had Britannicus on one Side, and on the Reverse, METROPOLIS ETIMINII B. A. LO.

CAMBDEN supposes Etiminii to be the same with Adminii. Adminius was a Son of Cunobelin, King of Camalodunum, who being banished by his Father, fled to Caligula when he was making War upon the Ocean, as Suetonius writes: And that it is not unlikely that he might ingratiate himself with Britannicus, the Son of Claudius, or with Claudius himself, who was also stiled Britannicus; and so have been constituted King of London, as B. A. LO. i. e. BASILEOS LONDINI, may import; for Cities were sometimes bestowed on the Britons by the Romans, as Camalodunum was upon Cunobelin; and some Cities upon Cogidunus.

YET after all that has been said let us add what Doctor Woodward, a learned Antiquary, LONDON not a British City. affirms: That Geffrey of Monmouth cannot be credited, who wrote that London was a City in the British Times, encompassed with Walls, and fortified with innumerable Towers; since the Britons in those Days were barbarous and savage; and their Towns no other than Groves and Thickets, invironed only with an Hedge and a Ditch. Nor was there a Brick among them; nor, as far as the Romans at their Descent here could observe, had they ever gone about to raise one Stone upon another.

WE shall now say something of the Buildings of London, which are far more beautiful than they were antiently, when the Houses were chiefly of Timber. The BUILDINGS of LONDON.

IN Queen Elizabeth's Time there were strict Proclamations against Inmates, and an Increase of new Buildings in the City; but to very little Effect. In the Beginning of King James the First's Reign, Anno Domini 1605, a Proclamation was issued forth, forbidding all Increase of new Buildings within the City, and one Mile thereof; and also commanding all Persons henceforwards to build their Forefronts and Windows, either of Brick or Stone; as well for Ornament, as because all large and well-grown Woods were so much spent and wasted that Timber for Shipping grew scarce; but this likewise had little Effect. On the 10th of October 1607, Proclamation was again made to the same Purpose, and on the 16th of October some were censured in the Star-Chamber, for building contrary to the Tenor of the Proclamation. Again, by a Proclamation, Anno Domini 1614, all Commissioners were required to proceed with Strictness against all Offenders in this Sort: And from thence began the new Reformation in Building. The first Houses of Note thus built, were were, an House in the Strand, belonging to Col. Cecil; another near Draper's-Hall; a Goldsmith's House in Cheapside, over-against Sadler's-Hall; and a Leather-Seller's in St. Paul's Church-yard, near the North Gate, who was compelled thereto, after he had built his House of Timber.

THE Conflagration which happened in the Beginning of September 1666, how dreadful soever it was to the Inhabitants of London at the then present Time, is thought, in its Consequences, to have contributed both to the Health and Beauty of the City; to its Health, by giving Occasion to enlarge the Streets, and make them more Airy; and to its Beauty, by the Houses being afterwards rebuilt with Brick and Stone. It is very true, there were some fine Buildings in London before that Time, which are still remaining, such as the Banqueting-House at Whitehall, the Piazza's, and Church, of Covent-Garden, and others, the Works of that great Master Inigo Jones. And what Improvements may we not expect, when such Encouragement is at present given to the Science of Architecture, as that one of the first Noblemen of Great Britain, to shew his Regard to the Memory of so fine a Genius, was lately at a large Expence to restore the Portico of Covent-Garden Church to its original Beauty, by removing some additional Works, which were thought very much to deform it; the same Nobleman has not a little added to the Ornaments of London by the Direction he has given in Buildings for himself and others.

THE fine Taste that is shewn in some of the new Buildings about Grosvenor and Hanover Squares, new Broad-Street in the City, and other Places, not to mention Particulars, such as the new Bank in Threadneedle-Street, &c. seems to promise fair for a Rivalship in this Art with the politest of our Neighbours.

CHAP. II.

The Antiquity of the WALL about the City. WALLS when first in Britain. The Maintenance and Reparation of the WALL of LONDON. The antient WALL near BISHOPSGATE described. And a Computation of the Quantity of Ground within the WALLS.

OUR Historians tell us, says Cambden, That Constantine the Great, at the Request of Helena, his Mother, first walled London about with Hewn Stones and British Bricks, containing within the Compass of it about three Miles: Whereby the City was made a Square, but not Equilateral; being longer from West to East, and from South to North narrower.

HOWEVER these Walls of Stone might be built, it is plain the Britons had but little Skill in Building with Stone, long after the Time of Constantine; for about the Year of Christ 399, when Arcadius and Honorius, the Sons of Theodosius the Great, govern'd the Empire, and the last, who was Emperor of the West, had received Britain, the City of Rome was invaded and destroyed by the Goths; after which the Romans left Britain, to defend their Territories that were nearer Home. Whereupon the Britons not able to secure themselves against the Invasions of their Enemies, were many Years together under the Oppression of two most cruel Nations, the Scots and the Picts: And at length were forced to send their Ambassadors with Letters and Supplications to Rome, to implore Aid from thence, upon Promise of their continual Fealty, on Condition that the Romans would rescue them out of the Hands of their Enemies. Whereupon the Romans sent them a Legion, which, encountering with their Enemies, overthrew a great Number of them, and drove the rest out of the Frontiers of the Country; having thus set the Britons at Liberty, they advised them to make a Wall between the two Seas, from East to West, which might keep out their Enemies; and then they left them to themselves; but the Britons wanting Masons, built the Wall, not of Stone, as they were advised, but of Turf, which was of little or no Defence; and the Enemy, perceiving that the Roman Legion was return'd Home, immediately invaded the Borders, overcame the Country, and bore down all before them.

AMBASSADORS were again dispatched to Rome, begging that the Romans would not suffer their miserable Country to be utterly destroyed; whereupon they sent another Legion, which coming on a sudden upon the Enemy, made a great Slaughter among them, and chased them back to their own Country. The Romans at their Departure, told the Britons plainly, that they were to expect no farther Assistance from the Emperor, who was wholly employed elsewhere. After this Declaration they advised them to inure themselves to Arms, that they might be able to withstand the continual Attacks of their Enemies; and considering their Weakness, exhorted them to repair the Wall of Severus, to serve them as a Barrier, offering to assist them in the Work. What could the Britons do in this Extremity? They had no other Method to take but that proposed by the Romans; therefore went to work upon their Wall with all possible Diligence, and as soon as they had finished it, the Romans took their last Farewel of Britain, never to return more. The End of the Romans Dominion over Britain is to be fixed to this Time, which was almost five hundred Years after their first Arrival, and about Anno Domini 434, according to Strype; but Rapin says, It was either in the Year 426 or 427, and Bishop Stillingfleet in 418.

THIS Wall was built twelve Foot high, and eight Foot broad, in a strait Line, from East to West, as may be seen from the Ruins thereof, remaining in many Places to this Day. The Picts and Scots, who at this Time lived in a strict Union together, began their Hostilities again with the Britons, when they heard of the Departure of the Romans; and the Wall of Severus, so lately repaired, could not on a fresh Attack be long defended by Britons, but little used to War. The Northern People made large Breaches in it in several Places, that it might be no Obstacle to their future IncurSIONS into their Enemy's Country.

IN their great Distress the Britons agreed to chuse a Monarch, as the only Expedient to save them from Destruction, and accordingly elected Vortigern; but he was by no means qualified to restore their Affairs, for being of a cruel and avaritious Temper, and addicted to many Vices, he drew the Hatred of the People upon him, and lived in continual Fear, both of the Enemies to the State, and his own Subjects; therefore for his own Security he proposed to call in the Assistance of the Saxons, who, shortly after, arriving in Britain, were received as Friends; but having driven out the Scots and Picts, they turn'd their Arms against the Britons, and, driving some beyond the Seas, and others into the Mountains of Wales and Cornwall, they divided the Country into several Kingdoms among themselves. These Saxons were likewise ignorant in Architecture, till the Year of Christ 680, when, it is said, that Bennet, Abbot of Wirral, Master to the venerable Bede, first brought Artificers in Stone, Painters, and Glaziers, into this Island, which till that Time, had in it no other than Wooden Buildings.

burnt by the DANES, &c. repaired, and strongly Walled.

THE City of London, having been destroyed and burnt by the Danes, and other Pagan Enemies, about Anno Domini 839, was repaired, and again made habitable, in the Year 886, by Alfred, King of the West-Saxons, who committed the Government thereof to Ethelred, Earl of Mercia, unto whom he had before given his Daughter Ethelred: And that this City was strongly walled, may appear from divers Passages in antient Writers.

A Wall antiently along the THAMES Side.

WILLIAM of Malmsbury saith, That about the Year of Christ 894, the Londoners shut up their Gates, and defended their King Ethelred, or Etheldred, within their Walls against the Danes. That in 1016, in the Reign of Edmund Ironside, Canute, the Dane, attempted to have won the City by Assault; but that the Citizens, repulsed him, and drove him from their Walls. Also, that, in the Year 1052, Earl Godwin with his Navy sailed up by the South End of the Bridge, along the Southern Side of the River; and so assailed the Walls. And William Fitz-Stephen, writing in the Reign of Henry II. hath these Words, The Wall is high and great, well tower'd on the North Side with due Distances between the Towers. On the South Side also, the City was walled and tower'd, but the Fish-abounding Thames, with his Ebbing and Flowing, hath long since subverted them.

THE City, saith the same Author, being far more in Length from East to West, than in Breadth from South to North, and also narrower at both Ends than in the Middle, is therefore compassed with the Wall on the Land-Side in Form of a Bow, except where it dents in between Cripplegate and Aldersgate: But the Wall on the South Side, along by the River of Thames, was strait as the String of a Bow, and furnished with Towers at due Distances one from another.

How the Wall was maintained and repaired.

WHAT has been said may serve for the Proof of a Wall, and the Form, as well as Antiquity of it. As to the Maintenance and repairing it, Roger of Wendover, Matthew Paris, and other Historians say, That in the Year 1215, the 6th of King John, the Barons entering the City by Ealdgate, first took Assurance of the Citizens, and then broke into the Houses of the Jews, and plunder'd their Coffers, and afterwards repaired the Walls and Gates of the City with Stones, taken from the Jews demolished Houses. In the Year 1257, Henry the Third caused the Walls of London, which were greatly decayed, and destitute of Towers, and Towrets, to be repaired in a handsomer Manner than before, at the common Charge of the City. And in the Year 1282, King Edward I. having given Leave, some Years before, to Robert Kilwarby, Archbishop of Canterbury, for the enlarging Black-Fryars Church, to break and take down a Part of the Wall of the City from Ludgate to the River Thames; he granted also to Henry Walleis, Mayor, and to the Citizens of London, toward making the Wall and Inclosure of the City, certain Tolls, or Customs, as appeareth by the Grant. This Wall was then to be made from Ludgate, West to Fleet-Bridge, along behind the Houses, and by the Water of the Fleet to the River Thames.

IN the Year 1310. Edward II. commanded the Citizens to make up the Wall already began, and the Tower at the End of it, within the Water of Thames, near Black-Fryars. And there is a Record 10 Edward II. Anno Domini 1316, London de certis Consuetudinibus, &c. de Rebus venalibus ibid. capiend. in Auxilium cujusdam novae Turris Muro Civitat. juxta Mansum Fratrum Predicatorum perficiend. i. e. Concerning certain Customs and Tolls to be taken in London of Things sold there, for the Aid of finishing a certain new Tower on the City Wall, hard by the Mansion of the Friars Preachers. It was also granted by King Richard II. in the Tenth Year of his Reign, that a Toll should be taken of Wares, sold by Land or by Water, for Ten Years, towards repairing the Walls, and cleaning the Ditch about London.

THERE were Grants from several Kings, from Time to Time, for repairing these Walls and Ditches, as Need required. And the particular Tolls and Customs which were paid upon Provisions and Commodities, brought to be bought and sold, were called Murage, which none were exempted from, except the City of Winchester, and perhaps some few other Cities and Towns, which by a Composition with the City of London paid no Pontage, Murage and Pannage.

MR. STURPE gives us Part of these Grants and Charters; The first is, That granted by Edward I. about the fourth Year of his Reign, Anno Domini 1276, which he says, he read in the Records of the Chamber of London.

“ EDWARDUS, &c. Edward, &c. To “ his well-beloved the Mayor and Sheriffs, and “ the rest of his Citizens of London, Greeting.
“ Know ye, that for Aid of Repair of the Walls, “ and Clausure of our City aforesaid, from the “ aforesaid Day to the End of three Years next “ following, ye take, in the aforesaid City, of “ vendible Things coming to the City, the “ underwritten Customs, viz. Of every Poize “ (or Weight) of Cheese, Butter, &c. to be “ sold, 1d. Of each Weight of Lead, 1q. Of “ every Hundred of Wax, to be sold, 2d. Of “ every Hundred of Almonds and Riges, 1d.
“ Of every Hundred of Grain, 12d. Of every “ Hundred of Pepper and Ginger, Cetewal, “ Kanel, Frankincense, Brasil, Quicksilver, “ Vermilion, Verdigrease, 2d. Of every Hun“ dred of Cummin, Allum, Zubar, Liquorish, “ Anniseed, Cyromontani, ----- 1d. For every “ Hundred of Brimstone, Arg. Rosin, Coperas,
“ and Calamus, 7d. Of every Gross Frail of Figs “ and Raisins, 1ob. Of every less Frail, 1d. and “ so of a great Number of Commodities more,
“ each their Customs. Moreover, of every Hog“ shead of Beer going out of London to the Parts “ beyond Sea, 1d. Of every Mill to grind Things “ to be sold, 2d. Of every Horse to be sold at the “ Price of 40s. 1d. Of every Bull and Cow, ob. &c.

The Toll granted by ED-WARD I. for Murage.

THE same King in another Letter to the Mayor, Sheriffs and Citizens, enjoined them to proceed to the said Repairs: Which ran to this Effect.

CUM Concesserimus, &c. “ Whereas we have “ granted you for Aid of the Work of the Walls
“ of our City, and the Closure of the same, “ divers Customs of vendible Things, coming to “ the said City, to be taken for a certain Time;
“ we command you, that you cause to be finished
“ the Wall of the said City, now begun near the “ Friars Preachers, and a certain good and “ comely Tower at the Head of the said Wall, “ within the Water of the Thames, &c.

The King's
Letter to repair the Walls.

MANY such Letters were issued out by the next King, Edward II. as in the First, Second, Sixth, Eighth, and till the Twelfth Year of his Reign;

Reign; when, by long taking these Customs, there followed a great Inconvenience; which was, that Provisions were more sparingly brought to the City, for the Supply of Necessities. So that in that Year Letters came forth from the King, for not taking Custom of Things Saleable any more, because by that, Viſtuala non adducuntur, in Detrimentum Civitatis; as the Patent ran. But before this Year, these Kings, as well as others after them, granted Aids and Impositions upon several Commodities and Merchandizes brought into the City both by Land and Water, towards the Reparation of the City Walls, Forts, Ditches, &c.

THE Letters of King Richard II. in the 10th Year of his Reign, which laid the like Custom upon Goods, Merchandizes and Packs brought into London, which was to continue for Ten Years, for Reparation of the said Walls, and Ditches, ran to this Purpose.

“i. e. The King to his beloved Mayor and Aldermen, and the rest of the Citizens of London, sendeth Health. Know ye, That, where-
“as, as well the Walls, and other Forts [Affor- “ciamenta] of the said City, be old and weak,
“and, for want of Repair, are fallen down in “some Places: As also, the Ditches of the same “City are exceedingly fill’d with Dirt, Dung-“hills, and other Filth, and with Grass growing “in the same, not only to the evident Danger “of the said City, and Inhabitants thereof, (and “chiefly at this present Time of War) but also “to the manifest Disgrace and Scandal of us and
“the whole City, &c.” And then the King grants the said Mayor and Aldermen a Power, which was to continue for ten Years, to take Customs of all Kind of Victuals and saleable Merchandizes brought to the City by Land or Water, coming within the Liberty, viz. For every Hundred of Wax, 4*d.* &c. and certain Duties were laid upon abundance of other Wares.

YET this Murage was not apply’d so precisely to the Reparation of the Walls, but that the King, upon Occasion, might command some Part of it to other Uses: As once King Edward II. in the Sixth Year of his Reign, appointed the Reparation of Newgate to be made good from thence. Thus in a Record in the Tower, 6 Edward II. the Keeper of Newgate was appointed, by the King, to repair the Chamber and Enclosure of Newgate out of the Issues of Murage and Pannage; and a Mandate was given to the Mayor and Sheriffs for that Purpose. And in the same Record Mention is made of Stopping People that brought in Commodities, by Chains to be laid cross the Streets there, till the Customs appointed were paid.

Ralph Fosceline, Mayor, in the Seventeenth of Edward IV. caused that Part of the Wall about the City between Aldgate and Aldersgate to be repaired; and Moorefields to be searched for Clay, of which Brick was made and burnt; he also caused Chalk to be brought out of Kent, and burnt into Lime, in the same Moorefields, for the better carrying on the Work.

SEVERAL Companies also made and repaired Part of the Wall; the Skinners, to begin Eastward, made that Part of it betwixt Aldgate and Buriers Marks, towards Bishopsgate; as might appear by their Arms fixed there, in Mr. Stow’s Time, in three Places. The Mayor and his Company of the Drapers, made all that Part betwixt Bishopsgate and Alhallows Church in the same Wall; and Alhallows towards the Postern, called Mooregate. A great Part of the same Wall was repaired by the Executors of Sir John Crosby, Alderman; whose Arms were also fixed in two Places there. Other Companies repaired the rest of the Wall to the Postern of Cripplegate. The Goldsmiths repaired from Cripplegate towards Aldersgate, and the Work ceased.

THAT curious Antiquary the late Dr. Woodward of Gresham College, in his Remarks upon the antient and present State of LONDON, hath given an ingenious Account of the Manner and Matter of these Walls, from some Observations he made upon the pulling down some old Houses, and digging the Foundations for new ones, in his Neighbourhood, near the Wall of Bishopsgate, in the Year 1707. The Foundation of the Wall there, he says, lay eight Feet beneath the present Surface; and from that almost up to ten Feet in Height; it was compiled of Rag-Stones with single Layers of Broad Tiles interposed, each Layer at two Feet Distance. To this Height the Workmanship was after the Roman Manner. And these were the Remains of the antient Wall, supposed to be built by Constantine the Great. In which it was very observable, that the Mortar was so very firm and hard, as is usual in Roman Works, that the Stone itself might as easily be broken as that.

It was thus far from the Foundation upwards, nine Feet in Thickness; and yet so vast a Strength and Bulk had not been able to secure it from being beat down, and almost levelled with the Ground.

THE broad Tiles abovementioned were all of Roman Make. The Romans commonly used two Sorts of Tiles, Tegula Bipediales & Sesquipedales, i. e. Two Feet Tiles, and those of a Foot and a Half. What were in this Wall, were of the latter Sort. Each, according to English Measure, one Inch  $\frac{1}{2}$  in Thickness, eleven Inches  $\frac{1}{2}$  in Breadth, and seventeen Inches  $\frac{1}{4}$  in Length.

THE old Wall having been demolished, as was said before, was afterwards repaired, and carried up of the Thickness of the former underneath, to eight or nine Feet in Height; which was all apparently additional, and of a later Make than the lower Part. It is composed chiefly of Rag-Stone; only in the Sides were interposed a few Bricks uncertainly, and without any stated Method. On the Outside, the Stone was squared, and wrought into Layers of five Inches in Thickness; between these were alternately interposed two Courses of Bricks of the same Form with those on the Inside. These were very large being of the Shape of the Modern; but eleven Inches in Length, and five in Breadth, and two and a half in Thickness. There was not one of the above-mentioned Tiles in all this Part, nor was the Mortar here near so hard as in the lower.

As the Fund and Ground within the City hath, by Rubbish, and the Ruins of Houses, been successively raised and heightened every Age, it was requisite the Wall without should rise likewise in Proportion; and by Reason thereof in Tract of Time, upon the before-mentioned additional Work, it was found needful to build the present City Wall. This is made of Brick of the Statutable Size, and the Model now in Use, and topped Battlement-ways with Copings of Stone. It is two Feet in Thickness, and six in Height; and is without doubt the same that was built in the Year 1477, in the Reign of Edward IV. Bishopsgate itself was built about two Years after. The Workmen lately employed there, sunk considerably lower than the Foundations of this Gate; and by that Means learned, they lay not so deep as those of the old City Wall by four or five Feet.

MR. STRYPE says, There was an Order made of old, that every Tenement, situate near the Walls, ought to be sixteen Feet distant from them.

THROUGH this Wall of London, there are several Gates and Posterns, between which there were antiently some small Bulwarks or Watch-Towers

THE Circuit Wall of London, on the Land's Side, to wit, from the Tower of London in the East, unto Aldgate, was 82 Perches. From Aldgate to Bishopsgate, 86 Perches. From Bishopsgate in the North, to the Postern of Cripplegate, 162 Perches. From Cripplegate to Aldersgate, 75 Perches. From Aldersgate to Newgate, 66 Perches. From Newgate in the West to Ludgate, 42 Perches. From Ludgate to Fleet-Bridge, 60 Perches. From Fleet-Bridge, South, to the River Thames, about 70 Perches. And so the Total of these Perches amounteth to 643; every Perch consisting of five Yards and an half: Which yield 3536 Yards and an half, or 10609 Feet and a half; making above two English Miles.

The more modern Dimension was as follows.

THAT is, 610 Poles or Perches, which make two Miles wanting 30 Perches.

THE Length of the Line from the Tower to the Fleet-Canal, taken along the Thames, from East to West, is 5940 Feet, or 360 Poles or Perches, which make a Mile and 40 Poles. This added to the Circuit of the Wall, which as aforesaid, is two Miles, wanting 30 Poles, makes in the whole three Miles and 10 Poles.

Now if the City did lie in an orbicular or circular Form, (which of all Figures is the most capacious) it would contain 525 Acres of Ground. But it is not of that Form, but more Oval, being narrow at the Ends, and at the broadest Place not so much as half the Length; so that no such Quantity of Ground can be expected. For, by the most accurate Survey that hath been taken, the superficial Content of the Ground, within the Wall, doth not amount to above 380 Acres. Such is the Difference between regular and irregular Figures of the same Circumference, as is well known to any Person, but meanly conversant in the Mensuration of Geometrical Figures.

CHAP. III.

Of the old Town-Ditch without the Wall of the City. The Modern Improvement of FLEET-DITCH. Late Encroachments upon the Walls and Ditch. The Freedom without the Walls. The Line of Separation.

Ditch about London 200 Feet broad.

THE Ditch which encompassed the Wall of the City, was begun to be made by the Londoners, in the Year 1211, and finished 1213, the 15th of King John, which, being 200 Feet broad, caused no small Hindrance to the Canons of the Holy Trinity, whose Church stood near Aldgate; because the said Ditch passed through their Ground from the Tower to Bishopsgate.

MR. STRYPE's Opinion is, from the Book Dunthorn, that the first Occasion of making a Ditch about the City was this: William, Bishop of Ely, Chancellor of England, in the Reign of King Richard I. made a great Ditch round about the Tower, for the better Defence of it against John, the King's Brother, the King being at that Time out of the Realm. Then did the City also begin a Ditch to encompass and strengthen their Walls. This happened between the Years 1190 and 1193. But the Register of Bermondsey writes, that the Ditch was begun October the 15th 1213, which was in the Reign of King John, who succeeded Richard. It seems the Citizens had desisted from the Work for some Time, and then began again and carried it on to Perfection.

THIS Ditch being originally made for the Defence of the City, was also a long Time together carefully cleansed and maintained, as Need required; but was afterwards neglected, and forced either to a very narrow and filthy Channel, or altogether stopped up for Gardens to be planted, and Houses to be built thereon.

IN the Year of Christ 1354, 28 Edward III. the Ditch of the City flowing over the Bank into the Tower-Ditch, the King commanded the said Ditch to be cleansed, and so ordered, that the Overflowing thereof should not force any Filth into the Tower-Ditch.

JOHN PHILPOT, Mayor of London, Anno 1379, caused this Ditch to be cleansed, and every House to pay five Pence, which was for a Day's Work, towards the Charges thereof. Richard II. in the 10th of his Reign, granted a Toll to be taken of Wares sold by Water or by Land, for 10 Years, towards repairing the Wall, and cleansing the Ditch.

THOMAS FAWCONER, Mayor, 1414, caused the Ditch to be cleansed.

RALPH FOCELINE, Mayor, 1477, caused the whole Ditch to be cast and cleansed. And so from Time to Time it was cleansed and otherwise reformed. Namely, in 1519, the 10th of Henry VIII. for Cleansing and Scowering the common Ditch, between Aldgate, and the Postern next the Tower-Ditch, the Sum of 95*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* was laid out. The chief Ditcher had by the Day 7*d.* The second Ditcher 6*d.* The other Ditch-

ers 5 d. and every Vagabond, (for so were they then termed) one Penny, and Meat and Drink at the City's Charge. Mr. Stow says, in his Remembrance, The Moore-Ditch was cleansed, when Sir William Hollies was Mayor, in the Year 1540; as, not long before, the Ditch had from the Tower of London to Aldgate.

It was again cleansed in the Year 1549, Henry Amcotes, Mayor, at the Expence of the Companies. And again, 1569, the 11th of Queen Elizabeth, for cleansing the said Ditch between Aldgate and the Postern, and making a new Sewer and Wharf of Timber, from the Head of the Postern into the Town-Ditch, the Sum of 814*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* was laid out. Before which Time the Ditch lay open, without either Wall or Pale; having therein great Store of very good Fish of divers Sorts. This Charge of cleansing was soon after spared, and great Profit made by letting out the Banks, and the whole Spoil of the Ditch; tho' in the Year 1595, two Fifteenths were granted by a Common Council for the Reformation of this Ditch, and a small Part of it, viz. between Bishopsgate and the Postern called Mooregate, was cleansed, and made somewhat broader than before; yet, filling again very fast, by reason of over-raising the Ground near adjoining, it was nothing the better.

SIR LEONARD HALLIDAY, Mayor, Anno 1606, laboured much for a River to be brought on the North of the City into it, to cleanse the Sewers and Ditches, and keep it wholesome, sweet, and clean. Sir John Watts, the next Mayor, seconded this good Endeavour of Halliday; and one Nicholas Leate, a worthy Citizen, was very painful, and industrious in furthering this Work: And the City had in the same Year, 1606, well cleansed their Ditches and Common-Sewers; and Floodgates were made in Holborn-ditch and Fleet-ditch.

NOTHING of this Town-ditch remaineth, but that Part of it called Fleet-ditch; which, after the Fire of LONDON in 1666, by Order of the Mayor and Court of Aldermen, was cleaned, enlarged, and made deep enough for Barges to come up as far as Holborn-bridge, by the Help of the Tides. The Sides were built of Free-Stone, with Warehouses on each Side, which ran under the Street, designed to be used for laying in of Coals and such like Commodities, which would have proved an Advantage to the City, from the Revenue arising thereby, but that Project did not take. This Ditch was built and made by Sir Thomas Fitch, Bricklayer, who contracted with the City for a very considerable Sum and enrich'd himself thereby.

ON Monday the 26th of February last, 1732-3, a Petition was presented to the House of Commons by the Sheriffs of LONDON, from the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of LONDON in Common-Council assembled, setting forth, that by an Act of Parliament, made in the 22d Year of the Reign of Charles II. intituled, An Additional Act for the Rebuilding of the City of LONDON, uniting of Parishes, and Rebuilding of the Cathedral and Parochial Churches within the said City, for the further Convenience of Trade, the Channel of Bridewell-Dock from the Channel of the River Thames to Holborn-Bridge, was directed to be sunk to a sufficient Level, whereby to make it Navigable, under such Limitations as are prescribed by the said Act, and the Profits arising by the Navigation of the said Channel were appropriated to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the said City; that in Pursuance of the said Act, the Channel was soon after made Navigable, from the Thames to Holborn-Bridge; but that the Profits arising by the Navigation thereof, have not answer'd the Charge of making the same Navigable; that Part of the said Channel from Fleet-Bridge to

Holborn-Bridge; instead of being useful to Trade, as was intended, is not only filled up with Mud, and become uselefs, but is now, and for some Years past hath been a common Nuisance, and that several Persons have lately lost their Lives by falling into the same; that the Expence of cleansing and repairing the same, will be very great, and that a greater annual Charge will be required to keep the same in Repair, than the Profits arising therefrom will defray, and yet the same will never answer the Intent of the said Act; and therefore praying, that a Bill may be brought in to repeal so much of the said Act, as relates to the said Channel; and to empower the Petitioners to fill up Part of the said Channel from Fleet-Bridge to Holborn-Bridge, and to convert the Ground to such Uses, as they shall think fit and convenient.

LEAVE was given to bring in a Bill, according to the Prayer of this Petition; and four worthy Citizens, viz. Sir John Eyles, Sir John Barnard, Mr. Alderman Perry, and Sir John Williams; were order'd to bring in the same; which is since passed into an Act; and the Use, which it is said, that the City designs to convert the Ground to, is to make a Market-Place instead of Stocks-Market, where it is intended to build a Mansion-House for the Lord-Mayor, for the Time being, to dwell in. This Design cannot but be much approved of, which is to cure one Nuisance at Fleet-Ditch, remove another out of the Heart of the City, and erect what must be a great Ornament in the room of it.

WHEN all the Town-Ditch was filled up, except Fleet-Ditch, there were made, instead thereof, large common Drains and Sewers to carry away the Water from the Postern-Gate, between the two Tower-Hills, to Fleet-Bridge, without Ludgate; and then many of the City-Tenants, whose Ground butted upon the Wall on either Side, made bold to trespass upon the same Wall, and what was before the Ditch, by Building there or inclosing for Yards; notwithstanding 16 Feet on either Side the Wall was, or should have been reserved for the City, for their Workmen or others to enter, view, and repair the said Wall; but these Encroachments were so many that it was no easy Matter to find any Part of that Wall round the City, not thus encroached upon. Which being taken in Consideration by the Committee appointed to let the City and Bridge-House Lands, and inspect the same, they order'd a Survey of all the City Walls on both Sides, and of all Encroachments of what Kind soever, and by whom made.

Which Survey was accordingly taken by Mr. Leybourn, and fairly engrossed in a Vellum-Book, and delivered into the Magistrates in the Guild-Hall, where it remaineth; in which Book are the Names, both of the City-Tenants that occupied the same, and the Number of Feet by them encroached upon the said Wall or Ditch, or within 16 Feet on either Side; so that whosoever took a Lease of any of the City-Lands, that abutt upon the Walls on either Side; might pay a Rent answerable to the Improvement that the said Encroachments should be thought worth. Notwithstanding the many Encroachments, made by private Persons, for their particular Conveniencies, there were many Places, on both Sides, of publick Use and Concern. As,

I. A Place between the Tower-Liberty and Aldgate, antiently called the Vineyard, were built a Row of Houses with Stables and Hay-lofts adjoining, for the Reception of the Carmen belonging to the City.

III. THE Parish-Church, Church-Yard, and Parsonage-House of St. Alballow's on the Wall.

IV. A Magnificent Structure, 540 Feet in Length, for an Hospital for Lunaticks, called New Bethlehem, instead of the old House for that Use, situated in a Street called Bethlehem; of which more hereafter.

V. THE City's Store-Yard for laying up Timber, Stone, Gibbets, Pillories, Sledges, and such like Things, for the Execution of Malefactors; and to receive such Carts, Coaches, Horses, &c. as have committed any Offence, or Abuse, within the City or Liberties.

VI. THE Hall of the Lorimers Company.

VII. THE Church-Yard belonging to the Parish of St. Alphage.

VIII. THE Church-Yard belonging to the Parish of St. Giles's Cripplegate.

IX. THE Church-Yard belonging to the Parish of St. Olave Silver-Street.

X. THE Church-Yard belonging to the Parish of St. Botolph's Aldersgate.

XI. THE Church-Yard belonging to Christ's Hospital, and the Yard, where the Boys play, which is still called Town-Ditch.

XII. THE Press-Yard belonging to Newgate-Prison.

XIII. THE Garden and Library, which belong to the College of Physicians in Warwick-Lane.

XIV. JUSTICE-HALL, commonly called the Sessions-House in the Old-Baily, with the Garden behind it.

THE City being thus encompassed with a Wall on the East, North, and West Parts, and the River Thames on the South Side, there is another Skirt of Ground without the Wall, and within the Liberty or Freedom of the City; and this is encompassed by an irregular Line, which separates the Freedom from the County of Middlesex.

THIS Line begins at Temple-Bar, where it abutts Westward, upon the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaster, which is without the said Temple-Bar, or Gate. From Temple-Bar it extends itself by many Turnings, and Windings, through Part of Sheer-Lane, Bell-Yard, Chancery-Lane, by the Roll's Liberty, &c. unto Holborn, almost against Gray's-Inn-Lane; where there is a Bar, that is, two Posts with Rails, and a Chain to cast over, as Occasion serveth, upon any Emergency, as keeping out an Enemy, or the like.

FROM Holborn-Bars, it passeth, with many Turnings, by Brook-Street, Furnival's-Inn, Leather-Lane, Hatton-Garden, Ely-House, Field-Lane, Chick-Lane, to the Common-Sewer, where it returns Westward to Cow-Cross, and so to Smithfield-Bars. From thence it runs by several Windings between Long-Lane and Charter-House-Lane, to Goswell-Street, and so up that Street, Northward, to the Bars.

FROM the Bars in Goswell-Street, where the Manor of Finsbury begins, it extendeth itself, by Windings, cross Golden-Lane, at the Posts and Chain there set up, to the Posts and Chain in White-Cross-Street; and from thence to the Posts and Chain in Grub-Street; and from thence on through Rope-Makers-Alley, to the Posts and Chain in the Highway, from Mooregate; and from thence by the North Side of Moorefields, abutting upon Finsbury Manor, where it returns Northward up to Norton-Falgate, and there meets the Bars in Bishopsgate-Street; and from thence, Eastward, into Spittle-Fields; all abutting upon Norton-Falgate.

FROM Norton-Falgate, it returns Southward by Spittle-Fields, and then South-East, by Wentworth-Street, to the Bars in Whitechapel.

FROM Whitechapel-Bars, it winds more Southerly by the Little-Minories and Goodman's-Fields: From whence it returns Westward to the Posts and Chain in the Minories; and thence, more Westerly, till it comes to London-Wall; where it abutts upon the Tower Liberty, and there it ends.

ALTHO' this Line in its several Turnings is of great Length, yet the Ground that is enclosed, between That and the Wall, is but narrow, so that the Content, in Acres, will not be answerable to the Circumambulation of it.

THE Length of the Line is 21,370 Feet, which is above four Miles; and yet the Ground comprehended betwixt the Line of the City-Wall, and this Line of Separation is but 300 Acres.

CHAP IV.

Of the GATES in the City Wall. I. The Postern-Gate by the Tower. II. Aldgate. III. Bishopsgate. IV. Mooregate. V. Cripplegate. VI. Aldersgate. VII. The Postern-Gate out of Christ's-Hospital. VIII. Newgate. IX. Ludgate. The Water-Gates. Queenhith. Dowgate, Wolf's-Gate, Ebgate, Oister-Gate, Bridge-Gate, Billingsgate.

THE GATES in the Wall of the City, were, in antient Times, four, viz. Aldgate for the East; Aldersgate for the North; Ludgate for the West; and the Bridge-Gate over the River Thames, for the South: But afterwards for the Ease of Citizens and Passengers, divers other Gates and Posterns were made.

WILLIAM FITZ-STEPHEN, who wrote in the Reign of Henry II. says, There were Seven double Gates in the Wall of the City; but doth not name them. It may be supposed that he meant, I. the Gate next the Tower of LONDON, II. Aldgate, III. Bishopsgate, IV. Cripplegate, V. Aldersgate, VI. Ludgate, and VII. the Bridge-Gate over the Thames.

SINCE which Time was built Newgate, the Postern called Mooregate, a Postern from Christ's Hospital towards St. Bartholomew's Hospital in Smithfield, &c. Of every one of these Gates, and Posterns in the Wall, and also of certain Water-Gates on the River Thames, severally, something shall be noted, as there is Authority to be found, or reasonable Grounds of Conjecture.

The First Gate Eastward.

THE First was the Postern-Gate, next the Tower of LONDON, which, by Part that remained in Mr. Stow's Time, seemed to have been a fair and strong Arched Gate, partly built of hard Stone of Kent, and partly of Stone brought from

from Caen in Normandy, since the Conquest, and Foundation of the High-Tower, and served for Passengers on Foot out of the East, from thence through the City to Ludgate in the West.

Ruin of this Gate.

THE Ruin of this Gate began in the Year 1190, the Second of Richard I. when William Longchamp, that Prince's great Favourite, who was Bishop of Ely, and Chancellor of England, caused a Part of the City Wall, that is, from the said Gate towards the River Thames to the White-Tower, to be broken down, to enlarge the said Tower; which he then encompassed far wide about with an embattled Wall; the same that is now the outer Wall of the Tower. He also caused a broad and deep Ditch to be made without the Wall, intending to have brought the Thames to have flowed about it, which could not be done.

Embattled Wall about the Tower. The Ditch made about the Tower.

The Postern falls down.

THE South-side of this Gate being thus loosened, and greatly weakened, by undermining the Foundation, at length fell down; that is, in the Year 1440, the 18th of Henry VI. and was never after re-edified; such was the Negligence of the Citizens, which bred some Trouble to their Successors, who suffer'd a weak, wooden Building to be there made, inhabited by Persons of lewd Lives, oftentimes presented by the Inquest of Portfoken Ward, but not reformed; whereas before that Time the said Postern was as well esteemed as the other Gates of the City, and was allotted to Men of good Credit. Among other, in the 49th of Edward III. John Cobbe was admitted Custos of the said Postern, and all the Habitations thereof, for the Term of his Life, by William Walworth, then Mayor of LONDON, Anno 1374, being his first Mayoralty; for he was again Lord Mayor, Anno 1380. And John Credy, Esq; in the 21st of Richard II. was admitted Custos of the said Postern, and Appurtenances, by Richard Whittington, Mayor, the Aldermen, and Commonalty.

NEAR the End of London-Wall, South, over-against the Tower, this Postern-Gate is now quite taken down, and in the Place thereof Posts are set up to keep off Carts and Coaches, with a locked Rail, and narrow Passage, left for Foot Passengers.

The Postern Spring.

JUST by, at the Bottom of some Stone Steps, is the excellent Postern-Spring, with an Iron Bowl and Chain, fastened, to catch the Water in. Not only the said Gate, but the Wall thereabouts, is quite taken away, for a good Space, and some Houses built in the Place. The Wall here was about Six or Seven Feet in Breadth, and cemented together with irregular Pieces of Stone, like a Rock.

THERE is a Yard hard by, called George-Yard, built on each Side with Dwelling-Houses, and is a Passage to Tower-Hill; where, after the Fire of LONDON, the Wall was beat down in Form of an Arch, through which Carts might pass; but now, also, this Arch is demolished, and the Wall taken away. Here a View may be taken of the Inside, and of the Breadth of London-Wall; which appears like a natural Rock, with the Stones so cemented in the Work, that nothing, but the greatest Violence, can separate them. On the West-Side, about Fourteen or Fifteen Feet high, are seen several old Roman Bricks, put into the Work, between the Stones.

ALD GATE.

ALD GATE.

THE next Gate, in the East, is called Aldgate, from its Antiquity. This is one, and the First of the Four principal Gates, and also one of the Seven double Gates, mention'd by Fitz-Stephen. It hath had two Pair of Gates, tho' now but one.

THERE have also been two Portclofes; one of them remained till the new building the Gate, and the Place of letting down the other was to be seen. For the Antiquity of the Gate, it appears, by a Charter of King Edgar, to the Knights of Knigh-ton Guild, that, in his Days, the said Port was call'd Ealdgate, as you may read in the Ward of Portfoken. Also Queen Matilda, the Wife of Henry I. in the Eighth Year of his Reign, having founded the Priory of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, gave unto Norman, the first Prior, and the Canons, who devoutly served God therein, the Port of Aldgate, and the Soke or Franchise thereunto belonging, with all Customs, as free as she held the same. In which Charter she nameth the House of Christ-Church, and reporteth Aldgate to be of her Domain.

IN the Year 1215, according to Matthew Paris, in the Civil Wars between King John and his Barons, the Londoners assisted the Barons Faction, who then besieged Northampton, they came afterwards to Bedford Castle, where they were well received by William Beauchampe, Captain of the same; and having, at that Time, secret Intelligence that they might enter the City of LONDON, they removed their Camp to Ware; from whence, in the Night, coming to London, they entered Aldgate; and, placing Guards at the Gates, disposed of all Things in the City at their Pleasure.

THEY spoiled the Fryars Houses, and searched their Coffers; which being done, Robert Fitzwater, Jeffery Magnavile, Earl of Essex, and the Earl of Gloucester, Chief Leaders of the Army, applied all Diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of the City, with the Stones taken from the Jews broken Houses; and Aldgate, which had given them so easy an Admittance, being then the most ruinous, they repaired, or rather new built, after the Manner of the Normans, strongly arched, with Bulwarks of Stone, brought from Caen in Normandy, and small Brick, call'd Flanders Tile, was brought from thence, such as was never used here before the Conquest.

IN the Year 1471, the 11th of Edward IV. Thomas, the Bastard of Fawconbridge, having assembled a riotous Company of Seamen, and others, in Essex and Kent, came to LONDON, with a great Navy of Ships, near to the Tower; whereupon, the Mayor and Aldermen, by Consent sent of a Common-Council, fortified all along the Thames Side, from Baynard's-Castle to the Tower, with armed Men, Guns, and other Instruments of War, to resist the Invasion of the Mariners; whereby the Thames Side was safely preserved, and kept by the Aldermen, and other Citizens, that assembled there in great Numbers. The Rebels being thus denied Passage through the City that Way, set upon, Aldgate, Bishopsgate, Cripplegate, Aldersgate, London-Bridge, and along the River Thames, shooting Arrows and Guns into the City, fired the Suburbs, and burned more than three-score Houses. On Sunday, the Eleventh of May, Five Thousand of them assaulting Aldgate, won the Bulwarks, and enter'd the City; but the Portclose being let down, such as had enter'd were slain, and Robert Bassett, Alderman of Aldgate Ward, with the Recorder, commanded, in the Name of God, the Portclose to be drawn up, which being done, they issued out, and with sharp Shot, and fierce Fight, drove their Enemies back as far as St. Botolph's Church: By this Time, the Earl Rivers, and the Lieutenant of the Tower, were come with a fresh Company; which joining the other, discomfited the Rebels, and put them to Flight. Then the aforesaid Robert Bassett, with other Citizens, chased them as far as the Mile's-End; and from thence, some to Poplar, some to Stratford, slew many, and took many Prisoners. In the mean Time the Bastard, having essayed other Places upon the Water-Side, to little Purpose, fled towards his Ships.

MR. STRYPE observes in this Place, That there was antiently, on the Wall, near Aldgate, a Turret, whereon was placed an Hermitage, which in the Reign of Edward I. was presented to the King's Judges at an Inquisition in the Tower, being built four Feet without the Turret in the King's Way: Hermitagium situm est in Turretto Muri Civitat. LOND. prope Aldgate; & edificatur 4 Ped. extra Turretum Muri predict. in Via Regia.

FROM this Gate towards Bishopsgate, was a Passage, or Lane, between the Wall and the Priory of the Holy Trinity, about 13 Feet broad, which the Prior and Convent stopt up with a Wall of Earth, in the troublesome Times of Henry III. who was angry with the City, and took away their Privileges. In the Beginning of the Reign of his Son Edward I. there was a Presentment of this to the Judges Itinerant, by the Citizens, in which it was said, That it had been so stopt up for Seven Years, ad Exheredationem Reg. & Lesionem Civitat. LONDON. i. e. To the Hurt of the City, and the disinheriting the King: For so they called it, when the King's Highway was encroached upon.

taken down.

THIS Gate, being very old and ruinous, was began to be taken down, Anno 1606, at which Time, in digging up the Foundation, divers antient Pieces of Roman Coin were found amongst the Rubbish, two of which Mr. Martin Bond, a worthy Citizen, and one of the Surveyors of the Work, caused to be carved in Stone, according to their exact Form and Figure, and fixed on either Side of the Arch of the Gate without, Eastward, as they remain to this Day. The rest were sent for by the Lord Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, to the Guild-Hall, where they are still kept.

UPON the 10th of April, 1607, the aforesaid Mr. Bond laid the first Foundation Stone of the new Gate, Northward. The Bottom of the Foundation of this Gate, being 16 Feet deep, and eight Feet broad, the whole was substantially finished Anno 1609, in the Mayoralty of Sir Humphrey Weld, Kt.

UPON this Gate were placed the following Ornaments, which are now taken away, nothing of that Sort remaining, except the two Medals before-mentioned.

UPON the Top Eastward, a Golden Sphere, with a Vane on it. Old Ornaments on the Gate.

ON the upper Battlement, two Figures of antient Soldiers, each holding a Stone Ball in his Hand.

BENEATH, in a large Square, was the Effigies of King James I. in gilt Armour, with a golden Lion, and a chained Unicorn, both Couchant, at his Feet; but this Square is now broke through, and a handsome Sash Window made in it.

ON the West Side of the Gate, was the Figure of Fortune curiously carved, and gilt with Gold, standing on a Mund, or Globe, with a Sail spreading over her Head, and looking towards the City.

BENEATH this Figure, in a large Square, which is now likewise turn'd into a Sash Window, were the King's Arms, with the Motto.

DIEU ET MON DROIT.

and a little below, VIVAT REX. Somewhat lower, to grace each Side of the Gate, were two Figures, one the Emblem of Peace, with a Dove on one Hand, and a gilt Wreath, or Garland, in the other. And on the other, or North Side, was the Figure of Charity, with a Child at her Breast, and another in her Hand.

OVER the Arch of the Gate, these two Inscriptions fairly engraven, are still legible:

Fecit 1609.*

And underneath,

HUMFREY WELD, Mayor.

ON the North Side of the Arch is a Postern, for Foot Passengers; and the Rooms over the Gate are the Dwelling-House of one of the Lord Mayor's Carvers, who is also one of the Serjeants of the Chamber for the Time being.

BISHOPSGATE.

BISHOPS-
GATE.

THE next Gate, towards the North, was called Bishopsgate, being built, as may be supposed, by some Bishop of LONDON. Mr. Strype says, perhaps, by Erkenwald, Son of King Offa, and Bishop of LONDON, whom Historians mention as the Founder of two religious Houses, one at Chertsey in Surrey, and another at Berking, in Essex, where he died, Anno 685. And who, by Reason of his Munificence and good Deserts, was very dear to the Londoners; and, being Canonized, his Shrine at St. Paul's very much honoured. And there having been the Effigies of two Bishops upon this Gate, as Erkenwald might be be the Founder of it, so he would give the next Honour, that is, for the Reparation of it, to Bishop William, the Norman, who was Bishop of LONDON in William the Conqueror's Time, and a great Benefactor to the City, by procuring from the King all their Privileges, as amply as they had before enjoy'd them, and by other good Deeds: But however it is uncertain who was the Founder.

THIS Gate was first built for the Convenience of Passengers towards the East, and by North; as into Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire, &c. The Travellers into which Parts, before the Building this Gate, were forced, passing out at Aldgate, to go East, till they came to Mile-End, and then to turn on the Left to Blethenhall-Green, (now called Bednal-Green) to Cambridge-Heath and so North, or East and by North, as their Journey lay. If they took not this Way by the East, out at Aldgate, then they must take their Way by North out of Aldersgate, through Aldersgate-Street, and Goswel-Street, towards Islington; and by a Cross of Stone, on the Right Hand, set up for a Mark by the North-End of Golden-Lane, to turn Eastward through a long Street, called to this Day Old-Street, to another Cross standing by Sewers-Ditch, (or Shoreditch) Church, and then again North towards Tottenham, Enfield, Waltham, Ware, &c.

THE oldest Note, that Mr. Stow says, he read of this Bishopsgate, was, That William Blund, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, in the Year 1210, sold to Serle Mercer, and William Almaine, Procurators, or Wardens of London-Bridge, all his Land, with the Garden, in the Parish of St. Botolph without Bishopsgate, between the Land of Richard Casarin, towards the North, and the Land of Robert Crispie, towards the South, and the Highway called Bearward's-Lane, on the East, &c.

THE next was a Charter, dated in the Year 1235, which, as Walter Brune, Citizen of LONDON, and Rosa, his Wife, had founded the Priory, or new Hospital of our Blessed Lady, since called St. Mary Spittle, without Bishopsgate, confirmed the same, to the Honour of God and our Blessed Lady, for Canons Regular, the 19th of Henry III.

ALSO in the Year 1247, Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, in the 29th of Henry III. founded the Hospital of St. Mary, called Bethlem, without Bishopsgate. So much for the Antiquity of this Gate.

NEXT for the Repairing it: Henry III. confirmed to the Merchants of the Haunse, who had a House in the City, called Guildhalla Theutonicorum, certain Liberties and Privileges: Edward I. also confirmed the same; in the Tenth Year of whose Reign it was found, that the said Merchants ought by Right to repair the said Gate, called Bishopsgate; and in the same Reign they were presented, by some of the Wards, to the Judges Itinerant, sitting at the Tower, for the Neglect of it, in these Words, Quod Teutonici non sustentent Bishopsgate, quam bene sustentare deberent; pro qua Liberi sunt in Civitate, ad Dampnum Civitat, i. e. That the Dutch do not maintain Bishopsgate so well as they ought to do, to the Damage of the City; altho' they are made free of it on that Account.

Rebuilt by the said Merchants.

UPON this Presentment, Gerard Marbod, Alderman of the Haunse, and others then remaining in the City of LONDON, for themselves, and the rest of the Merchants of the said Haunse, granted 210 Marks, Sterling, to the Mayor and Citizens; and covenanted that they, and their Successors, should, from Time to Time, repair the said Gate. In the Year 1479, in the Reign of Edward IV. this Gate was again beautifully built by the said Haunse Merchants.

VOL. I.

IN in the Year 1551, these Haunse Merchants had prepared Stone for the Purpose, and caused a new Gate to be framed, in order to be set up: But, at that Time, their Liberties, through Suit of our English Merchants, were seized into the King's Hand, so that a Stop was put to that Work; and the old Gate remained till the Year 1731, when it was quite taken down; but in order, as it was said, to erect another handsome and regular Piece of Architecture, without Lodgings, like those of Rome and Paris.

Taken down, Anno 1731.

THE Rooms that were over the old Gate, were allotted to one of the Lord Mayor's Carvers; who is also one of the Serjeants of the Chamber, for the Time being.

MOOREGATE.

THOMAS FALCONER, Mayor, about the Year 1415, the Third of Henry V. caused the Wall of the City to be broken near Coleman-street, and there built a Postern, now called Mooregate, upon the Moore-side, where no Gate had been before. This was made for the Convenience of the Citizens to pass that Way on Causeways; for this Place was, at that Time, a Marsh. This Postern was re-edified by William Hampton, Fishmonger, Mayor, in the Year 1472. And in the Year 1511, the Third of Henry VII. Roger Achely, Mayor, caused Dikes and Bridges to be made, and the Ground to be levelled, and made more commodious for Passage. Since which Time it had been raised so much, when Mr. Stow wrote, that the Dikes and Bridges were quite cover'd; and he was of Opinion, that if it had been raised even with the Battlements of the City Wall, it would have been little the dryer, such, says he, is the moorish Nature of the Ground; but we see what an Alteration has been made for the better: For these Fields, before, an unhealthful Place, in the Mayoralty of Sir Leonard Halliday, were turn'd into pleasant Walks, set with Trees, compassed with Brick Walls, and made convenient, by Sewers under Ground, for the Conveyance of the Water, which cost the City Five Thousand Pounds, or thereabouts.

Moorefields a Marsh.

Planted with Trees in the Mayoralty of Sir Leonard Halliday, Anno 1606.

THE lower Part of them has been new gravelled and rail'd, in a very strong and handsome Manner, and the Plantations there, which are like so many Gardens in the Four Quarters, were not finished till the present Year, in the Mayoralty of John Barber, Esq;

New planted in the Mayoralty of John Barber, Esq; Anno 1733.

THIS Gate being very old, was in the Year 1672, pulled down, and a new one of Stone was erected, having a lofty Arch, the City intending to have had a Hay-Market in Little-Moorefields, but

A new Stone Gate erected.

but that Design did not take Effect. However, the Gate is built with Posterns on each Side of the Arch, for Foot Passengers, being a great Thoroughfare. The Rooms, which, as in the other Gates, did belong to one of the City Officers, have, of late, been made Use of by a Person who keeps a Coffee-House.

A Postern made into Moorefields.

ABOUT the Year 1636, the City Wall between Bishopsgate and Mooregate, was broken down, over against Winchester-street, and a Postern Gate made there for Foot Passengers.

Another
Postern made.

ALSO in the Year 1655, another Place in the Wall was broken down over-against the North End of Aldermanbury; and a Postern made with double Gates, for a Passage into Fore-street.

A Third
Postern made.

AND soon after, another was made, near the North End of Basinsbaw-street, leading also into Fore-street.

CRIPPLEGATE.

THE next is, the Postern of Cripplegate, so called long before the Conquest. For in the History of Edmund, King of the East Angles, Written by Abbas Floriacensis, and by Burchard, some Time Secretary to Offa, King of Mercia; and since that, by John Lidgate, Monk of Bury, it is said, that in the Year 1010, the Danes spoiling the Kingdom of the East Angles, Alwyne, Bishop of Helmeham, caused the Body of King Edmund the Martyr, to be brought from Bedrisworth, now called Bury St. Edmund's, through the Kingdom of the East Saxons, and so to LONDON, in at Cripplegate; a Place so called from Cripples begging there. At which Gate, it was pretended, the Body entring, wrought Miracles, and made some of the Lamé to walk upright, praising God. The Body of King Edmund rested for the Space of three Years in the Parish Church of St. Gregory, near the Cathedral of St. Paul. Moreover, the Charter of William the Conqueror confirming the Foundation of the College in LONDON, call'd St. Martin the Great, hath in it these Words: I do give and graunt unto the same Church, and Canons, serving God therein, all the Lands, and the Moore without the Postern, which is called Cripple-gate, on either Part of the Postern. Besides this, Alfune built the Parish Church of St. Giles, near a Gate of the City, called Porta Contractorum, or Cripplesgate, about the Year 1090.

Cripplegate
once a Prison.

THIS Postern was some Time a Prison, to which such Citizens, and others, as were arrested for Debt, or common Trespasses, were committed, as they are now to the Compters. This appeareth by a Writ of Edward I. in these Words: Rex Vic. London salutem. Ex gravi querela B. capt. & detent. in prisoa nostra de Cripplesgate pro x. l. quas coram Radulpho de Sandwico, tunc Custod. Civitatis nostre LONDON, & I. de Blackwell Civis recognit. debit. &c.

THIS Gate was new built by the Brewers of LONDON, in the Year 1244, as faith Fabian's Manuscript. New built,
Anno 1244.

EDMUND. SHAW, Goldsmith, Mayor in the Year 1483, left, by his last Will, Four Hundred Marks, which, with the old Stuff of the Gate, call'd Cripplegate, was to build the said Gate a-new; which was accordingly perform'd in the Year 1491. Built again;
Anno 1491.

CRIPPLEGATE was again repaired, and hath this Inscription upon it, shewing the Time when. "This Gate was repaired and beautified, and the Foot Postern new made, at the Charge of the City of LONDON, the 15th Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord King Charles II. and in the Mayoralty of Sir John Robinson, Knight and Baronet, Lieutenant of the Tower of LONDON, and Alderman of this Ward; Anno Dom. 1663." Repaired,
Anno 1663.

THE Rooms over this Gate are set a-part for the Water-Bailiff of the City.

ALDERSGATE.

THE next Gate, is Aldersgate; so called from its Antiquity, being one of the Four First Gates of the City, and serving for the Northern, as Aldgate for the Eastern Parts. These, being both very old Gates, are, for Difference sake, called, one Aldgate, and the other Aldersgate; meaning the Old and the Older Gate. ALDERSGATE.

THIS Gate was antiently, at divers Times, increas'd with Buildings; namely, on the South-side, a great Frame of Timber was set up, containing many large Rooms and Lodgings; and on the East Side was the Addition of one large Building of Timber, with one large Floor, paved with Stone, or Tile, and a Well therein, curbed with Stone, of a great Depth, and rising, into the said Room, two Stories high from the Ground. John Day, a famous Printer, dwelling in this Gate, also built much upon the Wall of the City, towards the Parish Church of St. Anne: But the Gate being very old, and ruinous, and in Danger of falling, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common- The Old Gate.

Taken down, and re-built. Mr. William Parker, Citizen and Merchant-Taylor, gave a Thousand Pounds towards the Building.

mon-Council, order'd it to be taken down, and re-built in a beautiful Manner. Towards this Building, Mr. William Parker, Citizen and Merchant-Taylor, gave a Thousand Pounds, which Money was paid by his Executor into the Chamber of LONDON, and distributed according to the Directions left in his Will; viz. Two Hundred Pounds at the taking down the first Tile, which was upon the last Day of March, 1617; Two Hundred Pounds more at the laying the First Stone, which was done by the Right Worshipful Sir William Craven, Knight and Alderman, on Monday the 26th Day of May following; Two Hundred Pounds more when the Building should be one Yard above Ground; another Two Hundred Pounds, when it should be arched over the Gate; and the last Two Hundred Pounds, when the Work should be compleatly finished. Mr. Richard Fox, Citizen and Clothworker, a most painful and industrious Person, had the Direction, Ordering, and Over-seeing of the said Work.

Ornaments on Aldersgate.

The Ornaments on the Out-side of this Gate, are, First, on the North, in a large Square, over the Arch, the Figure of King James I. on Horseback, whose Triumphant Entry into the City of LONDON, was at this Gate, when he came from Scotland, to take Possession of the English Throne, on the Death of that truly glorious Princess Queen Elizabeth; and over the aforesaid Figure, are the Arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, quartered. On the other Side are two Effigies, viz. on the East Side the Prophet Jeremiah, with this Text, Chap. xvii. 23. Then shall enter into the Gates of this City, Kings and Princes, sitting upon the Throne of David, riding in Chariots, and on Horses, they and their Princes, the Men of Judah, and the Inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this City shall remain for ever.

ON the West Side of him, is the Prophet Samuel, with this Text, 1 Samuel, Chap. xii. 1. And Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have hearkened unto your Voice, in all that you said unto me, and have made a King over you.

ON the South Side is the Effigies of King James I. sitting in a Chair of State, in his Royal Robes.

THIS Gate was very much damaged in the Fire of LONDON; but was repaired and beautified at the sole Charge of the City, in the Year 1670, Sir Samuel Stirling, Knight, being Mayor.

THE Rooms over this Gate, and the Postern for Foot Passengers, are set a-part for the Dwelling of the Common-Cryer of the City, for the Time being.

The POSTERN out of CHRIST'S-HOSPITAL.

THERE is also a Postern-Gate made out of the Wall, on the North Side of the dissolved Cloister of Fryers Minors, commonly called, from their Habit, Grey Fryers, now Christ's-Church and Hospital.

THIS Postern was made in the Sixth Year of Edward VI. to pass from the said Hospital of Christ's-Church, to the Hospital of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield; and Leave was given to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, to break down so much of the City Wall as should suffice to make the said Passage, by Virtue of an Act of Common-Council, made the first of August, Anno 6 Edward VI. in the Mayoralty of Sir Richard Dobbes, Knight.

NEW GATE.

THE next Gate, on the West and by North, is NEWGATE: called Newgate, it being later built than the rest, and is the Fifth principal Gate of the City: It was First erected about the Reign of Henry I. or Stephen, upon this Occasion. The Cathedral Church of St. Paul being burnt about the Year 1086, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, Mauritius, then Bishop of London, did not repair the old Church, as some have supposed, but began the Foundation of a new Work, such as Men, at that Time, imagined would never have been performed, it was to them so wonderful, for Height, Length, and Breadth; also, as it was raised on Arches, or Vaults, a Kind of Workmanship brought in by the Normans, and never before known to the English Artificers. After Mauritius, Richard Beaumore did wonderfully advance the Work of the said Church, purchasing the large Street and Lanes round about, wherein many Lay-Men used to dwell, which Grounds he began to encompass about with a strong Wall and Gates.

St. Paul's Church burnt, and re-built in the Reign of William the Conqueror.

By this Increase of the Church Territory, but more by inclosing Ground for so large a Cœmtery, or Church-yard, the high and large Street from Aldgate in the East, to Ludgate in the West, was, in this Place, so crossed, and stopt up, that the Carriages through the City Westward, was forced to pass without the said Church-yard Wall on the North Side, through Pater-Noster-Row, and then South down Ave-Mary-Lane; and again West through Bowyer-Row to Ludgate; or else, out of Cheapside, or Watling-Street, to turn South, through the Old-Change, then West thro' Carter-Lane; again North up Creed-Lane, and then South to Ludgate. This Passage, having so many Turnings, was troublesome and dangerous both to Horse and Man; to remedy which, a New Gate was made, and so called, by which Men and Cattle, with all Manner of Carriages, might pass more directly, as before, from Aldgate through Cheapside, by St. Paul's, on the North Side, through, what was then called, St. Nicholas Shambles, and Newgate-Market, to Newgate; and from thence to any Part Westward, over Holborn-Bridge, or, turning without the Gate, into Smithfield, and through Islington, to any Part North and by West.

Newgate first built.

THIS Gate hath for a long Time been a Jail, or Prison, for Felons, and other Offenders, as appeareth by Records in the Reign of King John, and other Kings; among which there is one testifying, that in the Year 1218, the Third of King Henry III. the King wrote unto the Sheriffs of

A Prison.

LONDON,

Repaired by King Henry
III.

LONDON, commanding them to repair the Jail of Newgate for the safe-keeping his Prisoners, promising, that the Charges laid out should be allowed them upon their Account in the Exchequer.

IN the Year 1241, the Jews of Norwich were hang'd for Circumcising a Christian Child; their House, called the Thor, was pulled down and destroyed; and Aaron, the Son of Abraham, a Jew at LONDON, and other Jews were constrained to pay Twenty Thousand Marks, at two Terms in the Year, or else to be kept perpetual Prisoners in Newgate at LONDON, and in other Prisons.

MATTHEW PARIS says, This Money was raised on the Jews to defray the extraordinary Charge the King had been at, in entertaining Thomas, Earl of Savoy, the Queen's Uncle, who came into England that Year to make him a Visit.

IN the Year 1255, One John Offrem, a Prisoner, who had killed a Prior, related to the Queen, making his Escape out of Newgate, the King [Henry III.] was so much displeased at the City of LONDON, on that Account, that he sent for the Mayor and Sheriffs to come before him to answer for it. The Mayor laid the Fault upon the Sheriffs, to whom the Custody of the Prisoners within the City belonged; the Mayor therefore returned Home, but the Sheriffs remained Prisoners, for a Month or more, in the Tower, where the King then kept his Court; notwithstanding the Blame chiefly rested on the Bishop's Officers, for tho' the Sheriffs had given Leave to imprison the Offender in the Jail of Newgate, yet they were to see him safely kept: However, the King demanded a Fine of 3000 Marks of the City.

IN the Year 1326, Robert Baldocke, the King's Chancellor, was put into Newgate, in the Third Year of Edward III.

IN the Year 1327, Sir John Poultney gave Four Marks a Year for the Relief of Prisoners in Newgate.

IN the Year 1385, William Walworth gave somewhat to relieve the Prisoners in Newgate, as many others have done since.

IN the Year 1414, The Jailers of Newgate and Ludgate died, and Prisoners in Newgate to the Number of 64.

IN the Year 1418, The Parson of Wrotham in Kent, was imprisoned in Newgate.

IN the Year 1422, The First of Henry VI. Leave was given to John Coventre, Jenken Carpenter, and William Grove, Executors to Richard Whittington, to re-edify the Jail of Newgate, which they did with what he had left for that Purpose.

THOMAS KNOWLES, Grocer, sometime Mayor of LONDON, by Licence of Reynold, Prior of St. Bartholomew's in Smithfield, and also of John Wakering, Master of the Hospital of St. Bartholomew, and his Brethren, conveyed the Waste of Water, at the Cistern near the common Fountain, and Chapel of St. Nicholas, situate by the said Hospital, to the Jails of Newgate and Ludgate, for the Relief of the Prisoners.

ON the Tuesday after Palm-Sunday, in the Year 1431, all the Prisoners of Ludgate were conveyed to Newgate, by Walter Chartsey, and Robert Large, Sheriffs of LONDON; and on the 13th of April, the same Sheriff, through the false Suggestions of John Kingesell, Jailer of Newgate, led from thence 18 Freemen to the Compters, pinioned as if they had been Felons: But on the 16th of June, Ludgate was again appointed for Freemen, Prisoners for Debt, and the same Day the said Freemen enter'd by Appointment of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commons; and by them Henry Deane, Taylor, was made Keeper of Ludgate.

IN the Year 1457, a great Fray was in the North Country, between Sir Thomas Percy, Lord Egremont, and the Earl of Salisbury's Sons, in which many were maimed and slain; but in the End the Lord Egremont being taken, was by the King's Council found to be very much in fault, and therefore condemned in great Sums of Money, to be paid to the Earl of Salisbury, and in the mean Time committed to Newgate. Not long after, the Lord Egremont and his Brother, Sir Richard Percy, broke out of Newgate in the Night, and went to the King; the other Prisoners took the Leads of the Gate, and defended it a long while against the Sheriffs, and all their Officers, insomuch that they were forced to call more Aid of the Citizens, whereby, at last, they subdued them, and laid them in Irons.

THE East Side of this Gate was began to be repaired in the Year 1630, Sir James Campbell, Kt. being Mayor; and finished the Year following, in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Drury, Baronet.

THIS Gate is the Common Jail for the County of Middlesex, and was wholly destroyed in the Fire of LONDON, Anno 1666; but now rebuilt far more strong, and convenient for that Purpose: It hath a Postern on the North Side for Foot Passengers.

MR. ROBERT DOW, Merchant-Taylor, who died Anno 1612, appointed the Sexton, or Bellman of St. Sepulchre's to pronounce solemnly two Exhortations to the Persons condemned; for which, and for ringing the Passing Bell, as they are carried in the Cart by the said Church, he left 26 s. 8 d. yearly for ever.

THE EXHORTATION to be pronounced to the condemned Prisoners in Newgate, the Night before their Execution.

" You Prisoners that are within;
" Who for Wickedness and Sin,

" After many Mercies shewn you, are now appointed to die To-morrow in the Forenoon:
" Give Ear, and understand, that To-morrow Morning the greatest Bell of St. Sepulchre's shall toll for you, in Form and Manner of a Passing Bell, as used to be tolled for those that are at the Point of Death, to the End; that all godly People hearing that Bell, and knowing it is for you, going to your Deaths, may be stirred up heartily, to pray to GOD to bestow his Grace and Mercy upon you, whilst you live;
" I beseech you, for Jesus Christ, his Sake, to keep this Night in Watching and Prayer, for the Salvation of your own Souls, while there is yet Time and Place for Mercy: As knowing To-morrow you must appear before the Judgment-Seat of your Creator, there to give an Account of all Things done in this Life, and to suffer eternal Torments for your Sins committed against him, unless upon your hearty and unfeigned Repentance, you find Mercy, through the Merits, Death, and Passion of your only Mediator and Advocate, Jesus Christ, who now sits at the Right Hand of GOD, to make Intercession for as many of you, as penitently return to him.

THE ADMONITION to be pronounced to the condemned Criminals, as they pass by St. Sepulchre's Church-Wall to Execution.

" ALL good People, pray heartily unto GOD for these poor Sinners, who are now going to their Death, for whom this great Bell doth toll.
" You, that are condemned to die, repent with lamentable Tears: Ask Mercy of the Lord, for the Salvation of your own Souls, through the Merits, Death, and Passion of " Jesus

THE EXHORTATION pronounced in Newgate is never used to Murderers; as may be observed in the Case of Sarah Malcolm, executed in Fleetstreet, March 7, 1732-3, for the Murder of Mrs. Lydia Duncombe, and her two Maids, Elizabeth Harrison and Anne Price, in the Temple, who hearing it made to some Criminals that were executed two Days before her, desir'd it might be repeated the Night before she died; but was told, that it was not allowed in Cases of Murder.

Ornaments on Newgate.

THE Ornaments on this Gate are, on the West Side, three Ranges of Pilasters, and their Entablatures, of the Tuscan Order; over the lowest, is a circular Pediment, and above that, the King's Arms; the other Intercolumns are four Niches, replenished with as many Stone Figures, well carved in full Proportion, one of which representing Liberty, has carved on her Hat, the Word LIBERTAS, and the Figure of a Cat lying at her Feet, alluding to a noted Story of the former Founder of this Gate, Sir Richard Whittington, who is said to have made the First Step to his good Fortune, by the Assistance of a Cat.

THE East Side is adorned likewise with a Range of Pilasters; and in three Niches are the Figures of Justice, Mercy, and Truth, with this Inscription under them:

THIS Part of Newgate was begun to be repaired in the Mayoralty of Sir James Campbell, Knight, Anno 1630, and finished in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Drury, Baronet, April, Anno 1631; and being damaged by the Fire of LONDON, was again repaired in the Mayoralty of Sir George Waterman, Ann. Dom. 1672.

LUDGATE.

LUDGATE.

THE Sixth principal Gate, is, in the West, called Ludgate, being first built, as Geffrey of Monmouth saith, by King Lud, a Briton, about the Year of Christ 66. This Gate is supposed to be one of the most antient; and as Aldgate was built for the East, so was Ludgate for the West.

IN the Year 1215, the 17th of King John, the Barons of the Realm being in Arms against the King, enter'd the City, and spoiled the Jews Houses; which being done, Robert Fitzwater, and Geffrey de magna Villa, Earl of Essex, and the Earl of Gloucester, chief Leaders of the Army, applied all Diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of the City, as has been said before, with the Stones of the Jews demolished Houses:

VOL. I.

And at that Time rebuilt Ludgate, as, in the Year 1586, when the same Gate was taken down to be new built, appeared by a Stone, found in the Wall, which was supposed to be taken from a Jew's House, having the following Words engraved on it in Hebrew Characters, יצחק בן משה מלך ישראל, Hec est Statio Rabbi Moses, Filii insignis Rabbi Isaac; i. e. This is the Station or Ward of Rabbi Moses, the Son of the honourable Rabbi Isaac.

My Lord Coke takes Notice of this Antiquity; but makes the Date of it older than above, namely, before the 23d of Henry II. Anno 1177; and will not have it to be an Inscription upon an House, but an Epitaph upon some Jew's Grave: And shews, from Hovenden, that, before the 23d of Henry II. all the Jews were buried within the City of London; but in that Year the King gave them Licence to have a Burying-Place in any City in England, but without the Walls, where they could purchase a fit Piece of Ground for that Purpose. The Historian's Words are, Prius enim omnes Judæi Mortui Londonia ferebantur sepeliendi; but this may be interpreted, that the dead Jews were carried from LONDON to be buried, as well as in LONDON, and perhaps better, that is, at a greater Distance, but now they had the Favour to be buried nearer, even in the Suburbs: But be this as it will, that learned Judge was undoubtedly mistaken in the Hebrew Word מצב, which always signifies a Station, as Stow has translated it.

Institut. Part.
III. Page 203.

IN the Year 1260, Ludgate was repaired, and adorned with the Images of Lud, and other Kings, as appeareth by Letters Patents of Licence given to the Citizens of LONDON, to take up Stone for making those Images, dated the 25th of Henry III. These had their Heads smitten off, and were otherwise much abused, in the Reign of Edward the Sixth, by unadvised Persons; and such who judged every Image to be an Idol. In the Reign of Queen Mary they were again repaired, and had new Heads set to their old Bodies.

paired.

IN the Year 1586, the 28th of Queen Elizabeth, the Gate, being very much decayed, was quite taken down, and newly and beautifully built, with the Images of Lud and others, on the East Side, and That of her Majesty Queen Elizabeth on the West. All which was done at the common Charge of the Citizens, amounting to 1500 l. or upwards.

Anno 1586.

THIS Gate was made a Free-Prison, in the Year 1378, the First of Richard II. Nicholas Brembar, being Mayor. The same was confirm'd in the Year 1382, John Northampton, Mayor, by a Common-Council in the Guildhall. In which it was ordained, that all Freemen of the City, should, for Debt, Trespasses, Accompts, and Contempts, be imprisoned in Ludgate; and for Treasons, Felonies, and other criminal Matters, committed to Newgate.

A Free Prison.

IN the Year 1439, the 10th of King Henry VI. John Wells, being Mayor, a Court of Common-Council established Ordinances, as William Standon and Robert Chicheley, late Mayors, had done before, concerning the Guard and Government of Ludgate, and other Prisons.

AND in the Year 1463, the Third of Edward IV. Matthew Philip, being Mayor, certain Articles, for the Relief of the Prisoners, were established in Common-Council, at the Request of Agnes Forster, the Widow of Stephen Forster, Fishmonger, sometime Mayor. Imprimis, That the new Works then lately edified by the late Dame Agnes, for the enlarging of the Prison of Ludgate, from thenceforth should be had and taken as a Part and Parcel of the said Prison of Ludgate, so that both the old and new Work of Ludgate aforesaid be one Prison, Jail, Keeping, and Charge for evermore.

THE

THE Quadrant built of Stone by Stephen Forster, and Agnes, his Wife, contains a large Walking-Place, the Ground 38 Feet and an half in Length, besides the Thickness of the Walls, which are at least 6 Feet. There is a Room of the same Size over it for Lodgings, and above that, Leads, for the Prisoners to walk upon, and have the Benefit of the Air. The following Inscription was formerly engraved in Copper, and fixed in the said Quadrant.

*Devout Souls that pass this Way,
For Stephen Forster, late Mayor, Heartily pray,
And Dame Agnes, his Spouse,
To GOD consecrate,
That of Pity, this House made
For Londoners in Ludgate.
So that for Lodging and Water,
Prisoners here nought pay,
As their Keepers shall all answer
At dreadful Dooms-Day.*

THIS, and another, with his Arms, being Three broad Arrow-Heads, taken down with the old Gate, Mr. Stow caused to be fixed over the Entry of the said Quadrant; but the Verses, which, indeed, are none of the best, even for that Time of Day, being turned inward to the Wall, the like, in Effect, is engraven outward in Prose, declaring him to be a Fishmonger; for some on so slight Grounds, as a Maiden's Head in a Glass Window there, had falsely made him a Mercer, who had begged at Ludgate.

ALL the Inside of this Gate, which was of Timber, was consumed in the Fire, Anno 1666, and the Stone very much damag'd; but has been since built up very substantially; and hath a convenient Chapel for divine Service; and beautifully repaired. On the East Side, in three Niches, are still remaining the Effigies of King Lud and his two Sons. And on the West Side, that of Queen Elizabeth, with the Arms of England and France quarter'd over her.

NEXT this, there was a Breach in the Wall of the City, and a Bridge of Timber, where now there is one of Stone, over Fleet-Ditch, right against Bridewell.

BESIDES the several Land-Gates and Posterns through the Wall, there were several Watergates.

Water-Gates.

WATERGATES.

MANY of these Water-Gates, on the Banks of the River Thames, being purchased by private Men, are put to private Uses, and the old Names of them forgotten; but of the rest take what followeth:

Black-Fryars.

THE Black-Fryars is a free landing Place for all Persons; where is now a very handsome Set of Stone Stairs, twelve Foot wide, finished in the Mayoralty of Humphry Parsons, Esq; It is at these Stairs, that the Lord Mayor lands every Year on the 29th of October, when he returns from being sworn at Westminster, attended by the Aldermen, in the City Barge, and several of the Livery Companies in their respective Barges.

Puddle-Wharf

THE next, from the West towards the East, was Puddle-Wharf, so called from one Puddle, who kept a Wharf on the West Side of it.

Paul's-Wharf.

THE next, Paul's-Wharf, also a free landing Place.

Broken-Wharf.

THEN Broken-Wharf, and some others: But the very principal Watergate of the City was Queen-hith.

QUEEN-HITH,

CALLED Ripa Regina, the Queen's Bank; which is a common Strand, or Landing-Place, and much resorted to by Barges and Lighters, which bring Goods from the Western Parts of the Kingdom; as Corn, Wood, &c. here being a very good Meal-Market kept Weekly. This Place is also a great Resort of the Western Watermen, and is still equal with, but, formerly, far exceeded, Billingsgate, as will be shewn in Queen-hith Ward.

DOWNGATE.

Downgate.

THE next was Downgate, so called, as may be supposed, from the Steepness of the Descent from St. John's Church, Walbrook, to the River Thames, whereby the Water in the Channel there, hath so swift a Course, that in the Year 1571, on the 4th of September, after a great Shower of Rain, a Lad of Eighteen Years of Age, going to leap over the Channel, was taken by the Feet, and carried by the Violence of that narrow Stream, towards the Thames, with such Swiftness, that no Man could rescue, or stop him, till he came against a Cart-Wheel that stood in the Watergate; before which Time he was quite drowned.

A Lad of Eighteen drowned in the Channel at Downgate.

THIS was some Time a large Watergate, frequented by Ships and other Vessels, like Queen-hith, and was a Part thereof, as doth appear by an Inquisition made in the 28th Year of Henry III. wherein was found, That as well Corn as Fish, and all other Things coming from the Port of Downgate, were to be order'd after the Customs of the Queen-hith, for the King's Use. As also that the Corn arriving between the Gate of the Guild-Hall of the Merchants of Cullen, viz. the Still-Yard, which is East from Downgate; and the House then appertaining to the Archbishop of Canterbury, West from Baynard's-Castle, was to be measured by the Measure, and Measurer of the Queen's Soke, or Queen-hith. Also in the 19th of Edward III. it is said, That Customs were then to be paid for Ships and other Vessels resting at Downgate, as if they rode at Queen-hith.

WOLFSGATE.

Wolfsgate;
in the Ropary.

THE next after Downgate, was antiently called Wolfsgate, in the Ropary, in the Parish of Albhallows the Less, in later Times Wolfs-lane; but now out of Use; for the lower Part was built on by the Earl of Shrewsbury, and the other stopp'd up, and built on by the Chamberlain of LONDON.

EBGATE.

Ebgate.

THE next, Ebgate, so called of old Time, as appeareth by the Records of many Tenements adjoining thereto. It stood near the Church of St. Laurence Pountney, but was within the Parish of St. Martin Ordegare. In the Room of this Gate there is now a narrow Passage to the Thames, called Ebgate-Lane, but more commonly the Old-Swan.

OISTERGATE.

Oistergate.

AT the Bridge-Foot, was a Watergate, called Oistergate, from the Oysters commonly to be sold there, it being the chief Market for them, and other Shell-Fish. In which Place now standeth an Engine for Water to serve the City.

BRIDGEGATE.

Bridgegate.

THE next was the Bridgegate, so called from London-Bridge, whereon it stood. This was One of the Four First, and principal Gates of the City, and was so long before the Conquest, when there was only a Bridge of Timber over the Thames, and is the Seventh and Last principal Gate mentioned by W. Fitz-Stephen; but being weakly made, when the Bridge was built with Stone, it was oftentimes in Necessity of being being repaired. This Gate, with the Tower upon it, in the Year 1436, fell down, and two of the farthest Arches Southward, but no one was hurt thereby. Several large Sums of Money were given to repair it by divers wealthy Citizens; namely, Robert Large, sometime Mayor, gave a Hundred Marks; Stephen Forster, 20 l. Sir John Crosby, Alderman, 100 l. &c.

The Bridge-gate burnt.

IN the Year 1471, the Kentish Mariners, under the Conduct of Bastard Fauconbridge, burnt the said Gate, and Thirteen Houses on the Bridge, besides the Beer-Houses in St. Catherine's, and many other in the Suburbs.

BOTOLPHSGATE.

BOTOLPHSGATE.

THE next was Botolphsgate, so called from the Parish Church of St. Botolph, adjoining to it. This Gate was given, or confirmed, by William the Conqueror, to the Monks of Westminster, in these Words:

“ Will. Rex Angliæ, &c. William, King of England, sendeth Greeting to the Sheriffs, and all his Ministers; as also to all his loving Subjects, French, and English, of LONDON. Know ye, that I have granted to GOD, and St. Peter of Westminster, and to the Abbot Vitalis, the Gift, which Almundus, of the Port of St. Botolph, gave them, when he was there made Monk; that is to say, his Lord's Court, with the Houses, and one Wharf, which is at the Head of London-Bridge, and all other his Lands, which he had in the same City, in such Sort, as King Edward more beneficially, and amply, granted the same. And I Will, and Command, that they shall enjoy the same well and quietly, and honourably, with Sake and Soke, &c.

BILLINGSGATE.

THE next, Billingsgate, is now used as an especial Port, or Harbour, for small Ships and Boats, and more frequented than Queen-bith. What Geffrey of Monmouth, that fabulous Historian, says of Belin, a British King's Building this Gate, has been before related; but after what has been said by other Writers, concerning Walls and Gates, Mr. Stow is of Opinion, it could not be so antient, but that it took its Name from some later Owner, named, perhaps, Beling; as Somer's Key, Smart's Key, Fresh Wharf, and others, took their Names from their Owners.

OF this Gate; more will be said in Billingsgate Ward:

Other WATERGATES.

THERE was another Watergate on the West Side Wool-Wharf, or Customer's Key, commonly called the Water-Gate, being at the South End of Water-Lane.

ANOTHER, by the Bulwark of the Tower, which was the last and farthest Watergate, Eastward on the River Thames, so far as the City of LONDON extendeth within the Walls: Both these last named Water-Gates, were within the Tower Ward.

BESIDES these common Watergates, were several private Wharfs and Keys all along from East to West, on the Banks of the River Thames, which will be spoke of in the Wards adjoining to the said River.

FOR the better keeping these Gates, in the Night Time, it was appointed in the Year 1258. by King Henry III. in the Forty Second Year of his Reign, that the Ports of England should be strongly kept, and that the Gates of London should be repaired, and diligently watched in the Night Time, for Fear of French Decèits: Whereof these Verses were written:

Per noctem Portæ clauduntur Londoniarum, Mœnia ne fortè Fraus frangat Francigenarum.

CHAP. V.

Of the Antient and Present State of LONDON, as to Water.

TILL the Time of the Norman Conquest, and Two hundred Years after, besides the famous River Thames, on the South Part, the City of LONDON was water'd with the River of the Wells, as it was then called, on the West; with a Water called Walbrook, running through the midst of it, into the Thames; and with a fourth Water, or Bourn, which ran within Langborn Ward, watering that Part in the East. In the West Suburbs was also another great Water, called Old-born, which fell into the River of Wells.

The River of Wells.

Langborn.

Fountains.

Wells.

Pools.

THERE were three principal Fountains, or Wells, in the other Suburbs; viz. Holy-Well, Clement's-Well, and Clark's-Well; near the last were divers other Wells, as Skinner's-Well, Fag's-Well, Tode-Well, Loder's-Well, and Lad-Well: All which, having the Fall of their Over-flowings, into the aforesaid River, much increased its Stream, and in that Place gave it the Name of Wells.

THERE was a Pool in West-Smithfield, called, in some Records, Horse-Pool; and another near the Parish-Church of St. Giles's, without Cripplegate. Besides all these, there were divers Wells and Springs in every Street and Lane of the City, which served it with sweet and fresh Water; but they being decay'd, other Means have been found out to supply the Want of them;

as will be shewed: But, first of the afore-named Rivers, and other Waters.

THAMES.

THAMES, the most famous River in the Island of Great-Britain, arises first in a small Spring in the Parish of Cubberly, in Gloucestershire; afterwards joining the Isis, near Dorchester in Oxfordshire, and, still increasing, passeth by the University of Oxford; and so on, in an extreme quiet Course, to LONDON, and thence breaketh into the French Ocean by main Tides; which, twice in four and twenty Hours Space, do ebb and flow more than Sixty Miles in Length, to the great Conveniency of Travellers; and by which all Kinds of Merchandize are easily conveyed to LONDON, the chief Store-House, and Staple, of all Commodities, within this Realm. There were, in Mr. Stow's Time, not to mention great Ships, and other Vessels of Burthen, above two thousand Wherries, and small Boats, pertaining to the Cities of LONDON and Westminster, and Borough of Southwark, whereby, he says, three thousand poor Men, at least, were set on Work, and maintained; but this is far short of what are now employed, employed, the Number of Boats and Wherries on the Thames, within the Lord Mayor's Jurisdiction, being at this Time 5854, and of Lighters and Barges above 1000. And here it is to be noted that all the Boats, Lighters, &c. belonging to the same Person, have all the same Numbers.

THAT the River of the Wells in the West Part of the City, was so called in old Time, may be proved from a Charter, granted by William the Conqueror, to the College of St. Martin Le Grand in LONDON, in which are these Words. I do give and grant to the same Church, all the Land, and the Moore without the Postern, which is called Cripplegate, on either Part of the Postern; that is to say, from the North Corner of the Wall (as the River of the Wells, there near running, departeth the same Moore from the Wall) unto the running Water, which entereth the City. This Water hath since that Time been called Turnmill-Brook, yet was also at that Time called the River of the Wells, which Name continued till the Reign of Edward I. for in a Book of Parliament Records in the Tower, it appeareth, that a Parliament being holden at Carlisle, in the Year 1307, the 35th of Edward I. Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, complained, that whereas, in Times past, the Course of Water, running at LONDON under Oldborn-Bridge, and Fleet-Bridge, into the Thames, had been of such Breadth and Depth, that Ten or Twelve Ships, Navies at once, with Merchandizes, were wont to come to the aforesaid Bridge of Fleet, and some of them unto Oldborn-Bridge; now the same Course, by Filth of the Tanners, and such others, was sore decayed; also by raising of Wharfs, but especially by a Diversion of the Water made by them of the New-Temple, for their Mills standing without Baynard's-Castle, in the First Year of King John, and by divers other Impediments: So as the said Ships could not enter as they were wont, and as they ought. Wherefore he desired, that the Mayor of LONDON, with the Sheriffs, and other discreet Aldermen, might be appointed to view the Course of the said Water; and that by the Oaths of good Men, all the aforesaid Hindrances might be removed, and it to be made as it was wont of old. Whereupon Roger Le Brabazon, the Constable of the Tower, with the Mayor and Sheriffs, were assigned to take with them honest and discreet Men, and to make diligent Search and Enquiry, how the said River was in old Time, and that they leave nothing that may hurt or stop it, but keep it in the same Estate that it was wont to be.

The River of the Wells cleansed.

Called Turnmill-Brook.

WHEREUPON the said River was at that Time cleansed, the Mills removed, and other Things done for the Preservation of the Course thereof; but was never brought to its old Breadth and Depth, upon which the Name of River ceased, and it was afterwards called a Brook; namely, Turnmill or Tremill-Brook, because divers Mills were erected upon it, as appeareth by a Register Book, containing the Foundation of the Priory of Clerkenwel, and Donation of the Lands thereunto belonging; and by divers other Records.

Afterwards Fleet-Dike.

THIS Brook was afterwards oftentimes cleansed, and the last Time, to any Effect, was in the Year 1502, the Seventeenth of Henry VII. the whole Course of Fleet-Dike, as it was then called, was scowred down to the Thames. So that Boats with Fish and Fewel were rowed to Fleet-Bridge and Oldborn-Bridge, as they were wont, which was a great Conveniency to all the Inhabitants in that Part of the City.

In the Year 1589, a Fifteenth was granted by a Common-Council of the City, for cleansing this Brook, or Dike; and the Money collected, amounting to a Thousand Marks, was employed therein; but to no Purpose: It was intended, by drawing several Springs about Hampstead-Heath, into one Head, or Course, not only to supply the City with fresh Water, where it was wanted, but also to scower the Channel of the said Brook into the River Thames; but by continual Encroachments made on the Banks, and Soilage cast into the Stream, it soon became worse choaked up than it was before.

THE Running-Water, as it is called by William the Conqueror, in his Charter afore-mentioned, which entered the City, before there was any Ditch between Bishopsgate, and where Mooregate now standeth, was truly called Walbrook, Walbrook. from the Wall which it entered, and not from Gualo, as some have supposed. It ran through the City, with several Windings, from the North towards the South, into the River Thames; and had divers Bridges over it, along the Streets and Lanes through which it passed. It is said, in an old Book, entitled, The Customs of LONDON, That the Prior of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, ought to make over Walbrook, in the Ward of Breadstreet, against the Stone Wall of the City, that Bridge which is next the Church of All-Saints, at the Wall. Also, That the Prior of the new Hospital, St. Mary Spittle, without Bishopsgate, ought to make the middle Part of another Bridge, next the said Bridge, towards the North; and that in the 28th of Edward I. it was, by Inquisition, found before the Mayor of LONDON, that the Parish of St. Stephen, upon Walbrook, ought of Right to scower the Course of the said Brook; and the Sheriffs were therefore commanded to see that the Parishioners did so. In the Year 1300, the Keepers of those Bridges, were William Jordan, and John de Bever.

THIS Water-Course having divers Bridges, was afterwards vaulted over with Brick, and paved level with the Streets and Lanes, through which it passed; and since that, Houses being built thereon, was hid under Ground, and hardly known.

LANGBORN Water, so called from Langborn. the Length thereof, was a great Stream of Water, breaking out of the Ground in Fenchurch-Street, which ran down with a swift Current, West, through that Street, cross Grass-Street, as it was then called, and down Lombard-Street, to the West End of St. Mary Woolnoth's Church, and then turning its Course South, down Shareborne-Lane, so Sherborn-Lane. named from Shareing or dividing the Borne, it brake into several Rills into the River Thames. From this Borne, that Ward took its Name, and is to this Day called Langborne Ward. This Borne has also been long since stopt up at the Head, and the rest of the Course filled up, and paved over, so that no Sign thereof remaineth more than the Names aforesaid.

Oldborn, or Holborn, was a Water, issuing out about the Place where the Bars now stand, which ran down the whole Street to Holborn-Bridge, and into the River of the Wells or Turnmill-Brook. This Borne has been likewise long since stopp'd at the Head; but the Street still retains the same Name.

THERE were in the Suburbs near LONDON, Northward, several Wells, sweet, wholesome, and clear, among which the most famous were, Holy-Well, and Clark's-Well; which faith, Fitz-Stephen, were frequented by Scholars and Youths of the City, in Summer Evenings, when they walked forth to take the Air.

THE

Holywell. THE First, viz. Holywell was in a Place, which is still called Holywell-Street; tho' better known at present by the Name of the Back-Side of St. Clement's.

Clement's-well. THE Fountain call'd St. Clement's Well, North of the Parish Church of St. Clement's, and near an Inn of Chancery, called Clement's-Inn, was, in Stow's Time, fair and curbed Square with hard Stone, always kept clean for common Use, and never wanted Water.

Clerken-well. THE Third was called Clerk's-well, or Clerkenwell, not far from the West End of Clerkenwell Church; which Church took its Name from the Well, as the Well did from the Parish Clerks of LONDON, who used to assemble there, yearly, to act some Play, or History, taken from Holy Scripture. In the Year 1390, the 14th of Richard II. the Parish Clerks of LONDON, played Interludes at Skinner's-well, near Clerk's-well, which continued for three Days, the King, Queen, and many of the Nobility being present. Also, in the Year 1409, the 14th of Henry IV. they acted a Play at the Skinner's-well, which lasted Eight Days, and was of Matter from the Creation of the World; there were most Part of the Nobility and Gentry of England to see the fame.

Skinner's-well. THERE were many other smaller Wells near the Clerk's-well, namely Skinner's-well, so called, because the Skinners of LONDON, did act there, yearly, Plays from the Holy Scripture; instead of which, they had afterwards Wrestlings, chiefly at Bartholomew-Tide.

Smaller Wells. THERE were also Fag's-well, near Smithfield, by the Charter-House, Tode-well, Loder's-well, and Rad-well, all decayed, and so filled up, that the Places, where they were, are not now to be discerned.

Dame-Annis-the-Clear. NORTH of Holywell, was another, called Dame-Annis-the-Clear; and not far from that, but somewhat West, another clear Water, called Perilous Pond, because divers Youth, who went to swim therein, were drowned.

Horsepool. THERE was a great Water in Smithfield, which, because the Inhabitants in that Part of the City did there water their Horses, was called Horsepool. The Springs being stopp'd, the remaining Part, which was but foul, was inclosed with Brick, and called Smithfield-Pond; but after the Fire of LONDON, was quite filled up.

Pool without Cripplegate. THE Pool near St. Giles's Church, without Cripplegate, was a large Water; for in the Year 1244, Anne of Lodbury was drowned therein; this was stopp'd up, but the Spring preserved, and was cooped about with Stone, by the Executors of Richard Whittington.

Anno 1236. THE River of the Wells, the running Water of Walbrook the afore-mentioned Bourns, and other fresh Waters about the City, being, in Process of Time, by Encroachments for Buildings, and other Ways, utterly decayed, and the Number of Citizens very much increased, they were forced to seek for new Supplies; whereof some were granted to them, and their Successors, at the Request of Henry III. in the 21st Year of his Reign, by one Gilbert Sandford, with Liberty to convey Water from the Town of Tyburn, by Pipes of Lead, into the City.

Great Conduit in West-Cheap. THE first Cistern of Lead, castellated with Stone, in the City of LONDON, was called the Great Conduit in West-Cheap, and was begun to be built in the Year 1285, in the Mayoralty of Henry Wales.

Tun in Cornhill. THE Tun in Cornhill was cistern'd in the Year 1401, in the Mayoralty of John Chadworth.

The Bosse of Billingsgate, and others. THE Bosses of Water at Billingsgate, Paul's Wharf, and St. Giles's Church, without Cripplegate, were made about the Year 1423.

Standard in West-Cheap. WATER was procured for the Standard in West-Cheap, about the Year 1431; which Standard was re-built by the Executors of John Wells, as shall be shewn in another Place.

WATER was conveyed to the Jails of Newgate and Ludgate in the Year 1432.

JOHN POPE, Citizen, and Barber, gave, by his Will, dated May the 11th 1437, a Tenement, which by Right descended to him, to the Lord Mayor, Chamberlain, and Commonalty of LONDON, for ever, for the Use and Reparation of the Great Conduit, and the other Conduits in the City.

KING HENRY VI. in the Year 1442, granted Licence to John Hatherly, Mayor, to take up two hundred Fodder of Lead to build Conduits, a common Granary, and a new Cross in West-Cheap, for the Honour of the City.

THE Conduit in West-Cheap, by Paul's Gate, commonly called the Little Conduit, was built about the Year 1442, one thousand Marks being granted by Common-Council, for building that, and repairing other Conduits. It was also began to be repaired after the Fire of LONDON, but not finished.

THE Conduit in Aldermanbury, and the Standard in Fleet-street, were made and finished by the Executors of Sir William Eastfield, in the Year 1471. A Cistern was also made to the Standard in Fleet-street, one at Fleet-bridge, and another without Cripplegate, in the Year 1478.

THE Conduit in Gras-street, 1491.
THE Conduit at Holborn-Cross, about 1498.
THE little Conduit by Stock's-Market, about 1500.

THE Conduit at Bishopsgate, about 1513.
THE Conduit at London-Wall, against Coleman-street, about 1528.

THE Conduit at Aldgate without, about 1535; the Water whereof came from Hackney.
THE Conduit in Lothbury, and in Coleman-street, near the Church, about 1546.

THE Conduit of Thames Water at Dowgate, 1568.

THAT at Holborn Cross was again new made by Mr. William Lamb, in the Year 1577, and thence called Lamb's Conduit.

THESE Conduits us'd in former Times to be visited, and particularly on the 18th of September 1562, as Mr. Strype says, from a Manuscript in his Possession, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and many worshipful Persons, rode to the Conduit Heads to see them, according to the old Custom; then they went and hunted a Hare before Dinner, and killed her; and thence went to Dinner at the Head of the Conduit, where a great Number were handsomely entertained by the Chamberlain. After Dinner, they went to Hunt the Fox; there was a great Cry for a Mile, and, at length, the Hounds killed him at the End of St. Giles's, with great hollowing and blowing of Horns at his Death; and thence the Lord Mayor, with all his Company, rode thro' LONDON, to his Place in Lombard-street.

ALSO from the River Thames many Citizens did supply themselves with Water for their Family Uses, fetching it by Lanes that led to the Water-side in divers Wards of the City: But, in Time, many of these Lanes were stopp'd up by those who dwelt thereabouts, for their own Gain, for they would not suffer any one to pass without paying a Duty. This became so great a Grievance, that the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, in the 17th of Edward III. receiving Complaints thereof, an Inquisition was made, and divers Persons being sworn to made diligent Enquiry into it, they brought in Presentments of the Annoyances and Stoppages in the several Wards.

AFTER this, Thames-water was conveyed into Mens Houses by Pipes of Lead, from a most ingenious Forcier, standing near London-Bridge, Bridge, made by Peter Morrice, a Dutchman, in Queen Elizabeth's Days, in the Year 1582, for the Service of the City on the East Part thereof. It is done by a Mill, and was the First Water-Work that was made to supply the City with Thames-Water. This Water-mill furnished the neighbouring Parts of the City only, at first, as far as Gracechurch-Street,

THIS Peter Morrice having shewn the Mayor and Aldermen an Experiment of his Skill in raising Water, by throwing it over St. Magnus's Steeple, which had never been seen in England before, was granted by the City, a Lease for Five Hundred Years, of the Use of the Thames-Water, and the Place where his Mills stood, and one of the Arches of London-Bridge, paying Ten Shillings yearly into the Chamber of LONDON, as an Acknowledgment; and two Years after they let him another Arch of the Bridge for Five Hundred Years. This procur'd him a considerable Estate, and continued in his Family till the Year 1701, when the Owner finding that the New-River undermin'd him, and impair'd his Profits, sold his Right and Title to Richard Soams, Citizen and Goldsmith of LONDON, for the Sum of 38,000 l. but Soams foreseeing that he should have Occasion for another Arch for more Water, Morrice, the better to enable him to go through this great Bargain, petitioned the City for it. Whereupon several Committees were appointed to examine, whether granting the Fourth Arch (for the Third belonged to a Wharfinger) would not incommode, and be a Stoppage to the River; who bringing in their Report, that it would be no Damage to let the Fourth Arch for this Use, it was granted to Morrice, and he added his whole Interest in this Grant, as well as his former, to Soams's Bargain.

THE said Soams took a new Lease of the City, at 20 Shillings a Year, and 300 Pounds Fine, for so many of the Five Hundred Years, granted to Morrice, as were unexpired. After which he divided the Property of this Lease into 300 Shares, and made it a Company; the Price of each Share being set at 500 Pounds.

THE Conduits of Thames-Water, near the Parish-Church of St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Nicholas Coleabby, near Old Fish-Street, were made in the Year 1583.

ANOTHER new Forcier was made near Broken-Wharf, to convey Thames-Water into Houses in West-Cheap, about St. Paul's, Fleet-street, &c. by an English Gentleman, named Bevis Bulman, in the Year 1594.

ANOTHER Conduit was built at Aldersgate, without the Gate, in the Year 1610, and Thames-Water conveyed unto it in Pipes of Wood and Stone, by an English Gentleman, named Thomas Hayes.

BESIDES all these, the famous New-River, brought from Chadwell and Amwell, by the Cost and Charge of Sir Hugh Middleton, Knight and Baronet, Citizen and Goldsmith of LONDON, deserveth to be had in especial Remembrance.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, by an Act of Parliament, granted a Liberty to the Citizens of LONDON, to cut and convey a River from any Part of Middlesex, or Hertfordshire, to the City of LONDON, with a Limitation of Ten Years Time for the Performance thereof: King James I. also granted the like Act, but without any limited Time, for the same Purpose: And when all else refused, Mr. (afterwards Sir Hugh) Middleton, undertook to bring his intended River from Chadwell and Amwell, near Ware in Hertfordshire, to the North Side of LONDON, near Islington, where he built a large Cistern to receive it.

THE Work began on the 20th of February 1608, and in Five Years Space was fully accomplished, after great Art, Pains, and Industry had been bestowed in the Passage of it, on Account of the Grounds not being all of the like Nature, some being owzy and very muddy, others again stiff, craggy, and itony.

THE Depth of the Trench, in some Places, was full Thirty Feet, if not more; whereas in others, it required great Art to mount it over a Valley in a Trough, between two Hills, and the Trough all the while borne up by wooden Arches; some of them fixed in the Ground very deep, and rising above Twenty-three Feet in Height. The Channel is narrow, but runs, in a winding Course, 60 Miles before it reaches this City, and has 800 Bridges over it.

BEING brought to the intended Cistern, but the Water not yet let into it, on Michaelmas-Day, Anno 1613, the Day, on which Sir Thomas Middleton, Knight, Brother to Mr. Hugh Middleton, was chosen Lord-Mayor for the Year ensuing; Sir John Swinerton, the Lord-Mayor, at that Time, accompanied by the Lord-Mayor Elect, Sir Henry Mountague, Recorder of LONDON, and many of the worthy Aldermen, rode to see the Cistern, and the first Issuing of the River thereinto; which was performed in the Manner following.

A Company of Labourers, to the Number of Sixty, or more, well cloathed, and wearing Green-Caps, all alike, carrying Spades, Shovels and Pickaxes, marched after Drums twice or thrice about the Cistern, and then presented themselves before the Mount, where the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and the rest of the Company stood; and one in Behalf of the Rest, delivered a Speech in Verse, concluding with these Lines,

Now, for the Fruits; then flow forth precious Spring,
So long, and dearly sought for, and now bring Comfort to all that love thee: Loudly sing,
And with thy Chrystal Murmurs strook together,
Bid all thy true Well-Wishers welcome hither.

AT these Words, the Floodgate flew open, and the Stream ran swiftly into the Cistern, with Drums and Trumpets sounding, and Guns firing in a triumphant Manner.

SIR HUGH MIDDLETON, with the Assistance of King James I. and the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, is supposed to have expended Five hundred thousand Pounds in bringing this Work to Town: But so poorly did it answer at first, that the Projector was almost ruined by it, whereupon the King, who was intitled to a Moiety of the Profits, relinquished his Share, reserving only 500 Pounds per Ann. out of it: And for above Thirty Years, there were not divided but Five Pounds odd Money to each of the Shares, which are Seventy-two in Number; and are now reckoned to be worth between 4 and 5000 Pounds each.

THE New-River-Company supplies, at this Time, above 30,000 Houses with Water, for they have more than that Number of Tenants, several of which pay for many Houses. Their Cistern at Islington was the last Year, viz. 1732, began to be alter'd in a very commodious Manner, as well as the Pipes, through which the Water passed into the Streets of LONDON; the old ones, being of Wood, were found to be very inconvenient, by intersecting, and lying upon one another; so that when there was Occasion to mend any one of the lower lower Tire, several that lay upon them were for a-while render'd as uselefs as those; but they are now made all of Lead, and laid Level with each other. This last Work, which is compleatly finished, has been more than Ten Thousand Pounds Expence to the Proprietors.

BEFORE this New-River was brought to Perfection, there was a Proposal made by one Ruffel, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, to bring Uxbridge-River to the North Side of LONDON; which Project was again revived in the Year 1641, but rejected by Parliament; and something of the same Kind was attempted in his late Majesty King George the First's Reign, which met with the same Fate.

York-Buildings Water-Works.

THE next to the New-River-Water, are the Water-Works of the York-Buildings Company, first set up in the Reign of King Charles II. which supply a great Part of the City of Westminster. Their Engine for raising Water by Fire, tho' a most ingenious Invention, is now entirely laid aside, it not being to be work'd, but at a greater Expence than it would answer; but the Notice that is taken of it by a very curious Foreign Traveller, Monf. De la Motraye, in his Third Volume of Travels, we shall give our Readers in his own Words, because they do Honour to our Country.

"AFTER staying full Twelve Months at the Hague, I went to LONDON, on some Business, where I always met with new Improvements made, either in Literature, Mathematicks or Mechanicks, which raised my Admiration; the English Genius and Ambition constantly aggrandizing, embellishing and rendering that City flourishing, has brought all Arts and Sciences to a higher Degree of Perfection, than any other Nation whatsoever; and seeing, that there were not a sufficient Number of Hydraulick Machines on the Banks of the River Thames, to supply this large City, which is the Richest and most Populous of all Europe, with Water, invented one more, by which one Element is made subservient to the Inhabitants by another, which is wonderfully performed by the Force of Fire. This Engine is placed on the Banks of the Thames, and distributes the Water through the Pipes which are for that Purpose, and conveys it in a commodious Manner into all the Kitchens and Brewhouses of LONDON; thus resembling the Function of the Veins and Arteries of a human Body, through which the Blood circulates.

"THE Inhabitants, besides the Advantage of having Plenty of Water in their Houses, at a very cheap Rate, and no Trouble, can, by the Means of Fire-Plugs and Engines, of the English Invention, have Water enough to extinguish any Fire that should happen in any Part of the Town. This new Machine is placed at an equal Distance from the Water-Engine at London-Bridge, and that at Chelsea.

Chelsea Water-works, Anno 1721.

THE next most considerable Water-Works are those of Chelsea, established, by Act of Parliament, in the Year 1721. These supply a great Number of Houses in Westminster, and the new Buildings by Hanover-Square, and have a most noble Reservoir, for that Purpose, in Hyde-Park.

THERE are some others of less Consequence, such as Merchand's Water-works, which supply some Part of the Strand, St. Martin's-Lane, and Long-Acre.

Hampstead, Shadwell, Mill-Bank, St. Saviour's, and Broken-Wharf; these last are bought in by the New-River-Company.

A Part of Westminster was likewise supplied, not long since, by Hyde-Park-Water, but that is now converted into what is called the Serpentine River.

BESIDES these Waters brought into the City from abroad, it affords abundance of excellent Springs within itself; the Waters whereof are much commended: Particularly, the Pump at St. Martin's Outwich Church, the Corner of Threadneedle-street; the Pump near St. Antholin's Church, in Watling-street; the Pump in St. Paul's-Church-Yard; the Pump in Christ's-Hospital: At all which Places are Iron Dishes, chained, for the Use of every one who is willing to drink thereof.

As there were several Benefactors to the Conduits afore-mentioned, Mr. Stow hath recorded their Names; and we shall likewise give them to our Readers, thinking it Pity that such Munificence should be buried in Oblivion.

IN the Year 1236, certain foreign Merchants of Amiens, Corby, and Nele, for Privileges which they enjoyed in this City, gave a hundred Pounds towards the Charges of conveying Water from the Town of Tyburn.

Benefactors towards the Water-Conduits.

SIR William Eastfield, Mayor 1438, convey'd Water from Tyburn to Fleet-street, where he began a Conduit, and to Aldermanbury; and from Highbury to Cripplegate.

Robert Large, Mayor 1439, gave to the new Water-Conduits forty Marks, and towards vaulting over Walbrook, near the Parish Church of St. Margaret's in Lothbury, two hundred Marks.

William Combes, Sheriff 1441, gave to the Works of the Conduits ten Pounds.

Richard Rawson, one of the Sheriffs 1476, gave twenty Pounds.

Robert Revel, one of the Sheriffs 1490, gave ten Pounds.

John Matthew, Mayor 1490, gave twenty Pounds.

William Buck, Taylor, in the Year 1494, towards repairing Conduits, gave a hundred Marks.

DAME Thomasin, Widow, late Wife to Sir John Percival, Merchant Taylor, Mayor in the Year 1498, gave to the Conduit in Holborn, twenty Marks.

Richard Shore, one of the Sheriffs 1505, gave to the Conduit in Holborn, ten Pounds.

THE Lady Ascue, Widow to Sir Christopher Ascue 1543, gave to the Conduits, one hundred Pounds.

David Woodroffe, Sheriff 1554, gave towards the Conduit at Bishopsgate, twenty Pounds.

Edward Jackman, one of the Sheriffs 1564, gave towards the Conduits, a hundred Pounds.

Bernard Randolph, Common-Serjeant of the City 1583, gave to the Water Conduits, nine hundred Pounds.

SINCE the City, by other Means, is so plentifully supply'd with Water, many of the Conduits have been taken down, because, standing in the midst of the principal Streets, they were a Hinderance to the Passage of Coaches, Carts, and other Carriages.

THOSE taken away, with their Cisterns, are,

THE great Conduit, called the Tun in Cornhill.

THE Standard in Fleet-street.

THE great Conduit in Gracechurch-street.

THE small Conduit in Stock's-Market.

THE Conduit at Dowgate.

AND the Standard, and all the Conduits in Cheapside. In the Room of the last of these that was taken away, there was a Petition deliver'd in the Year 1732, to the Court of Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City, for

Leave

Leave to set up an Equestrian Statue to the Memory of King William III. but rejected.

SOME Conduits there are still remaining, tho' very little used; for what with the several Springs, the Thames, and New River Waters, there is not a Street in LONDON, but one, or other, of these Waters run through it in Pipes under Ground, which either is, or may be, convey'd into every House; so that there is not a City in the World so well serv'd with Water.

THERE are also very good Mineral Waters at Pancras, at Islington, and under the Garden-wall of Powis-House, on the Backside of Ormond-street, which are said to be of great Physical Virtue.

CHAP. VI.

Of the RIVER THAMES.

The THAMES.

THE famous River of Thames, yielding by Forciers, Conduits, and other Means of Conveyance such inestimable Benefit to LONDON, deserveth to be particularly described.

THIS River receives its Name from two others, Thame and Isis, which unite their Streams a little below Dorchester in Oxfordshire. Isis, the most considerable Branch, rises at a Place, called Cubberly, in the Plains of Cotswold in Gloucestershire, where it is sometimes named Isis, or the Ouse; and, by some, ignorantly called Thames, even there. It soon becomes a considerable Stream, and taking its Course Eastward, receives, a little below Crecklade, the Cirne, or Churne, from which the Town of Cirencester in Gloucestershire takes its Name; from thence it runs North East, to Lecklade, where, after receiving an infinite Number of small Streams, it unites with the Colne, and here begins to be Navigable; carrying Vessels of forty or fifty Tons.

Navigable at Lechdale.

It continues its Course almost North East to Oxford, supposed, by some to be called Ouseford, from this River, which here meeteth the Charwell. From Oxford it runs almost South to Abington, and from thence to Dorchester, and so on to Thame in Oxfordshire; where, joining a River of that Name, it loses that of Isis, or Ouse, and is called Thamesis all along as it passeth. From Thame it goes to Wallingford in Berkshire, and so to Reading in the same County; which, in Time past, from the Number of Bridges there, was called Pontium. It receives here the River Kenet, which cometh from the Hills that lie West of Marlborough in Wiltshire; then the Thetis, commonly called the Tide, that cometh from Thetisford. It hasteth thence to Sudlington, otherwise called Maidenhead, in Berkshire, and so to Windsor, Eton, and thence to Chertsey in Surrey, where Erkenwald, Bishop of LONDON, some time built a Religious House.

FROM Chertsey it goes directly to Stanes; and receiving another Stream, called the Cole, passeth by Weybridge, where Guilford River falleth into it; thence to Shepperton, Walton upon Thames, Sunbury, Hampton Town and Court; Kingston, called Kingston upon Thames; Twickenham, Shene, Isleworth, Sion-house, Brentford, or Bregetford, where it meeteth with the Brane, or Brene, another Brook descending from Edgeworth. From Brentford, it passeth by Mortlake, Putney, and Fulham, where there is a very handsome Bridge, lately built over it, but of this more hereafter; thence by Hammer Smith, Battersea, Chelsea, and Lambeth, to LONDON.

THIS famous River being thus brought to LONDON, goeth on a-pace to meet the Ocean: The first Water it receives is the Brome on Kent

Side, West of Greenwich, whose Head is Bromis, in Bromley Parish; and going thence to Lewisham, it taketh in a Water from the East. The next it meets withal is on the Essex Side, almost against Woolwich, and this is the Lee, or Ley. And being past that, the Darwent also meeteth it on Kent Side, two Miles, and more, below Erith, it rising at Tunbridge.

THE next River that falleth into the Thames, is West of the Wanie Isles, a Rill of no great Fame, nor long Course; for rising about Coringham, it runneth not many Miles East and South, till it falls into the Mouth of this River, which is now described; and which, last of all, cometh to the Medway, a notable River, watering all the South, and South West Parts of Kent.

THE Length of the River Thames, from its Source to the Fall thereof, into the Sea, is at least an Hundred and Eighty Miles; and as it is in its Course the longest of the three famous Rivers of this Isle, so is it no ways inferior to them in the Abundance of all Kinds of Fish, viz. Salmons, Barbels, Trouts, Chevins, Perches, Smelts, Breams, Roches, Daces, Gudgeons, Flounders, Shrimps, Eels, &c. And tho' it seems oftentimes to be defrauded, as it were, by the insatiable Avarice of Fishermen, yet is there no Complaint of Want.

Stored with Plenty of Fish.

THIS River floweth and filleth all her Channels, twice in every Four and Twenty Hours, which Ebbing and Flowing holdeth on for the Space of 70 Miles within the main Land. It is commonly said, that the Stream or Tide is always highest at LONDON, when the Moon exactly toucheth the North East, and South, or West Points of the Heavens; but this will be shewn to be an Error. These Tides also differ in their Times, each coming 24 Minutes later than the other, which wanteth but 12 of a whole Hour in the 24. We likewise see daily that each Tide is not of equal Heighth and Greatness; for at the Full and Change of the Moon, we have the greatest Floods, and, such is their extraordinary Course, that as they diminish from their Changes and Fulls unto the first and last Quarters, so afterwards they increase again until they come to the Full and Change.

Ebbeth and floweth every twelve Hours, for the Length of seventy Miles.

They rise so high sometimes, when the Wind is at North, or North East, which bringeth in the Water with more Vehemence, that the Thames overfloweth its Banks near LONDON; which happens especially in the Fulls and Changes of January and February. This Order of Flowing is most constant, except some rough Winds out of the West, or South-West, do keep back, and check

The Stream
sometimes check'd at its Entrance into the Land.

check the Stream in its Entrance; as the East and North-East hasten its coming in; or some extraordinary Accident puts by the usual Course of the Northern Seas, which fill the said River by their natural Return and Flowing.

How often soever the Course of the Stream happens to be thus disturbed, yet at two several Times of the Moon, the Waters return to their natural Course and Limits of Time exactly. Polydore Virgil saith, That this River is seldom increased, or rather never overfloweth its Banks, by Land-Floods; but herein he is greatly mistaken, for the more the River is put by its right Course, the more the Water must of Necessity swell with the white Waters, which run down from the Land; because the Passage cannot be so swift and ready in the Winding, as in the strait Course.

THE Land Floods also very much stain the Fineness of the Stream, which is otherwise very clear of itself, and next unto the Water of the Sea, which is as much more subtle and pure than any other, as great Rivers are in Comparison to small Brooks; although Aristotle will have the Salt-water to be the most gross, because a Ship will bear a greater Burthen on the Sea, than on fresh Water, and an Egg sinks in this, that swimmeth in the other: But this may be easily answered by the Quantity of Space, and Abundance of Waters in the Sea, whereby it becometh of more Force to sustain such Vessels as are committed to it, and to which the greatest Rivers are in no Degree comparable.

Now as to the Flux and Reflux of the River Thames, it is a received Opinion, but vulgar Error, that it is High Water at LONDON when the Moon is either upon the South East, or North West Point of the Heavens; but this general Rule holds only true under the Poles, where the Equinoctial and Horizon are the same: And it supposeth also, that the Departure of the Moon from the Sun to be at all Times equal; in both which Respects the Rule is defective.

FOR at LONDON, (which lies in 51 Degrees 30 Minutes of North Latitude) where a South West or North East Moon makes a full Sea, or High Water, and that is at three of the Clock, which is true, when the Moon is in either of the Equinoctial Signs, Aries, or Libra, or near them, and has no Latitude; yet in the same Place when the Moon is in Cancer, having five Degrees of North Latitude, it will be 30 Minutes after ten of the Clock before the Moon will be at North East, that should be there at Nine of the Clock, by the vulgar Rule, which is an Hour and a half too late: And the same Day she will be South West at half an Hour after One, which is an Hour and a half too soon.

To correct this Error, and prove the true Time of High Water at London-Bridge, will be best performed by knowing the Day of the New or Full Moon, which every Almanack will shew; for upon the Day of the New or Full Moon, it will be High Water at London-Bridge, at three of the Clock, and every Day after at such Hours and Minutes as may be seen in the following Table.

EXPLANATION of the TABLE.

RECKON how many Days are past since the last New or Full Moon, then look for that Number in the first Column of this Table, and right against it, in the second, you have the Hour and Minute that it will be High Water at London-Bridge that Day. As for Example, If you look for five Days after the New or Full Moon, right against it stands six Hours and 30 Minutes; and at that Time it will be High Water at London-Bridge: But it must be observed, that there is a considerable Difference between the Spring Tides, and the Neap Tides, in respect to Time; for the Neap Tides will be sometimes an Hour or more sooner than what is shewn in this Table.

THERE are three Things very remarkable in this River, viz. its Spring Tides, its Overflowing its Banks, and its strange Shifting of Tides at some Times. The Spring Tides Spring Tides. are higher than ordinary, and happen about every Full or Change of the Moon. The great French Philosopher, Des Cartes, endeavours to account for this, saying, from the Theorique of the Moon, that she moves so in her Elliptical Orb about the Earth, that at her Full and Change she comes nearer to the Earth, and in each Quarter goes further from it. Whence, from this Hypothesis, greater Tides must be at the Full and Change, and Neap or Low Tides at the Quarters; which is indeed for the most Part true; for without doubt the Moon's Nearness at the Full and Change, is the Cause of the Spring Tides, as her Distance at the Quarters makes the Neap Tides.

BUT there is another Thing considerable (says another Philosopher, Childrey;) in the Business which Des Cartes doth not consider, or it may be, did not know; that is, That the Spring Tides, in our River Thames, come not just upon the Full or Change, but two or three Days after, and the like doth the Neap Tides after the Quarters; which is against his Hypothesis. Therefore, to untie this Knot, it may be conceived, that the Cause why the Spring Tides are at the highest two or three Days after the Full and Change, and not on the very Day, is the same with that, why the sharpest pinching Time of Winter comes not just in the shortest Day, when the Sun is at the lowest with ns, but in January, and about four or five Weeks after : Why also the coldest Time of the Night is not at Midnight, but about Break of Day. Why the hottest Time in the Summer is in July, four or five Weeks after the Solstice ; and why the hottest Time of the Day is not just at Noon, but about two or three of the Clock in the Afternoon.

Overflowing of
the Thames.

THE Thames overflowing its Banks proceeds from several Causes. First, from great Rains, by which the fresh Waters raise up the River, and going down to the Sea, are stopt by the Floods, whence they must needs swell above their usual Height. There was a notable Example of this in the Year 1555, when by reason of excessive Rains that had fallen, all St. George's Fields, in Southwark, the Palace-Yard, and even Westminster-Hall, were overflowed.

Secondly, Inundations of the Thames may be occasioned by boisterous North-west Winds, which, generally, not only cause very great Tides at the Mouth of the Thames, but on the Coasts of Holland, Flanders, Picardy, and the Shoars of England opposite to them : Because that Wind doth blow with equal Force, in the Tide of Flood, at each End of this Island, both Westwards and Northwards.

Thirdly, There is another Cause of greater Tides and Inundations in the Thames, not commonly taken Notice of, which is the Moon's being in her Perigeon, or in that Part of her Orb that is nearest to the Earth ; for if the Spring Tides are made by her coming nearer the Earth at her Full and Change, and her withdrawing farther from the Earth at her Quarters, occasions the Neap Tides, it must follow, that if to the Proximity which the Moon hath to the Earth, by moving in her Elipsis, there be added that Proximity which she hath in her Eccentric, or opposite Angles, she should operate so much the more extraordinarily upon the Sea, and make the higher Spring Tides at such Full and Change. And, on the contrary, that when she is estranged from us by a double Elongation of the Quarter in her Elipsis, and of her Auge in her Eccentric, she should operate so much the more weakly there than ordinarily, and to that Quarter make a slack Neap Tide.

Strange Shift-ings of the Tides.

IN the Thames, there are, at some Times, strange Shiftings of the Tides, which, by some, are looked upon as Prodigies, because they happen but seldom ; yet they are known to proceed from a natural Cause, as well as other common Effects. Several of these Shiftings have been taken Notice of by Historians.

I. ON the 12th of October 1411, the Thames flowed thrice in one Day.

II. ON the 17th of September 1550, the Thames flowed and ebbed three Times in nine Hours below the Bridge.

III. ON the 26th of January 1564, at Night, there were two Tides in two Hours at London-Bridge ; and likewise the next Day there were two in the Morning, and two at Night : And on Sunday the 28th of the same Month, two Tides in the Morning, and at Night but one, as it used to be, and so continued.

IV. ON the 6th of November 1574, in the Morning, there happened two great Tides, the first in Course, and the other within an Hour after, which overflowed the Marshes at Lambeth, and many Vaults and Cellars adjoining.

V. ON the 19th of February 1608, when it should have been dead low Water at the Bridge, it was high, and presently ebbed almost half an Hour to a Foot Depth ; and then, on a sudden, flowed almost two Feet higher than it did before, and then ebbed again, until it came near to its right Course ; so that the next Flood began almost as it should have done : All which happened before twelve of the Clock at Noon, the Weather being indifferent calm.

VI. ON the 6th of February 1609, there was a strange Shifting of the Tides, but the Time is not mentioned.

VII. ON the 3d of January 1622, in the Morning, the Thames shifted four Tides in five Hours, two Floods and two Ebbs, and then kept its right Course.

VIII. ON the 2d of February 1653, the Thames ebbed and flowed thrice in six Hours ; and the like Shifting of Tides was observed in the maritime Places in Kent, at the same Time.

IX. ON the 3d of October 1654, the Thames ebbed and flowed twice in three Hours.

X. ON the 1st of November 1660, the Thames ebbed and flowed three Times, between ten of the Clock at Night, and five the next Morning.

IF these Shiftings are examined, it will be found that in all of them the Tides were very slack, and, in a manner, at the very Neapness ; and that in all of them, except two, those in 1574, and 1656, the Moon was in Apogæo, about three or four Days before the Shifting, to make them, if possible, more slack and neap. By the Examples in 1654, and 1660, it looks as if the Cause of the Shifting of the Tides, is only the Over-bearing of their Course, when at the slack, by a North West Wind, which is the most powerful Adversary they can have upon the English Coast ; for if a slow Ebb be encounter'd full in the Teeth, what can follow but a Return of the Tide ? And if the North-west Wind, either abates its Fierceness, or shifts into some other Quarter, as the South-west, or North-east, for some short Time, and then either Return to its former Point, or resume its former Force, and does thus once, twice, or thrice, (which is usual at Sea, though its Wanderings are not so sensible at Land) it may be easily believed, seeing so plain a Reason for it, that there will be a Playing of the Tide to and fro, and several Floods and Ebbs succeeding one another in a few Hours. Perhaps this Shifting of the Tides, is the more taken Notice of in the Thames, because of its gentle Ebb to the Sea ; yet this is the more easily turned, whereas a River of a rapid Current, would prevail over these Irregularities.

THE next Thing to be mentioned of the River Thames, is the Extent of the Lord Mayor's, and City's Jurisdiction thereon, which begins at a Place called Colnie-Ditch, a little above the Bridge of Stanes, Westward, where is a Stone erected, with the City Arms carved thereon, and called the London-Mark-Stone ; from hence it comes to London-Bridge, and from thence reaches to a certain Place called Yendal, otherwise Yenland, or Yenleet, and the Waters of Medway. This Authority and Jurisdiction, belongs to the Lord Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, by divers Grants, Charters, and Confirmations, made by the Kings and Queens of England, and by divers Acts of Parliament ; and not only the Water of Thames, with the Fish therein, belong to the City, but the Soil and Ground under it ; being given to them by former Kings, as appears from a Writing in Queen Elizabeth's Days, found, as Mr. Strype says, among the Manuscripts of the Lord Treasurer Burghley, proving the Sea Lands, and Salt Shores, to be the Queen's Property ; wherein are these Words :

The Extent of the Lord
Mayor, and City's Jurisdiction on the Thames.

" Also for Proof of the Prince's Interest in Ri" vers flowing from the Sea, the Thames, and " Conservation thereof, was not only given to the " City of LONDON ; but, by their especial
" Suit, the King gave therewithal the Ground
" and Soil under the same : Whereupon, if any
" that hath a House or Land adjoining, do make
" a Strand, Stairs, or such like, they pay forth-
" with a Rent to the City of LONDON,
" how

“ how high soever they be above the Low-water “ Mark. Such is the Prince’s Interest in all “ Rivers that ebb and flow.

The Lord
Mayor Conservator of the Thames.

The Water
Bailiff, his Deputy.

Tinkermen
supprest.

NEVERTHELESS, there have been some
Contests betwixt the Lord Mayor, and the Lord High Admiral of England, about it ; but after a fair and judicial Trial, in open Court, the Dispute was determined in Favour of the City ; and the Lord Mayor, for the Time being, was adjudged to be Conservator of the Thames, within the Bounds and Limits aforesaid, and to have absolute Power of inflicting Punishments for all unlawful Fishings, either by Fishermen, or others, and for all Abuse of his Authority : But as his other great Employments with-hold him from attending on this important Business, so much as the urgent Necessity of it requires, he hath a Deputy, or Substitute, called the Water Bailiff of LONDON, who, under his Authority, and by Virtue of his more absolute Power, doth continually search, oversee, and punish all Offenders, who dare infringe those Rights belonging to so famous a River, or make Spoil of what was intended for general Benefit. There were also some Controversies about the Rivers Thames and Medway ; but all Differences were absolutely concluded, Anno 1613, Sir John Swinnerton being then Lord Mayor, and Thomas Sparrey, Esq; his Deputy in that Office.

AND whereas there was a Company of Fishermen, called Tinkermen, who with unlawful Nets, and other Devices, made an infinite Destruction of the young Brood or Fry of Fish, to feed their Hogs ; by the diligent and extraordinary Care and Cost of the Lord Mayor, and the rest of the Citizens, and by the Vigilance of his Water Bailiff, they were many Years ago supprest, and a regular and orderly Manner of Fishing brought into Use, that such Havock may not for the future be made of the young Fry ; as also sundry other Abuses, by unlawful Fishing, and some annoying Timber in Tilbury Hope, below Gravesend, dangerous to Passengers, and destructive to the young Brood of Fish, and to Fishermen’s Nets, were, for the general Benefit, reformed. They likewise took Care to clear and cleanse the River Westward, of about seventy nine Stops, or Hatches, consisting of divers great Stakes, and Piles, erected by Fishermen for their private Lucre, and standing dangerously for Passengers ; but none of these are now left, except such as stand out of the passable high Stream, that can prejudice none. The like Course was kept in the Time of Henry IV. and Henry VIII. There is also a watchful Eye that no Carrion, nor dead Carcasses be thrown into the River, to pollute, or infect the Stream.

To all these Intents and Purposes, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, with their Under-Officers, meet eight Times a Year in the four Counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, and have a judicial Sitting, for Maintenance of the Rights and Privileges of the River ; at which Times they have Power to impanel Juries upon Oath, to make Inquisition after all Offences committed upon the River, within the Extent of their Jurisdiction ; and as the Verdict given by the Jury, makes it appear, they proceed to the Punishment of the Transgressors, according to the Nature of the Offence ; whereof it may not be improper to give this memorable Instance.

A Progress of the Lord Mayor to Gravesend,
&c. to keep Courts.

SIR John Jolles, Knight, Lord Mayor of the City of LONDON, and Conservator of the River Thames, and Waters of Medway, assisted and accompanied by five of the Aldermen, one of the Sheriffs, and the Common Serjeant of the City, (in the Absence of the Recorder,) and attended by the Sub-conservator, or Water Bailiff, with fifty other Officers and Servants, took their Barges, on Wednesday the 3d of July,

1616, at Billingsgate, and in a few Hours arrived at Gravesend in Kent, where a Session for Conservacy of the said River, was kept before the said Lord Mayor, and his Assistants. At which Time, and Place, a Jury of Freeholders of the said County, being sworn to enquire of all Offences committed in any Part of that River within the said County, the Common Serjeant delivered them a Charge to this Effect :

“ THAT forasmuch as there had not been “ any Session of Conservacy, in many Years past, “ kept by any Lord Mayor of LONDON in “ that Place, it was probable, that they could “ not be well informed, neither of the Lord
“ Mayor’s Jurisdiction and Power, to reform “ Annoyances and Offences there, nor of the “ Nature of the Service by them to be perform“ ed in the Course of their Enquiry : And there“ fore he thought it fit to make known unto “ them both the one and the other. And here“ upon he shewed them, that the Jurisdiction “ of the City of LONDON in the River of “ Thames, from Stanes Bridge Westward, unto
“ the Points of the River next the Sea Eastward, “ appeared to belong to the City, in Manner
“ and Form as followeth ; both in Point of “ Right, and in Point of Usage : And then went “ over his Arguments.

I. FIRST, in Point of Right by Prescription, as appeareth by an antient Book, called Dunthorne, That Civitatis Foundationis, Aedificationis, et Constructionis, Causa erat Thamesis Fluvius. Quorum vero, Civitatis et Fluminis Gubernationem, tam Duces, Majores, Custodes, Vicecomites, Aldermanni, et Magnates Civitatis Memoratae hucusque obtinuerunt et habuerunt : i.e. The River Thames was the Cause of the first Founding and Building the City. The Government of which, both City and River, as well the Chiefs, the Mayors, the Keepers, the Sheriffs, the Aldermen, and eminent Men of the said City, hitherto have obtained and held. Whence he inferr’d, that the Government of the River hath belonged to the City Time out of Mind.

The Jurisdiction of the City of LONDON, in the River
Thames, by Prescription.

IN 21 Henry III. Jordan Coventrie, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, was, by the Mayor and Aldermen, sent to remove certain Kiddels, that annoyed the Rivers of Thames and Medway, who, ultra Yenland versus Mare, did take divers Persons that were Offenders, and imprisoned them ; whereupon Complaint being made to King Henry III. he took the Matter ill at the first, and sent for the Lord Mayor and Citizens to Kennington : And upon hearing of the Matter, the City’s Jurisdiction on the River was set forth and allowed, and the Complainants convicted, and every one of them amerced at 10*l.* and the Amercements adjudged to the City ; and their Nets were afterwards burned, by Judgment given by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen in the Hustings.

IN 37 Henry III. codem Anno, ante Pentecostem,
*Vicecomites LONDON, quia Aqua Thamesiae pertinet ad LONDON, per praeceptum dict.
Dom. Regis, deriverunt omnes alios Gurgites à LONDON, usq; Mare.*

IN 1 Richard II. Writs were directed to the Sheriffs of Kent and Essex, reciting the City’s Title, with Command, not to suffer the Citizens of LONDON to be molested, contrary to the Liberties formerly granted and allowed to them.

II. SECONDLY, In Point of Right by Allowance in Eyre, in 41 Henry III. before Hugh Bigot, being Justice Itinerant, the Sheriff, and Citizens of LONDON, were called in Question, for their Jurisdiction exercised on the Thames. Before whom it was found by a Jury in Southwark, Quod nullus aliquid Juris habet

By Allowance in Eyre.

habet in Thamesia, usque ad novum Gurgitem, nisi Cives LONDON. i.e. That none had any Right and Title in the Thames, as far the new Whirlpool, but the Citizens of LONDON.

IN 14 Edward II. Lib. Antiq. Regum 156. The Constable of the Tower was indicted by divers Wards of LONDON, before the Justice in Eyre at the Tower. De munerib. et Recep. conc. pro Kiddellis in Thamesiis: Concerning Kiddels set in the Thames, which, it seems, the Constable had received Consideration for. Et Constabularius ad Kiddellos respondet, quod Justic. non habent Jurisdictionem extra LONDON, placitum, inde cognoscere, cum predicti Kiddelli sunt in aliis Comitatus; et Justic. dixerunt, Aqua Thamesiæ pertinet ad Civitatem LONDON, usque Mare, et si velit respondeat. The Sum of which Words seems to be this, That the Constable answer'd, as to the Kiddels, that the Justices had not Jurisdiction out of LONDON, and that the aforesaid Kiddels, were in other Counties: But the Justices said, That the Water of the Thames, as far as the Sea, belonged to the City of LONDON, and if he pleased, he might bring in his Answer; who then pleaded not Guilty.

By CHAR-TERS.
Charter of King Rich. I.

III. THIRDLY, by Charters.

IN 8 Richard I. Dominus Richardus, Filius Regis Henrici II. concessit, et firmiter præcepit, ut omnes Kiddelli qui sunt in Thamesia, amoveantur, ubicumq; fuerint in Thamesia. That is, Our Lord, Richard the King, Son of Henry II. hath granted, and firmly commanded, That all the Kiddels that are in the Thames be taken away, wheresoever they are in the Thames.

King John.

IN 1 Johann. Rex concessit et firmiter præcepit, ut omnes Kiddelli, qui sunt in Thamesia, vel in Medway, amoveantur, et ne ceteri Kiddelli alicubi ponantur in Thamesia, vel in Medway, super Forf. x. l. Sterlingorum. That is, the King hath granted and firmly commanded, That all the Kiddels that are in the Thames, or the Medway, be taken away, and that no other Kiddels be placed in the Thames, or the Medway, upon Pain of Forfeiture of x l. Sterling.

Charter of King Henry
III.

HE then urged the famous Charter of King Henry III. which ran thus: Henry, by the Grace of God, Kyng of England, Lord of Ireland, Duke of Normandy, and Aquitain, and Earl of Anjou; Unto all Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, Barons, Justices, Sheriffs, Stewards, Ministers, and to all Bailiffs, and to all his true Men, greeting. Wetyth wel, That for the Wele of our Soule, and the Helthe of the Soule of Kynge Johan, oure Fader, and the Soules of our Antecessours; and also for the common Profyt of our Cite of LONDON, and of al oure Realme, We have graunted, and stedfastly commaunded, that al the Weres that ben in Thamys, or in Medway by Medway, where that ever they be in Thamys, or in Medway, be done awaye. And that from hens forwarde no Weres be sett in Thamys, nor in Medway, upon Forfeiture of xl.

ALSO We clayme quyte to oure Citezens of LONDON, al that the Constables of our Tour of LONDON, was wont to take of the same Weres. Wherefore We wyll, and stedfastly commaund that no Constable of Tour ony Tyme from hens forward ony Thing axe, or ony Graunte do to ony of the same Cite, by Encheson of the same Weres. It is knowne in owe to us, and (by) our trewe Men do us to understonde, that most Prayenge and laste Profyt myght falle to the same Cite, and to al the Realme, by Encheson of the same Weres, which we make for ever firme and stable to the same Cite, as the Chartour of our Lord, Kyng Johan, our Fader, with our Barons of LONDON thereof have reasonably wytnessith. Witnes, Eustas of LONDON, Peter of Wynchester, Joklyn of Bath, Rychard of Salysbury, Bishops: Hubert of Brough, Erle of Kent, our Justice Gylbart of Clare, Erle of Gloucester, and Hertford; Fitz-Nicol, Rychard of Argentin, our Styward. Gyve by the Hande of our worshipful Fader, Rauf, Bishop of Chycheester, our Chauncelar, at Westminster, the 18th Day of Feverell, the Yere of our Regne xi.

THE following is an Extract out of the Charter of LONDON, granted to the City by King Richard II. the sixth and seventh Articles.

IN the lxxviiiith Article also, are these Words, And that the same Citezens remove and do away al the Weres in Thamys and Medway; and that they have the Punishmentis thereof longing to us. Charter of King Rich. II.

LIKEWISE in the lxxiiid Article are these Words: And that the Constable of the Tower of LONDON make no Preses by Lond, nor by Water, of Vitayle or ony other Thynges whatsoever they ben, of Men of the forsaid Cite, nor of non other; coming to the Cite, or going out. Nor he shall not aresten, be ony maner Way, Shipes nor Botes bryngyng or ledyng Vitayles, or other Marchandyses to the Cite, or for (fro) the Cite forsaid.

BESIDES these he produced, to the aforesaid Purpose, others in this King's Reign, and that of Edward III.

MR. Stripe likewise mentions a Record, 2 Edward III. allowing the City's Liberty; whereby also the Sheriffs of all the Counties, on which the Thames washeth, were commanded not to hinder or interrupt the City of LONDON in removing and taking the Kiddels.

IV. FOURTHLY, this Jurisdiction belongs to the City, by Acts of Parliament. By Acts of Parliament.

WILL. II. Cap. 47. An. 13. Lib. I. No Salmons to be taken from the Nativity of our Lady unto St. Martin's-day, in all Points: Nor any to be taken in Mill-pools, from the midst of April until Midsummer. The Offence punishable, I. by burning the Nets and Engines. II. Imprisonment for a Quarter of a Year. III. For a whole Year.

THE 13 Richard II. Cap. 19. confirms the other; and restrains the taking of young Salmons in many Waters, from the midst of April until Midsummer, upon the same Pain.

NONE within that Time to use any Nets, called Stalkers, nor any other Engines, by which the Fry may be destroyed; upon the same Pain.

HE urged likewise, 17 Richard II. Cap. 9. and 11 Henry VII. Cap. 15.

IN the fourth Year of the said King's Reign (Henry VII.) an Act of Parliament was made, whereby the Mayor of LONDON was to have the Rule of the River Thames, from Stanes-Bridge to the Water of Yenland.

IN 1 Elizabeth, Cap. 17. None shall with any manner of Net, Weel, Butcayning, Kipper, Lymecreel, Raw Fag-net, Troll-net, Trim-net, Scaleboat, Weblifter, Stutlamete, or with any other Device or Engines, made of Cheare, Woolbine, Canvas; or shall, of any heeling Nets, or Trimbleboat, or any Device, Engine, Cautels, Ways or Means whatsoever, heretofore made or devised, or hereafter to be made or devised, take and kill any young Brood, Spawn, or Fry of Eels, Salmon, Pyke, or Pyckerel, or of any other Fish in any Floodgate, Pipe, or the Tail of any Mill, Wear, Killing or taking the young Fry forbid.

Weare, or in any Straits, Streams, Brooks, Rivers, Salt or Fresh.

Likewise taking Fish out of Season:

Secondly, None shall take and kill any Salmon or Trouts, not being in Season; being Kepper Salmon, or Kepper Trouts, or Shedder Salmon, or Shedder Trouts.

Or not of due Length.

Thirdly, None shall take and kill any Pyke, or Pyckerel, not being in Length ten Inches Fish, or more; nor any Trout, not being eight Inches; nor any Barbel, not being twelve Inches, and more.

What Nets are to be used.

Fourthly, None to fish with any Nets, Trammels, Keep, Weare, Helme Creele, or by any other Engine, Device, Ways or Means, but only with Net or Trammel, whereof every Mesh, or Mash, shall be two Inches and an half broad; Angling excepted.

A PROVISIO. That this shall not extend to Smelts, Roches, Minoes, Bulheads, Gudgeons, or Eels, in Places where the same have been used to be taken.

The Penalty.

THE Offenders to lose, for every Offence, 20 s. and the Fish, and also the unlawful Nets, Engines, and Instruments.

THE Mayor of LONDON (inter alia) shall have full Power and Authority by this Act, to enquire of all Offences committed contrary to this Act, by the Oaths of twelve Men, or more; and to hear and determine all and every the same.

THE Pains and Forfeitures to be to the Use of every such Person or Persons, (being no Body Politick nor Corporate, or Head of the same) before whom such Conviction shall be had; and to the Use of every Body Politick and Corporate, that heretofore have lawfully had any Fines, &c. upon such Conviction.

Fifthly, He proceeds to assert the City's Right to the Conservation of the Thames, and the Waters of Medway, by Inquisition, whereof these were two; one taken at Raynham in Essex, the other at Gravesend in Kent, before Sir William Cambridge, Grocer, then Lord Mayor of LONDON, 9 Henry V. where it was presented, "That whereas, by the antient Ordinances of LONDON, the Meshes of Nets should be two Inches in the Fore-part, and one Inch in the Hinder-part, and it being found that the Offences, according to the said Inquisitions, are contra Libertates & Consuetudines Civitatis; it was adjudged, that the Nets should be burned, according to the antient Custom in that Behalf provided.

By Decree.

Sixthly, He goes on further to prove this Right belong'd to the City by Decrees.

IN 8 Henry IV. the Mayor, and Aldermen of LONDON, did exhibit their humble Petition to the King's Council, reciting, "That, Time out of Mind, they have had the Conservation and Correction of the River of Thames, and of all Trinckes, Nets, and other Gins, whatsoever, in the Rivers of Thames, and Medway, placed, and have used to make a Sub-Conservator under them; and complained, that Alexander Bonner, then Sub-Conservator, having done his Duty in removing Kiddels, was evil entreated by the Owners, the same Owners dwelling in Erith, Bratferry, Barking, Woolwich, and other Places in the Counties of Kent and Essex." And upon hearing of the Matter in Camera Stellata, i. e. the Star-Chamber, they were found Guilty, and constrained to submit themselves to the Lord Mayor, and ordered always to bring their Nets to the Lord Mayor, before they should use them. And that the Kiddels then taken, should be at the Disposition of the Lord Mayor; and the Offenders made their Submission accordingly.

By Letters Patents.

Seventhly, He proved, by Letters Patent, that a Grant was made by King Edward IV.

VOL. I.

to the Earl of Pembroke, for Building a Weare in the River of Thames, which Grant was cancelled, at the Request of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, upon shewing their Right, for that it was contrary to their antient Liberties; at which Time the City's Title to the then Conservacy of the Rivers of Thames and Medway, was at large set forth, and is recited to have been shewn to the Lord Chancellor, and to the Earl, and his Council, and was afterwards allowed, and the Patent thereupon cancelled.

Eighthly, He re-inforceth the Right of the City by Proclamations, whereof one was made in the Reign of Henry VIII. in the 34th Year of his Reign, in which it is affirmed, that the Lord Mayor, and his Predecessors, have had, by divers Grants of the Kings of England, and by Acts of Parliament, and have also long enjoyed, the Conservacy of Thames, without Interruption, or Impediment of the said King Henry VIII. or any of his Subjects: And by the same Proclamation it was commanded, That none should resist, deny, or impugn the Lord Mayor, or his Deputy, in doing or executing any thing, for the Conservacy of the River, and of the Fish and Fry within the same.

By Proclamation.

Ninthly, By Report. For in the Controversy betwixt the Lord High Admiral and the Lord Mayor, for measuring Coals, and other Things, upon the Thames, it then fell into Debate, to whom the Conservacy of the said River did belong; which Cause was referred by Queen Elizabeth's Council of State, Anno 1597, to the Attorney and Solicitor-General, who jointly certified, among other Things, that the Conservacy of the River Thames, did, and ought to belong to the City of LONDON.

By Report.

Tenthly, By Quo Warranto. For in the 3d Jacobi Regis, a Quo Warranto, being brought against the City in the Exchequer, to know by what Title they claimed the Conservacy of the River of Thames, and of the Waters of Medway; the City made their Title to the same by antient Prescription, and Judgment was given for them.

By Quo Warranto.

AND all this spoken for Proof of the City's Right.

HE went on next, to confirm the Right of the City by Proof of Usage; shewing, that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, have, Time out of Mind, made Ordinances, concerning the good Government of the River Thames, for the Times and Manner of Fishing below London-Bridge, Eastward, to be observed upon Pains. And it appeareth, That from Time to Time, from the Time of King Henry III. and so downward, the Lord Mayor hath removed Kiddels, Weares, Trinkes, and other unlawful Engines, and hath reformed the Disorders of such as have offended in the River Thames, and punished Offenders, sometimes by Imprisonment, sometimes by Fine, and by burning their unlawful Nets.

By Usage.

THE Right of the City appears also by Writs and Precepts; for in the 9th of Henry V. Precepts were issued under the Teste of the Lord Mayor, to the Sheriffs of Kent and Essex, for the Returning Juries before the Lord Mayor, to enquire of Offences done in the River Thames.

By Writs and Precepts.

By Accompts in the Office of the Chamberlains of LONDON, from the 17th of Richard II. to the 11th of Elizabethæ Reginae, it appeareth, That the Water-Bailiff of LONDON hath made Search for unlawful Nets in the Waters of Thames and Medway.

By Accompts.

IN the 9th of Henry V. Commission was given to the Lord Mayor, to put in Execution the Acts of Parliament, made for the Conservacy of the Waters of Thames and Medway, and to enquire of all Offences, made, or done, in the said Waters,

By Commissions.

ters,

ters, and to punish the Delinquents for the same.

A like Commission in the 3d of Hen. VI.

A like Commission in the 1st of Eliz.

A like Commission in the 1st of Jac.

By continual Claim.

AND all these, or the like Commissions, in this Case, were, and are directed to the Lord Mayor for the Time being.

Lastly, THE Right and Title is made good by continual Claim. In the 37th of Henry VIII. Letters came from the Lord Admiral, to stop such Matters as were then in Question, between his Lordship and the City, concerning the Jurisdiction of this City upon the River Thames.

IN the 3d of Edward VI. Order was given that the Chamberlain should take Care to stop certain Inquests, charged, by Virtue of a Commission directed to the Lord Admiral, to enquire of Abuses in Fishing below the Bridge.

IN the 4th of Edward VI. the Common-Sergeant was appointed to repair to the Duke of Somerset, and to inform him of the City's Authority, in pulling down Wears within the River Thames.

IN the 6th of Edward VI. Order was given, that Suit should be made to the King's Majesty, and his Council, for the Determination and Allowance of the City's Jurisdiction and Interest in the River Thames.

1 Mariae Reginae. A great Number of the Fishermen of the East-side of LONDON, present in the Court of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, were commanded to obey the Water-Bailiff: And that one Hunter, of the Admiralty, should be summoned before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen at the next Court to be held for the same Matter.

1 Eliz. Reginae. Certain Committees were appointed to confer with the Lord Admiral, touching the Controversy between him and the City, concerning the Conservacy of the River Thames.

IN the 3d of Eliz. Certain Committees were appointed to attend the Lord Admiral, concerning the Jurisdiction of the River Thames.

7 Eliz. The Lord Admiral to be conferred with, touching the City's Jurisdiction in the River Thames.

8 Eliz. The Lord Admiral to be conferred with, touching the City's Right to the Conservacy of the River Thames.

13 Eliz. The Lord Admiral to be moved, that the City may enjoy their Liberties in the Thames and Medway.

17 Eliz. The Aldermen and others to confer with the Lord Admiral for the City's Title in the River Eastward.

23 Eliz. Mr. Norton, and others, appointed to attend on the Lord Treasurer of England, and to inform his Lordship touching the City's Title to the Conservacy of the River Thames below London-Bridge.

23 Eliz. Sessions appointed for the Conservacy of the River of Thames, the 9th of October, at Barking in Essex; and on Wednesday following to be kept at Woolwich in Kent.

24 Eliz. Certain Aldermen were appointed to treat with the Lord Admiral, touching the Conservacy.

29 Eliz. Aldermen appointed to go to the Lord Admiral, and to inform his Lordship touching the City's Right to the Conservacy of the River Thames, from London-Bridge to Yenland, and the Reculvers.

IN the Letters Patents granted by King James I. in the third Year of his Reign, the City's Title to the Conservacy of the River Thames, and Waters of Medway, is recited, and set down at large; and as the City had been interrupted in that Office, to take away all Controversy in this Behalf, and to remove all Doubt, the King did by those Letters Patents, Grant, Ratify, and Confirm, to the City of LONDON, the Conservacy of the said River Thames, and Waters of Medway.

THE Office of Conservator of so noble a River, is of great Extent; for he is to preserve the Currency of the Stream, and the Banks on both Sides: For, by the Laws, all Navigable Rivers are the High Streams of the King, for the Passage of Ships, Boats, &c. as the Highway is Via Regia, for the People to pass by.

HE is likewise to preserve the Fish and Fry, within the same; to enquire after any Fishermen, or others, who use any unlawful Nets, or Engines; or Fish at prohibited Seasons.

AND to prevent the Erection of any Weares, Kiddels, or Engines, and the Driving in of any Posts, Piles, or Stakes, which may in any Sort hinder the Stream, or Navigation; and to pull them up, if already done, and punish the Offenders: Also to prevent all Incroachments upon the River, and the Banks thereof, and to enquire of all Bridges, Flood-Gates, Mill-Dams, and such like Annoyances, and if any have cast any Soil, Dust, Rubbish, or other Filth into it.

THE following are two Acts, one of Parliament, the other of Common-Council, for preserving its Banks, and preventing Breaches.

An ACT of Parliament for the Preservation of the River Thames, made in the twenty-seventh Year of the Reign of King Henry VIII.

“ WHEREAS, before this Time, the “ River of Thames, among all other “ Rivers, within this Realm, hath “ been accepted, and taken, and it is in“ deed, the most commodious and profitable un“ to all the King's Liege People, and chiefly of “ all other frequented and used, and as well by
“ by the King's Highness, his Estates, and No“ bles, Merchants, and other repairing to the “ City of LONDON, and other Places, Shires, “ and Counties adjoining to the same; which “ River of Thames is, and hath been, most meet
“ and convenient of all other, for the Safeguard
“ and ordering of the King's Navy, Conveyance “ of Merchandizes, and other Necessaries, to and “ for the King's most Honourable Household, and “ otherwise, to the great Relief and Comfort of all “ Persons within this Realm, till now of late; di“ vers evil-disposed Persons, partly by misorder“ ing of the said River, by casting in of Dung
“ and other Filth, laid nigh to the Banks of the “ said River, digging and undermining of the “ said Banks and Walls next adjoining to the “ same River, carrying and conveying away of “ Way-shides, Shore-piles, Boards, Timber“ work, Ballast for Ships, and other things, from “ the said Banks and Walls, in sundry Places;
“ by reason whereof, great Shells and Risings “ have, of late, been made, and grown in the “ far-way of the said River; and such Grounds as “ lie within the Level of the said Water-mark,
“ by Occasion thereof, have been furrowed and “ overflowed by the Rage of the said Water, and “ many great Breaches have ensued and followed “ thereupon, and daily are like to do; and “ the said River of Thames to be utterly de“stroyed

“stroyed for ever, if convenient and speedy “Remedy be not soon provided in that Behalf.

“FOR Reformation whereof, Be it enacted, “established, and ordained, by the King, our “Sovereign Lord, and by the Assent of the Lords “Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons, in “this present Parliament assembled, and by the “Authority of the same; That if any Person,
“or Persons, hereafter, do, or procure any thing
“to be done, in the annoying of the Stream of “the said River of Thames, making of Shelves by “any manner of means, by mining, digging,
“casting of Dung, or Rubbish, or other thing
“in the same River, or take, pluck, or convey “away any Boards, Stakes, Piles, Timber-
“work, or other Thing, from the said Banks,
“or Walls, except it be to amend, and the same
“to repair again; or dig, or undermine,
“any Banks, or Walls, on the Water-side of “Thames aforesaid, to the Hurt, Impairing, or “Damage of any the said Walls and Banks;
“then the same Person, or Persons, and every
“of them, shall forfeit and pay for every Time
“so offending, One Hundred Shillings: The “one Moiety thereof to be to the King our So“vereign Lord, and the other Moiety thereof to “the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON,
“for the Time being. The same to be recover“ed, and obtained, by the Mayor and Com“monalty of LONDON, by Bill or Plaint, “Writ of Debt, or Information, severally against “every Offender, in any of the King’s Courts;
“in which Actions and Suits, or any of them,
“the Party Defendant shall not be essoined or “wage his Law, or any Protection to be allowed “in the same.

“AND it is further enacted by the Authority “aforesaid, That if Complaint shall happen to “be made to the Lord Chancellor of England, “Lord Treasurer, Lord President of the King’s “Council, Lord Privy Seal, or to any of them,
“by any Person, or Persons, or Body Politick; “that Sir Thomas Spert, Knight, now having
“the Office and Ordering of, and for Ballast“ing of Ships, or any other that hereafter shall “have the Office and Order of Ballasting of “Ships, do take any Ballast for Ships near the “said River of Thames, and do not take
“for Parcel of the said Ballasting, the Gra“vel and Sand of the Shelves between Greenbyth
“and Richmond, within the said River of “Thames, or in any Place, or Places, that is,
“or shall be, unto the Damage or Annoyance of “the said River of Thames, or in any Part there-
“of; that upon every such Complaint, the said
“Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer, Lord Pre“sident of the King’s most Honourable Coun“cil, Lord Privy-Seal, and every of them,
“calling both the Chief Justices of either Bench
“or one of them, shall have Power and Autho“rity from Time to Time, to hear and finally “determine every such Complaint by their Dis“cretion, and to put such Order therein, for the “taking of Ballast for Ships upon every such Com“plaint, as by their Discretions shall seem most “convenient for the Preservation of the said River “of Thames: And the Parties offending such “Order, shall suffer Imprisonment, and make no “less Fine than Five Pounds to the King’s Use, “for every Time offending or breaking the “same.

“Provided always, and be it enacted, That it “shall be lawful to every Person and Persons, to “dig, carry, and take away Sand, Gravel, or “other Rubbish, Earth, or Thing, lying or being “in, or upon any Shelf or Shelves within the said “River of Thames, without Let or Interruption
“of any Person or Persons, or paying any Thing
“for the same; any Thing contained in this pre“sent Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

An ACT of COMMON-COUNCIL, concerning the Conservation and Cleansing the River Thames, made the 28th of September in the Thirtieth Year of the Reign of King Henry VIII.

“WHEREAS, by the Statute made “in the 27th Year of the Reign of “our Sovereign Lord King Henry the “Eighth, among other, for Reformation of
“the Misordering of the River of Thames,
“by casting in Dung, and other Filth, many “great Shelves, and other Risings, have been
“of late grown, and made within the said “River: By Reason whereof, many great “Breaches have ensued by Reason thereof, “which of like shall be the Occasion of “the utter Destruction of the said River, “unless that the same Law be put in due “Execution, according to the true Intent and “Meaning thereof.

“WHEREFORE, for a further Reformation
“of the same, and to the Intent, that the “said good and wholesome Statute may be “put in more Execution and better Know“ledge of the People, it is enacted, by the “Authority of this Common-Council, That “Proclamation may be made within this “City, and the same to be put in Writing,
“and Tables thereof made and set up in “divers Places of this City, That it shall “be lawful to every Person or Persons, to dig,
“carry away, and take away Sand, Gravel,
“or any Rubbish, Earth, or any Thing lying “and being in any Shelf or Shelves, within “the said River of Thames, without Let or “Interruption of any Person or Persons, and “without any Thing paying for the same;
“and after that, to sell the same away, or “otherwise occupy or dispose of the said “Gravel, Sand, or other Thing at their “free Liberty and Pleasure. And that all “Paviors, Bricklayers, Tilers, Masons, and “all others that shall occupy Sand, or Gra“vel, shall endeavour themselves with all Di“ligence to occupy the said Sand or Gra“vel, and none other, paying for the same “reasonably, as they should or ought to pay “for other Sand or Gravel, digged out of “other Men’s Grounds about the said City,
“which after is filled again with much filthy “Things, to the great Infection of the In“habitants of the said City, and all other “repairing unto the same: And that further,
“humble Suit may be made to the King’s “Highness, That all Persons having Lands,
“or Tenements along the said River-Side, “upon certain Pain by His Highness, and
“the Lords of his Honourable Council to be “limited, shall well and sufficiently repair,
“and maintain, all the Walls and Banks ad“joining unto their said Lands, that so the “Water may not, nor shall break in upon
“the same, and the same to be continued,
“till the Time that the said noble River
“be brought again to its old Course and “former State: And that strong Grates of “Iron, along the said Water-Side, and also “by the Street-Side, where any Watercourse “is had into the said Thames, be made by “the Inhabitants of every Ward, so along
“the said Water, as of old Time hath been “accustomed. And that every Grate be in “Heighth four and twenty Inches, at the “least, as the Place shall need, and in “Breadth, one from another, one Inch, and
“the same to be done with all Expedition “and Speed. And if the Occupiers of the “said Lands and Tenements make Default, “contrary

“ contrary to the Ordinance aforefaid, or “ elfe; if any Perfon or Perfons in great “ Rains and other Times sweep their Soilage,
 “ or Filth of their Houfes into the Channell,
 “ and the fame after is conveyed into the “ Thames, every Perfon fo offending, fhall “ forfeit, for every fuch Default, Twenty-pence, “ and that upon Complaint to be made to “ any Conftable, next adjoining to the faid “ Place where any fuch Default fhall be found,
 “ it fhall be lawful for the faid Conftable,
 “ or his fufficient Deputy, for the Time be“ ing, from Time to Time, to deftrain for
 “ the faid Offence, and to retain the fame “ irreplegiabie. A like Law to be obferved “ and kept; and like Penalty to be paid for “ every Perfon that burns Rufhes and Straw
 “ in their Houfes, or wafh in the common “ Streets or Lanes, and to be recovered, as “ aforefaid; and the one Moiety thereof to “ be to the Mayor and Commonalty, and the “ other Moiety to be divided between the “ faid Conftable that taketh Pain, and the “ Party-Finder of the faid Default. And if “ the Conftable, or his Deputy, refufe to do “ his Duty, according to the true Meaning of “ this Act, that then the Conftable, or his “ Deputy, which fhall fo refufe to do his “ Duty, as aforefaid, fhall forfeit and pay
 “ for every Time fo offending three Shillings “ and Four-pence. And the fame Penalty of
 “ the Conftable to be recovered and obtained
 “ by Diffrefs irreplegiabie, to be taken by “ any of the Officers of the Chamber of “ LONDON, to the Ufe of the Mayor
 “ and Commonalty of LONDON.

“ AND further, That no Perfon or Perfons “ having any Wharf or Houfe by the faid “ Water-fide, make not their Lay-Stalls, where “ the common Rakers of this City ufe to “ refofe and lay all their Soilage to be car“ ried away by them with their Dung-Boats,
 “ and that the faid Rakers fhall lay their “ faid Dung, carried in their Dung-Boats,
 “ to fuch convenient Place or Places, as “ fhall be appointed by the Lord Mayor of “ LONDON, for the Time being, with
 “ the Advice of his Brethren, the Aldermen
 “ of the fame, and to no other Place or “ Places, upon Pain to forfeit for every fuch “ Default, 5 l. to be recovered in any of “ the King’s Courts within the City of “ LONDON, by Bill, Plaint, Moiety of “ Debt, or Information, by any Perfon that “ will, or fhall fue for the fame. The one “ Moiety thereof, to be unto the Mayor and “ Commonalty of LONDON, and the other “ Moiety to him, or them, that will or fhall “ purfue for the fame. In which Actions, or “ Suits, no Wager of Law, nor Effoign fhall “ be allowed.

*Mills erected on the Thames,
 by the Bridge
 to grind Corn.*

ABOUT the Year 1588, certain Mills were erected upon the River Thames, near the Bridge, to grind Corn for the better fupplying of the City, which had for fome Years paff fuffered very much, by reafon of Dearth, and Scarcity of Corn, and that encreafed greatly for fome Number of Miles about the City, on Account of the Difficulty of grinding Corn for the Relief of the Poor. Therefore, in the Month of March, 1588, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City, petitioned the Queen, that they might erect four Corn-Mills on the River Thames, under two Roofs near the Bridge, in fuch Places where it fhould breed no Annoyance.
 Whereupon feveral of the Council, viz. the Lord Chancellor Hatton, the Earl of Leicefter, Charles
Howard, Baron of Effingham, Sir Francis Knollys,
Sir Francis Walsingham, fent their Letter, April
 1, 1588, from the Court at Greenwich to Mr.

Rookesby, Mafter of St. Catharine’s, Mr. Fan-fhaw, Mr. Peter Osborn, Remembrancer of the Exchequer, with this Order, That they fhould call before them, fuch as the Mayor and City fhould appoint to manage the Caufe, likewise fome of the principal Officers of the Navy, and Ma-fters of the Trinity-Houfe; and to advife them to confult together, whether the Erection of thefe Mills might be beneficial or inconvenient; and in what Sort and Place it fhould be thought ne-ceffary they fhould be fet up. That being by them advifed, the Queen might be moved to grant their Request, if it fhould be found behoofe-ful for the City, and not hurtful to the River Thames. The three abovesaid, at length, returned this Certificate to the Council: That by the Certificate of the principal Officers of the Navy, and the chief Mafters of the Trinity-Houfe, and the eight Mafters and Overfeers of the River, and other the Affiftants of the Company of Watermen, as alfo by their own View and advifed Confidera-tion, it was found, That the erecting of the faid Mills would not be hurtful, nor prejudicial, to the Thames any Way: And alfo would work Benefit, and no Inconvenience, fo far forth as hitherto they could fee and perceive.

The CERTIFICATE of the Mafters and Affiftants of the Trinity-Houfe, was as followeth.

“ WHEREAS it hath pleased the Lords
 “ of her Majefty’s moft Honourable “ Privy-Council, to direct their Let“ ter to the Worfhipful Mr. Rookesby, Mafter of “ St. Catharine’s, Mr. Fanfhaw, Mr. Osborn, “ Commissioners for the Building of certain Mills on “ the South Side of Thames, upon the Starlings “ above the Bridge: And the Commissioners above-“ named have fent for us, the Mafter and Affiftants “ of the Trinity-Houfe of Deptforth-Strond in “ Kent, that we fhould make the Survey, whether “ the Erecting and Building of thofe Mills might “ be prejudicial or hurtful to the faid River.
 “ We whofe Names are here under-written, with “ others, have taken a View of the faid Place,
 “ and do find, as far as we can judge and forefee,
 “ it will not be hurtful, nor prejudicial, to the faid “ River in any Way. April 4. 1588. By

IN former Times there feems to have been feveral Mills upon the Thames; one of which, below Bridge, on Southwark Side, belonged to the Monks of Rockefter: But thefe are now almoft all taken away, as every Thing is that may annoy this noble River, which from the Wealth it brings in from all Parts of the World, and the great Convenience of it to the Inhabitants of thefe Cities may be faid to be the Radical Moisture of LONDON; the Advantages of it were very well hinted at in an ingenious Repartee made by the Lord Mayor to King James I. who being difpleafed that the City would not lend him a Sum of Money, told the Mayor, and Aldermen, that he would remove his Court, with all the Records of the Tower, and the Courts of Westminfter-Hall to another Place, with fome other Exprefions, to the like Purpofe. The Lord
 Mayor calmly heard all, and at laft answered,
Your Majefty hath Power to do what you please, and your City of LONDON will obey accordingly; but fhe humbly defires that when your Majesty fhall remove your Courts, you will please to leave the Thames behind you

THE Mafter, Wardens, and Affiftants of the Brotherhood of the Trinity-Houfe, by Letters Patent from Queen Elizabeth, in the 36th Year of her Reign, and another Grant from K. Charles II. are entitled to the Soil, Gravel, and Sand of the River Thames, with the sole Right of supplying all Ships and Vessels with Ballast, at the Rates of 9 d. per Ton, to be paid by all Ships employed in the Coal Trade; 12 d. per Ton, by all other British Ships; and 1 s. 4 d. per Ton by Foreign Ships; for which Purpose they constantly employ sixty Ballast Lighters, and 120 Men in their Service, with an Allowance of 4 d. per Ton to the Ballast Men, and 2 d. per Ton to the Owners of the Ballast Lighters, and apply the Residue of the Money received for Ballast, after the Charges of Management are paid, to the Maintenance of 93 Alms-houses, and a great Number of Out-Pensioners, who are poor decayed Seamen, their Widows and Orphans.

THE Ballast Men before-mentioned, not content with the antient Prices allowed to them, but pretending that the Deepness of the River has made their Work more difficult, and the Dearness of Provisions, an Increase of Wages necessary, and perceiving that the Knowledge of the Business, in which they are employed, is confined to themselves, have lately combined together, and insisted on 3 d. per Ton more, which they have actually demanded and received to their own Use from several Masters and Commanders of Ships in Disobedience to the Orders of the Master, Wardens, &c. of the Trinity-House, who, notwithstanding the Subscription of the Masters and Owners of Ships to advance the Prices of Ballast, were not warranted to increase the accustomed Rates, and therefore could not allow greater Wages to the Ballast Men, without starving the Poor; and therefore, that the Trade of the Nation might not suffer for want of Ballast, and the Obstructions of the River, they petitioned the Parliament in this present Session, (1733) for Leave to bring in a Bill, which has already past the House of Commons, to empower them to receive larger Prices for Ballast, and to make farther Allowance for raising and delivering the same, and to compel the Ballast Men to deliver due Tonnage of Ballast to all Masters of Ships, and subject them to proper Regulation and Government.

WE shall next treat of some Affairs concerning the Company of Watermen, for the River Thames.

By a Stat. 2 and 3 Phil. and Mar. it was enacted, That at the first Court of Aldermen in LONDON, next after the first of March, out of the Watermen, betwixt Gravesend and Windsor, eight Overseers are to be chosen, to keep Order among the rest.

THAT two Watermen shall not carry any, but where one of them hath exercised that Profession two Years before that Time, and hath been allowed by the greater Part of the Overseers, under the known Seal, on Pain to be committed to one of the Compters, by the said Overseers for a Month, or a less Time, as the Offence shall deserve.

THAT no single Man, that is no Householder, nor retained as an Apprentice, or as a Servant, for one Year, at least, shall exercise that Profession betwixt the Places aforesaid, on Pain of like Punishment.

THE Lord Mayor, and Aldermen of LONDON, and the Justices of Peace, within the Counties adjoining to the River Thames, upon Complaint of any two of the Overseers, or of any Waterman's Master, have Power, not only to hear and determine any Offence committed against this Act, and to enlarge any Waterman unjustly punished by the said Overseers, but likewise to punish the Overseers themselves, in Case they unjustly punish any Person, by Colour of this Act.

VOL. I.

ALSO, A Wherry, that is not twelve Feet and a half long, and four Feet and a half broad in the Midship, and sufficient to carry two Persons, on one Side right, shall be forfeited; and the King shall have one Moiety, and the Informer the other.

AGAIN, That Waterman that withdraws himself in Time of Pressing, (it being proved by two Witnesses, before the said Mayor, Aldermen, or Justices, and two of the said Overseers) shall suffer a Fortnight's Imprisonment; and shall be prohibited to Row any more upon the Thames, for a Year and a Day after.

ALSO, The Overseers shall not only call the Watermen before them, and direct them, and Register their Names, but likewise examine their Boats, before they be launched, whether they have due Proportion and Goodness, according to this Act; and if the Overseers refuse, or neglect their Office, they shall forfeit 5 l. between the King and Informer.

ALSO, The Court of Aldermen shall Assess the Fares of Watermen, which being subscribed by two of the Privy-Council, (at least) shall be set up in Guild-hall, Westminster-hall, &c. and the Waterman that takes more, than according to the Fare so assessed, shall, for every such Offence, suffer half a Year's Imprisonment, and forfeit 40 s. to be divided as before.

AND by the 1 Jac. I. 16. No Waterman shall retain any Servant, or Apprentice, unless he himself hath been an Apprentice to a Waterman by the Space of five Years before, and not an Apprentice under the Age of eighteen Years, or for less Time than seven Years, in Pain to forfeit for every such Offence 10 l. to be divided between the King and Prosecutor.

BUT this Act shall not restrain Watermen's Sons, of convenient Growth and Strength, and formerly trained up in Rowing; but that they be allowed to serve as Apprentices, and to carry Passengers from Place to Place, at the Age of sixteen Years.

ALSO, That eight Overseers shall Yearly, upon the first Day of March, and the first Day of September, cause openly to be read in the Common-hall, all their Orders, made, or to be made, in Pain that every of them, for every such Default, shall forfeit twenty Nobles, to be divided betwixt the King and the Prosecutor.

THE Lord Mayor, for the Time being, may cause any Person, inhabiting within LONDON, or the Liberties, to be summoned to appear before his Lordship, upon the Complaint of any Citizen; and for Non-appearance, may grant his Warrant to bring such Person before him; and hath Power to hear and determine Differences between Party and Party.

If any Apprentice, or other Person, shall be carried aboard of Ship, or there detained against his Will, the Lord Mayor may send his Warrant by his Water Bailiff, and compel the Captain, or Commander, of the Vessel, to release such Person.

By a late Statute made Anno 11 and 12 Will. III. Cap. 21. For the better Ordering and Governing the Watermen, Wherry-men, and Lightermen, on the River Thames between Gravesend and Windsor, it is enacted, That all Laws in Force touching Watermen and Wherry-men, not thereby altered, or repealed, shall be duly put in Execution, under the Penalties therein contained. And that every Lighterman, or Owner, Keeper, or Worker of any Lighter, or other large Craft on the Thames, between Gravesend and Windsor, shall be taken to be of the Society, or Company, of Wherry-men and Lightermen, which Wherry-men, Watermen, and Lightermen, are, by the said Act, made a Society, or Company.

K

AND

Rates of Ballast raised by Act of Parliament, 1733.

Rules and Orders relating to the Company of Watermen.

AND all such Lightermen, on the River Thames (except Trinity-men, Fishermen, Ballast-men, Western Barges, and Mill-boats, Chalk Hoys, Faggot and Wood Lighters, and other Craft carrying the same) shall be register'd in a Book kept by the Company of Watermen and Lightermen, and be liable to the Rules of the said Company.

THAT the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen shall yearly elect eight of the best Watermen, and three of the best Lightermen, at the first Court of Aldermen, next after the first Day of June, to be Overseers, and Rulers of the said Wherry-men, &c. who are to maintain good Orders amongst them, and to cause the Names of the Lightermen to be register'd at their Hall, after the 29th Day of June 1700, then coming.

THAT the said Rulers and Assistants were on the first Court Day after the first Day of June then next, and so yearly, to appoint Watermen of the principal Towns and Stairs between Gravesend and Windsor, to choose their Assistants, not exceeding Sixty, nor less than Forty Watermen. And the Lightermen, the first of June, then next, and so yearly, are to choose nine Lightermen, who with the Watermen shall be Assistants of the said Company, for preserving good Government amongst them, who on the first Day of July yearly, shall present to the Court of Aldermen, five Watermen, and two Lightermen to be Auditors of the said Company, for auditing the Accompts of the Rulers, &c. And Persons elected Rulers, Assistants, or Auditors, refusing, and not well-exercising their Places, shall forfeit 5 l.

THE said Rulers, Auditors, and Assistants may make Rules with Penalties, for the good Government of their Society, which, first approved by the Court of Aldermen, and after, by the Lord Chief Justice of either Bench, shall be binding.

THAT the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of LONDON, and the Justices of Peace, in the Shires next adjoining to the Thames, between Gravesend and Windsor, in their several Jurisdictions, upon Complaint of the Overseers and Rulers, shall hear and determine Offences, contrary to this Act, and levy the Penalties by Distress.

THAT Persons owning, or working any Lighter or Flat Boat, for unlading Goods and Merchandizes from Ships, &c. and registering themselves and Servants in the said Company's Books, by the 29th of September 1700, were thereby declared Lightermen, and none but such register'd Persons (besides free Watermen, then after to be register'd as Lightermen, and such as had served their Time to Lightermen) shall keep or work any Lighters under Penalty of 5 l. per Week.

THAT none (except Trinity-men) shall row or ply on the said River, &c. in Boats, &c. for carrying Passengers for Profit, but such as have served their Time, or are Servants or Apprentices to Watermen, and all the Penalties of this Act shall be paid to the said Rulers and Overseers, for the Use of the Poor and Decayed of the said Society.

THAT the Owners, &c. of any Keys, betwixt Hermitage-Bridge and London-Bridge, may use their own Lighters, as heretofore, imploying therein qualified Watermen, or Lightermen; and Woodmongers may keep, and work Lighters by themselves, and Servants for carrying their own Goods only.

THAT Persons keeping Lay-stalls, may carry the Soil as heretofore, and Gardeners may bring to the Markets of LONDON, &c. their Fruit, Herbs, Roots, &c. and carry Soil in their Boats, by their own Servants, as heretofore.

AND that Offences against this Act shall be prosecuted within 30 Days, and that Persons prosecuted for any thing done in Pursuance thereof, may plead the General Issue, or vouch this Act in Justification, and if a Verdict pass for the Defendant, &c. he shall have double Costs. And that Offenders punished by this Act, shall not incur the Penalty of any other for the same Offence.

THAT after the first Day of June then next, the said Rulers and Overseers, Auditors, and Assistants, on their Court-Days, might appoint Forty Watermen, to ply on every Lord's-Day, between Vauxhall and Limehouse, for carrying Passengers cross the River at a Penny each, which Watermen shall account next Day for the Money to the Rulers, &c. who are to pay them for their Labour, and apply the Overplus to the poor decayed Watermen and Lightermen of the Company, and their Widows.

AND the Waterman neglecting every Monday to pay the whole, so earned and received, shall forfeit 40 s.

BUT this Act is not to impeach the Right of Charles, late Duke of Richmond and Lenox, Lord of the Manor of Gravesend, his Heirs, Executors, &c. for holding there the Court of the Water-course, for the better Government of Barges, Boats, &c. ferrying from Gravesend to LONDON, or of the Persons owning or working of the same, nor prejudice any Liberties, &c. of the Mayor, Jurats, &c. of Gravesend and Milton in Kent, touching the Passage, or Ferry, thence to LONDON, or the Government thereof.

NOR to hinder the Watermen of St. Margaret's, Westminster, from plying cross the Thames from Westminster-Bridge to Stand-Gate, and from the Horse-ferry to Lambeth-Bridge, on the Lord's Day by Turns, as of late the Monies earned thereby, being applied to the poor decayed Watermen, and their Widows of the said Parish of St. Margaret's. And any two Justices of the Peace may call the Watermen so Working to Account, and cause the Monies by them earned to be applied as aforesaid, which Watermen of St. Margaret's, shall choose two Stewards and a Clerk, on the 23d of April yearly, and shall at a Meeting of their Society, appoint the Watermen, so to work in their Turns on the Lord's Day.

An ABSTRACT of the ACT for making more effectual, several Acts passed, relating to Watermen, Wherry-men, and Lightermen, rowing upon the River Thames, and for the better ordering and governing such Watermen, Wherry-men, and Lightermen.

Anno secundo Georgij Regis.

“ ENACTED, That after the 24th of “ June 1729, No Person, who, now,
“ or hereafter, shall work any Wherry-“ Boat, Tilt-Boat, Barge, or other Vessel, for “ carrying Passengers, or Goods for Hire, on the “ River Thames, between Gravesend and Wind-
“ for, shall take an Apprentice or Servant, unless “ he shall be an Housekeeper, or have some “ known Habitation, where he may receive such “ Apprentice, and shall register with the Clerk “ of the Company where he shall reside, or where-
“ to he shall afterward remove, on Pain of 10l.
“ on Conviction before the Lord Mayor, or one,
“ or more Justices for the Place, where the Of“ fender shall be found, by the Oath of two, or “ more Witnesses, to be levied by Distress, or “ for want of Distress, to be committed to the “ next Publick Work-House, without Bail, for “ not exceeding one Month, nor less than four“ teen Days, and the Clerk of the Company,

“ on Application made to him, is to register the “ Habitation, and every Removal of such Water“ man, &c. in a Book of the Company with“ out Fee, on Pain of 10l. and if any such “ Waterman, &c. shall not register his Place of “ Abode, the Apprentice shall, on Application “ made to the Rulers and Overseers, at their “ publick Courts, be turned over to any other “ Master.

“ AFTER June 24, 1729, No Apprentice
“ shall take upon him the sole Care and Manage“ ment of any Boat, within the said Limits, till “ 16 Years of Age, if a Waterman's Son, and “ 17, if a Landsman's, and unless he hath “ worked with some able Waterman, for two “ Years at least, on Pain of 10s. on the Master.

“ WHERE sufficient Distress cannot be found
“ to pay and satisfy the Penalties, to be inflicted “ by any Rules, Orders, or Constitutions, made “ by the Rulers of the Company, approved by “ the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of LON-“ DON, and confirmed by the Chief Justice of “ the King's-Bench, Oath being made of want
“ of Distress before the Lord Mayor, or Justice
“ of the Peace where the Offender shall be found,
“ they are to commit him to the House of Cor“ rection, without Bail, for any Time not ex“ ceeding one Month, nor less than Fourteen “ Days, such Offender being convicted on this “ Act, or 11 or 12 Will. III.

“ If any Person, not having served seven Years
“ to a Waterman, &c. (except Trinity-men,
“ Fishermen, Ballast-men, and Persons employed
“ in Western Barges, Mill-boats, Chalk Hoys, “ Faggot or Wood Lighters, Dung Boats, and “ Gardeners Boats, as is allowed by the said “ Act, or Act 11 and 12 Will. III.) shall row “ any Boat, or other Craft on the said River, for “ Hire or Gain, he shall for every Offence forfeit “ 10l. to be levied as aforesaid.

“ The Number of Assistants of the said Com“ pany, at their future Elections, shall be reduced
“ to Thirty, but to be elected as heretofore.

“ THIS Act shall not prejudice any Right “ belonging to the Lord of the Manor of Grave-
“ send, for holding a Court, called Curia Cursus “ Aquæ, or, The Court of the Water-Course, for “ the better Management of Barges, Boats, and “ Vessels, using the Ferry, or Passage, from “ Gravesend to LONDON, or to the Barges, “ Tilt-Boats, or other Vessel, plying at the “ Bridge of Gravesend, or the Persons working “ them.

“ NOR to prejudice, or impeach any Grants
“ or Usages held by the Mayor, Jurats, and ca“ pital Inhabitants of the Villages, and Parishes “ of Gravesend and Milton, in Com. Kent, rela“ ting to the Passage and Ferry on the Thames,
“ from the said Villages and Parishes to LON-“ DON.

“ The Lessees, Owners, and Occupiers of “ any Keys betwixt the Hermitage-Bridge and “ London Bridge, may use their Lighters, or “ large Crafts, as hath been heretofore accus“ tomed, for carrying Goods and Merchandizes
“ to and from their Keys, and Wharfs, and Ships “ loading or unloading, and may employ any “ Waterman, or Lighterman, duly qualified,
“ as is in the said Act 11 and 12 Will. III. directed.

“ All the Penalties and Forfeitures incurred
“ by this Act, may be sued for by the Rulers
“ and Overseers of the Company, or any two of “ them, in such Manner as is provided by the “ Act of 11 and 12 Will. III. and when recovered “ shall be paid to the Rulers and Overseers, and “ be distributed for the Use of the Poor, as they “ shall think fit, and all Prosecutions shall be “ commenced

" commenced within a Month after the Offence committed.

" All Constables and Headboroughs shall be aiding and assisting in the due Execution of this Act, and if any Suit shall be commenced against any Person for any Matter done in pursuance of this Act, or any former Act, relating to the Water Service on the River, or the regulating and governing the Company, the Action shall be brought within 30 Days after the Fact committed, and such Person may plead the General Issue, and give this, or any the former Acts in Evidence, and on a Verdict, &c. he shall recover treble Costs.

" This Act shall be deemed a Publick Act, and be judicially taken Notice of as such, without specially pleading the same.

An ORDER, made by the Court of Rulers, Auditors, and Assistants, of the Company of Watermen and Lightermen of the River of Thames.

An Order to prevent ill Language to be used by the Watermen, Lightermen, &c. on the River.

" WHEREAS several Watermen, Lightermen, and the Apprentices of such, whilst they are rowing, or working, upon the River Thames, and at their several respective Places of Resort, or Plying Places, between Gravesend and Windsor, do often use such immodest, obscene, and lewd Expressions, towards Passengers, and to each other, as are offensive to all sober Persons, and tend extremely to the corrupting and Debauchery of Youth. For Prevention therefore, of such ill Practices for the Future, it is hereby declared, and ordained, by the Court aforesaid, That if any Waterman, or Lighterman, after the 16th Day of October, 1701, shall upon the said River, or at any Place of their Resort, as aforesaid, be guilty of using any such lewd Expressions, and be thereof duly convicted, by one or more Witnesses, or Witnesses, or by the Confession of the Offender before the Rulers of this Company, he shall forfeit and pay for every such Offence, the Sum of 2s. 6d. And if any Waterman, or Lighterman's Apprentice shall herein offend, the Master or Mistress of every such Offender, (the Offender being duly convicted as aforesaid) shall forfeit and pay the like Sum of 2s. 6d. and in case of Refusal, the Offender shall suffer Correction, as the Rulers of this Company, shall in their Discretion think fit and necessary. Which said Forfeitures (when paid) shall be apply'd to the Use of the poor, aged, decayed, and maimed Members of this Company, their Widows and Children. Dated at the Hall of the said Company, this 8th Day of October, 1701.

E. KNIGHT, Clerk.

HAVING now done with the Laws and Orders made for the Preservation of this River, and the well governing those who are employed upon it. We come next to a Description of the Pleasant Towns and Buildings, which are seated on the Banks of it, and whatever else is worthy Notice, on either Side, in Kent, Essex, Middlesex, and Surrey: Beginning, as the Lord Mayor's Jurisdiction does, at Gravesend in Kent, and Tilbury-Fort in Essex.

Gravesend.

I. Gravesend, in Kent, being the common landing Place for Strangers and Sea Men, in their Passage to LONDON, and the ready Road for France, is well inhabited, and much resorted to, having a great Number of Inns, Taverns, and other Houses of Entertainment: Its Markets are on Wednesdays and Saturdays, which are well furnished with Provisions. It is a Mayor Town, and about 20 Miles from LONDON; the greatest Part of it was consumed by Fire in the Year 1727; but was soon rebuilt.

At this Place a Centinel is constantly set to watch all Ships that pass, which are obliged to be cleared here, altho' already cleared in the Port of LONDON; upon seeing any Ship come down the River, he fires a Gun that she may come to, if she refuses on the first Firing, it is repeated twice more, and if she goes on, he gives a Signal to Tilbury-Fort, which fires a Cannon upon her: Every Ship that does not call, incurs a Penalty.

II. THE Block-Houses, called Tilbury-Fort, are, one near Gravesend, in Kent, and the other opposite to it, near a small Town, called Tilbury, in Essex, which is famous for Queen Elizabeth's going thither to review her Forces, after the Defeat of the Spanish Armado, on St. James's Day, in the Year 1588. These Forts are well stored with Ammunition and Guns, continually mounted and loaded, so that no Ship or Vessel can come in, or go out, of the River, without their Permission. That on the Essex Side is the largest, and most open, to command Vessels; and here is always kept a Garrison of Soldiers for its Security, with a good Tract of Ground walled in.

Tilbury Fort.

III. Greenhith, on the Kentish Side, is chiefly noted for its Chalk-Pits; many Hoys and small Vessels being employed to carry to LONDON, and other Places, the Chalk of which Lime, so useful in Building, is made.

Greenhith.

IV. Graves, is an indifferent Market-Town, but of some Account for Calves and Poultry. A little more Westward is a Place called Stone-nefs, which is at the Entrance into that Part of the River called Long-Reach.

Graves.

Stone-nefs.

Long-Reach.

V. Dartford-Creek, so called from the Town of Dartford, not far from it. This is a handsome, well inhabited Town, being the high Road from LONDON to Rochester, Maidstone, Canterbury, and Dover. By the Help of this Creek, which falleth into the Thames, Corn, and other Commodities are easily transported from thence to LONDON, which makes its Market, which is on Saturdays, very much resorted to.

Dartford-Creek.

VI. About a Mile West of Dartford Creek, is Crayfordnefs.

Crayfordnefs.

VII. Erith is the next Town, which is of no great Account: Over-against it, on the Essex Side, is a Place called Cold-Harbour.

Erith.

Cold-Harbour.

VIII. Raynham Creek is on the Essex Side; as is also Dagenham Creek, where not long since, was a great Breach, which overflowed several hundred Acres of Land, and was for a long Time endeavour'd to be stoppt in vain, the Works, when they had gone a little Way towards it, being frequently blown up by the Tides; till at length it was undertaken and well performed by Capt. Perry. About a Mile and an half more West, is the Halfway-Tree, on the Essex Side, and opposite to it, in Kent, the Halfway-House, so called being seated in the Mid-way between LONDON and Gravesend.

Raynham Creek.

Dagenham Creek and Breach.

Halfway Tree; Halfway House.

IX. Barking-Creek is next, and two Miles farther, on the same Side is a House, standing by itself, called the Devil's House.

Barking-Creek.

Devil's House.

X. Woolwich is the next Town on the Kentish Side, it lies low, and is not reckoned very healthy; but, on Account of the Dock, and Royal Navy, is well inhabited, especially by those, who have their Dependence thereon. In this Dock our best Ships of War have been built.

Woolwich.

XI. Over-against Woolwich, on the Essex Side, is Ham-Creek.

Ham-Creek.

ABOUT two Miles more Westward, the River Lee, or Ley, which parts the Counties of Essex and

and Middlesex, falls into the Thames. This pleasant and useful River, which is the largest in the County of Hertford, flows along from Hertford and Ware, and so by the Counties of Essex and Middlesex; washing Low-Layton, on the East, a Village which takes its Name from it, and then by Temple-Mill, Old Ford, and Stratford, Le Bow to the Thames.

AN Act of Parliament was made in the Year 1571, the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, for a Cut to be made in this River to bring it to LONDON; but it was not made navigable till the Year 1580, by cleansing and repairing it as far as Ware, by Order from the Queen, and the Lords of her Council. Thomas Fanshawe Esq; who possessed the Manor of Ware-Park, was a great Instrument in bringing this to bear, for the more convenient Conveyance of his Goods, &c. to and from LONDON, as well as for the Good of the Publick.

THE Maltsters and Farmers, in the Parish of Enfield and the Parts thereabouts were very much displeas'd at this; because the Carriage of Malt and other Grain by Water to LONDON made them cheaper than could be afforded by those who brought them by Land Carriage, and was therefore a Diminution of their Profits. Whereupon the Country People made Cuts in the River to let out the Water, that it might not have Depth enough to bear Barges, hoping thereby to prevent their Passage by that River. A Lock at Waltham was attempted to be burnt, of which Complaint being made to the Lord Burghley, he sent his Letters, on the 1st of September 1581, to Sir Henry Cock, Knight, Mr. Fanshawe, and Mr. Bash, Gentlemen in those Parts, to enquire into these Disorders committed in the River Lee; and afterwards a Commission of Sewers was issued out to several Gentlemen to examine into these Abuses: And it was found, as appears by a Certificate sent to the Lord Treasurer, and the Lord Hunsdon, that a Bank or Place in Enfield-Marsh, call'd the Pipler was twice broken up with Spades and Shovels to let the Water run out of the high Stream in the Night Time. This River Bank was again cut to let out the Water, at another Place in Enfield, called Lotherssey Gate. Another Bank or Jutte, newly made at Susternford, for narrowing the Water, for the better Passage of Boats, was cut up in the Night Time. The Lady Wroth's Old Lock, the Bank there, being firm Ground, was cut up; and being stopt divers Times, was broken up again in the Night, commonly by the Men of Enfield. Waltham Lock was attempted to be set on fire with Brimstone, Rosin, and Straw in the Night. A New Bank or Jutte made at Odeysbelp, at Halifield-Marsh in Cheshunt, was also cut or broken in the Night.

OTHER Obstructions have at several Times been attempted to be made in this River; but as the City are by that, chiefly supplied with Bread-Corn and Malt, the Magistrates of LONDON have taken especial Care to preserve the Passage of it free.

THE next Place to be noted on the Thames is the Isle of Dogs; a low Marshy Ground, so called, as it is reported, from a Waterman's murdering a Man in this Place who had a Dog with him, which would not leave his Master till constrained by Hunger to swim over to Greenwich, and doing this frequently, it was observ'd by the Watermen plying there, who following the Dog, by that Means, discover'd the Body of the murder'd Man. Soon after the Dog swimming over to Greenwich, snarled at a Waterman, who sat there, and would not be beaten off, which the other Watermen perceiving, and knowing of the Murder, they apprehended this strange Waterman, who confess'd the Fact, and was condemned and executed for it.

XII. OVER-AGAINST the Isle of Dogs, is Greenwich, a pleasant Town, well inhabited, and once graced with a stately Palace, whose Foundation was laid by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester; out of the Ruins of which, King Charles the Second began a fine Building of Free Stone, but for some Reasons discontinued it, and King William the Third, founded an Hospital there, for the Encouragement of Seamen, by making Provision for them when by Age, Wounds, or other Accidents, they are disabled from farther Service at Sea, and not in a Condition to maintain themselves. As also for the Widows or Children of such disabled Seamen and others, that happen to be slain or drowned in the King's Service.

Greenwich.

Greenwich Hospital.

IN Order to which, his Majesty granted a Parcel of Ground in this Place, containing near nine Acres, with the Royal Palace erected thereon by King Charles the Second, which alone cost that King 36,000 l. and tho' King William was then engag'd in an expensive War with France, yet his Majesty was pleas'd to grant 2000 l. a Year, payable out of the Exchequer towards the re-edifying, perfecting and endowing this Hospital, relying for the rest upon the voluntary Assistance and Contribution of his well-dispos'd Subjects. For the receiving of which, as well as for the constituting and establishing the Foundation of this Hospital, and the Framing of Rules and Statutes for the Government thereof, his Majesty did also appoint Commissioners. This Commission was renewed and enlarg'd by Queen Anne.

JOINING to this Palace, is a small, but pleasant Park, which was designed by M. Le Notre, the famous Frenchman, who plann'd likewise St. James's Park. Upon a Hill, about half a Mile from the House, is the Royal Observatory, from whence there is a most delightful Prospect; it is inhabited by the Astronomical Professor Dr. Edmund Halley.

The Park.

XIII. The next Town is Deptford, the upper and lower Parts taken together make it very large: The Upper is the best inhabited on Account of his Majesty's Dock and Store-houses, for Building and Equipping Ships for the Royal Navy; there is likewise another Yard for Building Merchant Ships. This Town parts the Counties of Kent and Surrey.

Deptford.

XIV. The next Place we come to is Blackwall, on the Middlesex Side; where there is a very spacious Dock and Yard, for Building and Rigging Ships, belonging to Sir Henry Johnson.

Blackwall.

XV. Limehouse is a populous Place on the same Side, where is built a very large new Church, being one of the Fifty, to be erected by Act of Parliament, made in the Reign of Queen Anne.

Limehouse.

XVI. ON the other Side, in Surrey, is Rotherhith, a populous Place, also chiefly inhabited by such, whose Dependence is on the Sea.

Rotherhith.

NEAR this Place is Cuckold's-Point, where there is always a large Pair of Horns fixed to a Pole, the Reason of which, neither Mr. Stow, nor any one else, has accounted for.

Vauxhall.

HAVING passed through the Bridge, by LONDON, Westminster, Southwark, and Lambeth Palace, which will be more particularly described, we come next to Vaux-Hall, a Place noted for its Gardens, a great Resort for young People of Pleasure in the Summer Season, and made very famous lately, by a new Kind of Entertainment introduced there, after the Italian Manner, called a Ridotto al' Fresco, which is a Midnight Masquerade in the open Air.

The Neat-Houses.

XVII. THE next Place is called the Neat-Houses, chiefly inhabited by Gardeners, who supply a great Part of the Town with Kitchen Garden Stuff.

Chelsea.

XVIII. The next is Chelsea College, a Royal Hospital, for the Entertainment of disabled, or superannuated Officers and Soldiers, which was founded by King Charles II. carry'd on by his Brother, King James II. and perfected by King William III. More of this will be said in the Chapter of Colleges and Hospitals. Joining to it, is a House belonging to the Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, first Lord of the Treasury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer.

THE Town of Chelsea is not large, but has several well built Houses in it, and Seats of Noblemen; as the Palace of the Bishop of Winchester; a House belonging to the Duke of Beaufort, and another to the Duke of Ancafter.

Battersea.

XIX. Battersea, almost over-against Chelsea, is a pretty good Town; where are likewise many Gardeners, who serve LONDON and Westminster with Garden-Stuff. The principal House in this Town, is the Seat of the Right Honourable Walter, Lord Viscount St. John of Battersea.

Putney.

XX. Putney, also seated on the Surrey Side, has several large and good Houses in it.

Fulham.

XXI. Fulham, is on the Middlesex Side; a pretty large Town, with some good Houses in it. Between these two last mentioned Towns, is a Bridge over the Thames, which was begun to be built, and finished in the Year 1729.

The New Bridge.

THE Plan of this Undertaking, after several others had been rejected, was drawn by Mr. Chefelden, a Gentleman, who in his Profession of Chirurgery, has raised his Name to the highest Degree of Reputation, and by the Directions he gave in this strong, useful, and curious Piece of Architecture, has in a great Measure, shewn the Affinity there is amongst the Sciences.

UPON the aforefaid Plan, Mr. Phillips executed the Work, which is, besides the Brick-Work at each End, 789 Feet long; the largest Opening for the Passage of Vessels, is in the Middle, 30 Feet wide; at convenient Distances, are two more, 25 Feet wide; and two more, nearer the Shoars, 20 Feet wide; all the rest are 15 and 10 Feet alternately: Those of 15 are open also for the Passage of Boats; but those of 10 Feet are only for the Water, which has never any Fall, as at London-Bridge.

THE Width of this Bridge, for the Passage of Carriages, is 24 Feet; and opposite to each other, at 10 Feet Distance, are Works, which look like Bastions, well braced to each Row of Piles, and which serve as Buttrices to the Bridge below, and above make Triangular Recesses for the Passengers, as Coaches, Waggon, &c. go by. From this Mechanism it happens, that the Rails need none of those Supports called Spandrels, which are always used in Wooden-Bridges; and all these Advantages arise without increasing the Expence.

ON Putney Side, there is a Terras of 16 Feet, enclosed from the Water by a Wall; and to prevent the Earth from shoving it out, there are Arches turned horizontally; a Contrivance effectual for that End, though never used before, by which Means this Wall, though the Tide rises 12 Feet against it, has never bent or started, and can at any Time be taken down, or repaired, without any Inconvenience, either to the Terras or Passage.

THE Money for bulding this Bridge, was raised by Subscription, and answers so well, that the Subscribers have, at present, Nine per Cent. at least for their Money, which is paid them by a Duty called Pontage, settled by Act of Parliament. Every Coach and six Horses, that go over it, paying 2 s. Every Coach and Four, 1 s. 6 d. Coach and Two 1 s. Every Waggon, having four Horses, 1 s. 6 d. Less than Four, 1 s. Every Horse 2 d. and Foot Passenger 1 d. on Sundays; and an Half-penny on other Days; this Difference is made, that some Satisfaction may be given to the Ferry, which used to be there on Sundays. To burn or pull down this Bridge, is Felony, Stat. 19 Geo. I. Cap. 36.

WE are informed that an accurate Account of the Mechanism of every Part of it, with Cuts, will speedily be published by the ingenious Gentleman who designed the Plan of it; to which we refer our Readers.

IN Parson's-Green, which belongs to Fulham Parson's Green, are several very good Houses, particularly the Earl of Peterborough's, which has very fine Gardens belonging to it. Westward of the Town is likewise the Bishop of LONDON's Palace.

XXII. Barn Elms, and Mortlake, are both Barn-Elms and Mortlake, on the Surrey Side; the last is a long Town, with several good Houses in it, the Seats of Merchants and Gentlemen.

XXIII. AT Chiswick, on the other Side, is Chiswick, the Seat and Gardens of Richard Earl of Burlington; a Nobleman distinguish'd for his fine Taste in the polite Arts.

XXIV. NEXT to this is Brentford, the Old Brentford, and the New; the last is a considerable Market Town, well inhabited, and has several good Inns, and Houses of Entertainment in it. Its Market, which is on Tuesday, is well supplied with Provisions, brought by the Higlars. Not far from this Town, is a fine old House, called Sion-House, Sion-House, formerly belonging to the Earls of Northumberland, but now to his Grace the Duke of Somerset, who married the Heiress of that Family.

XXV. OPPOSITE to Brentford in Surrey, Kew-Green, is Kew-Green, where are several good Houses, especially one belonging to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

XXVI. Isleworth, in Middlesex, is a large Isleworth, Town, with many well built Houses.

XXVII. Richmond is a pretty large Town, Richmond, very agreeable in the Summer Season. His Majesty has a pleasant Seat here, in which he takes great Delight. Here is still to be seen the Royal Palace, wherein King Henry VIII. and Queen Elizabeth ended their Days; but it is now much decayed, and parcelled out in Tenements. From the Hill is a most beautiful Prospect of the Thames, and and neighbouring Towns and Villages. Here is also a noble Park, encompassed with a Wall, at least, six Miles about; which is a Part of her present Majesty Queen Caroline's Dowry. In the Park also, belonging to the Palace, is the so much celebrated Hermitage, which is a Place of Retirement for her Majesty, adorned with the Busts of those four great English Philosophers, Sir Isaac Newton, Dr. Samuel Clark, Mr. John Locke, and Mr. Wollaston.

Ham-House and Walks.

XXVIII. A little higher, on the same Side with Richmond, is Ham-House, and Walks, the Seat of the Earl of Dysert.

XXIX. Twickenham, on the opposite Side, is a handsome Town, inhabited by many Persons of Quality and Fashion. Here are the Seats of the Earls of Bradford and Strafford, of the Countesses of Suffolk, Westmorland and Ferrers; Mr. Secretary Johnstoun, and Mr. Pope, the Poet.

Teddington.

XXX. The next is a small Town, called Teddington, of little Account. Its Name, in some very antient Records is found to be Tyde-ending-Town, the Tide before the Building of London-Bridge, flowing thither, which was the Reason of its being so called.

Kingston.

XXXI. We come next to Kingston, in Surrey, which is joined to Kingstonwick in Middlesex, by a Wooden Bridge, that brings great Advantage to the Town; for the conveying Corn, &c. to its Market, very considerable for Grain, Poultry, and all Sorts of Provisions, and is much resorted unto every Saturday, by Mealmen and Higlars. The Town is large, and well inhabited. It is an antient Corporation, governed by Bailiffs, &c. and enjoyeth large Immunities, being the usual Place, where one of the Assizes for the County is held, and where the Justices keep one of their Quarter Sessions. This Town is of Note, for being the Place, where, upon a Stage in the open Market-place, was set the Chair, in which Athelstan, Ethelred, and Edwin were crowned Kings, and received their Imperial Sceptres; and from thence it is said this Town took its Name of Kingston, being before called Moreford.

Thames-Ditton.

XXXII. The next Place is Thames Ditton, of little Account.

Hampton-Court.

XXXIII. The next, Hampton-Court, which Palace was first built by Cardinal Woolsey, in the Reign of Henry VIII. and was enlarged by the said King, and new beautified by King Will. III. who took so much delight in it, that he bestow'd great Cost on it, to bring it to a new Form. The new Buildings and Gardens there, are truly magnificent; the Avenues leading to it, very stately; it has the Advantage of two Parks; and among the Furniture within, are some of the finest Pictures in Europe, particularly the Cartoons of Raphael Urbin.

Hampton-Town.

Not far from the Court is Hampton-Town, indifferently large with some good Houses in it.

Sunbury.

XXXIV. Sunbury is in the same County, but of no great Account.

Walton upon Thames.

XXXV. Walton upon Thames is a pretty large Town well inhabited.

Shepperton.

XXXVI. Shepperton is the next, but a Place of little Account.

Weybridge.

XXXVII. Weybridge is a Town well inhabited, where was once a Royal Palace, called Oat- lands, and where are now two Noblemens Seats, one of the Earl of Lincoln, and the other of the Earl of Portmore.

XXXVIII. Chertsey in Surrey, is at some Distance from the Thames, where is a Bridge of Wood. This Place is famous for the Retirement and Death of Mr. Abraham Cowley, the Poet.

XXXIX. Lalam is a Place of small Account.

XL. Stanes, is a small Market-Town, in the County of Middlesex, seated on the High Road from LONDON to the Western Parts of England. At this Place is a Bridge over the River Thames, which leads to Egham in Surrey; and a little above this endeth the Lord Mayor's Jurisdiction.

To go farther up this River, we shall mention something of the Locks and Wears not spoken of before. In the Year 1579, there were 23 Locks, 16 Mills, 16 Flood-gates, and seven Wears on this River, between Maidenhead and Oxford. One John Bishop complained of this to the Lord Treasurer Burleigh: To whom he shewed how by these Stoppages of the Water, several Persons, to the Number of 15 or 16, had been drowned, and their Goods lost, in four Years, who all belonged to Barges and Vessels that used the River.

NOTWITHSTANDING which Complaint, about the Year 1584, or 1585, there were above 70 Locks and Wears. The before-mentioned John Bishop made Complaint again hereof, to the Lord Treasurer; and in October 1585, petitioned the Queen, in the Names of the Widows and Fatherless Children, whose Husbands and Parents had been lost by these Means, setting forth, the great Mischiefs that was done to her loving Subjects, by the great Number of dangerous Locks Wears, Mills, and Flood-gates, unlawfully erected, and made in, and upon many Places of the River, contrary to the Statutes against the same, necessarily provided. He prayed her Majesty to command, that this Complaint and a Proof thereof, contained in Writing, and thereunto annexed, might be diligently heard, and examined; and such Order taken as the Necessity of the Case required. He spake of ten Kings who made good Laws against these Stoppages of the Water in the Thames, viz. Henry III. Edward III. Richard II. Henry IV. Henry V. Henry VI. Edward IV. Henry VII. Henry VIII. Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth.

THE Persons concerned in these Locks, &c. gave in a Note by way of Petition, to the said Lord Treasurer, the very Day after this Complaint, shewing the Reasons for maintaining them upon the River; with the Causes of the Danger thereof, and some Account of the Persons who were drowned there.

FIRST, That they were of as great Antiquity as the Towns and Villages whereunto they joined, and had as antient Evidence to be shewn for them, as any Man hath for any Land he held within the Realm. That they were of great Necessity for the Passage of Barges, and especially at low Water; for as then, for want of Water, when they lay on the Ground, they had no Help but by shutting the said Locks, to send down Flashes of Water to set them on Float, which might otherwise lie still for a long Time. That within the Banks and Wears belonging to the Mills, infinite Loads of Chalk and other Rubbish were contained, which if they should be loosened, would choak up the Passage of the River. That notwithstanding divers and sundry Laws heretofore made for the Furtherance and Passage of Ships, Barges, and other Vessels; yet were the said Mills, Locks, and Wears within the River of Thames never impeached, as Things repugnant to Law, or offensive to the Commonwealth, until such Time as one Bishop began his outrageous Attempts therein. It was also to be understood, that the Mills, Locks, and Wears within the River, amounting in the whole to the Number of seventy or thereabouts, were for part of the Queen's Inheritance: And for the Residue, the Inheritance of divers others of her Subjects, the Queen having only a Way, or Passage, for her People through the said Locks, and that Marlow Lock, particularly, was well maintained, or better, than ever it was in any Age past. And that it was obtained from the Queen in the Tenth Year of her Reign, and that the same was now as well and carefully used as ever it was; and so fully proved by sundry Depositions, remaining of Record in her Majesty's Court of Star-Chamber; besides sundry other Depositions taken before the Commissioners of Sewers, as also by the several Decrees made in the Queen's said Court of Star-Chamber.

Secondly, As for the Causes why the Passage through these Locks, were become somewhat more perilous than heretofore they were; That the Barges were now of greater Burthen than ever they used to be; that they laded them without any Measure; that they were in time past, wont to unlade Part of their Lading beneath the Lock, when they were to come up, and take it in again above; and namely, when they brought up but seven or eight Loads, whereas now of 20 Loads they commonly would not unlade any thing; that they entertain'd People of no Skill, and such as many of them, used not that Foresight that was proper; that many times they would travel up and down so late and so early, that they could not see what they did; that they commonly spared neither Sabbath Day or others; besides much ill Demeanor too long to be recited; and in fine, that there was more likelihood of Peril in these Days than heretofore, in that the Number of Barges within the Time of Memory, were encreas'd from the Number of ten or twelve, to that of fourscore, or thereabouts.

Lastly, As to the Persons drowned at Marlow-Lock within these eight Years: One was drowned by manifest Negligence, partly by the Barges being over charged with a greater Burthen than should have been: And also, that it wanted Wash-boards on the Sides, as all other Barges commonly had for their Defence; another in Truth was drowned, but not at the Lock; another kill'd by his own Negligence and Folly;

another came up the said Lock in the Winter so late, as he could not discern what he did. That it was no Wonder if they now and then break a Cable, being many Times made of ill Stuff; and their Barges so great, and so unmeasurably laden, that in all Ages past, some now and then, had, by Negligence of Watermen, perished, at the said Lock, which next to the Providence of Almighty God, was by the good Foresight and Provision of the Passengers chiefly to be avoided, and could not otherwise be provided for.

At another Time, when the like Complaint was made against these Mills, Locks, and Wears, these Things were said and proved, for the Maintenance of them. First, That they were erected and made, and so have continued for many hundred Years, without any Challenge, or Interruption. That the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, whereof the last was made in the 12 Edw. IV. that relate to the Reformation of Locks and Wears, extend only to such as then were erected, to the Disturbance of Barges, and other Vessels. Whereas, at that Time, there was no common Passage for Barges, at Marlow, or Bysham, as it was upon strong Presumption thought. That it was further to be most manifestly proved, that within the Memory of such as were then living, there was not above the Number of four Barges that passed so far into the River Thames, as Marlow, or Bysham; and that such as then passed, were not above half the Burthen of such as now commonly pass by the said River; being near about the Number of threescore. That it was most certain and true, that such inconsiderate People, and namely of the said Bargemen, as wished, or desired, the Decay, or pulling down the Locks and Wears, desired therein but their own great Hinderance, or rather undoing; considering, that without them, they could not pass; and that many Times, and especially at low Waters, they were forced to desire the shutting of the said Locks, that Water might be conveyed to remove their Barges, when they were set on Ground. That if the said Wears should be pulled down, there were such Quantities of Chalk, and other Rubbish therein, as that by the loosing thereof such Hills would grow in many Places, as that a small Boat, in divers Places of the Thames, would hardly pass. That in Case the said Passage should be disturbed, it would not only tend to the great Let and Hinderance of the Queen's Provisions, and of her City of LONDON, but also of divers her Subjects and People. That if any Disorder were herein, the same were to be reformed by the ordinary Proceedings of the Queen's Majesty's Laws, and not otherwise.

AND so much for the River Thames.

C H A P. VII.

LONDON-BRIDGE. *The antient and present State thereof :
And of other Bridges in the City.*

THE original Foundation of this Bridge over the Thames, commonly called London-Bridge, by the Report of Bartholomew Linsted, the last Prior of St. Mary-Overy's Church in Southwark, was this : A Ferry being kept in the Place where now the Bridge is built, the Ferryman and his Wife dying, left the Ferry to their only Daughter, a Maid, named Mary ; who, with the Goods left by her Parents, and the Profits of the said Ferry, built a House of Sisters, in the Place where the East Part of St. Mary-Overy's Church, above the Choir, now stands, and where she herself lies buried ; unto which House she gave the Over-sight and Profits of the Ferry : But afterwards, that House of Sisters being converted into a College of Priests, the Priests built the Bridge of Timber, and, from Time to Time, kept the same in good Repair ; till at length, considering the great Charge of Repairing it, there was, by the Assistance of the Citizens of LONDON, and others, a Bridge built with Arches of Stone.

The Antiquity of the Timber Bridge.

THE Antiquity of the Timber Bridge is very uncertain ; but William of Malmsbury writes, which shews it to have been very antient, That, in the Year of our Lord 994, when Sweyn, King of Denmark, besieged the City of LONDON, both by Land and by Water, the Citizens defended themselves, and Etheldred their King, so manfully, that Part of the Enemy were slain in Battle, and Part of them drowned in the River Thames, in their hasty Flight, by not taking Heed of the Bridge.

IN the Year 1016, Canute the Dane, came, with a great Navy, up to LONDON, and caused a Trench to be cast on the South-side of Thames, through which his Ships were towed to the West of the Bridge ; and then with a deep Trench, and strait Siege, he encompassed the City about.

EARL Godwin also, in the Year 1052, with a great Navy, took his Course up the River Thames, and, finding none offer to resist him on the Bridge, failed up by the South-side of the said River.

WILLIAM the Conqueror also, about the Year 1067, in his Charter to the Church of St. Peter's Westminster, confirmed to the Monks serving God there, a Gate in LONDON, called Botolph's-Gate, with a Wharf, which was at the Head of London-Bridge.

IT is likewise related, that in the Year 1114, the 14th of Henry I. the Thames was so dried up, that between the Tower of LONDON and the Bridge, not only Men on Horseback waded over it, but great Numbers of Men, Women, and Children, on Foot.

IN the Year 1122, the 22d of Henry I. Thomas Arden gave to the Monks of Bermondsey, and the Church of St. George in Southwark, five Shillings yearly Rent, out of the Land appertaining to London-Bridge.

THERE is a Charter under Seal, to the Effect following :

" H E N R Y, King of England, to
" Ralph, Bishop of Chichester, and all the " Ministers of Suffex, sendeth Greeting.
" Know ye, &c. That I command, by my Kingly
" Authority, that the Manor called Alceston,
" which my Father gave, with other Lands, to
" the Abbey of Battel, be free and quiet from
N<sup>o</sup>. 4. VOL. I.

" Shires and Hundreds, and all other Customs " of earthly Servitude, as my Father held the " same, most freely and quietly ; and namely,
" from the Work of London-Bridge, and the " Work of the Castle at Pevensey. And this I " command upon my Forfeiture. Witness, William de Soutlearche, at Berry.

IN the Year 1136, the 1st of King Stephen, a Fire began in the House of one Ailewarde, near London-stone, which consumed East to Aldgate, and West to St. Erkenwald's Shrine in St. Paul's Church. The Bridge of Timber over the River Thames was also burnt, &c. but afterwards repaired : For Fitz Stephen says, That in the Reign of King Stephen, and of Henry II. when Pastimes were shewed on the River Thames, Men stood in great Numbers on the Bridge, Wharfs, and Houses, to behold them.

IN the Year 1163, the same Bridge was not only repaired, but new made of Timber, as before, by Peter of Colechurch, Priest and Chaplain.

ABOUT the Year 1176, the Stone Bridge over the River Thames, at LONDON, was began to be founded by the aforesaid Peter of Colechurch, near the Bridge of Timber, but somewhat more towards the West ; for Botolph Wharf was, in the Conqueror's Time, at the Head of London-Bridge. The King assisted this Work ; a Cardinal then being Legate here : And Richard, Archbishop of Canterbury, gave one thousand Marks towards the Foundation. The Course of the River (for the Time) was turned another Way about, by a Trench cast for that Purpose, beginning (as it is supposed) East about Rotherhithe, and ending in the West about Patricksey, now called Battersea. This Work having been thirty three Years in building, was, in the Year 1209, finished by the worthy Merchants of LONDON, Serle Mercer, William Almaine, and Benedict Botewrite, principal Masters of that Work ; for Peter of Colechurch died four Years before it was finished, and was buried, in the Chapel built on the same Bridge, in the Year 1205.

The Stone Bridge began.

KING John, in the 7th Year of his Reign, which was in the Year 1205, granted the Custody of London-Bridge to Fryar West.

THE same King gave certain void Places in LONDON, to build on ; the Profits thereof to remain towards the Charges of Building and Repairing the same Bridge. A Mason being Master Workman of the Bridge, built from the Foundation, the large Chapel on that Bridge, at his own proper Charges ; which Chapel was dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket, and was then endowed for two Priests, four Clerks, &c. besides Chantries, since founded for John Hatfield, and others : So that in the 23d Year of Henry VI. there were four Chaplains in the said Chapel. After the finishing this Chapel, which was the first Building upon those Arches, sundry Houses, at Times, were erected ; and many charitable Men gave Lands, Tenements, or Sums of Money, towards supporting them. All which was noted in a Table remaining in the Chapel, till the same was turned to a Dwelling-house, and then removed to the Bridge House.

By the Account of William Mariner, and Christopher Elliot, Wardens of London-Bridge, from Michaelmas the 22d of Henry VIII. until Michaelmas next ensuing, one whole Year, all the Payments and Allowances came to 815 l. 17 s. 2 d. as by Particulars therein shewn. By which Account may be guessed the great Charges and Discharges of the Bridge at this Day, when Things are increased to so much greater Price. One Part of the Revenues of London-Bridge, is a large Quantity of Ground, very improveable, situated at Eglinggate, in the Parish of St. Olave's Southwark, near the Thames.

THIS Bridge, in less than seventy Years after it was first finished, became ruinous, and for the Reparation of the same, two Ways were made use of, one by collecting Alms from well-disposed People, throughout the Kingdom; and the other by laying certain Customs and Taxes upon Goods and Provisions, that were brought into the City to be sold.

IN the 9th of Edward I. Anno Dom. 1280, London-Bridge being in a ruinous Condition, the King gave Licence, de colligend. piis devotorum Subsidiiis per totum Regnum; i. e. For gathering the godly Aids of devout People throughout the Kingdom; Pro Reparatione ejusd. quod minatur ruinam; i. e. For Repairing London-Bridge, threaten'd with Ruin.

THERE are Letters Patent of the said King Edward I. now extant in the Tower Records, exciting all his People to this Work of Charity, to this Effect:

Rex omnibus Ballivis, & Fidelibus suis ad quos, &c. Salutem. Dolentibus nobis, &c. That is,

The King, to all his Bailiffs, and Liege Subjects, to whom these Presents shall come, greeting.

King Edward I. his Letters Patents, to excite a Contribution to London-Bridge.

“ I T hath been lately notified to us, and “ grieved us, that London-Bridge is in so “ ruinous a Condition; to the Repair of “ which, unless speedy Remedy be put, not “ only the sudden Fall of the Bridge, but also “ the Destruction of innumerable People dwell“ ing on it, may suddenly be feared; and that “ the Work which may now be helped by some “ before it fall, may, for Want of Aid, come to “ the Expence of a Damage not to be repaired.
“ Wherefore We, who are bound to take Care of,
“ and more gently to provide for both the pub“ lick and the private Commodities, and with “ Affection to embrace those, whom We per“ ceive to depend upon such Benefits, and them
“ to defend with Royal Safeguard: We com“ mand and require you, That when the Keep“ ers of the said costly Work of the Bridge afore“ said, or their Messenger, shall happen to come “ to you, (being a Thing We take into our “ Especial Protection and Defence) to collect “ every where, throughout our Realm, Aids to “ the said Work, from pious Devotion, friendly
“ to admit them at the Contemplation of God,
“ and in Regard of Charity, and for Shew of “ Devotion on this Behalf: Not bringing on “ them, or permitting to be brought, Wrongs, “ Molestations, Loss, Hindrance, or Grievance.
“ And if any Damage be done them, ye make “ them Amends without Delay. And when ye “ shall be required by the present Keepers, or “ their Messengers, to keep the Reparation of “ the said Bridge, ye will humbly contribute “ somewhat of your Goods to the said Work, ac“ cording to your Abilities. And let each of you “ endeavour to out-run the other in such great “ Works of Charity; for which ye must needs “ merit from God, and gain Thanks of Us. In “ Witness whereof, &c. Witness the King at

AND there were other Letters Patents to Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Priors, Rectors, and all other Ministers of the Church, commanding

them, “ That when the Keepers of that costly “ Work of the Bridge aforesaid, or their Messen“ gers (whom the King took into his special Pro“ tection) should come to gather, every where “ through their Dioceses, Rectories, &c. or to “ any of their Jurisdictions, for the said Work,
“ the pious Aids of the Devout, to admit them “ in the Contemplation of God, &c. And to “ permit them to excite the People there with “ pious Persuasions, and charitably to call for “ the Helps of their Alms to repair the aforesaid “ Bridge.

AND because these voluntary Alms and charitable Benevolences, were not like to bring in the whole Charge of the Business; therefore, the next Year, viz. 10 Edward I. Anno 1281, the same King issued out other Letters Patents, for taking Customs of all Commodities for the same in LONDON, and that for a certain Term of Years, which ran thus:

Rex Majori suo LONDON. Cum nuper, propter subitam, &c.

“ W HEN lately, by reason of the sudden “ Ruin of London-Bridge, We com“ manded, That associating to you
“ Two or Three of the discreeter and more “ loyal Men of the foresaid City, ye should take, “ until our Parliament after Easter next past,
“ for the Supply of the Reparation of the fore-“ said Bridge, a certain Custom, as in these Let“ ters Patents, which We have caused to “ be made from that Time to you, more fully is “ contained: We, willing that the taking “ of such Custom be continued longer, command
“ you, That from the Feast of St. Margaret
“ the Virgin next coming, unto the End of three “ Years next following compleated, ye take the “ under-written Custom of the foresaid Bridge:
“ To wit, of every Man on Foot, bringing Mer“ chandize, or other Things saleable, and passing “ over the said Bridge, and betaking himself to “ other Parts, one Farthing; of every Horseman “ passing that Bridge, and betaking himself to “ other Parts, as aforesaid, with Merchandize,
“ or other saleable Things, one Penny; of e“ very saleable Pack, carried and passing over “ the Bridge, one Half-penny. Nor will We in “ the mean Time, that any thing be taken there “ on this Occasion, but in the Subsidy of the “ Reparation of the Bridge: But the Term of “ three Years being compleated, let the foresaid “ Custom cease, and be void, &c. Witness, the
“ the King at Chester, the 6th Day of July.

KING Edward I. in the same Year, sent to the Mayor, with two or three of the discreeter, and more loyal Citizens, joined with him, to lay a Custom during the same Term, for the Reparation of the Bridge, upon every Man that passed the Thames, on either Side of the Bridge, from LONDON to Southwark, and from Southwark to LONDON, one Farthing; and of every Horse so passing, a Penny; and of every Pack so passing thereon, one Half-penny.

THE like Imposition and Custom were continued, for the Repairing this Bridge, in 27 and 30 of this King Edward I.

IN the 14th of Edward II. Anno 1323, there was likewise Need again of Letters Patents, for gathering Alms and Aids, as before, for the Reparation of the Bridge; and Messengers were sent into all Parts of England, for that Purpose. And the King also sent his Letters to the Archbishops and Bishops, and other Ministers of the Church, as before.

KING Henry III. in the 54th Year of his Reign, Anno 1269, granted the Custody of the Bridge

Bridge to the Queen his Confort, with the Liberties, and all other Things belonging thereunto, for the Term of six Years.

SOME Pieces of Ground near Wolcherch, were granted by Edward I. for the aforesaid Bridge; and in the same King's Reign, Roger Essex bequeathed a Tenement in the Parish of Albhallows in Honey-Lane, for the Use of the Bridge. Edward III. also granted the Mayor and City, a Place, or Piece of Ground, near the House of Fryars Minors, or Grey Fryars, for the Reparation of the Bridge.

THE Jurats of one of the Wards of LONDON, in an Inquisition taken by the Judges Itinerants at the Tower, in the Reign of King Edward I. presented, That the Custody of the Bridge, and the Soke thereof, was in the Queen's Hands, they knew not by what Warrant; the Soke thereof had been before in the Hands of the Mayor and Commonalty of the City; but had now remained in the Hands of the King's Mother, ever since the Battle of Evesham.

London-Bridge wrested from the City.

THIS was the fortunate Battle, fought by King Henry III. in which he beat Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, and the Barons. The Citizens of LONDON, who held with them, soon felt the King's Wrath, by having this Bridge, and the Liberty of it, wrested from them; as they had some Time before, when he established a new Fair in Westminster, which lasted for fifteen Days, during all which Time, he obliged them to shut up their Shops; and afterwards, to give them fresh Marks of his Displeasure, kept his Christmas in the City, and compell'd the Citizens to present him with large New-Year's-Gifts. Shortly after, he demanded another Supply of Money, and in spite of their Endeavours to the contrary, constrained them to give him two thousand Pounds Sterling.

THE Jurats above-mentioned, presented the Bridge also, on Account of its not being well kept.

IN the Reign of the same King Edward I. there was another Presentment; wherein it was said, That London-Bridge was always wont to be in the Hands of the Citizens, but was not so at that Time: Et nesciunt quo Warranto. And tho' the King had seized the Liberties of the City into his Hands, yet the Citizens, by these Words, seemed to stand upon their Rights and Privileges.

THE Jurats of another Ward in LONDON, made the same Presentment to the Judges Itinerants, then sitting at the Tower, in these Words, Dicunt, quod Custodia Pontis, &c. They say, that the Custody of the Bridge of LONDON, which is wont to belong to the City, is alienated by the Lady Queen Mother of Edward our King; and the Keepers of the said Bridge, appointed by the said Lady Queen, parum apponunt in Emendatione & Sustentatione, &c. lay out but little in the amending and sustaining of the said Bridge: Whence Danger, which God forbid, may lightly arise, very much to the Damage of the King and the City.

THE Rents and Revenues of the Bridge, and the Duties and Customs belonging to it, were, without doubt, very considerable; but all now came to the Queen, and she substituted under her, other Keepers, which the City used to do; and these Men made the best of their Time, by making what Gains they could, and neglected the necessary Repairs of the Bridge, which the City complained of, and presented.

Legacies for the Repair of the Bridge.

John Feckenham, Citizen, by his Will, dated the 11th of May 1436, bequeathed to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of LONDON, a Tenement, with a Shop and Garden, in the Parish of St. Augustin Pappey, between the Tenement and Lands of the Bridge of the City of LONDON, on the East, &c. to have to the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, ad usum & sustentationem operis Pontis predicti in perpetuum. On Condition, that the Chaplains of the Chapel of St. Thomas the Martyr, on the Bridge, do perpetually recommend his Soul in their Prayers, and also the Souls of the late Lord Richard II. King of England, Edward Boteler, Knight, and the Lady Anne his Wife, Richard Storme, and Alice his Wife, and the Soul of Joan, the said Feckenham's Wife.

ALSO John Edwards, by his Will, dated the 8th of November 1442, gave to John Hatherle, Mayor of the City of LONDON, and to John Herst, and Thomas Cook, Masters of the Work of the Bridge of LONDON, for ever, his Tenement, with a Garden, in the Parish of St. Botolph Aldgate, towards maintaining and repairing the said Bridge.

ABOUT four Years after the first Building this Stone Bridge, a terrible Accident happened thereon, viz. on the 10th of July 1212, several Houses in the Borough of Southwark, and the Church of our Lady of the Canons there, being on Fire, and an exceeding great Multitude of People passing over the Bridge, to assist in extinguishing, or else to gaze at the same, all on a sudden, several Houses at the North End were likewise set on Fire, by the vehement blowing of the South Wind from those that were burning on that Side. The People who were passing over the Bridge, would have returned, but were pent up between the two Fires, and expected nothing but present Death, which indeed followed; for several Ships and Vessels coming to aid them, the unadvised Multitude rushed so hastily therein, that they were immediately sunk, and almost all drowned. It was said that, thro' the Fire and the Wreck, above three thousand Persons were destroyed, whose Bodies were found, many of them half burnt, besides those that were wholly burnt, and never discovered.

A terrible Accident on London-Bridge.

ABOUT the Year 1282, through a great Frost and deep Snow, five Arches of London-Bridge were broke down and carried away.

Five Arches broke down.

IN the Year 1289, the Bridge was so much decayed, that Passengers were afraid to pass over it, and therefore a great Collection was made by all Archbishops, Bishops, and other Ecclesiastical Persons for the Repair of it; as also in the Year 1381, Sir John Britain being Custos of LONDON.

IN the Year 1395, on St. George's Day, there was a great Justing on London-Bridge, between David Earl of Craford of Scotland, and the Lord Wells of England; in which the Lord Wells was, at the third Course, born out of his Saddle. The Bridge, at that Time, was only coped on each Side, and not replenished with Houses, as at present.

A Justing on London-Bridge.

ON the 13th of November, the Year following, the young Queen Isabel, commonly called the Little, for she was but eight Years old, was carried from Kennington, through Southwark, to the Tower of LONDON, and such Multitudes of People went to see her, that on London-Bridge, nine Persons were crowded to Death, of whom the Prior of Tiptre in Essex was one.

Nine Persons crowded to Death on London-Bridge.

IN the Year 1426, John Reinwell being Mayor, was began to be built the Tower on London-Bridge, at the North End of the Draw-Bridge, which was then easily and readily to be drawn up, as well for the Passage of Ships to Queen-bith, as for the Resistance of any foreign Force.

THE other Tower, that was over the Gate at the South End, will be spoken of in another Place.

Jack Cade put to Flight on London-
Bridge.

An Account of Jack Cade's Rebellion.

Rapin, Page
575.

IN the Year 1450, Jack Cade, and other Rebels of Kent, were overcome by the Citizens of LONDON, on this Bridge, and put to Flight.

THIS Jack Cade was an Irishman, who, at the Intigation of the Duke of York, assumed the Name of John Mortimer, of the House of March, and raised a great Insurrection in Kent, upon Pretence of reforming the Government. Whereupon, the King, [Henry VI.] assembling a Body of fifteen thousand Men, headed them himself, and marched against the Rebels. Upon his Approach, Cade, as if he had been afraid, retired, and lay in Ambush in a Wood near Sevenoak, not questioning but the King would follow him: But Henry, imagining the Rebels were dispersed, returned to LONDON, being contented with sending after them a Detachment of his Army, commanded by Sir Humphrey Stafford. This Detachment falling into the Ambush, were cut in Pieces.

At the same Time Cade began his March towards LONDON, whilst the King, and the whole Court, retired hastily to Kenelworth Castle, leaving a Garrison in the Tower. Cade's Success against Stafford increased his Army with Multitudes, who flocked from all Parts to join him. The City of LONDON, either through Fear, or some other Motive, opened her Gates to the Rebels, and Cade entered, as it were, in Triumph, at the Head of his Troops: But he prohibited, under severe Penalties, the offering any Injury to the Inhabitants. Next Day, being informed, that the Lord Say, High Treasurer, was in the City, he ordered him to be apprehended and beheaded. Towards the Evening, he retired to Southwark, on the other Side of the Thames, and continued thus, for some Days, to enter the City in the Morning, and to go out again at Night, on Purpose to take from the Citizens all Occasion of Fear.

Cade's Soldiers and the Londoners, lived, at first, very friendly together; but, at last, the Soldiers committing some Riot in the City, when they would have entered, according to Custom, in the Morning, they found the Bridge-Gate shut against them. Whereupon a Battle ensued between them and the Citizens, which lasted all Day, and ended at the Approach of Night, by a Cessation of Arms till the Morrow. Mean while, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Chancellor, who had taken Refuge in the Tower, observing by their Spies, and the Proceedings of the Rebels, that their Hearts began to fail them, instantly drew up a general Pardon, put the Great Seal to it, and caused it to be proclaimed in the Night in Southwark. The Pardon produced so sudden and surprising Effect, that before it was Day, Cade found himself deserted by his Followers, and forced to fly all alone, and conceal himself in Suffex. But the King promising by Proclamation, a thousand Marks to any Person that should bring him dead or alive, he was slain in his Retreat by Alexander Iden, a Gentleman of Kent, who brought his Body to LONDON. The Pardon under the Great Seal did not prevent the Execution of many of his Accomplices. Thus ended this dangerous Rebellion, which might have been attended with worse Consequences, had it been conducted by a more experienced Leader.

Bastard of Fawconbridge burnt all the Houses on the Bridge.

An House on London-
Bridge fell down.

To return to the Bridge. In the Year 1471, Thomas, the Bastard of Fawconbridge, besieged London-Bridge, burnt the Gate, and all the Houses to the Draw-Bridge, being at that Time thirteen in Number.

IN the Year 1481, an House, called the Common-Stage on London-Bridge, fell down into the Thames, by which five Men were drowned.

ON the 3d of February, in the Year 1553, the first of Queen Mary, Sir Thomas Wyat and the Kentish Men, who were risen on Account of the Queen's intended Marriage with Philip of Spain, marched to Dartford, and from thence towards LONDON, upon which the Draw-Bridge was cut down, and the Bridge Gates shut. Wyat and his People enter'd Southwark, where they lay till the 6th of February; but could get no Entrance by the Bridge, which was well defended by the Citizens, and so was forced to go round by Kingston.

Sir Thomas
Wyat slept at London-
Bridge.

THE Bridge of LONDON over the River Thames, is 1200 Feet long, consists of 19 Arches made of squared Stone, 60 Feet high, 30 Feet broad, and 21 Feet distant from each other; on both Sides, Houses are built, which make it look like a continued Street. There was antiently, as before-mentioned, a Chapel on the East Side, which is now converted into a House, and called the Chapel-House to this Day. At the North End of the Draw-Bridge, is a House called the Non-such House, said to be framed in Holland, and here placed, and that when finished, it had no Nail in it, but was all pinn'd together with wooden Pegs. It is now inhabited by Mr. Bray, a Stationer, on one Side of the Way, and Mr. West, a Dry-Salter, on the other. Over the Arch on the South Side, are the Arms of Queen Elizabeth, and two Dials, set up in the Mayoralty of Sir Patience Ward, 1681, with this Motto over them:

The Dimensions of the Bridge.

TIME and TIDE stay for None.

ON each Side, between the Houses are left three Vacancies, opposite to each other, two with Stone Walls, upon which are Iron Rails, that People passing along may take a View of the River East and West, and may also step out of the Way of Carts and Coaches, the Passage being formerly very narrow, and the Floors of the Houses that lay cross the Street, being low, they not only render'd those Places dark, but likewise obstructed the free Passage of Carts, if they were loaded any way high, and Coaches, so that they could not pass by one another, which oftentimes occasioned great Stops upon the Bridge, and was a great Hinderance to Passengers. To prevent which Inconveniences, and for the Ease of Passengers, as well as to add Beauty and Magnificence to this noble Structure, in the Year 1685, all the old Houses upon the Bridge, from one End to the other, except that stately Building joining to the Draw-Bridge, were pulled down, and the Street enlarged from 12 to 20 Feet wide, and the Arch of the Non-such House, by the Draw-Bridge, was made two Stories high, as were also the other Arches cross the Street; and then the Houses were all new built in a regular and uniform Manner.

All the Houses upon the Bridge rebuilt.

In Memory of this noble Work, upon the North Side of the high Arch of the aforesaid House, was set up the following Inscription in Letters of Gold.

Anno MDCLXXXV. et primo Jacobi II. Regis.

This Street was opened and enlarged from 12, to the Width of 20 Feet.

Sir James Smith, Knight, Lord Mayor.

THE three Vacancies before-mentioned, are over three Arches of the Bridge, which are wider than the rest, and are called the navigable Locks; one of these near the Gate is called the Rock Lock, it being commonly reported, that there is a Rock growing under the Water there; but we have been assured by a Person of great Veracity, as well as Curiosity, that a Friend of his, in the Year 1715, when the Tide was so kept back that many People walk'd over the River, went near enough to examine into this, and found it to be Stones joined together with Cement and Iron in some Places; and therefore supposed it was Part of an Arch that had formerly been broken down, and never since removed.

THE second is called the Draw-bridge Lock, and the third, near the Chapel, St. Mary's Lock. There is a Fourth between St. Magnus's Church and the first Vacancy, called the King's Lock.

London-
Bridge several Times burnt.

BESIDES the Fire, before spoken of, in the Year 1212, there have been other great Fires on this Bridge. On the 13th of February 1632, between the Hours of Eleven and Twelve at Night, a terrible Fire happened, which began in the House of one Briggs, a Needlemaker, near St. Magnus's Church, by the Carelessness of a Maid-Servant, who sat a Tub of hot Ashes under a Pair of Stairs. Before Eight o'Clock the next Morning all the Buildings were consumed from the North End of the Bridge to the first Vacancy, on both Sides, containing 42 Houses; Water being very scarce, the Thames being almost frozen over.

AFTER this Fire, the North End of the Bridge lay unbuilt for many Years, and had only Deal-boards set up to prevent People falling into the Thames. Many of which being often blown down by high Winds, made it very dangerous to pass that Way in the Night.

ABOUT the Year 1645, this began to be rebuilt, but lay unfinished, till the Year 1666, when by the general Conflagration of LONDON, on the 2d of September, all the new Buildings were again consumed, but some of the old Houses, built in the Reign of King John, remained unhurt.

THE Violence of this Fire, and the Fall of the Buildings, at the North End, did so batter and weaken the Stone-Work, upon which they stood, that the Repairing the Stone Piers, and Arches, before they could be strong enough to build upon, amounted to 1500*l.* which was all paid out of the Bridge Rents.

THE last Fire that happened there, was, on the 8th of September, in the Year 1725, in the Mayoralty of Sir George Mertins, Knt. It began at the House of a Brushmaker near St. Olave's-Street, thro' the Carelessness of a Servant, and burnt all the Houses on that Side the Way, as far as the Gate, and some on the other.

THIS occasioned the Gate to be taken down, and new built, in the Year 1728, in a handsomer Manner than before, having two Posterns for Foot-Passengers, whereas to the old Gate there was but one.

THE following Inscription is over the Arch on the South Side.

This Gate was widen'd from 11 to 18 Feet, in the Mayoralty of Sir Edward Becher, Knight.

AND over that are the King's-Arms.

IN the Year 1722, in the Mayoralty of Sir Gerrard Conyers, to preserve the Passage of the Bridge free, the following Order was published by the Court of Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council.

“ THIS Court being very sensible of the “ great Inconveniences and Mischiefs “ which happen, by the disorderly
“ Leading and Driving of Carrs, Carts, Coaches, “ and other Carriages over London-Bridge, where-
“ by the Common Passage there is much obstruct-
VOL. I.

“ ed, doth straightly Order and Enjoin (pursuant “ to several former Orders made by this Court for “ Prevention of those Mischiefs) That three suffi“ cient and able Persons be appointed, and con“ stantly maintained; One by the Governors of “ Christ's-Hospital, One by the Inhabitants of the “ Ward of Bridge-within, and the Other by the “ Bridge-Masters; which three Persons are to “ give their diligent and daily Attendance at “ each End of the Bridge, and by all good Means
“ to hinder and prevent the said Inconveniences,
“ and for that Purpose to direct and take Care,
“ That all Carts, Coaches, and other Carriages “ coming out of Southwark into this City, do
“ keep all along on the West Side of the said “ Bridge, and all Carts, Coaches, and other “ Carriages going out of this City, do keep all “ along on the East Side of the said Bridge, and “ that no Carman be suffered to stand a-cross the “ said Bridge to load or unload, and that they “ shall apprehend all such who shall be Refrac“ tory, or offend herein, and carry them before “ some of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for “ this City and Liberties, to be dealt with ac“ cording to Law. And further, to prevent the “ aforesaid Obstructions, it is ordered, That the “ Collector of the Tolls upon the said Bridge, “ shall take Care that the said Duties be collect“ ed without making a Stay of the Carts for “ which the same is to be paid. And that none “ may plead Ignorance hereof, It is further or“ dered, That this Order be forthwith Printed,
“ and published in the most publick Places on “ the said Bridge, and within this City, and the “ Borough of Southwark, for the better Obser“ vation hereof.

IN the same Year, in the Mayoralty of the said Sir Gerrard Conyers, viz. on the 12th of May 1722, The old Draw-Bridge was taken up, and a new one began to be laid; on which Account an Order was published to give Notice to all People to avoid the Place till the same was finished, which was in five Days Time: And it is remarkable, that on that very Day fifty Years, viz. on the 12th of May 1672, in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Hanson, the last Draw-Bridge had been laid down.

A new Draw-Bridge laid.

FOR the better keeping this Bridge in Repair, there are a Comptroller, two Bridge-Masters, whose Names, this Year (1723) are Webb and Lunn, and Officers under them, and many Years 3000*l.* have been laid out thereon, which is defrayed out of the Ground Rents of the Houses on the Bridge, Fines, Benefactions, Tolls, &c.

The following Tolls are taken on the Bridge.

For every Cart or Waggon with shod Wheels	00	00	4
For a Dray with five Barrels	00	00	1
For each Pipe or Butt	00	00	1
For a Ton of any Goods	00	00	2
For any Thing less than a Ton	00	00	1

THE two Officers, called Bridge-Masters, are chosen, or continued every Year, by the Citizens assembled, in their Common Hall, upon an Election, if there are two Candidates, and one require the Polls to be number'd, the Mayor is oblig'd to allow it. One Turner brought his Action on the Case against Sir Samuel Sterling, Lord Mayor, in the Year 1669, for refusing to number the Polls, and discharging the Court, so that he lost the Profits, and Judgment was given for the Plaintiff.

To conclude this Article of London-Bridge, we shall present our Readers with the following Verses upon it, wrote in the Time of Mr. Stow.

Of other BRIDGES in the City.

There were antiently divers Bridges over several Rivers, Bourns, and Brooks which ran thro'

many Streets and Places of the City; of which some are yet remaining; but the rest were taken down, as any River or Brook was stopt up.

Fleet-Bridge, in the West, without Ludgate, Fleet-Bridge was, in Mr. Stow's Time, a Bridge of Stone, coped on each Side with Iron Pikes. On the West, towards the South, were also Lanthorns, for Lights to be placed in the Winter Nights, for the Convenience of Passengers. Under this Bridge ran the Water once called, The River of the Wells, afterwards Turn-Mill-Brook, and then Fleet-Dike, because it ran by the Fleet, and, at one Time about it. Since the Re-building LONDON, it is made the Breadth of the Street, for the Convenience of Coaches and Carts. The Sides are raised above Breast high; and upon two Peers, on each Side, are carved the City Arms and Supporters. Under this Bridge runs the Canal, as it is now called; over which there are likewise two other Bridges of Free-Stone; that on the South of Fleet-Bridge, is opposite to Bridewell; and that on the North, is over-against the End of Fleet-Lane, near the Fleet Prison.

THERE is nothing more necessary to be said of this Bridge in this Place; for of the Water Course that was antiently here, and of that Part of it which is proposed to be fill'd up by the City, for which an Act of Parliament was pass'd in the present Session, [1733] we have already spoken.

Holborn, or Old-Bourn Bridge, was so called Holborn-Bridge from a Bourn, that in old Times, ran down Holborn-Hill into the River of the Wells.

Cowbridge was somewhat more North, over the same Water, near Cowbridge-street, or Cow-Lane.

THERE were also divers Bridges over the Town Ditch, viz. without Aldgate, Bishopsgate, Mooregate, Cripplegate, Aldersgate; the Postern of Christ's Hospital, Newgate, and Ludgate; and one other over the River of the Wells, or Fleet-Dike, between the Precinct of the Black-Fryars, and Bridewell.

THERE were also, in old Times, divers Bridges in many Places, over the Water of Walbrook; every Person who had Lands on either Side the said Brook, being obliged to vault, or bridge, and mend the same as far as their Lands extended. And in the 11th of Edward III. the Inhabitants upon the Course of the Brook, were obliged to pile, or wall the Sides of it. One of the Bridges over Walbrook was called Horse-shoe Bridge, near the Church of St. John Baptist, now called St. John Baptist near Dowgate.

OF all these Bridges there are but four remaining, and these are all over the Canal; viz. Bridewell-Bridge, Fleet-Lane-Bridge, and Holborn-Bridge.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the Antient TOWERS, and CASTLES, that have been in, and about the City of LONDON.

The TOWER on London-Bridge.

The Tower at the North End of the Draw-Bridge.

THE next Tower to that of LONDON (which will be treated of in a Chapter by itself) was the Tower on London-Bridge, at the North End of the Draw-Bridge, which was began to be built in the Year 1426: John Reinwell, Mayor of LONDON, laid one of the first Corner Stones in the Foundation of it. The other three were laid by the Sheriffs and Bridge-Masters. Upon every one of these four Stones was ingraved, in fair Roman Letters, the Word IHESUS; which Stones Mr. Stow afterwards saw deposited in the Bridge Store-House, when this Tower was new built of Timber.

THIS Gate and Tower was at first strongly built of Stone, and so continued till the Year 1577, when, being much decayed, it was began to be pull'd down, and the Traitors Heads thereon, were removed, and set on the Tower over the Gate at the Bridge-Foot, towards Southwark. When it was thus pulled down, a new Foundation was drawn, and Sir John Langley, Lord Mayor, laid the first Stone, in the Presence of the Sheriffs and Bridge-Masters. In the Year 1579, this new Tower was finished, a beautiful and chargeable Piece of Work, all above the Bridge being of Timber. This is the Non-such House, spoken of in the last Chapter.

The TOWER on the South of London-Bridge.

The Tower at the South End of London-Bridge.

THERE was another Tower on London-Bridge, over the Gate, at the South End, towards Southwark. This Gate, with the Tower thereon, and two Arches of the Bridge, fell down in the Year 1436; but no Man, as it happened, was Hurt thereby. Towards Re-building it, many liberal Citizens gave large Sums of Money.

BAYNARD'S-CASTLE.

Baynard's Castle.

William Fitz-Stephen saith, In the West Part of this City were two most strong Castles; and Gervasius Tilbury, in the Reign of Henry II. saith, Two Castles were built, with Walls and Ramparts, whereof one was in Right of Possession Baynard's; the other the Barons of Mountfitchet. The first of these Castles, Banking on the River Thames, was called Baynard's-Castle, from Baynard, a Nobleman, who came in with William the Conqueror, and then built it. He died in the Reign of William Rufus; after whose Decease Geffrey Baynard succeeded; and then William Baynard, in the Year 1111, who, by Forfeiture for Felony, lost his Barony of Little-Dunmow, and King Henry gave it wholly to Robert Fitz-Richard, the Son of Gilbert Earl of Clare, and to his Heirs, together with the Honour of Baynard's-Castle. This Robert married Maude de Sent-Licio, Lady of Bradham, and dying in the Year 1134, was buried at St. Need's, by Richard Earl of Clare. Walter, his Son, succeeded him, and married Matilda de Beckham, after whose Decease, he married Matilda, the Daughter and Co-heir of Richard de Lucy, on whom he begat Robert; and others. He died in the Year 1198, and was buried at Dunmow; to him succeeded Robert Fitz-Water, a valiant Knight.

ABOUT the Year 1213, there arose a great Contention betwixt King John and his Barons, on Account of Matilda, called The Fair, a Daughter of the aforefaid Robert Fitz-Water, whom the King unlawfully loved, but could not obtain; whereupon, and for other Causes of the like Sort, there ensued a War throughout the Realm. The Barons being received into LONDON, did great Damage to the King; but in the End, the King did not only banish the said Fitz-Water, among others, out of the Realm, but also caused his Castle, called Baynard's-Castle, and his other Houses, to be demolished. After this a Messenger was sent to Matilda the Fair, about the King's Suit, but she not consenting to it, was poisoned. Robert Fitz-Water being then gone, with others, into France, and some went into Scotland.

IN the Year 1214, King John being in France with a great Army, a Truce was made between the two Kings of England and France, for five Years. There being a River, or Arm of the Sea, between the two Armies, a Knight among the English called out to those on the other Side, to Challenge any one among them to come and take a Just or two with him; whereupon, without any Delay, Robert Fitz-Water, who was on the French Side, ferried over, and got on Horseback, without any one to help him, and shewed himself ready to the Face of this Challenger, whom at the first Course he struck so violently with his great Spear, that Horse and Man fell to the Ground; and when his Spear was broken, he went back again to the King of France. King John seeing this, cry'd out, By God's Tooth, his usual Oath, he were a King indeed, who had such a Knight. The Friends of Robert, hearing these Words, kneeled down, and said, O King! He is your Knight: It is Robert Fitz-Water. Whereupon, he was sent for the next Day, and restored to the King's Favour; by which Means a Peace was concluded, Fitz-Water was restored to his Estates, and had Leave given him to repair his Castle of Baynard, and other Castles.

IN the Year 1216, the first of Henry III. the Castle of Hertford, being delivered to Lewis the French King, and the Barons of England, Robert Fitz-Water desired to have it, because the Keeping thereof did antiently of Right belong to him; but was answered by Lewis, "That Englishmen were not worthy to have such Places in Keeping, because they betray'd their own Lord, &c."

THIS Robert died in the Year 1234, and was buried at Dunmow, and Walter his Son succeeded him. This Barony of Baynard, was in the Ward of King Henry, during the Non-age of another Robert-Fitz-Water, who in the Year 1289, married Ælienor, Daughter and Heir to the Earl of Ferrers.

ON the 12th of March, 1303, the said Robert Fitz-Water, did acknowledge his Service to the City for his Castle of Baynard; before Sir John Blunt, Mayor of LONDON; and swore upon the Evangelists, That he would be true to the Liberties thereof, and maintain the same to his Power, and keep the Counsel of the same, &c.

The RIGHTS that belonged to Robert Fitz-Water, Chastilian and Banner-Bearer of LONDON, Lord of Wodeham, were these:

Robert Fitz-Water
Chastilian and Banner-Bearer
of LONDON.

THE said Robert and his Heirs, ought to be, and are chief Banners of LONDON, in Fee for the Chastiliary, which he and his Ancestors had by Castle-Baynard, in the said City. In Time of War, the said Robert and his Heirs ought to serve the City, in Manner as followeth; that is,

The Banner of St. Paul.

THE said Robert ought to come, he being the Twentieth Man of Arms on Horseback, covered with Cloth, or Armour, unto the great West Door of St. Paul, with his Banner displayed before him of his Arms. And when he is come to the said Door, mounted and apparelled, as before is said, the Mayor, with his Aldermen and Sheriffs, armed in their Arms, shall come out of the said Church of St. Paul unto the said Door, with a Banner in his Hand all on Foot, which Banner shall be Gules, the Image of St. Paul, Gold; the Face, Hands, Feet, and Sword, of Silver. And as soon as the said Robert shall see the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs come on Foot out of the Church, armed with such a Banner, he shall alight from his Horse, and salute the Mayor, and say to him, Sir Mayor, I am come to do my Service which I owe to the City.

AND the Mayor and Aldermen shall answer;

WE give to you, as to our Banneret of Fee in this City, the Banner of this City to bear and govern, to the Honour and Profit of this City, to your Power.

AND the said Robert and his Heirs shall receive the Banner in his Hands, and go on Foot out of the Gate, with the Banner in his Hands; and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, shall follow to the Door, and shall bring a Horse to the said Robert, worth 20*l.* which Horse shall be saddled with a Saddle of the Arms of the said Robert, and shall be covered with Sindals of the said Arms.

ALSO they shall present to him 20*l.* Sterling, and deliver it to the Chamberlain of the said Robert, for his Expences that Day. Then the said Robert shall mount upon the Horse which the Mayor presented to him, with the Banner in his Hand: And as soon as he is up, he shall say to the Mayor, That he must cause a Marshal to be chosen for the Host, one of the City; which being done, the said Robert shall command the Mayor and Burgeses of the City, to warn the Commons to assemble, and all go under the Banner of St. Paul; and the said Robert shall bear it himself to Aldgate, and there the said Robert and Mayor shall deliver the said Banner of St. Paul, to whom they think proper. And if they are to go out of the City, then the said Robert ought to choose two out of every Ward, the most sage Persons, to look to the Keeping of the City, after they are gone out. And this Counsel shall be taken in the Priory of the Trinity near Aldgate. And before every Town or Castle, which the Host of LONDON shall besiege, if the Siege continue a whole Year, the said Robert shall have, for every Siege, of the Commonalty of LONDON, one hundred Shillings, and no more.

THESE were the Rights that Robert Fitz-Water had in Time of War. The Rights belonging to him and his Heirs, in the City of LONDON, in Time of Peace, were as follow:

THAT is to say, the said Robert Fitz-Water had a Soke or Ward in the City, where was a Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul, which led down, by a Brewhouse of St. Paul, to the Thames, and so to the Side of the Mill, which was in the Water coming down from Fleet-Bridge, and went by London-Wall, betwixt the Fryars Preachers and Ludgate, and so returned by the House of the said Friars, to the said Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul; that is, all the Parish of St. Andrew, which was in the Gift of his Ancestors, by the said Seniority: And so the said Robert had appendant unto the said Soke, all the Things underwritten.

THAT he ought to have a Sokeman, and to place what Sokeman he will, so he be of the Sokemanry, or the same Ward; and if any of the Sokemanry be impleaded in the Guildhall, of any Thing that toucheth not the Body of the Mayor that for the Time is, or that toucheth the Body of no Sheriff, it is not lawful for the Sokeman of the Sokemanry of the said Robert Fitz-Water, to demand a Court of the said Robert; and the Mayor and his Citizens of LONDON ought to grant him to have a Court; and in his Court he ought to bring his Judgments, as it is assented and agreed upon in the Guildhall, that shall be given him.

IF any therefore be taken in his Sokemanry, he ought to have his Stocks and Imprisonment in his Soken; and he shall be brought from thence to the Guildhall, before the Mayor, and there they shall provide him his Judgment that ought to be given of him: But his Judgment shall not be published 'till he come into the Court of the said Robert, and in his Liberty.

AND the Judgment shall be such, that if he have deserved Death by Treason, he to be tied to a Post in the Thames at a good Wharf, where Boats are fasten'd, two Ebbings and two Flowings of the Water.

AND if he be condemned for a common Thief, he ought to be led to the Elms, and there suffer his Judgment as other Thieves. And so the said Robert and his Heirs hath Honour, that he holdeth a great Franchise within the City, that the Mayor of the City, and Citizens, are bound to do him of Right; that is to say, That when the Mayor will hold a great Council, he ought to call the said Robert and his Heirs, to be with him in Council of the City; and the said Robert ought to be sworn to be of Council with the City, against all People, saving the King and his Heirs. And when the said Robert cometh to the Hustings of the Guildhall of the City, the Mayor, or his Lieutenant, ought to rise against him, and set him down near unto him, and so long as he is in the Guildhall, all the Judgments ought to be given by his Mouth, according to the Record of the Records of the said Guildhall. And so many Waifes as come so long as he is there, he ought to give them to the Bailiffs of the Town, or to whom he will, by the Council of the Mayor of the City.

THIS Robert died in the Year 1305, leaving Issue, Walter Fitz-Robert, who had Issue, Robert Fitz-Water, to whom the Citizens of LONDON, in the Year 1320, acknowledged the Right which they ow'd to him and his Heirs, for the Castle-Baynard. He died in the Year 1325, and was succeeded by Robert Fitz-Robert, Fitz-Water, &c. but how the Honour of Baynard's-Castle, with the Appurtenances, fell from the

the Possession of the Fitz-Waters, Mr. Stow can give no Account.

Baynard's-Castle burnt, and rebuilt by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester.

In the Year 1428, the seventh of Henry VI. a great Fire happening at Baynard's-Castle, it was new built by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester; and after his Attainder and Death, in the Year 1446, it came into the Hands of Henry VI. and from him to Richard Duke of York, who, in the Year 1457, lodged there in his own House.

ON the 28th of February, in the Year 1460, the Earls of March and of Warwick, with a great Number of Men, tho' but few of Note, entered the City of LONDON, where they were joyfully received by the Citizens; and upon the 3d of March, the Earl of Warwick muster'd his Men in St. John's Field, in the midst of Throngs of People, whom ordering to be cast into a Ring about him, he read aloud the Agreement between the King and the late Duke of York, with the Act of Parliament by which it was confirmed. That done, he told the People, Henry had notoriously violated this Agreement, and so forfeited, according to the Act of Parliament, his Right to the Crown: Then raising his Voice, he asked the People, who stood round him, Whether they would have Henry of Lancaster for King? The whole Multitude crying out, No, No; He asked, Whether according to that Settlement, they would have Edward, Son of the late Duke of York, to reign over them? To which all the People answer'd with Acclamations, expressing their Consent. Upon this, certain Captains were appointed to carry the Relation of what had been done to the said Edward Earl of March, then lodged at his Castle of Baynard, where a great Council was called of all the Bishops, Lords, Gentlemen, and Magistrates, in and about LONDON. Edward being present in the Assembly, set forth his Title to the Crown, as well by Birth, as by the aforesaid Agreement, and desired it might be adjudged to him. It would have been great Boldness to dispute his Pretensions at such a Juncture. So, with one Consent, the Assembly declared, that Henry of Lancaster having forfeited his Right of enjoying the Crown, during Life, by Breach of the solemn Agreement made with the Duke of York, and ratified by the Parliament, it was devolved to Edward, eldest Son of the Duke of York. Upon this Declaration, the Crown was offered the Earl; he thanked God and them for his Election, but shewed some Diffidence in himself to take upon him so great a Charge, till by the Exhortation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Exeter, and certain Noblemen, he yielded to their Request. And the next Day he went to St. Paul's in Procession, made an Offering, and had Te Deum sung. Then was he in great State conveyed to Westminster, and there in the great Hall set in the King's Seat, with St. Edward's Scepter in his Hand.

THE Archbishop of Canterbury having asked the People, whether they would have Edward Earl of March for King; the People answer'd with loud Acclamations. Then the King took the Homage of the Lords that were present, and the Ceremony concluded with singing Te Deum. Edward was afterwards conducted with great Solemnity to the Bishop's Palace, where Henry used to lodge, when he was within the Walls of the City: And the next Day, being the 5th of March, he was proclaimed in LONDON, and the neighbouring Towns, by the Name of Edward IV.

IN the seventh Year of King Edward's Reign, many Men were arrested for Treason surmised against them, for which several were put to Death, and others escaped by paying large Sums of Money. Among the rest, Sir Thomas Cooke, Sir John Plummer, Knights, Humphrey Heyward, and other Aldermen of LONDON, were arrested and charged with Treason, whereof they were acquitted, but lost their Goods to the King, to the Value of 40,000 Marks, or more, as some have written. And for Example, Sir Thomas Cooke, a little before Lord Mayor of LONDON, was impeached of High-Treason, by one Hawkins, for which he was committed to the Tower, his House in LONDON was seized on by the Lord Rivers, and his Lady and Servants turned out of it; the Cause being thus:

Hawkins afore-named came, upon a Time, to the said Sir Thomas Cooke, requesting him to lend him a thousand Marks upon good Security; to which he answer'd, that he would first know for whom the Money was borrowed. Understanding afterwards, that it was for Queen Margaret, he answer'd, That he had no current Goods that he could dispose of without great Loss, and therefore desired Hawkins to press him no farther about it; yet the said Hawkins at length requested but one hundred Pounds, but went away without one Penny, and never came after to ask him for any.

TWO or three Years after, Hawkins was committed to the Tower, and brought to the Brake or Rack, commonly called the Duke of Exeter's Daughter, because that Duke was the Inventor of it. By Means of which Pain he revealed many Things, and among the rest, the Motion which he had made to Sir Thomas Cooke; upon which Account the said Sir Thomas was troubled, as before related, and indicted of Treason. After which a Commission of Oyer and Terminer was held in the Guildhall, where sat the Lord Mayor, the Duke of Clarence, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Rivers, Sir John Fogge, with other of the King's Council.

TO this Place was the said Sir Thomas brought and arraigned upon Life and Death, where he was acquitted of the Indictment, and sent to the Compter in Bread-Street, and from thence to the King's-Bench. Being thus acquitted, his Wife got Possession again of his House, which she found in a very sad Plight; for the Servants of Sir John Fogge, and the Lord Rivers, had made Havock of what they pleased. Also at his Seat at Giddy-Hall in Essex, others had destroyed the Deer in his Park, his Conies and Fish, and not spared even his Brasses, Pewter, Bedding, and whatever could be carried away, for which, not one Penny could be got again in Recompence, nor could Sir Thomas himself be discharged till he had paid 8000 l. to the King, and 800 l. to the Queen. And because Sir John Markham, Knt. then Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, had determined somewhat against the King's Pleasure, that Sir Thomas Cooke's Offence was not Treason, but Misprision of Treason, which was not punishable by Death, but only by a Fine at the King's Pleasure, the Lord Rivers and the Dutcheffs of Bedford, his Wife, procured him to be turned out of his Office.

Edward IV. being dead, leaving his eldest Son Edward, and his second Son Richard, both Infants, Richard Duke of Gloucester, then Protector, began to plot for the Crown; and, as it were, by the Election of the Commons in the Guildhall of LONDON, took upon him the Title of King in this Baynard's-Castle.

Henry

Richard III. took upon him the Title of King in Baynard's-Castle.

Henry VII. about the Year 1487, the 31st of his Reign, repaired, or rather new built, this House, not imbattelled, or so strongly fortified like a Castle; but far more beautiful and commodious, fit for the Entertainment of any Prince. In the seventh Year of his Reign, he and his Queen, were lodged there, and came from thence to St. Paul's Church, where they made their Offering, dined in the Bishop's Palace, and so returned.

IN the 18th Year of his Reign, he was lodged there, and the Ambassadors from the King of the Romans, were brought thither to an Audience, and from thence the King went to St. Paul's, and was there sworn to the King of the Romans, as the said King had sworn to him.

IN the 20th Year of his Reign, he, with the Knights of the Garter, in all their Habits of the Order, rode from the Tower of LONDON, through the City, to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, and there heard Even-Song; and from thence rode to Baynard's-Castle, where the King lodged, and the next Day, in the same Habits, they rode again to St. Paul's in Procession, heard Divine Service, offered, and returned. The same Year the King of Castile was lodged there:

THIS Castle came afterwards to the Earls of Pembroke.

ON the 19th of July, in the Year 1553, the Council, being partly moved by the Right of the Lady Mary, and considering that most of the Realm was inclined to her Side, changed their Opinion, with respect to the Lady Jane Grey, newly proclaimed Queen; and assembling themselves at Baynard's-Castle, consulted with the Earl of Pembroke, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and Sir John Mason, Clerk of the Council; and sending for the Lord Mayor, rode to the Cross in Cheapside, where Garter, King at Arms, with Trumpets sounding, proclaimed the Lady Mary, Daughter to King Henry VIII. and Queen Catherine, Queen of England, &c.

THIS Baynard's-Castle, as also that of Mountfitchet, near adjoining, have been long since pulled down, and converted into Timber-Yards, Wood-Wharfs, and private Buildings.

TOWER of Mountfiquit, or Mountfichet.

The next Tower, or Castle, banking also on the River Thames, was called Mountfiquit's-Castle, belonging to a Nobleman, the Baron of Mountfichet, the first Builder of it, who came over with William the Conqueror, and was surnamed, Le Sire Mountfichet. This Castle he built in a Place not far distant from Baynard's-Castle, towards the West. This same William Mountfichet, lived in the Reign of Henry I. and was Witness to a Charter then granted to the City, for the Sheriffs of LONDON. Richard Mountfiquit lived in the Reign of King John; and in the Year 1213, was banished, by that King, into France, when, perhaps, he caused his Castle, among those of other Barons, to be demolished. This, after his Return, might be again built; for the total Destruction of it was about the Year 1276, when Robert Kilwarby, Archbishop of Canterbury, began there the Foundation of the House of the Fryars Preachers Church, commonly called the Black-Fryars, as appeareth by a Charter, dated the 10th of June, in the 4th of Edward I. remaining in the Records of the Tower; wherein it is declared, That Gregory de Rockesley, Mayor of LONDON, and the Barons of the same City, granted, and gave unto the said Archbishop Robert, two Lanes, or Ways, next the Street of Baynard's-Castle, and the Tower of Mountfiquit, to be applied for the enlarging the said Church and Place, in these Words:

" Gregory Rockesley, Lord Mayor, and the " Barons of LONDON, granted, and gave
" to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Robert Kilwarby, two Lanes, or Ways, lying next to the " Street of Baynard's-Castle, and the Tower of " Mountfiquit, or Mountfichet, to be destroyed.
" In the which Place, the said Robert builded
" the late new Church of the Black-Fryars, with " the rest of the Stones that were left of the " said Tower: For, the best and choice Stones,
" the Bishop of LONDON had obtained of " King William the Conqueror, to re-edify the " upper Part of St. Paul's Church, which was " then (by Chance of Fire) decayed.

THE Charter of King Edward II. before-mentioned, ran thus:

EDWARDUS, Dei Gratia, &c. Omnibus, &c.

" EDWARD, Son of King Edward, &c.
" To all, &c. Whereas Gregory de
" Rockesley, our Mayor of LONDON,
" and the other Barons of the said City, at our
" Instance, have commonly, and unanimously,
" granted to the Venerable Father, Robert, Arch" bishop of Canterbury, and his Assigns, two " Lanes contiguous to his Place of Castle-Bay-
" nard, and the Tower of Mountfichet, to be
" stopt up for the enlarging of the foresaid Place,
" and to enclose them; while yet he shall assign
" a like Way to them, and as convenient for the " Commonalty of the said City. And We, un" derstanding by the foresaid Mayor, and Barons
" of the said City, that the said Archbishop " hath already prepared a better Way, and more " convenient for the said Commonalty, than the " foresaid Lanes were: We, to the said Arch" bishop, and his Assigns, for Us and Our " Heirs, as much as in Us is, do grant, ratify,
" and confirm, the foresaid Grant. So that Our
" said Barons of LONDON, by Occasion
" of their foresaid Grant, nor the Archbishop,
" nor his Assigns, on Account of the said chang" ing of the Ways, be accused or molested for
" Time to come, before our Justices Itinerants
" at the Tower of LONDON, upon Cause
" of Purpresture made of the foresaid Lanes.
" In Testimony whereof, &c. Witness myself
" at Westminster, the 10th Day of June, Anno " 1311, in the Fourth Year of Our Reign.

The TOWER on the Thames.

THERE was a Third Tower situated on the River Thames, near the said Black-Fryars Church, on the West Part of it, built at the Citizens Charge; but by Licence and Command of Edward I. and Edward II. as appeareth by their Grants. By the latter, [King Edward II.] in the 10th Year of his Reign, an Imposition was granted towards the Building a new Tower on the Wall, near the Fryars Preachers, which stood for two hundred Years; and was, at last, taken down by the Command of Sir John Shaa, Mayor of LONDON, in the Year 1502. That this Tower was a large and magnificent Building, we may gather from the following Letter from Edward I. to the City:

" WHEREAS we have granted you for " Aid of the Work of the Walls of " our City, and the Closure of the " same, divers Customs of vendible Things,
" coming to the said City, to be taken for a cer" tain Time, We command you, That you cause
" to

“ to be finished the Wall of the said City, now “ begun near the Mansion of the Fryars Preachers, “ and a certain good and comely Tower at the “ Head of the said Wall within the Water of “ Thames there. Wherein We may be received,
 “ and tarry with Honour, to our Ease and Satis“ faction in our Comings there; out of the Pence “ taken, and to be taken of the said Customs,
 “ &c. Witness myself at Westminster, the 8th “ Day of July 1276.

A TOWER in the West Part of the City.

ANOTHER Tower, or Castle, there was also in the West Part of the City, appertaining to the King; for in the Year 1087, the 20th of William I. the City of LONDON, with St. Paul's Church, being burned, Mauritius, then Bishop of LONDON, afterwards began the Foundation of a new Church; to forward which Work, King William gave the choice Stones of this Castle, standing near the Bank of the River Thames, at the West End of the City. After Mauritius, his Successor Richard, purchased the Streets about Paul's Church, encompassing the same with a Wall of Stone, and Gates. King Henry I. gave to this Richard, so much of the Moat, or Wall of the Castle, on the Thames Side to the South, as should be needful to make the said Wall of the Church-Yard, and so much more as should suffice to make a Way without the Wall on the North-side.

THIS Tower or Castle, thus destroyed, seems to have been in the Place where Bridewell now stands: For, notwithstanding the Destruction of the said Castle, or Tower, the House remained so large that many Kings long after lodged therein, and kept their Courts. In the ninth Year of Henry III. the Courts of Law and Justice were kept in the King's House, wheresoever he lodged, and not elsewhere: And of the Kings being lodged, and keeping their Law-Courts in this Place, might be shewn from many Authorities on Record; but for a plain Proof, this one may suffice: Hæc est finalis Concordia, facta in Curia Dom. Regis apud Sanct. Brigid. Lond. à Die Sancti Michaelis, in 15 Dies, Anno Regni Johannis Septimo; coram G. Fil. Petri, Eustacio de Fauconberg, Johanne de Gestlinge, Osbart Filio Hervey, Walter de Crisping, Justiciar. & aliis Baronibus Domini Regis.

MOREOVER, Matthew Paris saith, That about the Year 1210, King John, in the twelfth Year of his Reign, summoned a Parliament at St. Bride's in London, where he exacted of the Clergy, and religious Persons, the Sum of 100,000 l. besides which, the white Monks were compelled to cancel their Privileges, and to pay 40,000 l. to the King, &c. This House near St. Bride's being left, and not at all used by the Kings, fell to Ruin, insomuch, that the very Platform lay waste, and became a Lay-Stall for Filth and Rubbish; only a very good Well remained there.

A great Part of this Ground, in the West, was afterwards given to a Bishop of Salisbury; the other Part, toward the East, remained waste, 'till King Henry VIII. built a stately and beautiful House thereon, giving it the Name of Bridewell, from the Parish, and the Well there. This House he built on purpose to entertain the Emperor Charles V. in, who in the Year 1522, came into this City.

The TOWER of Barbican.

ON the West Side the City, near Redcross-Street, there was a Tower, commonly called

Barbican, or Burkkening; for this being built a good Height, and on rising Ground, was formerly used as a Watch-Tower for the City; from whence a Man might view all the City towards the South, and see also into Kent, Suffex, and Surrey, and every other Way, East, North, and West.

Other WATCH-TOWERS.

THERE were of old Time some other Watch-Towers, in and about the City, all which were repaired, and others new built, by Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, in the Reign of Henry III. when the Barons were in Arms, and held the City against the King: But the Barons being reconciled to his Favour, in the Year 1267, he caused all their Burhkennings, Watch-Towers, and Bulwarks, made and repaired by the said Earl, to be pulled down, and the Ditches to be fill'd up; and then was this Burkkening, among the rest, demolished; and altho' the Ditch near it, called Hounsditch, was stop't up, yet the Street, for a long Time, was called Hounsditch, but now has the Name of Barbican. The Ground on which this Burkkening, or Watch-Tower stood, King Edward III. in the Year 1336, and the tenth of his Reign, gave to Robert Efford, or Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, by the Name of the Manor of Base-Court, in the Parish of St. Giles's without Cripplegate, LONDON, commonly called the Barbican.

TOWER-ROYAL.

Tower-Royal was antiently the King's House, King Stephen being there lodged, but afterwards called the Queen's Wardrobe. The Princess, Mother to King Richard II. in the fourth Year of his Reign, was lodged there, being forced to fly from the Tower of LONDON, when the Rebels possessed it. On the 15th of June, saith Frosard, Wat Tyler being slain, the King went to this Princess, his Mother, then lodged in the Tower-Royal, called the Queen's Wardrobe, where he tarried two Days and two Nights. Which Tower (saith the Record of Edward III. the 36th Year) was in the Parish of St. Michael de Pater-noster, &c.

IN the Year 1386, King Richard, with Queen Anne, his Wife, kept their Christmas at Eltham, to which Place Lion, King of Armenia, came to him, under Pretence of making Peace between the Kings of England and France. Whatever the Occasion was of his coming hither, he found his Account in it; for, besides innumerable Gifts, which he received from the King and the Nobility, the King, when he lay in this Tower-Royal, at the Queen's Wardrobe in LONDON, granted to him by Charter, 1000 l. a Year, during his Life. He being, as he affirmed, chased out of his Kingdom by the Tartars. What else concerns this Tower will be related, when we come to Vintry Ward, in which it stood.

SERNE'S-TOWER.

Serne's-Tower, in Bucklersbury, was another Castle or Palace of the Kings of England, which King Edward III. in the 18th Year of his Reign, appointed his Exchange of Monies to be kept in; and in the 32d, he gave the said Tower to his free Chapel of St. Stephen's at Westminster.

Of the TOWER of LONDON.

The Tower of
LONDON.

WILLIAM Fitz-Stephen saith, "The City of LONDON hath in the East a very great and most strong Palatine Tower, whose Turrets and Walls do rise from a deep Foundation; the Mortar thereof being tempered with the Blood of Beasts, &c.

It is situated upon a large Plot of Ground, called the Tower Liberty, which contains both the Tower-Hills, the Greater and the Less, and Part of East-Smithfield, Rosemary-Lane, Well-Close, &c.

Its Situation.

It is encompassed with a deep Ditch, in some Places 120 Feet Broad, supplied with Water out of the Thames, which is its Southern Boundary. Over this Ditch it hath two Bridges, one for Carts and Coaches, by the Lyon's-Tower; the other for Foot Passengers, over a Draw-Bridge on the South Side: Besides these, it hath a Passage, or Cut, out of the Thames, which is called Traytor's-Bridge; because, formerly, all Persons committed to the Tower for Treason, were brought this Way into it, by Boat.

THE Compass about the Tower, on the Outside of the Ditch, is 3156 Feet; and the Quantity of the Ground comprehended within the Walls and Ditch, is twelve Acres, and some Rods. The whole, with its Liberty aforesaid, contains somewhat above twenty-six Acres of Ground.

The Tower,
how within the City.
Coke Instit.
P. 4.

WHEREAS the Tower is said to be within the City of LONDON, "It is, saith Lord Coke, thus to be understood: That the antient Wall of LONDON, the Mention whereof yet appeareth, extended through the Tower; and all that which is environed by the said Wall, that is, on the West Part of it, is within the City, that is to say, in the Parish of Alballow's Barking, within the Tower Ward. And the rest of the Tower on the East Side of the antient Wall, is in the County of Middlesex. This, upon Enquiry, was found 13 Jacob. Regis, in the Case of Sir Thomas Overbury, who was poisoned in a Chamber in the Tower, on the West Side of the old Wall; and therefore Weston, the principal Murtherer, was tried before Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer in LONDON; and so was Sir Gervas Elways, Lieutenant of the Tower, as Accessary.

The Tower
Liberties.

THERE is a certain Extent of Ground bordering upon the Tower, to which is annexed the peculiar Liberty of being subject to no Jurisdiction but that of the Tower itself. This, being upon the Confines of the City, hath oftentimes occasioned great Disputes between the Tower Officers, and the Mayor and City of LONDON; as in the 6th of Edward IV. in the 1st of Queen Elizabeth; and also in the Year 1585, as will be shewn more at large in the Chapter of Tower-street Ward, besides what followeth.

IN East-Smithfield, at the End of Hog-Lane, a Gibbet being set up, in the Year 1580, for the Execution of one R. Dod, for the Murther of one Mrs. Skinner, in her own House thereabouts; and the Sheriff having brought the Malefactor to be hanged, Sir Owen Hopton, then Lieutenant of the Tower, commanded the Sheriff's Officers back again to the West Side of a Cross that stood there, which seems to have been the Boundary of the Tower Liberties; and then taking the Sheriff and the Malefactor into an House, after some Stay they all departed; the Gibbet was taken down, and the Malefactor carried to Tyburn in the Afternoon, and there executed.

IN the Year 1589, one John Cox, a Lime-man, attempted to build a Wharf in the Thames, at the Watergate, situated about the West End of the Tower-Wharf, and had set up his Frame. This Place was said to be within the Liberties of the City of LONDON; but he had the Countenance of an Officer of the Tower, as he pretended. This Building, by narrowing the Passage in that Place to the River Thames, would have been a great Inconvenience to many of her Majesty's Subjects; whereupon Sir Richard Martin, Lord Mayor, gave Orders to put a Stop to it, which Cox would not obey; but when one from the Lord Mayor commanded him to forbear, he lifted up his Staff to strike him, and still proceeded. Upon which, the Mayor complained to the Lord Treasurer, desiring that Cox might be commanded to take away his Frame, and leave off his Work. And withal he beseeched his Lordship, That whereas many Times before, Variânces had arisen between the City and the Officers of the Tower, about Encroachments upon the common Soil within the Liberties of the City, which some Persons, with regard to their private Profit, had supposed to appertain to the Officers of the Tower; and had therefore procured Grants from some Officers unto themselves, and by that Means raised Contention between the City and the Lieutenant of the Tower; he humbly beseeched his Lordship to extend his Favour so far to the City, that the Titles on each Side might be examined into, that all Occasions of Controversy between the City and Lieutenant, and other the Queen's Officers of the Tower, might be put an End to.

ABOUT the same Time, a dangerous Quarrel happened, concerning the said Liberties of the Tower. On a Sunday, the Apprentices of LONDON took Occasion to make an Insurrection, and held their Rendezvous near, or within the Liberties. Thither the Lord Mayor, the Sheriffs, and their Attendants came to them to quell the Tumult, and in the Hurly-Burly, came, it seems, within the Liberties; whereat some of the People of the Tower were moved, as at an Infringement on their Liberties, and began to resist the Mayor and his Attendants: But of this, as an Affront offer'd to him and the City, he complained to the Queen and Council against the Lieutenant Sir Michael Blount, who, in his own Vindication, gave the following Account of what he had done, viz. That as soon as he was advertised of the Tumult, being in his Lodging in the Tower, he went out of the Gate, in his Doublet, Hose and Slippers, with only a little Walking-Staff in his Hand, and, by a civil Message, sent only by one Man, acquainted the Lord Mayor that his Entering within the Liberties bred Offence, and desired him to remember the Freedom of the Place. That he neither by Word, Message, or any Action, commanded or consented to any Violence, being offered to the

Lord

The Tower of London.

Lord Mayor, or Sheriffs, or any of their Company; but did his Endeavour to appease the Tumult, in a peaceable Manner. That he put his own Life in Danger, by going to suppress the Disorder, and both restrain'd his own, and her Majesty's Servants, from offering any Violence; and, with his own Hands, drew them, and held them, within the Gates of the Tower. That the Messenger he sent to the Lord Mayor, in a courteous Manner, was assaulted, and ill used; and, that what Violence was offered, came from the Lord Mayor's Company. All which he was ready to aver and prove, before the Lords of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council.

THE Business of settling the Bounds between the City and the Tower, was not determined in the Year 1591; altho' the Lord Treasurer had given Promise, that there should speedily be issued forth a Commission for that Purpose. This Sir William Webb, Mayor, by Letter, earnestly intreated him to, saying, It might otherwise be a Cause of Trouble and Dissention hereafter, when the Officers of both Places should have Occasion to visit their said Bounds, according to Order. In this Letter, the Lord Treasurer wrote, with his own Hand, the Names of the Persons to whom the abovesaid Commission should be directed, viz. the Queen's two Chief Justices, Chief Baron Fortescue, and the Master of St. Catharine's.

IN the Mayoralty of Sir John Spenser, in the Year 1595, the Affair was not adjusted: For certain Apprentices, in the Month of June, rising again in a tumultuous Manner in several Parts of the City, and chiefly taking their Shelter here, the Mayor, with the Sword-Bearer, and other Officers, came to suppress them; but the Lieutenant's Men hurt the Sword-Bearer, and pulled down his Sword, although the Lieutenant was present: Of which he complained to the Lord Treasurer.

THE Bounds in Dispute, were at Little-Tower-Hill, the Postern, and East-Smithfield, on one Side; and on the other, the Extent of Tower-Hill, and towards Barking Church. The Particulars of which will appear, by a Paper in the Tower, entitled,

Points of Controversy between the City and Lieutenant of the Tower, and other Officers there, as yet, remaining undecided.

I. IT is said for the City, That the Postern Gate in the End of London-Wall, near the Tower of LONDON, is the City's: And that the Houses built upon, and near unto the said Wall and Postern, are the City's, and were all built by the City; and that the City had, and ought to have, the Profit and Jurisdiction thereof: Wherein the City is disturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

II. THAT all the void Ground within the Postern-Gate of London-Wall, near the Tower of LONDON, viz. the whole Hill, and Ground where the Scaffold standeth for the Execution of Traitors, and where the Sheriffs of LONDON receive Prisoners from the Tower to be executed, (from which Place the Bound-Stone is removed, by Mr. Lieutenant's Command) with the Water-Gate, and the Gardens under London-Wall, and certain Houses and Sheds built upon the Soil there, are the City's, and within the Liberties and Freedom of the City of LONDON, and within the Parish of Albion-Barking, in the Ward of the Tower of LONDON; and so, Time out of Mind, have been, and of Right ought to be. And that the City hath had, and ought to have, the Jurisdiction thereof: Wherein they are likewise disturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

N<sup>o</sup> 5. VOL. I.

III. THAT the whole Ground and Soil, called the Tower-Hill, without the Postern-Gate, being Parcel of East-Smithfield, is the City's, and within the Liberties, Suburbs, and Freedom of the City: And that the City hath had, and ought to have, the Profits and Jurisdiction thereof. Wherein they are likewise disturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

IV. WHERE Mr. Lieutenant holdeth Plea in the Court of the Tower, for all Matters of Debt, Trespasses, &c. be the same never so great, the Truth is, that that Court is only a Court Baron, and no Court of Record: And no Plea ought there to be holden for any other Matter, than may ordinarily be holden in the Court Baron at the Common Law.

V. THERE be Exactions unjustly required and taken of Victuallers, bringing Victuals, Fuel, and other Things by Water to the City; which are taken by the Officers of the Tower, in the Name of Prizage, directly contrary to the Liberties of the City, granted by her Majesty's Progenitors, and confirmed by her Majesty.

VI. THERE be Exactions unjustly required and taken at the common Watergate, near the Tower, of Citizens, and others, bringing Joiners Ware, and other Stuff, over the Water, from Southwark, and other Places; which was ever wont to be free, and no such Exactions used to be taken there.

VII. THERE be other Exactions also demanded and taken of Poor, and others, for drying of Cloaths, whitning of Cloths, and such like, both within and without LONDON Walls; which was also wont to be free, and no such Exactions used to be taken.

THERE is another Paper, entitled,

A brief Note, or Abstract of Proofs, on the Part of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, touching the Differences between the Lieutenant and them.

I. CONCERNING the Postern. It appears by divers Accounts, beginning Anno 32 Edward I. and so continuing till Anno 7 Henry VIII. That the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, did repair the Postern, and provided Locks and Keys for it, and scowred the Ditch there, to their great Charge. That it was called sometime Posterna apud Turrem; sometimes juxta Turrem, and sometime the Postern in the Tower Ditch.

THAT they appointed Keepers of it, [the Postern-Gate] as all other Gates of the City; and in Time of Danger, appointed Men to guard it: And they sometimes gave Charge to these Keepers, that they suffered not Leprous Persons to enter into it; viz. 5 Edward II. and 19 Edward III.

IN the 29th of Henry VIII. there was made a Presentment by the Wardmote Inquest of LONDON, That the Dwellers there, were common Bawds; and that they lodged suspicious Persons; using these Words, The Postern within our Ward.

THE Lieutenant of the Tower, in Answer to this, said, That the Citizens had a Postern, but it was not this now in Question, but a Postern in another Place further to the North in London-Wall. To which the City replied, That by all Proofs, the Postern which the City had, must be a Place of Building and Habitation: But the supposed Place never was but a Bulwark of Stone; which some few Years past was taken down, as was testified by Witnesses. Again, the Postern which the City had, must be a Place of common Passage in and out of the City; which the supposed Postern never was, nor ever could be; for it

it was an Entry into the Bulwark now decayed ; and the great Tower-Ditch lieth along to it, which could be no Passage, nor ever was, by Bridge, or otherwise.

Also, it must be at the Tower Ditch, as the Evidence doth plainly appear ; which the supposed Place is not.

MOREOVER, Mr. Lieutenant did make no Proof for the Postern, but only since King Edward the IVth's Time ; and that only a Proof of Possession, viz. that they have Leased it, and held it ever since. Whereas, indeed, the Controversy hath been as old between the City and them, at the least ; and therefore their Possession, no quiet Possession. And so great and old an Adversary as the Lieutenant of the Tower being in Possession, is not easily gotten out, especially shadowing himself under Colour of defending the Queen's Right.

II. TOUCHING the Soil of the Tower-Hill, both within and without the Postern.

THAT it was proved in the City's Behalf from Time to Time, that they have mended the Way on the Hill within the Postern, and erected, and mended the Scaffold, Gallows, and the Gibbets thereon. And when some other Persons, Anno 8. Edward 4. erected Gallows there, the King, by his Proclamation disclaimed it, and commanded it should be taken in Derogation of the Franchises, Liberties, and Privileges of the City. That it was not till the 6th of Edward IV. they did lease Gardens here, and received Rents for the same. That in that Year of King Edward IV. they granted the Queen certain Grounds at Tower-Hill near the Postern, to build a Chapel on, and from thence the Rents of the City's Gardens ceased, and the Queen's Majesty holdeth the Grounds to this Day.

THAT Presentments have been made before the Coroner of LONDON, touching the Death of Men on Tower-Hill, and in the Tower-Ditch, named in each Place in some Parish in LONDON.

THAT the Parishioners of Barking in the Tower-Ward, LONDON, had used in their Perambulation to compass the Tower-Hill within the Postern.

THAT the Sheriffs of LONDON have usually received Prisoners out of the Tower, at a Stone near Outergate or Bulwark, to which Place the Liberties of the City reached ; but by Order of some of the Lieutenants of the Tower, that Stone was taken away.

THAT touching the Tower-Hill without the Postern, it appeared in 19 Edward II. That the City was at Charge to make a Ditch there at the Postern. That in 13 Richard II. the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens, sold to the Abbot of Grace's, (which is at the farthest Part of the said Tower-Hill toward the East) two waste Pieces of Ground, lying on Tower-Hill, on the West Part of the Abbey. That divers antient Presentments had been made within LONDON, of Encroachments committed in that Place, in 21 Henry VII. and in 21 and 22 Henry VIII. That the Watering-Place at the End of the Tower-Ditch, next to the Postern, was defective for Want of Rails ; and the Reparation belonged to the Chamber of LONDON. It appeared by antient Accounts, that the Tower-Ditch, without the Postern, and certain Vaults and Sewers, near the Postern, were cleansed at the Charge of the City. And that at this Day, (when the Controversy was on Foot, which was in Queen Elizabeth's Reign,) and Time out of Mind, the City held and leased out divers Gardens, lying upon the Postern, where Houses were then newly built.

III. TOUCHING the Watergate. In 3 Edw. IV. It was, by Act of Common-Council, appointed to be one of the Places where Rush-Boats should be brought for Sale of Rushes.

THE same Watergate, and the Places near joining to it, had from Time to Time been paved at the Charge of the City.

THE better to understand the Pleas on both Sides, here followeth,

The Lieutenant of the Tower his Answer to the City's Breviate.

THAT the City by their first Article challenged a Postern situated, as in their own Records is specified, sometimes juxta, sometimes prope, sometimes apud Turrim, which proves, that the Precinct of the Tower Liberty should extend to the Postern ; but assigned no certain Place where the said Postern was seated.

THAT the second and third Articles made nothing to their Titles. For that they made no direct Proof where that Postern stood, other than the Postern described in their antient Map ; which is most probable the Postern, whereunto they did make their Challenge. Their Presentment in Wardmote can give them no Title to the Queen's Soil.

It is not confessed, that the City had a Postern near the Postern now in Question ; and it is absolutely denied, that any Postern should be a common Passage, but in the right of Nature ought to be a small Sally only, to view the outward Part of the Wall, and the Ditch, or for some privy Way of Passage along the Ditch in Time of Danger.

To all their Allegations it is reply'd, That their Proofs, being only out of their own Manuscripts, and Memorials, are not of Force sufficient to disinherit any Subject of his just Possession and Title, much less her Majesty.

As for the Mark-Stone, where the Sheriff used to receive the Prisoners, which they would infer to be the City Boundary, it was no Bound Stone, but a loose Stone. And the Boundaries of LONDON had always the City Arms, or other Mark set on them, which this had not, neither could have, being so small.

THEIR fee'd Chronicler, Mr. Stow, in setting out the Boundaries of the Liberty of Cree-Church, within Aldgate, lately sold, by the Lord Thomas Howard, to the City, doth abuttal it thus, viz. From Aldgate unto the Gate of the Bailiffs of the Tower, called Congate, and all the Lane, called Chick-Lane, &c. By this, it appeareth, that the Tower had a Postern, and a Gate next unto East-Smithfield, which can be no other but the Tower-Postern, now in her Majesty's Possession.

IN 9 Edward II. the Mayor of LONDON, John Gisors, and Citizens, submit themselves to the King's Pleasure, for breaking down the King's Mud Wall, over-against the outward Part of the King's Tower. And in the 10th Year of the said King, they paid a Fine of a thousand Marks for the Offence, and repaired the Wall.

FOR Herbage of the Place, without the Tower, there was answer'd unto the King, upon an Account in 16 Edward II. for one Year 3 s. 6 d. And in 29 Edward II. pro Herbagio unius Place extra Posternam veteram, v. Sol. i. e. For Herbage of a Place without the old Postern, 5 s.

De Siccatione Pellium in East-Smithfield, nichil hoc Anno de eo quod propter Perturbationem Hominum Civitatis omnotam, nichil inde levare potuerit, i. e. Concerning drying Pells in East-Smithfield, nothing this Year, for nothing could be levied thence, by reason of a Disturbance raised by the Citizens.

Anno 20 Edward. II. usque ad Annum primum Edward. III. xi li.

De Herbagio Placeæ extra Posternam, seu de Pellibus siccandis super Placeas in East-Smithfield, extra Portam ejusdem Turris, non respond. Temp. Prædict.

Anno 2 Edward. III. xi li.

THE free Chapel of St. Mary Grace's, is abutted by Record to lie next the Tower of LONDON, 25 Edward III. 36 Henry III.

THE King granted to the Abbot of St. Mary Grace's, juxta Turrim, all his Tenements in the Parish of St. Botolph's without Aldgate, between the Place called Tower-Hill, and East-Smithfield on the North Part, and a green Place of the King's Land there on the South Part, 36 Edw. III.

THE King granted to the Master, Brothers and Chaplain, and Sisters of St. Catherine's, that they for ever should have one Fair upon Tower-Hill, over-against the Abbot of Grace's, upon the King's Ground, in all Places thereof; 20 Henry VI.

IT was presented by the Inquest, sworn before Sir Anthony Kyngeston, Knight, High Constable of the Tower, that the King's Ground and Liberty of the Tower, did begin at the Watergate next the Ram's-Head in Petty Wales, and so stretched North unto a Mud Wall, called Pyke's Garden, now being Rafe Johnson's, on this Side the Crutched Fryars, and so strait East unto the Wall of LONDON; with nine Gardens above the Postern, and above the Broken Tower, right unto the midst of Hog-Lane End, and so strait unto the Thames; and then six Feet without the Stairs at the East Gate of the Tower, towards St. Catharine's, 27 Henry VIII.

By all which it appears, that the Precinct of the Tower, begins at the Tower Dock, and extends unto the End of Tower-street, and so is described to lie juxta Barking Church on the West Side, juxta Crutched Fryars on the North, juxta St. Mary Grace's and St. Catharine's on the East; juxta can have no other Construction, but Con-junctim, i. e. Put between: And therefore LONDON is secluded to have any Soil of Liberty between Barking Church, and Crutched Fryars, St. Mary Grace's, and St. Catharine's.

WE are now to look within the Tower, which is a Parish of itself, and the Church is called St. Peter's ad Vincula, within the Tower. It is said some Time to be the Rectory, some Time the Chapelry of St. Peter's. The Bounds of this Parish are the whole Compass of the Tower, and some Ground without, as Little Tower-Hill, which was therefore called the King's Soil of Little Tower-Hill, joining to which was a Place called the King's Waste of Rosemary-Lane, or Hog-Lane: But these Boundaries have been an old Controversy between the Magistrates of the City and the Officers of the Tower.

THIS Church is situate at the North West Angle of Northumberland Walk, at the End of the new Armoury, and fronting the Parade; its Walls are built of bolder and squared Stone, and its Roof supported by Arches and Columns of the Gothick Order; the Floor is paved with Stone, and there are two Isles.

THE East End, and more than half down the Sides, is wainscotted, and the Pillars cased with Oak about eight Feet high; it is also pewed, and the Pulpit and Altar-piece are all of the same Wood, the latter is about 14 Feet high, with a Cornish and Pediment, but the Decalogue is not there depenciled, tho' the Tables are arched, as those usually for the Commandments, and placed under a Cherub between two Festoons, &c. The Roof is ceiled with Timber. The Dimensions are, Length 66 Feet, Breadth 54, Altitude about 24.

THE Living is a Rectory in the Gift of the King, valued at about 60 l. per Annum; the present Incumbent is the Reverend Mr. Hawkins, paid by the King, as Minister of the Tower Garrison, rated in the King's Books 18 l. 3 s. 4 d. There is no Lecture, nor Organ, Prayers are Wednesdays, Fridays, and Holidays, about eleven. The Rector hereof has no Institution and Induction, and the Living is exempt from Archiepiscopal Jurisdiction.

THE antient Titlies and Benefits belonging to the Rector of this Church, appears in Part by an old Record, 8 Henry V. Pro Joanne Salmonby Restore Capelle in Turre, &c. whereby is granted to him 60 s. Rent, and the Appurtenances in Candlewick-street, LONDON, for and towards his Subsistence 38 s. 8 d. for that Tenement on Tower-Hill and Little Wales, 58 s. per Annum; from the Hospital of St. Catharine's 10 Marks per Annum, paid by the Constable of the Tower; and 20 s. per Annum of his good Will; 13 s. per Annum from the Master of the Mint; and of every Artificer and Stipendiary a certain Tithe out of their Wages and Stipends. This Church is commonly called St. Peter's in the Tower, and antiently called The Free Chapel of St. Peter's in the Tower. The Incumbent of it was called the Rector of St. Peter's. Several Chaplains also belonged to it, to perform sacred Offices. All which were presented by the King.

THUS in 21 Edw. IV. the Rectory was granted to William Fitz Herbert, Clerk, by Patent for Term of his Life. King Edward III. seems to have been the Founder. For it appears by the Tower Records, that in the 28th of his Reign, for the Rector and three Chaplains, there appointed by the King, he granted certain Rents, at a certain Custom of Stabotes or Stalvotes, which were a kind of Fisher Boats. And two Years after, to wit, in the 30th of his Reign, he added two Chaplains more. And for the Maintenance of the Rector, and five Chaplains of this St. Peter's, there were granted by the King certain Allowances to be paid for some Tenements in LONDON, and at Tower-Hill and Petty Wales. And moreover, Fees of the Constable, and of the Officers, and of the Moneyers. And in the 36th of the same King Edward the Founder, he granted a Chaplainship. Concess. Tho. de O. unam perpetuam Capellaniam sive Cantariam, i. e. To Thomas de O. one perpetual Chaplainship, or Chantry in the Chapel there. And lastly, there is, 27 Henry VI. a Confirmation of the King's Grants and Donations to the Rector here.

THIS Church, no doubt, was formerly very large and spacious, since the Kings sometimes went thither themselves to their Devotions. In Henry III's Time, here were two Stalls for the King and Queen: And it had two Chancels belonging to it. The Chancel of St. Peter, and the Chancel of St. Mary. It was adorned also with St. Mary and her Shrine, and with the Images of St. Peter, St. Nicholas, and St. Catharine. There is a Letter mandatory from the King to the Keeper of the Tower Works, in the 25th Henry III. Anno 1241, for the Repair; and farther adorning this Church; which runs thus:

SIR Richard Cholmondeley, ſometime Lieutenant of the Tower, in the Reign of Henry VII.

HERE is a Monument erected to the Memory of him and his Wife, which ſtood formerly in the Middle of the Church; but hath been removed to the Side, againſt the North Wall. His Figure is in Armour; and hath a Collar gilded, which ſeems to be a Collar of SS about his Neck, and a Roſe hanging before. Upon the Edges of the Stone, the Figure lies upon, is this Inſcription. Jacent Corpora Richardi Cholmondeley Militis, & Domine Elifabethæ Conjugis

ſue. Qui - - - Quorum omnibus Deus propitictur. Amen.

John Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter, who was beheaded on Tower-Hill, the 22d of June 1535.
 His Body was firſt buried in the Church-yard of Albhalloes Barking, and afterwards removed hither.

SIR Thomas Moore, Lord Chancellor of England, beheaded at the ſame Place, on the 6th of July 1535; but his Corpſe was afterwards removed from hence to the Church of Chelſea, in Middleſex, by his Daughter Roper.

George Bullen, Lord Rockford, beheaded on the 17th of May 1536, on Tower-Hill.

Anna Bullen, Wife to King Henry VIII. beheaded two Days after, viz. on the 19th of May 1536, on a Scaffold erected on the Green within the Tower, being accused of Inceſt and Adultery with her own Brother, George Lord Rockford, above-mentioned, who, it is ſaid, coming to her Bed-ſide to ſollicit a Suit, leaned down to whiſper her in the Ear, which the Spies gave out he did to kiſs her; but it is the moſt probable, that the Inſtruments of the Pope were the Con-trivers of the Crimes laid to the Charge of this Queen, who gave great Encouragement to thoſe of the reformed Religion; and that her Death was rather fought after, than merited by her, ſeems very likely, from the King’s being married to the Lady Jane Seymour, the next Day after her Death.

Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Effex, who, from a Blackſmith’s Son at Putney, came to be a great Favourite of King Henry VIII. but at laſt loſt his Head on Tower-Hill, and was here buried,
Anno 1540.

Catharine Howard, the fifth Wife of King
Henry VIII. beheaded on Tower-Hill, on the 13th of February 1541.

Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerſet, who was beheaded on Tower-Hill, January the 24th, 1552.

John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, who loſt his Head at the ſame Place, on the 22d of Auguſt, 1553.

ON the North Side of the Altar of this Church, is a very ſtately Monument, with Columns and Entablement of the Corinthian Order, in Memory of Sir Richard and Sir Michael Blount, both ſucceſſively Lieutenants of the Tower. Sir
Richard died the 11th of Auguſt, 1564; and Dame Mary, Wife of Sir Michael Blount, one of the Co-heirs of Thomas Moor of Biſſiter, died
December the 22d, 1592.

THERE is on the Pavement, an engraven Stone for Cobham Doves, of Dover, Mariner, the 20th of Auguſt, 1608.

ON the South Side of the Chancel is a Marble Monument in Memory of Sir Allen Apsley, Knt.
 fourteen Years Lieutenant of the Tower, and one and twenty Viſtualler of the Royal Navy. He died the 24th of May, 1630.

CLOSE by this are the Buſto’s of a Man and a Woman, and the Figures of two very young Children, cumbant on their Left-Side, adorned with the Figures of two Cupids cut in Marble, but with no Inſcription.

ON the Pavement is a Stone for John Agges, Yeoman, Warder of the Tower 33 Years: Died
 the 20th of January, 1640.

ANOTHER for Frances, Wife of *William
 Povey*, Gent. and Daughter of Edward Sherborn, Eſq; Clerk of the Ordnance. She died October
 the 22d, 1669.

AND one for Talbot Edwards, late Keeper of his Maſteſty’s Regalia; 30th of September 1674.
 Aged 80.

ON the North Side of the Church is a neat black and white Marble Monument, adorned with two Chambers of Cannon, inſtead of Columns,

lums, adorn'd with the Figure of a Ship under Sail, done in Basso Relievo; also a Cherub, Cartouches, &c. with this Inscription done in Gold Letters on Black Marble.

“ Erected in Memory of Captain Valentine Pyne, late Master-Gunner of England; second Son of George Pyne, of Currimallet, in the County of Somerset, Gent. who following the Footsteps of his Father, in Loyalty and Obedience to his Sovereign, trailed a Pike, under the Command of his said Father, in the late Expedition at Calais, in the Year 1625; and in the Year 1627, in the Expedition of the Isle of Rhee. After that he betook himself to his Majesty's Fleet, where he serv'd at Sea till the late unhappy Rebellion, and during that Rebellion, in his Majesty's Service by Land; after whose Death he voluntarily followed the Command of Prince Rupert, for the Space of fifteen Years, both in his Expedition at Sea, and in the Wars of Germany, till his now Majesty's happy Restoration; since which Time, he commanded some of his Majesty's Ships in the first War against the Dutch: And in Recompence of his faithful Service, his Majesty was graciously pleased to elect him Master-Gunner of England. In which Capacity he departed this Life, (which he led single) the last Day of April, Anno Dom. 1677. in the 28th Year of his Majesty's Reign. Aged 74 Years.

AGAINST a Pillar fronting Southward, is a great white Marble Monument, enriched with Trophy Work, an Urn, Cherub, and Palm Branches, with this Inscription:

M. S.

“ JONÆ MORI Equitis aurati, in agro Lancastriensi apud Vicum Whitelee nati viii die Februarii, Ann. à partu Virginis MDCXVII.

UNDER the Communion-Table lies the Body of James Scott, Duke of Monmouth, Natural Son to King Charles II. who some, indeed, pretend was married to the Duke's Mother, altho' the King declared the contrary in the Publick Gazette.

THIS unfortunate Gentleman coming over from Holland in a hostile Manner, and levying War against King James II. lost his Head for the same on Tower-Hill, on July the 15th 1685, the very next Day after his being brought to Town, having been routed and taken at the Battle of Sedgmore.

ALSO within the Altar Rails, was buried George Lord Jefferies, Baron of Wem, Lord Chancellor of England, who, when he was Lord Chief Justice, being sent into the West, with a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, to try and judge those who had been concerned in the Rebellion against King James II. condemned and executed such Numbers of Men, that he made it his Boast, “ That he had hanged more Men; than all the Judges of England since William the Conqueror.

AFTER the Revolution, being committed Prisoner to the Tower, he died there, as some will have it, of Grief, at the latter End of the Year 1688.

AT the North East Angle of the Church, a Monument of white Marble, with his Bust, is erected for William Bridges, Esq; on which is this Inscription;

TO the MEMORY of “ William Bridges, Esq; late Inhabitant of this Place, and Surveyor-General of the Ordnance.

“ IN that, and other considerable Offices, thro' which he passed, at different Times, a diligent and faithful Servant to the Crown, and to his Country in Parliament; assiduous in publick Business, and, in his private Life, possessing an happy Equality of Temper, adorned with exemplary Sobriety and Virtue. He died October 30, 1714, and lies buried at the East End of this Chapel.

“ Elizabeth Bridges, his only surviving Sister and Executrix, hath caused this Monument to be erected, as a grateful Memorial of the best of Friends and Brothers. Anno Dom. 1716.

IN the Pavement in the South Isle is a Stone with this Inscription:

“ HERE lies the Body of Mrs. Rebecca Silvester, the youngest Daughter of Mr. Thomas and Sarah Silvester, who departed this Life the 7th of January 1717, aged 16 Years, 3 Months, and 3 Days.

NEAR that, another with the following Inscription:

“ HERE lieth the Bodies of Elizabeth and Hannah, Daughters of John and Elizabeth Jones, of the Tower. They departed this Life, Elizabeth on the 6th of August 1704; and Hannah on the 31st of January 1706: As also the Body of Mr. John Bristow, who departed this Life the 30th of November 1718.

How soon alas! for in his early Bloom,
In Prime of Life he meets an earthly Tomb;
As by the Number of his Days appears,
Which reach'd but just to one and twenty Years.
O! where's that stubborn Soul that can forbear,
Hearing this Loss, and not let fall a Tear?

NEAR the Communion-Table is a Stone, thus inscribed,

" HERE lies the Body of Mr. Edward Silvester, eldest Son of Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Sarah Silvester, who departed this Life, the 12th of October, 1718, in the 28th Year of his Age.
" ALSO the Body of Thomas Silvester, the youngest Son of Thomas and Sarah Silvester, who departed this Life, the 27th Day of May, 1727, in the 28th Year of his Age.

A little lower in the South Isle, on a white Marble Stone in the Pavement, is this Inscription.

" HERE lies Catharine, the beloved Wife of the Honourable Colonel Williamson, Deputy-Lieutenant of the Tower, who lived esteem'd, and died lamented by all who knew her, March the 25th, 1729.

IN the same Isle, a whole Family lies buried under a Stone with this Inscription.

" To the Memory of Elizabeth, Wife of James Whittaker, who died September the 11th 1731, aged 39; and of William, their second, and Thomas, their third Son. And to the Memory of James Whittaker, eldest Son of the said James and Elizabeth, who died April the 7th, 1732, aged 9.

Memor esto brevis ævi.

" AND to the Memory of James Whittaker, Gent. Husband of the abovesaid Elizabeth, and Father of the said Children, who died December the 4th, 1732, aged 39.

The Beautiful, the Innocent, the Young,
Here, in promiscuous Dust, together lie,
Reflect on this, depart, and learn to die.

THE last Person mention'd on this Grave-Stone died of the Bite of a Mad Dog.

BESIDES the Chapel or Church of St. Peter, there was formerly another Chapel, in the White Tower, for the more private Use of the Kings and Queens when they resided in the Tower. This ascends by a great many Steps; it is dark and venerable for the Pillars, which are very antique. The Use it is at present put to, is for repositing the old Records; but in antient Times, when it was used, as a Chapel, Care was taken for the Repairs thereof, as was for that of St. Peter's. And King Henry III. the same Day that he order'd the Repairs of the latter, did the same for this Chapel of St. John, for that was the Saint it was dedicated to; as appears by this Record.

Rex Custodibus Operationis Turris LONDON. Sal. precipimus vobis, &c. Wherein, after Command given for amending the Leaden Gutters, and doing other Things needful for the Great Tower, he proceeded to require them also to take Care of the Repair, and Adorning of the Chapel there.

" DEALBARI etiam faciatis totam Capellam Sancti Johannis Evangelistæ, in eadem Turri. Et fieri faciatis in eadem Capella tres Fenestras vitreas, unam Scil. ex Parte Boreali cum quadam Mariola tenente Puerum suum, reliquam in Parte Australi (cum Imagine) de Trinitate; & tertiam de Sancto Johanne Apostolo & Evangelista in eadem Parte Australi. Et depingi faciatis Patibulum & Tribem ultra Altare ejusdem Capel. benè & bonis Coloribus. Et fieri faciatis & depingi duas Imagines pulchras, ubi melius & decentius fieri possint in eadem Capell. unam de Sancto Edwardo tenente anulum, et donante et tenente Sancto Johan. Evangelista, &c.

THAT is, " And that ye cause the whole Chapel of St. John Evangelist in the said Tower to be whited. And that ye cause three Glass Windows in the same Chapel to be made; to wit, one on the North Side, with a certain Little Mary holding her Child; the other on the South Part, with the Image of the Trinity, and the third of St. John the Apostle and Evangelist on the same South Part; and that ye cause the Cross and the Beam (i. e. the Rood) beyond the Altar of the same Chapel, to be painted well, and with good Colours. And that ye cause to be made and painted two fair Images, where more conveniently and decently they may be done in the same Chapel, one of St. Edward holding a Ring, and giving and reaching it out to St. John Evangelist, &c.

DENOTING thereby, perhaps, that King to be Founder of the Chapel; and this the Ceremony in those Days of dedicating holy Places to the Saints.

Of the GOVERNOR and Principal OFFICERS of the Tower.

THE Chief Officer of the Tower of LONDON is called the Constable, which is a Post of high Honour as well as great Trust. Othowerus was the first Constable, in the Reign of King Stephen; and Acolivillus, Otto, Godfrey Magnaville, Earl of Essex, his Successors in the same Reign.

Henry Fitz-Aucher, and Othou, were Constables of the Tower in the Reign of Henry III. but an exact List of all the Persons, who have enjoyed this high Trust is not to be come at; however, the five following are mentioned in a Patent of King Richard II. granted to Sir Thomas Murriens, viz. John Darcy, John de Beauchamp, Robert le Morle, Richard la Vache, and Alan de Buxhil. John Holland, Duke of Exeter, was Constable of the Tower, in the Reigns of King Henry V. and King Henry VI.

IN the first Year of the Reign of Richard III. Robert Brackenbury, Esq; was constituted Constable of the Tower, for his Life; but an extraordinary Command was once issued out from the King to him, to surrender up the Keys of the Tower (which was in Effect to give up all his Power) to Sir James Tyrrel, only for the Space of a Night, for the ordering of some special Matters there. Which was in Truth, to murder the two young Princes, Edward and Richard. Which the said Constable, being privately dealt with about the Business, honourably declined. But Tyrrel, a Man of a more profligate Conscience, undertook; and for that Purpose was in a sort Constable of the Tower for that black Night. To this Knight the Constable of the Tower.

the King was very bountiful, and conferred on him many Lands and Offices, if they could but have made his Mind easy under the Weight of his Guilt.

Brackenbury, altho' he had the Constableship for Life, was, notwithstanding, discharged in the Year 1585, the 1st of Henry VII. and a Nobleman, viz. the Earl of Oxford, succeeded him in that honourable Employment.

SIR Thomas Lovel was Constable under the Reign of Henry VIII. and afterwards, when Anna Bullen was committed to the Tower, Sir Anthony Kyngeston was Constable.

IN the Reign of King Edward VI. Sir John Gage, Knight, was Constable, a Man of great Quality, sometime Comptroller of the Household to King Henry VIII. afterwards a Privy Counsellor to the same Prince. In the Month of October 1552, were Articles and Ordinances established by the King's Majesty for Sir John Gage, Constable of the Tower, and Sir Edward Warner, Lieutenant, and the Yeomen of the Guard, with others appointed to give Attendance in the Tower of LONDON, for the sure keeping of the same, to be observed and kept upon Pains therein limited; but towards the latter End of that Reign he was discharged, by the Interest of the great Duke of Northumberland, who then govern'd all things; and Clinton, Earl of Lincoln, Lord Admiral, towards the very Conclusion of King Edward's Life, was placed there politickly by the said Duke, as Constable, supposing him his assured Friend and Creature, the better to bring to bear the Pretensions of Lady Jane Grey to the Crown, who was married to the Duke's Son: But he was deceived, for that Earl soon turned to the Lady Mary's Interests, and made his former Mistress, Queen Jane, his Prisoner. And when Queen Mary came to the Throne, she replaced Sir John Gage.

Anno 1552, May the 28th, a Patent was granted to Sir Edward Bray, Knight, of the Constableship of the Tower, in Reversion, after the Death of Gage, with the Annual Fee of 100 l. durante Vita.

THE Constable had many great Privileges due to him from the Ships of the Merchants of LONDON, viz. from every Ship laden with Wines coming into the Port of LONDON, one Flagon of Wine before the Mast, and another behind it. From every Boat laden with Oysters, Muscles, or Cockles, one Maund. From every Boat laden with Rushes, an Armfull. Every Ship, Barge, Boat, or other Vessel, belong'd to him, that was straying upon the Banks of the Thames, between Gravesend and London-Bridge, if no Person was found in the same. Every Swan, or Cygnet, which came, or returned, upon the said Banks in swimming, from the said Bridge to Gravesend. Every Beast, that by Misfortune, fell into the Water of the Thames, swimming between the aforesaid Bounds, without the Protection of any, &c.

UPON certain Liberties and Franchises being granted by King Richard II. to the Citizens, they refused to allow these Duties to the Constable: Whereupon, Sir Thomas Murrieux, Constable, petitioned the said King, who issued out his Proclamation, that the before-mention'd Privileges of the Constable should be in Force, notwithstanding any thing granted to the City; and this was ratified by Parliament, as appears by the following Instrument.

" Nos de Avisamento & Assensu Prælatorum

Convenit cum Recordo.

THIS was a second Instrument granted to Sir Thomas Murrieux, to ratify his Privileges, as Constable of the Tower, in Consequence of a Petition from him to the King and Parliament, upon their being disputed by the City. The former Grant of King Richard II. was three Years before; that is, in the sixth Year of his Reign; directed to the Mayor and Commons of the City, to this Effect in English:

" RICHARD, by the Grace of God,
" King of England and France, and Lord of " Ireland, to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LON-" DON, sendeth Greeting. Forasmuch as we " have understood, that the Constables of our " Tower of LONDON, Time out of Mind,
" even to the Time now last past; and in parti" cular John Darcy, John de Beauchamp, Ro" bert le Morle, Richard la Vache, and *Alan de
" Buxhil*, heretofore Constables of the said
" Tower, have had the Customs, Pence, and " Profits under-written, by Right belonging to
" the aforesaid Tower, and in quiet Manner
" taken them by themselves, or their Servants:
" To wit, of every Boat laden with Rushes
" brought to the aforesaid City, such a Quantity " of Rushes to be laid upon Tower-Wharf, as " may be contained within a Man's Arms. Of " every Boat accustomed to bring Oysters, Mus" cles, and Cockles, to the aforesaid City, one
" Maund, thence to be brought and laid upon " the said Wharf. From every Ship laden with " Wines coming from Bordeaux, or elsewhere,
" unto the aforesaid City, one Flagon before the " Mast, and another behind the Mast: What" soever Ship, Barge, or Boat, or other Vessel,
" which shall go loose, by reason of Storm or
" Wind, or the Ropes and Cordage being broke,
" shall float from London-Bridge to Gravesend,
" or from thence to the said Bridge, to be taken " by the Constable of the said Tower, or his " Servants, and to be applied to the Use of the " said Constable. What Swans soever coming
" under the said Bridge, towards the Sea, or
" from the Sea towards the said Bridge; all Man" ner of Horses, Oxen, Cows, Hogs, and " Sheep, which have fallen from the said Bridge
" into the Water of Thames; which the aforesaid
" Constable, or his Servants, may take any " such like Creature swimming thorough the " Middle of the said Bridge, to the aforesaid
" Tower; which the same Constable, or his Ser" vants aforesaid, have taken. Of every Foot
" of such like Creature feeding within the Ditch
" of the said Tower, one Penny. Every Cart, " empty, or laden, which shall fall into the " aforesaid Ditches, as a Forfeiture, or Fee of " the said Constable. And that the aforesaid
" Constables, as well those before named as " others,

“ others, have used and enjoyed the Usages underwritten, from the Time before said; to wit, that no Cart, empty, or laden, ought to come from the End of the Street, called Petty Wales, upon the said Tower-Hill, nor near the aforesaid Ditch, to the High Street, called Tower-Street, unless it be taken and brought within the said Tower: And that no Cart shall pass beyond the Bridge between the Ditch of the said Castle, and the Ditch of the Hospital of St. Catharine's, without the Licence of the Constable of the said Tower; and if it do, and break the Bar, that Cart ought to be brought within the said Tower, and to make Satisfaction for the Transgression, according to the said Constable's Will.

“ WE willing to maintain all and singular the Rights and Liberties of our Tower aforesaid, that they perish not, or be unlawfully taken away, Command you, that you permit our beloved and loyal Sir Thomas Murrieux, now Constable of the Tower, to take and have the Customs, Pence and Profits by himself and his Servants in Form aforesaid, and to use and enjoy the aforesaid Usages freely, and without any Impediment, as he ought to take and have such Customs, Pence and Profits, and to use and enjoy the before said Usages; and he, and all other Constables of the said Tower have reasonably accustomed to take and have those Customs, Pence and Profits, and to use and enjoy the aforesaid Usages; and he and all other Constables of the said Tower have reasonably accustomed to take and have those Customs, Pence and Profits, and to use and enjoy the aforesaid Usages from the Time before said. And that by no Means neglect this. Witness myself at Eltham, the 16th Day of November, in the sixth Year of our Reign.

By the KING.

THIS caused the Struggle between the City and the Constables and Lieutenants of the Tower, till King James I. settled the Matter in Favour of the City.

THERE were certain Injunctions given the Constables by former Kings. In 11 Henry III. the King issued out his Command to the Constable of the Tower to compel those who brought Fish to sell in Ships to LONDON, to bring the said Fish to Queen-hith.

“ Quod Constabularius Turr. LONDON.
“ distingat eos qui ducunt Piscem venalem in “ Navibus usq. LONDON. & remanent
“ trans pontem LONDON, ex Parte Turris
“ ad ducendum dictum Piscem usq; Hitham “ Reginæ.

AND the Year before, Quod ducet Piscem venientem apud LONDON, ad ripans Reginæ vendendum.

THE Power of the Constable of the Tower extended to the five Ports, and to arrest their Ships in the Thames, if there were Occasion. A Precept was sent to him in the 9th of Henry III. to arrest those Ships in Time of Dearth of Corn, to prevent the Transportation of it.

IN 52 Henry III. the King commanded the Abbot of Westminster, carriare Buscam, Blada, & alia Victualia tam per Terr. quam per Aquam, usq. ad Abbiām predict. ita quod nulla inde fiat Priza ad Opus Regis. That is, to carry Brush or Underwood, Corn, and other Victuals, as well by Land as by Water, to the said Abbey; so that no Prizal be made to the King's Use.

IN 14 Edward II. there were Letters Patents for making Allowances to the Constables of the Tower, for the Wages of the King's Prisoners there, viz. For a Knight 2 d. a Day, and for an Esquire, one Penny.

IN 38 Edward III. there were Orders for the Constable of the Tower, to repair the Defects in the Water, or the Banks thereof, running from Ware to Waltham, and so to LONDON. This is the River Lee.

MR. STRYPE says, in a Manuscript he has, These Fees were order'd by Philip and Mary, in the second and third Years of their Reign, That the Constable shall have of their Majesties at the Receipt of the Exchequer for his Entertainment, the yearly Fee or Wages of 100 l. and 100 l. by the Year for the Diet of poor Prisoners, who have not wherewithal to pay for their Diets. So that the said poor Prisoners may be examined within seven Days after their coming into his Custody, and be discharged again from his Custody within seven Days after they have been examined.

THE said Constable shall have of every Duke, if there be any committed by their Majesties, to the said Tower, for the Suit of his Irons 20 l. and for a Marquis, 16 l. and for the Board of every such Duke or Marquis, weekly, 3 l. 10 s. and for the Chaplain's Board of every such Duke or Marquis every Week, 6 s. 8 d. and for every of his Gentlemen, 6 s. 8 d. and for every of his Yeomen waiting upon him, 5 s. before his Attainder, and after his Attainder, as their Majesties shall appoint.

Item, THE said Constable shall have for every Earl and Viscount, for the Suit of his Irons, 20 Marks; and for their Board, every Week, 46 s. 8 d. and for the Gentlemen and Yeomen, as in the Duke's Diet before the Attainder, and after at their Majesties Will.

Item, THE said Constable shall have for every Baron and Lord, of the Degree, as the younger Son of a Duke or Marquis, and for a Knight of the Garter, for the Suit of Irons 10 l. and for his Board weekly, 35 s. and for his Gentleman and Yeoman, as before.

Item, THE aforesaid Constable shall have for every other Knight or Gentleman, above 100 l. Estate, for Suit of his Irons, 5 l. and also for his Board, weekly, 23 s. 4 d. and for every of his Gentlemen and Yeomen, as before.

Item, THE said Constable shall have of every Gentleman of the Estate of 100 l. by the Year, and under, for the Suit of his Irons, 40 s. and his Board weekly, 17 s. 6 d. And other Men not having Lands and Possessions, and yet having Goods sufficient to find themselves, for Suit of Irons, 20 s. and for their Week's Board, 13 s. 4 d.

Item, ALL other to live of the House, except their Majesties appoint the same a better Diet by Warrant.

Item, THE Porter shall have, of every Prisoner commanded by the King's and Queen's Majesties for Treason to the said Tower, his uppermost Garment, or agree with him for it.

Item, HE shall have of every Person delivered out of the Tower 5 s.

Item, IT is ordered, That the Constable shall no more take Bedding, Goods, and Plate, or Money of any Person attainted, or not attainted, except that he may stay the same, for the Time that he be answer'd, and contented for his Fees and Diets, after the Rate aforesaid. And except that upon the Attainder of every such Prisoner, the said Constable, shall have their Wearing Apparel and Bedding of the same Prisoner so attainted, and the Plate and Jewels of the same, if any do remain, to be kept to their Majesties Use.

THESE Orders were made thro' the Queen's Frugality. For these Allowances to the Prisoners were for the most Part out of the Princes Purses.

What

What a Regulation and Reduction of the Fees this was, may appear to him that shall compare this Note of Fees following, brought in by the Lieutenant, in the Reign of King Edward VI. for the Duke of Norfolk, the Dutcheſs of Somerſet, and Edward Lord Courtney, eldeſt Son to the Marquis of Exeter executed, viz.

THRO' the long Reign of Queen Elizabeth, there was no Conſtable ſet over the Tower; but inſtead of it, a Lieutenant, who was an Officer ſubordinate to the Conſtable, had the chief Government of this important Place; and therefore was ſometime called the Conſtable's Lieutenant. The Tower Records mention John Chauncy, the Lieutenant to Holland, Duke of Exeter, in 31 Henry VI. and John Winwicke Lieutenant to the Conſtable of the Tower, 16 Edward III. to whom a Command came to this Purpoſe.

“Turr. LONDON: Rex Mandavit Jo“han. Winwike, Locumtenenti Conſtabulario “ejusdem, &c. W. L. Capital. Carpentar. ſuo
“quod reduci fac. Ingenium ſuum magnum ab “Sandwico uſque Turr. prædict. & ad Na-“ves arreſtand. & capiend. pro Veſtura, &c.
“ejusdem”. That is, Tower of LONDON,
The King hath commanded John Winwike, Lieutenant to the Conſtable of the ſame, and W. L.
his Chief Carpenter, to bring back his great Engine from Sandwich to the Tower aforeſaid, both to arreſt Ships, and to take for Fraught, &c. of the ſame.

THERE were Cuſtodes, or Keepers, ſometimes ſet over the Tower, who had the chief Power and Government of it, but only the Title not ſo high as that of Conſtable.

YET, Henry Fitz-Aucher, who was Conſtable of the Tower, had a particular Fee for keeping the Tower, which was 50*l.* per Annum. as if Conſtable and Cuſtos had been two ſeveral and diſtinct Places. The Record runs, “That this “Henry Fitz Aucher, Conſtable of the Tower, be “paid, ad Kaiam Regis, i.e. at the King's Key,
“before the Tower, 20*l.* 12 Henry III. and 50*l.*
“per Annum, for keeping the Tower, Anno 13
“Henry III.” And 14 Henry III. it is recorded,
VOL. I.

“That the Conſtable took 50*l.* for the Cuſtody
“of the ſaid Tower.

IN the 52d Year of Henry III. there was a Cuſtes both of the Tower and City too.

THIS King granting the keeping of his Tower, with the Appurtenances, and his City of LON-DON, to Thomas Ippreve, “Unà cum Arma“tur. inſtaurand. & Viſtualib. ſuis per Chirogra-“phum liberand.

SUCH another was Radulphus de Sandwich,
in the 13th of Edward I. “Turris LONDON, “cum Pertinentiis commiſſa Rad. de Sandwico, “quam diu Domino Rege placuerit. Ita quod

“carium. 13 Edw. I. Idem Rad. habet Cuſto“diam Civitat. LONDON, ut ſupra. Et “iterum, Anno 17.

AGAIN, William, Archbiſhop of York, was Cuſtos of the Tower, 1 Edward I. and there was Order for the Payment of 100*l.* for his Fee.

THESE Cuſtodes, or Keepers, were often changed: For in the 3d of Edward I. the Keeping of the Tower was granted by the King to Anthony Beke, durante bene placito, as Philip Baſſet before had it. And he was to receive 100*l.* per Annum for his ſaid Keeping.

AGAIN, The Cuſtody of the Tower of LON-DON was granted to John Crombwell, for the Term of five Years, and to take the Fees and Cuſ-toms: And it is commanded to Thomas Walter to deliver the ſame to him, by Indenture with the Appurtenances, together with the Arms, Viſtuals, and all other Things and Priſoners being there,
1 Edward III.

AGAIN, The Cuſtody of the Tower was granted to William de Monte Acuto, or Montague;
for Life, after the Death of John de Crombwell, 9 Edward III. And it was granted pro Michael de la Beche. Et Anno 20. pro Johan. Darcy.

AND for the Repairing of the King's Key, near the Tower of LONDON, it was commanded to the Keeper of the King's Foreſt of Windſor, That he cauſe John Crombwell, Keeper of the aforeſaid Tower, to have 300 Palos de Alneto, i. e. Pales, or Poles, from the Alderwood in the aforeſaid Foreſt. And it is commanded to the Sheriff of Berks, That he cauſe the ſaid Poles to be felled, and to be carried unto the Tower of LONDON, out of the Iſſues of the County.

LIEUTENANTS of the Tower.

THE firſt Lieutenant under Queen Elizabeth, Lieutenant of was Sir Edward Warner, who had been alſo in the Tower.
that Place under King Edward VI. In the Year
1562, he was deprived of this Truſt, and committed to Cuſtody, upon the coming together of the Earl of Hertford, and the Lady Catharine Grey, who had privately concluded a Marriage together, without the Queen's Conſent. And ſo were put into ſundry cloſe Priſons, not to come at one another; but they corrupted their Keepers.

THE next Lieutenant was Sir Owen Hopton, preferred to this Place by the Intereſt of the Lord Treafurer. He was an active and braveſpirited Man; but was complained of, as will be ſhewn, for ſome Neglects in his Truſt, in the Year 1572, being a Year of great Terror to the English Nation; fearing ſome Maſſacre, or Inſurrection, or Violence to be offered the Queen's Perſon: For in this Year happened the bloody Maſſacre of the Proteſtants in France, which aſto-niſhed this Kingdom. In this Year were two great Peers cut off, the Duke of Norfolk, and the Earl of Northumberland, for Treason and Rebellion. The Queen alſo fell Sick of the Small-pox. There were alſo great Apprehenſions from the Queen of Scots, and her Party, ſhe being then

then a Prisoner in England. These Uneasinesses and Fears made the People concerned for the Preservation of the Tower; and great Complaints were made to the Lords of the Council against Hopton, and of Matters in and about the Tower. As, that the said Lieutenant shewed the Warders that they were perjur'd if they did not first acquaint him of all Treasons, Conspiracies, or any other like Matters, that they should know or hear of, before they utter'd the same to any of the Queen's Council. Whereupon he took an Oath of all such Yeomen, as came of late to serve there under him.

THAT the Prisoners had much more Liberty to walk and meet upon the Leads of Cold-Harbour, and to go one to another, and also to send their Minds and Letters to their Friends, as they should think good; which had not heretofore been allowed of. Which Liberty they had by reason of such needy Persons as Mr. Lieutenant had appointed to be their Keepers, to whom he gave very little Wages to maintain them.

THAT there should be Seven-score Gunners belonging to the Tower, whereof there wanted a great Number. And that the most Part of them who took Wages were unskilful, so that if the Queen's Majesty should stand in Need of Service, she would be disappointed. And besides that, many of them were Papists.

THAT the Clerk of the Ordnance was a very rigid Papist.

THAT there wanted the most Part of such Warders, as ought to watch and ward, and to lie within the Tower: And the Hamlets did neither watch nor ward, according to their bounden Duties. For if the Tower-Ditch should be frozen, considering there were no better Order taken for the Defence of the same, and considering the State of the Time, and if Need should so require, it might be in great Danger. Wherefore all the Yeomen should be commanded, daily to wait, and to lie within the Tower every Night, for the Preservation of the same: Seeing the Watches of LONDON and St. Catharine's were not kept, as of late, but now most needful, until this Time be past.

It was likewise informed, That December the 29th, the Earl of Southampton stood leaping upon the Tower; his Wife being right over-against him, on the other Side of the Ditch: And when one Philip, a Gunner, seeing this, demanded, if this might be allowed; the Servants very angrily asked him, If he were therewithal offended?

THAT Command had been given by their Honours, That no great Ordnance should be shot off at any Time upon the Tower-Wharf, or about the Tower, except it were only for the Queen; notwithstanding, they continued, from Time to Time, Shooting off great Pieces. Which Pieces, were to be sold, or else lent to divers Persons, and with the Queen's own Powder, conveyed by them out of the Tower in Barrels. That this Shooting utterly marred the Wharf, being fore worn and shaken already, broke the Glass Windows, and loosed the Tiles of the Houses newly repaired.

FURTHER, That they did receive and discharge upon the same Wharf, divers Mens Goods, as Timber-Logs, Billets, Faggots, Rubbish, Hay, Straw, and other Things, and carry and re-carry the same with Carrs and Carts, which did greatly decay the Wharf, and wear the Queen's Cranes.

THAT they made a common Highway, with all Manner of Carriages, from St. Catharine's leading to the Minories: By reason whereof, the Way is greatly decayed, the Banks of the Tower-Ditch sunk, and the Ditch filled with Earth and Filth; whereas it was used to be chained betwixt two great Posts; and likewise by the Tower-Hill

there was another Chain with two great Posts by the Bulwark-Gate, for restraining all Carriages, save only for the Queen, by reason whereof the Banks there are greatly decayed, and the Ditch filled with Earth by the Sufferance thereof.

THIS was the Tenor of the Complaint, made at this dangerous Juncture against the Lieutenant, but he was not negligent to vindicate himself, by a Letter to the Lord Burleigh, his Friend and Advancer, vowing to GOD, that he served her Majesty, the more dutifully and painfully, because he was preferred by his Lordship, whom he loved and honoured; and descending to Particulars, he enumerated what he had done more than other Lieutenants before him.

SIR Owen Hopton continued Lieutenant a great while, till the Year 1590, when he deliver'd up this important Charge to Michael Blount, Esq; who was soon after Knighted. This Gentleman, in a Discourse he had with some of his intimate Friends, shewed the high Opinion he had of the Charge he was intrusted with; for he declared, if the Queen should die, and she was then very sick, that he should not think himself bound to obey any Counsellor, for then all Counsellors would be private Men; but would keep his Post till the Successor should be established, according to the Justice of his Title; and that he would permit none of the Officers of the Ordnance to enter into the Tower, unless they were sworn to take the same Side with himself; for then the whole Charge would be his, and because he looked upon several of the Warders to be Knaves, he would turn them out, and call the rest before him, and such as would not be sworn to obey him, as by their Oath, he said, they were obliged to, he would turn them out also, and supply their Places with his own Friends; that by this Means, and having Ammunition in his Power, he should be able to arm more than half the Realm beside. All this was testified by Edmond Newyl de Lattimer, Esq; before the Lord Cobham and Lord Buckhurst, two of the Privy Council appointed to examine him; he also testified that the Lieutenant had often asked him his Opinion how many Men would serve to keep the Tower, and what Course was best to take for victualling it. These Things looking very suspiciously, raised Jealousies in the State against him, and brought him into Trouble.

As to the modern State of this great Officer of the Tower, he is, by Virtue of his Office, to be in Commission of the Peace for the Counties of Kent, Surrey and Middlesex: He is High Steward of a Court held within the Tower; he may refuse an Habeas Corpus; he may give Protection to all Debtors belonging to the Tower, infra Regnum Angliæ; he hath the Privilege, before spoken of, to take one Flagon, that is, two Gallons and a Pint, before, and as much behind the Mast, of all Wine Ships that come. Some hold, that he is to be Custos Rotulorum of the County of Middlesex. His Salary is 200 l. per Annum. His Perquisites are large. His usual Fee for every Prisoner sent to the Tower, is 20 l. and 3 l. a Week for an Earl; and 5 l. for a Knight; for a Baron or a Degree higher, 50 l. at his Entrance, to whom the King allows weekly, 10 l. whereof two Parts go to the Prisoner, and the other third to the Lieutenant, for Lodging and Diet; and 50 l. to the Lieutenant upon the Prisoner's Discharge.

THE present Lieutenant is Hatton Compton, Esq;

GENTLEMAN-PORTER.

A third chief Officer of the Tower, is the Gentleman-Porter, who holds his Place by Patent, and at the Entrance of any Prisoner, hath for for Fee Vestimenta Superiora, (his upper Garments) or a Composition for the same.

THIS Office is at least as old as the Time of King Edward III. For in the Tower Records, mention is made, in that King's Reign, of the Custody of the Tower-Gate being granted to John de London.

In the Reign of Edward VI. Henry Webb was Gentleman-Porter. There were four in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Mr. Chamberlain, Sir William Gorge, Mr. Shelton, and Mr. Worthington.

THIS Officer, among other Perquisites of his Place, in former Times, had allowed him, out of the King's Wardrobe, yearly, Broad Cloth for a Watching Gown, and so had the other Yeomen, as appears by this Extraet out of King Edward's Book of Warrants: "A Warrant to Sir Rafe Sadler, Knt. (who was Master of the King's Wardrobe,) to deliver to Henry Webb, Porter of the Tower of LONDON, and to fourteen Yeomen of the Chamber attending there, and to every of them, five Yards of Broad Cloth, of London-Ruffet, at 4 s. 1 d. the Yard, for their Watching-Gowns.

THIS Officer seem'd to have a Right to the Benefit of the Ground, within the Liberties of the Tower. For in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, he received Rents for many Edifices standing thereon: Concerning which, there happened a Controversy between the Tenants and the Gentleman-Porter. For between the Years 1570 and 1580, many Houses and Tenements were built within the Liberties, some at the Postern-Gate, some within the Bulwark, some without it, and others on Tower-Wharf, where formerly were small Shops, and Parcels of Ground inclosed. So that in the Space of 10 Years, there were 40 Houses, or more built, and divers other Yards and Inclosures: For pulling down which Yards, and laying open the Inclosures, an Order came from the Council. The chief Landlord of these Tenements was the Gentleman-Porter, who about this Year (1580) was Sir William Gorge, between whom and some of the Builders, an Agreement was made, that they should allow him, besides Fines, certain Considerations yearly, in Lieu of Rent. When Gorge died, and Mr. Worthington succeeded in the Place, he required the Tenants to remove, or come to new Terms with him; and many of them did so, rather than be turned out.

THE Builders and petty Landlords found themselves aggrieved hereby; for the Porter came upon the Occupiers, and took no Notice of them, whereupon, in the Year 1587, they made a Complaint to the Lord Treasurer against him, "That they had built sundry Tenements upon noisome Places, in the Liberties of the Tower, to their great Charge: But the present Gentleman-Porter, contrary to former Usage, had required them to depart, either to drive the Petitioners to change their Habitations, or otherwise to get to himself great improved Rents. A Matter, which if permitted would work the Undoing of most of his Lordship's Orators." The Lord-Treasurer referred the Examination of this Business to one Nelson, who understood by the said Gentleman-Porter, that he, as Lord, would not allow of any Petty-Landlords, not suffering them to be Tenants to him, but only such of the Tenants as were commorant Tenants to the Petty-Landlords, quite excluding the Petty-Landlords from him, and that upon these two Causes, the one, because they did not dwell upon any of their Tenements, the other, because they had reserved to themselves far greater Rents than they paid to him, which he had a Mind to take to his own Use, as he found them improved; but yet he was willing to allow every Petty-Landlord, for their several Buildings, as much in reason as they by Proof had laid out.

THE Petition of the Petty-Landlords against the Gentleman-Porter was seconded with another of the Tenants against the Petty-Landlords. The Effect whereof was, "That they complained, that the said Landlords had molested them, and threatned daily to arrest them for their Rents, that they had then paid to the Gentleman-Porter.

THE Rents which the Gentleman-Porter at this Time received, were as follows.

OF 26 Tenants, within the Liberties of the Tower, for Tenements and Shops	49	10	6
BESIDES, of the Petty-Landlords	27	9	0
AND there remained to them, besides this Payment to the Gentleman-Porter,	54	15	0

THE Gentleman-Jailor is an Officer put in by the Lieutenant of the Tower, his Fee is 40 s. for a Gentleman, and 5 l. for a Knight. The Gentleman-Jailor.

THERE are likewise 40 Warders of the Tower, who are accounted the King's Domestick Servants, and are sworn by the Lord-Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, or by the Clerk of the Checque: They are all habited with the same Caps and Coats as those of the Yeoman of the Guard that attend the King; and come into waiting, ten every Day.

THE following is a List of the Officers immediately under the Constable, who is the Right Honourable John Earl of Leicester.

Lieutenant, Hatton Compton, Esq;
Deputy-Lieutenant, Col. Adam Williamson.
Major, Richard White, Esq;
Gentleman-Porter, Tho. Pennington, Esq;
Gentleman-Jailor, Mr. Fowler.
Chaplain, Mr. Hawkins.
Physician, Dr. Gideon Harvey.
Surgeon, Mr. Blake.

As to the Lieutenantancy of the Tower, or Military Government thereof, the Constable or Lieutenant hath the Command of the Militia, for a considerable Compass about it in divers Divisions, called Hamlets, lying in the Parishes of Hackney, Stepney, Whitechapel, Minories, St. Catharine's, Wapping, Shadwell, Shoreditch, and the Liberty of Norton-Falgate, and Bromley. The Names of which Hamlets are as follows:

Hackney.	Ratcliff.
Norton-Falgate.	Shadwell.
Shoreditch.	Limehouse.
Spittle-Fields.	Poplar.
Whitechapel.	Blackwall.
Trinity-Minories.	Bromley.
East-Smithfield.	Bow.
Tower Extra.	Old Ford.
Tower Intra.	Mile-End.
St. Catherine's.	Bednal-Green.
Wapping.

Lieutenancy of the Tower.

The Hamlets.

THESE one and twenty Hamlets, being all the Hundred of Osulston, in the County of Middlesex, are exempted from the said County by Act of Parliament, 14 Car. II. to be the standing Militia of the Tower. The Constable, or Lieutenant, is Lord-Lieutenant of the same; they raise two Regiments, consisting of eight hundred Men each. And this, Time out of Mind, hath been the constant Militia and standing Force of the Tower;

Tower; and was confirmed by a Clause in an Act of Parliament under King Charles II. in these Words:

“ PROVIDED also, and be it enacted, That “ whereas the Militia of the Tower-Division in “ the County of Middlesex, commonly known by “ the Name of the Tower-Hamlets, are, and al“ ways have been, under the Command of his “ Majesty’s Constable or Lieutenant of the “ Tower, for the Service and Preservation of that “ his Royal Fort; that it shall and may be law“ ful for his Majesty’s Constable or Lieutenant of “ the Tower, for the Time being, to continue
“ to levy the Train’d-Bands of the said Division, “ or Hamlets of the Tower, in such Manner and “ Form, as to the Number and Quality of Per“ sons, as was observed in forming the present “ Forces thereof.

The Antiquity and first Foundation of the Tower.

The first Foundation of the Tower.

IT has been the vulgar Opinion, That Julius Caesar was the first Founder of this great Fortrefs; but this has very little Probability of Truth, for two Reasons, the first, is, the little Stay he made here, during which, he had other Things to think of; the second, That he himself, who is so exact in all his Relations, especially where any Thing conduces to his own Honour, nor any other Roman Author, makes any Mention of such a Work; therefore that Opinion which approacheth nearest to Truth, is what Edmond, of Hadenham, an old Englisch Antiquary, affirms, That William the Conqueror, first built the Tower of LONDON, that is, the great Square White Tower, about the Year of Christ 1078, appointing Gundulph, then Bishop of Rockester, Principal Supervisor and Surveyor of the Work, who was for that Time lodged in the House of Edmere, a Burgess of LONDON, as it stands recorded by the aforementioned Author, in the following Words: Gundulphus Episcopus, mandato Wilhelmi. Regis, magni præfuit Operi magnæ Turris LONDON. Quo Tempore hospitatus est apud quendam Edmerum Burgensem LONDON, qui dedit unum Werc Ecclesiæ Roffen.

THE Wall of the City was furnished, as has been said before, with many Bastions and Turrets, at due Distance from each other, and many stood on the Water-Side, where some of the old Wall extended at first; but the Thames with its Ebbing and Flowing, did, as it were, undermine, and subvert those Buildings on the South Side; wherefore the Conqueror (for then the Art of Fortification was come to a greater Perfection) for Defence of the City and River, pitched upon that Place, as most convenient, to erect a Bulwark in the East Part of the Wall. The White Square Tower was first erected and finished in the Conqueror’s Time, but stood naked and single without any other Building a good while; and History saith, That in the Reign of William Rufus, Anno 1090, it being very much damaged, and Part of it beaten down by a violent Tempest, which at the same Time took off the Roof from Bow-Church, and overthrew 600 Houses in London: It was again repaired by the said Rufus, and Henry I. who also caused a Castle to be built under the said Tower, on the South Side towards the Thames, and surrounded it also with a strong Wall.

Henry of Huntington says, That William Rufus challenged the Investiture of Prelates, pilled and shaved the People with Tribute, especially to spend about the Tower of London, and the Great Hall of Westminster, whereof he was Founder. The four first Constables of this Tower of LONDON, held, by Force, a Portion of Land belonging to the Priory of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, that is to say, East-Smithfield near the Tower, making thereof a Vineyard, and would not part from it till the second Year of King Stephen, when, by Judgment of the Court, it was restored to the said Church.

ONE of the four before-mentioned, named Geffrey de Magnaville, was Earl of Essex, Constable of the Tower, Sheriff of London, Middlesex, Essex, and Hertford Shires, as appeareth by a Charter of Maud the Empress, dated 1141. He also fortified the Tower of LONDON against King Stephen; but the King took him in his Court at St. Alban’s, and would not deliver him, till he had rendered the Tower of LONDON, with the Castles of Walden and Pleshey in Essex.

IN the Year 1153, the Tower of LONDON, and the Castle of Windsor, were by the King delivered to Richard de Lucie, to be safely kept.

IN the Year 1155, Thomas à Becket, being Chancellor to Henry II. caused the Flemmings to be banished out of England, their Castles, lately built, to be pulled down, and the Tower of LONDON to be repaired.

IN the 2d Year of Richard I. about the Year 1190, William Longchamp, Bishop of Ely, Chancellor of England, on Account of a Difference between him, and Earl John, the King’s Brother, who was a Rebel, inclosed the Tower and Castle of LONDON, with an outward Wall of Stone, embattled; and also caused a deep Ditch to be cast about the same, thinking to have environed it with the River Thames. By the making this Ditch in East-Smithfield, the Church of the Holy Trinity in LONDON, lost half a Mark Rent by the Year, and the Mill was removed that belonged to the poor Brethren of the Hospital of St. Catharine’s, and to the Church of Trinity aforesaid, which was no small Loss, and Inconvenience to them. And the Garden which the King had hired of the Brethren for six Marks a Year, for the most Part, was wasted and marred by the Ditch; Recompence was often promised, but never made, till King Edward, coming after, gave to the Brethren five Marks and a Half, for that Part which the Ditch had devoured, and the other Part thereof without, he restored to them again, and of the said Rent of five Marks and a Half, they have a Deed, by Virtue whereof they were well paid.

IT is also to be noted, That the said Inclosure and Ditch took the like, or greater Quantity of Ground from the City, within the Wall, namely, on that Part called Tower-Hill, besides breaking down the City Wall from the White Tower to the first Gate of the City, called the Postern: Yet was there not any Quarrel made by the Citizens, or Recompence demanded by them for that Matter; because all was done for the Good of the City’s Defence, and to their own Liking.

Matthew Paris writes, that in the Year 1239, King Henry III. fortified the Tower of LONDON to another End; wherefore the Citizens fearing lest that was done to their Detriment, complained: And the King answered; That he had not done it to their Hurt; but (saith he) I will from henceforth do as my Brother doth, in building and fortifying Castles, who beareth the Name to be wiser than I am.

IT followed in the next Year, (saith our Author) the said noble Buildings of the Stone Gate and Bulwark, which the King had caused to be made by the Tower of LONDON, on the West Side thereof, were shaken, as it had been, with an Earthquake, and fell down, which the King again commanded to be built in better fort than before, which was done.

AND yet again, in the Year 1241, the said Wall and Bulwarks that were newly built, wherein “ wherein the King had bestowed more than “ twelve thousand Marks, were irrecoverably “ thrown down, as afore; for which Chance the “ Citizens of LONDON were not sorry; for “ they were threatened, that the said Wall and “ Bulwarks were built to the End, that if any “ of them would contend for the Liberties of “ the City, they might be imprisoned: And “ that many might be laid in divers Prisons, ma“ ny Lodgings were made, that no one should “ speak to another.

MORE of King Henry III's Dealings against the Citizens of LONDON, may be read in the aforesaid Author, and other Historians; but concerning the said Wall and Bulwark, the same were finished, tho' not in his Time; for Edw. I. in the Year 1274, and the second of his Reign, commanded the Treasurer and Chamberlain of the Exchequer, to deliver out of his Treasury, unto Giles of Andwarp, 200 Marks, of the Fines taken of divers Merchants, or Usurers, of LONDON, towards the Work of the Ditch, then new made about the said Bulwark, now called the Lion-Tower.

The LION-TOWER.

IN the Year 1235, Frederick, the Emperor, sent to Henry III. three Leopards, after which the said Leopards, with some Lions, Lynxes, and other wild Beasts, which had been kept in Woodstock Park, were kept in a Part of the Bulwark of the Tower of LONDON, now called the Lion-Tower, and their Keeper there lodged. King Edward II. in the 12th Year of his Reign commanded the Sheriffs of LONDON to pay the Keeper of the King's Leopards in the Tower of LONDON, 6d. a Day, for their Sustenance, and Three-half-pence a Day for the Diet of the said Keeper, out of the Fee Farm of the said City.

IN the 16th of Edward III. one Lion, one Lioness, one Leopard, and two Cat-Lions in the said Tower, were committed to the Custody of Robert, the Son of John Bowre.

THERE are at present in this Tower;

Two Lions, which were presented to his late Majesty King George I. by the Emperor of Morocco.

Two, by the Consul of Algiers.

Two, by the Dutchess of Ancafter.

AND one, by Colonel Clayton, to his present Majesty;

BESIDES five young ones, which were brought forth in the Tower.

THERE are likewise two Leopards, one Panther, one Vulture, and two Eagles, one of which was taken in a Steel Trap, in the County of Suffex.

IN former Times, Persons of high Quality had the Keeping of the wild-Creatures in this Tower, (whereof the Earl of Oxford was one) and they had a Pension from the Crown upon that Account.

MR. Martin is the present Master of the Lion-Office, which Place he has enjoyed many Years; and, it is said, hath shewn more Skill in bringing up the young Lions, whelp'd in this Place, than any of his Predecessors.

Stow hath search'd into the Original of bringing these fierce Creatures here, and hath given us some antient Records concerning them; and Strype hath added a few more.

IN the 16th of Henry VI. the Office of keeping the Lions and Leopards of the Tower was granted to Robert Mansfield, Esq; for Life; with a certain Place there, antiently belonging to it, with a Fee of 6d. a Day for every Lion.

IN the 37th of the said King's Reign, the said Office was granted to the said Robert Mansfield, Esq, and his Son Robert was put into the Patent.

IN the 29th Year of the said King, the Office was granted to Thomas Rookes, Esq;

IN the 4th of Edward IV. the Office of keeping the Lions, and Leopards, of the Tower, was granted to R. Hastings, Esq;

SUCH Grants also are extant in the Tower Records, in the Reigns before; as in Edward I. Edward II. and succeeding Kings.

By which we may suppose, that the wild Beasts kept in the Tower, were generally Lions and Leopards; for seldom any other Creatures are mentioned in the Patents: That the Keeper was some Officer about the King, and of Quality; and appointed by the King's Letters Patents: That his Wages were 6d. a Day, allowed for himself; and 6d. a Day for every Lion and Leopard: And that the Place, or Apartment where the Lions were kept, was also granted him; as by this Patent to the aforesaid Robert Mansfield, Esq; appears.

“ tori nostro Roberto Mansfield, Armigero, Ma-

“ Day of September, during his Life, from the “ Issues and Profits of the Counties of Bedford “ and Buckingham, coming to the Hands of the “ Sheriff of the said Counties for the Time “ being, &c.

LONG before this King Henry VI. namely, in the Reign of Henry III. there was a white Bear, and an Elephant in the Tower; in which Creatures the King seemed to delight: For he issued out several Orders concerning providing for, and taking Care of them; and that to the Sheriffs of LONDON, as appears by these Liberates, lately found in the White-Tower.

Rex Vicecomitibus, &c.

“ THE King to the Sheriffs of LONDON, “ Greeting. We command you, that for the “ Sustenance of a white Bear, which we send to “ our Tower of LONDON, there to be kept;
“ and for his Keeper, ye cause to be allowed 4d.
“ every Day, as long as they shall be there.
“ Witness the King, at St. Edmund's, Sep“ tember 13.

THE like Order was sent to the Sheriffs from the King, dated from Windsor, September 29.

THERE was still, the next Year, (viz. Anno 1253) concerning this white Bear, another Order issued from the King, to provide him a Muzzle, and a Chain, and a strong Rope, to make Sport in the Thames.

Rex Vicecomitibus LONDON, &c.

Now concerning the Nature of these wild Beasts.

King James I.
 goes to the Tower, where the Courage of the Lion is tried before him.

Anno 1604, June 3. King James I. taking with him the Duke of Lenox (with divers Earls and Lords) went to see the Lions at the Tower.
 And here he caused two of them, a He-Lion, and a She, to be put forth; and then a live
 Cock was cast to them; which being their natural Enemy, they presently killed it and sucked the Blood. Then the King caused a live Lamb to be put to them, which the Lions, out of their Generosity (as having Respect to its Innocence) never offered to touch, altho' the Lamb was so bold as to go close to them. Then the King caused the Lions to be taken away, and another Lion to be put forth, and two Mastiffs to be turned to him. The Mastiffs presently flew upon the Lion and turned him upon his Back, and tho'
 the Lion was superior to them in Strength, yet, it seems they were his Match in Courage.

THERE was a Spaniel Dog, for some Offence or other, cast into the Lion's Den; but the Lion did not attempt to hurt him: And this Dog continued in the Den with the Lion several Years, and there died.

In the Month of June 1609, a Resolution was taken to make Trial of the Valour of the Lion;
 which was by turning him loose to a Bear.

THE Bear was brought into an open Yard, and the Lion was turned out of his Den to him, but he would not assault him, but fled from him;
 and so it was done with other Lions, one after another; and lastly, two together were turned to him, but none set upon him, but rather sought to return to their Dens. A Stone Horse soon after was put into the Yard with the first Lion and the Bear: The Horse fell to grazing between them; after he had gazed a little upon them, two Mastiff Dogs were let in, who boldly fought with the Lion. Afterwards six Dogs more were let in, who flew upon the Horse, most in Sight, at their first Entrance, and would soon have worried him to Death, had not three stout Bearherds enter'd, and rescued the Horse, and brought away the Dogs, while the Lion and Bear stood staring upon them. At this Sight were present King James I.

 the Queen, the Prince, and divers great Lords:
 And so much for the Lion-Tower.

THE Tower of LONDON was fortified by Edward IV. who inclosed with Brick a certain Piece of Ground, taken out of Tower-Hill, West of the Lion-Tower. His Officers, also in the 5th Year of his Reign, set upon the said Hill both Scaffold and Gallows, for the Execution of Offenders, whereupon the Lord Mayor and Aldermen complained to the King; but were answer'd,
 That the same was not done in Derogation of the City's Liberties.

Richard III. repaired and built some Part of this Tower; for Mr. Strype says, He found in an old Leidger-Book of that King, that in the Year 1484, a Commission was directed to Thomas Da- niel, Surveyor of the King's Works, To take and seize for Use, within this Realm, as many Masons, Bricklayers, and other Workmen, as should be thought necessary for the hasty Expedition of the King's Works, within the Tower of LON-DON, and Palace of Westminster.

Henry VIII. in 1532, repaired the White-Tower, and other Parts thereof.

IN the Year 1548, 2 Edward VI. on the 22d of November, a Frenchman, who lodged in the round Bulwark, betwixt the West Gate and the Postern, or Draw-bridge, called the Warder's-
Gate, blew up the said Bulwark, and burnt himself, but no one else, by setting fire to a Barrel of Gunpowder in the Night. This Bulwark was forthwith new built.

THE West Gate is the principal Gate of the Tower, and is used for the Receipt and Delivery of all Kinds of Carriages; a little within this Gate, opening to the South, is a strong Postern for Passengers, by the Ward-House, over a Draw-Bridge, let down for that Purpose. Farther on the South Side, toward the East, is a large Watergate, for the Receipt of Boats and small Vessels from the River Thames; beyond it, is a small Postern, with a Draw-Bridge, seldom let down, but for the Receipt of some great Persons, Prisoners. More towards the East, is a great and strong Gate, commonly called the Iron Gate, but not usually opened.

OF the West Gate, the Gentleman-Porter hath the Charge of the Keys, which he is every Night to deliver to the Constable, or, in his Absence, to the Lieutenant, or Deputy-Lieutenant, and receive them again in the Morning.

IN the Year 1663, the Ditch was cleansed, and all the Wharfing about it new built, with Brick and Stone, so that the Water of the Thames running into it, is there kept by Sluices, and to be let out as Occasion requires.

IN the Year 1666, the Fire of LONDON, ending at the East End of Tower-Street, whose Extent came just to the Dock on the West Side of the Tower, there was nothing between the Tower-Walls and it, but the Breadth of the Dock, and a great many old Timber-Houses, which were built upon the Banks of the Dock, and in the outward Bulwark of the Tower and Tower-Ditch, (which then was very foul) to the very Wall of the Tower itself. Which old Houses, if the Fire had taken hold of, the Tower itself, and all the Buildings within it, had, in all Probability, been destroyed. But such was the Lieutenant's Care of the great Charge committed to him, that to prevent future Danger, a few Weeks after, he caused all these old Houses, which stood between the Tower-Dock and the Tower-Wall, to be pulled down; and not only them, but also all those which were built upon, or near, the Tower-Ditch, from the Bulwark-Gate, along

The Tower in Danger by the Fire of LON-DON.

along both the Tower-Hills, and so to the Iron-Gate; and caused strong Rails of Oak to be set upon the Wharf where those Houses stood, which were about 350 or 400; so that by this Means, not only the White Tower, but the whole outer Tower-Wall, and the Ditch round about the same, are all of them visible to Passengers; and make a fine Prospect.

ON the Tower-Wharf are 62 Guns, lying in a Range fast in the Ground, always ready to be discharged on any Occasion of Victories, Coronations, Festivals, Days of Thanksgiving, Triumphs, &c.

The White Tower.

Now to come within the Walls of the Tower. The White Tower is a lofty square Stone Building, with a Turret at each Angle of it, standing on a rising Hill, disengaged from the other Buildings, where formerly were kept many thousand Barrels of Gun-powder, and vast Quantities of Match; but great Part of this publick Magazine is now distributed in the several Yards, and Store-Houses, belonging to the Government, at Woolwich, Chatham, Portsmouth, Plymouth, &c. This White Tower was founded by William the Conqueror, as hath been said before; but has been so often repaired, and rebuilt, that it is likely that there are but few Stones left of the original Foundation. At the West End of this Building, is the main Guard of the Tower, with Lodgings for the Officers.

The new Armoury.

THE most magnificent Structure in the Tower is the new Armoury, or grand Store-House, which was began to be built in the Reign of K. James II. and finished in the Reign of King William III. It is situated on the North of the White-Tower, is a hundred and thirty Yards in length, and about twenty in Depth; it hath a graceful Walk before it, paved with Free Stone the whole Length of it, and planted with Lime-Trees without the Pavement. In the Midst of the Building, is a stately Portal, adorned with four Columns, Entablature, and Triangular Pediment of the Dorick Order; under the Pediment are the King's Arms, curiously embellished with Trophy Work.

The Artillery.

IN this Store-House, on the Ground-Floor, is a very large Mortar, which carries a Bomb, of 500 Weight, two Miles; also the Carcasses and several less Mortars, some for throwing Hand-Granadoes, which are called Coborn-Mortars, from Coborn, the Dutch Engineer, who invented them: And one that shoots nine several Balls at a Time.

AN Engine for shooting several Musket-Balls at once, to clear an Avenue.

Cheveaux de Frieze, to keep off Horse.

TWENTY new brass Guns, each weighing 32 Hundred, 3 Quarters, 14 Pound, and thus inscribed:

ANNA Mag. Brit. Fran. & Hib. Regina, Anno Regni Quarto.

JOHANNES Baro Churchill, Dux et Comes de Marlborough, Mag. Brit. Reg. à Conciliis Secretior. Ordinis Periscelidis. Eques, Rei Tormentariae, et Copiarum praefectus Generalis.

Sacri Romani Imperii Princeps, &c.

HERE are also several smaller new brass Guns.

A Pontoon, and several Guns taken at Vigo, and a Rack to extort Confession.

AN Engine of small Mortars, which shoots 30 Shells at a Time.

A Gun that discharges seven Balls out of as many Bores.

A curious Gun made for Prince Henry, the Workmanship of which is said to cost 200*l*.

A Smith's Forge, wherewith to work on a March, or encamped, &c.

A vast Number of other Cannon mounted on Carriages, and a proportionable Quantity of other Materials, for drawing the Trains of Artillery.

KETTLE-DRUMS taken at the Battle of Hochstet, with a strange Instance of a Shot in one of them.

IN the Room over the Artillery, is the Armoury of small Arms, of equal Dimensions with that underneath: It is an Arsenal, surprisingly curious in all its Parts, and is therefore justly the Admiration of all Strangers; for here are Pikes, Bayonets, Carbines, Pistols, Halberts, and Swords, for an Army of 100,000 Men, kept not only beautiful and clean, but in such admirable Order, forming various Kinds of Figures, as render the Scene not a little delightful to the Eye.

The small Armoury.

THE North and South Walls are adorned with sixteen Pilasters, eight on each Side, of Pikes and Pistols, of the Corinthian Order, whose Intercolumns are,

CHEQUER-WORK of Carbines and Pistols, Waves of the Sea, in Swords and Bayonets.

HALF-MOONS, Semicircles, and a Target of Bayonets.

THE Form of a Battery in Swords and Pistols.

SUNS, with Circles of Pistols.

A Pair of Gates, in Halberts and Pistols.

THE Witch of Endor (as they call it) within three Ellipses of Pistols.

BACK-BONE of a Whale, in Carbines, &c.

A Fiery Serpent, Jupiter, and the Hydra, in Bayonets.

THE Star and Garter of the Order of the Knights of the Garter, represented in Pistols, and Swords, and near the South-West Angle, are the Arms, as Blunderbusses, Swords, and Pikes, taken from Sir William Perkins, who was Executed at Tyburn, for the Assassination-Plot, Anno 1696, and the Blunderbuss wherewith the King was to have been shot in his Coach near Turnham-Green.

AT the West End of the Room, are two Pyramids of Pistols, at the East End the Figure of an Organ Front formed by Pistols. At the same End, the Armour of Henry V. who conquer'd, and of Henry VI. who lost France.

AND between the East and West Ends, there are eight square Columns, or Pillars, eight round Columns, of Pikes and Pistols; but nothing is more beautiful, than the four lofty wreathed Columns formed with Pistols, in the Middle of the Room, which seem to support it. They shew also some other Arms, which are only remarkable for the Use they have been put to; as the two Swords of State carried before the Pretender, when he invaded Scotland, in the Year 1715, and the Arms taken from the Spaniards that landed in Scotland, Anno 1719.

THE small Arms were placed in this beautiful Order, by one Mr. Harris, originally a Blacksmith, who had a Place, or Pension, granted him by the Government, for this Piece of Service, which he well deserved; no Nation in Europe, being able to shew a Magazine of small Arms, so good in their Kind, and so ingeniously disposed.

IN this Place where this Armoury now stands, was formerly a Bowling-Green, a Garden, and some Buildings.

A little Eastward of the Office of Ordnance, is the Horse Armoury, which contains the Figures of several of our Kings, since William the Conqueror, curiously represented on Horseback, in rich Armour, Cap-a-pe, and some of their Horses have Armour. Here are King William III. King Charles I. and II. King Henry V. VII. and VIII.

The Horse Armoury.

King

King Edward III. &c. with their Guards in Armour, backward.

A Suit of Armour, said to be John of Gaunt's, 7 Foot and an half high; that of the Lord Kinsale, with the Sword which he took from a French General, for which he and his Posterity have the Honour of being covered in the King's Presence; the Earl of Argyle's Leading-Staff, and many other Suits of Armour and Curiosities.

The Spanish
Armoury.

NEAR the South West Angle of the White Tower, is the Spanish Armoury, consisting chiefly of Arms of divers Sorts taken from the Spaniards, when we overcame, what they vain-gloriously called, the Invincible Armado.

THERE is likewise to be seen here, a large Wooden Cannon, which is call'd Old Policy, it being sent with several others, of the same Sort, to the Siege of Bologne, in King Henry VIII's Reign, where it was impossible to bring Brass or Iron Cannon; but these appearing as such to the Frenchmen, they were so terrified thereat, that they surrender'd the Town, without a Shot being made, or a Man lost.

HERE is also the Axe which cut off the Heads of Anna Bullen and the Earl of Essex, the Mother and the Favourite of Queen Elizabeth.

The Jewel-
Office.

THE Jewel-Office, where the Regalia are kept, is near the East End of the Armoury. The Keeper of this Office must be a Person of great Integrity, so great a Trust being reposed in him. Before Blood stole the Crown, Persons who had the Curiosity to see the Regalia, were admitted into the Room where they were kept, and allowed to take them in their Hands; but since that Time there is more Care taken, the Place being inclosed with Iron Grates, so that they may be seen, but none admitted into the Room.

FROM antient Times, the Royal Jewels were carefully preserved in the Tower, by some trusty and faithful Person, appointed by the King, who had a settled Fee for the same. And from hence, upon great Triumphs, and Days of publick Splendor, they used to be brought to Westminster; and when all was over, diligently sent back again, and that under the King's own Hand.

THERE is in the Records of the Tower, an Order to William Bishop of Carlisle, 14 Hen. III. concerning four Coffers with the King's Jewels, to be laid up in the Tower, and another in the 12th Year of Edward III. appointing one John Flete, Keeper of the Jewels, Armour, and other Things in the Tower, during Pleasure; and to take for his Fee 12 d. per Diem.

A List printed is commonly given to those who come daily to see these inestimable Curiosities in the Jewel-House, briefly mentioning the chief of them. And it is this that followeth:

A List of his Majesty's Regalia, besides Plate, and other rich Things, at the Jewel-House in the Tower of LONDON.

I. THE Imperial Crown, which all the Kings of England have been crowned with ever since Edward the Confessor's Time.

II. THE Orb, or Globe, held in the King's Left Hand at the Coronation; on the Top of which is a Jewel near an Inch and an half in Height.

III. THE Royal Sceptre, with the Cross, which has another Jewel of great Value under it.

IV. THE Sceptre with the Dove, being an Emblem of Peace.

V. ST. Edward's Staff, all beaten Gold, carried before the King at the Coronation.

VI. A rich Salt-Seller of State, the Figure of the Tower, used on the King's Table at the Coronation.

VII. Curtana, or the Sword of Mercy, borne between the two Swords of Justice, the Spiritual and Temporal, at the Coronation.

VIII. A noble Silver Font, double gilt, that the Kings and Royal Family were christened in.

IX. A large Silver Fountain, presented to King Charles II. by the Town of Plymouth.

X. QUEEN Anne's Diadem, or Circlet, which her Majesty wore in proceeding to her Coronation.

XI. THE Coronation Crown, made for the late Queen Mary.

XII. THE rich Crown of State that his Majesty wears on his Throne in Parliament; in which is a large Emerald, seven Inches round, a Pearl, the finest in the World, and a Ruby of inestimable Value.

XIII. A Globe and Sceptre made for the late Queen Mary.

XIV. AN Ivory Sceptre with a Dove, made for the late King James's Queen.

XV. THE Golden Spurs, and the Armilla's that are wore at the Coronation.

XVI. THE Ampulla, or Eagle of Gold, which holds the Holy Oil that the Kings and Queens are anointed with, and the golden Spoon that the Bishop pours the Oil into: Which are Pieces of great Antiquity.

THESE Regalia are more fully described by Mr. Strype, from a History of the Coronation of King James II. and his Consort, written by Francis Sandford, Esq; and communicated to him by the Keeper of the Jewel-House.

SWORDS.

First, There are three Swords; that is, two The three Swords. Swords, called the Swords of Justice; and one whose Place is in the Middle between them, called the Sword of Mercy. One Sword of Justice represents the Spiritual Sword, and is borne on the Right Hand: The End of this Sword is pointed, but yet somewhat obtuse. The other Sword of Justice, being the Temporal Sword, is borne on the Left Hand. This hath a very sharp Point. The Curtana, or Sword of Mercy, hath the Point flat, and, as it were, broken off.

THIS pointless Sword is the principal of the three in Dignity: It is a broad, bright Sword, the Length of the Blade thirty two Inches, the Breadth almost two Inches. The Handle is cover'd with a fine Gold Wire, four Inches, besides the Pomel an Inch and three Quarters; which, with the Cross, is plain Steel gilt: The Length of the Cross is almost eight Inches. This is borne naked before the King at his Coronation. At the Coronation of his present Majesty King George II. it was borne by that great and worthy Nobleman the late Earl of Pembroke.

THE second Sword, the Sword of Justice, to the Spirituality, hath a Blade forty Inches long, and an Inch and a half broad: The Handle, as of the other, cover'd with Gold Wire.

THE third Sword, the Sword of Justice to the Temporality, is of the same Size with the former. The Scabbards, of all three, are cover'd with a rich brocaded Cloth of Tissue, with a rich Ferule, Hook, and Chape.

THE Spurs, called the great Golden Spurs, The Spurs. are curiously wrought.

THE Ampulla, or Eaglet of Gold, contains the Holy Oil. It is in Form of an Eagle, with Wings expanded, standing on a Pedestal; all of pure Gold, finely chased. The Head screws off at the Middle of the Neck, to put in the Oil: And the Neck being hollow, the Holy Oil is poured out into a Spoon, thro' the Point of the Beak. The Height of it, from Bottom to Top, including the Pedestal, is about nine Inches: The Diameter of the Pedestal, about three Inches and a half; and the Breadth between the farthest Point of the Wings, about seven Inches. The Weight of the whole, about eight or ten Ounces.

The Spoon.

THE Anointing Spoon is likewise of pure Gold, with four Pearls in the broadest Part of the Handle; and the Bowl of the Spoon finely chased, both within and without. It appears to be very antient.

CROWNS.

The Crowns.

THESE several Crowns belong to the Regalia.

King Edward's Crown.

First, King Edward's Crown; with which the Kings of this Realm are crowned: So called, in Commemoration of the antient Crown in the Church of Westminster, remaining till the Beginning of the great Rebellion, when, with the rest of the Regalia, it was sacrilegiously taken away. It is a very rich Imperial Crown of Gold, made against the Coronation of King Charles II. embellished with Pearls and precious Stones of divers Kinds, viz. Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds and Sapphires, with a Mound of Gold on the Top of it, encircled with a Band, or Fillet, of Gold, embellished also with precious Stones, and three very large oval Pearls, one at the Top of the Cross, and two other pendant at the Ends of the Cross. The said Crown is composed, as all the Imperial Crowns of England are, of four Crosses, and as many Flowers-de-Liz of Gold, upon a Rim or Circlet of Gold; all embellished with precious Stones. The Cap within the said Crown is of Purple Velvet, lined with white Taffata, and turned up with Ermine, thick powder'd in three Rows.

The Crown of State.

Secondly, The Crown of State, so called because it is worn by the King or Queen, at such Times as they come in State to the Parliament House. This was also made at the Coronation of King Charles II. It is exceeding rich, being embellished with several large Diamonds, and other Stones; but most remarkable for a wonderful large Ruby, set in the Middle of one of the Crosses, reckoned worth 10,000 l. as also for the Mound's being of one entire Stone, of a Sea-green Colour, called an Agmarine. This Crown was taken to Pieces, being too weighty, in the Reign of Queen Anne, and made fit for her, and she then wore it when she went to Parliament.

The Queen's Circlet.

Thirdly, The Queen's Circlet of Gold. Queen Mary, Consort of King James II. wore it in her proceeding to her Coronation. It is a Rim, or Circlet of Gold, very richly adorn'd with large Diamonds, curiously set, with a String of Pearl round the upper Edge thereof. The Cap of Purple Velvet lined with white Taffata, and turned up with Ermine richly powder'd.

The Queen's Crown.

Fourthly, The Queen's Crown, wherewith the Queens are crowned, being a very rich Imperial Crown of Gold, set with Diamonds of great Value, intermixed with a few precious Stones of other Kinds, and some Pearl. The Cap of Purple Velvet, lined with rich white Taffata, turned up with Ermine, or Miniver pure, richly powdered.

Another Crown for the Queen.

Fifthly, The Queen's rich Crown, which is worn in her Return to Westminster-hall, (after the Coronation Ceremony is ended.) It is of Gold, but so richly embellished with Diamonds and Pearl, that little or none of the Gold appeareth. It is an Imperial Crown, composed of Crosses and Flowers-de-Liz, with Arches, and a Mound, as the other Crowns.

The Orb, or Mound.

THE Orb, Mound, or Globe, which is put into the King's Right Hand immediately before his being crown'd, and borne in his Left Hand upon his Return into Westminster-hall, is a Ball of Gold, six Inches Diameter, encompassed with a Band, or Fillet, of Gold, embellished with Roses of Diamonds, encircling other precious Stones, and edged about with Pearl. On the Top whereof is a very large Amethyst, of a Violet, or Purple Colour, near an Inch and an half in Height, of an oval Form; which being encompassed with four Silver Wires, becometh the Foot or Pedestal of a very rich Cross of Gold, of three Inches and a Quarter in Height, and three Inches in Breadth, set very thick with Diamonds, having in the Middle thereof a fair Sapphire on one Side, and a fair Emerald on the other; and embellished with four large Pearls in the Angles of the Cross, near the Center, and three large Pearls at the End of the said Cross. The whole Height of the Orb, or Cross, being eleven Inches.

SCEPTRES.

First, St. Edward's Staff, in Length four Feet seven Inches and an half, is a Staff, or Sceptre of Gold, with a Pike, or Foot, of Steel, about four Inches and a Quarter in Length; and a Mound and Cross at the Top: The Garnishings are also of Gold, and the Diameter is about three Quarters of an Inch.

THE King's Sceptre with the Dove, is a Sceptre of Gold, in Length three Feet seven Inches, and three Inches in Circumference at the Handle, and two Inches and a Quarter about the Top: The Pomel garnished with a Circle, or Fillet, of Table-Diamonds, and in several Places with precious Stones of all Sorts; and the Mound at the Top embellished with a Band, or Fillet, of Rose Diamonds. Upon the Mound is a small Jerusalem Cross, whereupon is fix'd a Dove with Wings expanded, as the Emblem of Mercy.

THE King's Sceptre with the Cross, or Sceptre Royal, likewise of Gold. The Handle plain, and the upper Part wreathed; in Length two Feet nine Inches and a Quarter, and of the same Thickness as the former. The Pomel at the Bottom enriched with Rubies, Emeralds, and small Diamonds. The Top riseth into a Flower-de-Liz, with six Leaves, whereof three are upright, and the other three hanging down, all enriched with precious Stones. Out of the same Flower-de-Liz, issueth a Mound, made of an Amethyst, garnished with Table-Diamonds, and on the Mound, a Cross wholly covered with precious Stones, with a large Table-Diamond in the Center.

THE Queen's Sceptre with the Cross, also of Gold, adorned with Diamonds, and other precious Stones, in Length two Feet ten Inches, with a Mound, and Cross at the Top, issuing out of a Flower-de-Liz, very like the King's in all the Embellishments thereof, only smaller, and wreathed, not altogether so thick.

THE Queen's Ivory Rod, is a Rod, or Sceptre, of white Ivory, in Length three Feet one Inch and a half, whereof the Pomel and Garniture is Gold, as is also the Mound and Cross at the Top, only the Dove at the Top of the Cross is enamelled with white. The Circumference at the Bottom about two Inches, and at the Top about an Inch and a half.

RINGS.

THE King's Coronation Ring is a plain gold Ring, with a large Table-Ruby Violet, wherein a plain Cross, or Cross of St. George, is curiously enchased.

THE King's Coronation Ring is likewise of Gold, with a large Table-Ruby set therein, and sixteen other small Rubies round-about the Ring; whereof those next to the Collet are the largest, the rest diminishing proportionably.

THE other Regalia, as the open Pall, the Supertunica of Cloth of Gold, the Surcoat of Crimson Sattin, the Colobium Syndonis, the Armilla, the the Buskins, Sandals, King Edward's Chair, &c. are kept in Westminster-Abbey.

THERE was a Time when the Tower was not thought a Place safe enough for this Treasure: But whatever the Reason was (whether the King's Wars here at Home) Henry III. sent (if not all) a great many of them into France. What they were, and to whom sent, and by whom, and where laid up, a Tower Record will relate Anno 46, Henry III. William de Latymer, and Mr. Henry de Gandao, with others, brought the King's Jewels to Margaret Queen of France, in two Coffers, and she laid them up in the Temple at Paris, under her Seal. The Keys, the said Latymer and Gandao, the King's Messengers, brought back with them. They are named, viz. one great Crown. One Firmaculum cum Rubetis [Buckle with Rubies.] One Ring with a Ruby. Three gold Crowns, Unum Capellum Imperatorium. Quatuor Ferra, Unum Alphabetum. Three gold Pestina [Combs.] Fifty two Firmacula [Buckles.] Ten Baculos [Staves] containing 208 Rings, cum Rubetis & Balefis. Two Staves, containing 66 Rings, cum Maragdenibus. One Staff, containing 20 Rings, with Saphires. One Staff, containing 13 Rings, with Topazes. One Staff, containing 17 Rings, with divers Stones. Sixty six Girdles. Also two golden Peacocks. One Buckle, with twelve Diamonds. Other fourteen Buckles, with five gold Garlands.

The ORDNANCE OFFICE.

The Ordnance Office.

THE Ordnance Office is kept in a Part of the Tower, called Cold-Harbour, where strict Accounts are taken of, and Orders for providing and disposing of Warlike Materials, necessary for the Defence of the Kingdom, in Times, both of Peace and War, do issue. This is an Office of great Account and Importance, it being the standing and grand Magazine of all the Utensils, Instruments, and Weapons of War, as well by Sea as by Land, for the Defence and Safety of the Kingdom, having the Superintendence, Ordering and Disposing, as well of the grand Magazine, lodged in the Storehouses in the Tower, as at Woolwich, Chatham, Portsmouth, Plymouth, Hull, Windsor, and elsewhere. In which Places is Ammunition at all Times, for as many Land and Sea Forces, as may not only defend the Kingdom, but be serviceable to all our Neighbours in League and Friendship with us, and formidable to our Enemies.

IN old Records several Patent Officers belonging to this Office are to be met with, which are now wholly antiquated, or of little Account.

As an Officer for keeping and making the Bows, called the Bowyer. This was granted by Patent to Robert Bridford, by King Richard II. in the Twenty-second Year of his Reign, together with certain Houses belonging to the same Office. And Edward IV. in the 13th Year of his Reign granted to Thomas Masburgh the Office of keeping, making, and providing Bows in the Tower, granting him a certain Mansion, situate between the Tower, called Wakefield-Tower, and the Tower, called West-Smithfield, for exercising the aforesaid Office.

THERE was also another Officer belonging to the Cross-Bows, who was called, in the Records of the Tower, Attiliator Ballistarum. He seemed to be one who provided Harness and Accoutrements for those Bows. King Edward I. in the First of his Reign, granted this Office to T. S. and he had for his Wages Seven-pence-Halfpenny per Diem.

ANOTHER Officer was called Galeator, that, perhaps, provided and took care for the Helmets, or Head-Pieces. This Place was once granted to Richard Glover, Armig. Anno. 5. H. IV.

THERE was an Armourer within the Tower. Armourer. This Office was once enjoyed by William Snell, granted to him by Richard III. in his twelfth Year, Keeper of his Armour, and likewise of his Jewels, and other Things in the Tower, during Pleasure, with a Fee of 12d. a Day.

THERE was a Keeper of the Tents. Keeper of the Tents. This Place was granted by King Henry VI. in the 19th Year of his Reign, to Richard Lound, for Term of Life; and he had a Mess withal granted him, situated upon the Wharf, near St. Catharine's Hospital: Which Mess is said to belong to the Office, 14. H. VI.

THE Principal Officer at this Time is stiled the Master-General of the Ordnance, who ought to be a Person of great Honour and Integrity. Master-General of the Ordnance.

Subordinate to this great Officer (unto whom the Management of this Office is committed) are other Principal Officers, viz. 1. The Lieutenant-General. 2. The Surveyor. 3. The Clerk of the Ordnance. 4. The Keeper of the Stores. 5. The Clerk of the Deliveries. 6. The Treasurer and Pay-Master.

ALL which hold their Places by Patent, under the Great Seal of England; and have their Clerks for the Management of their respective Offices. Their Duties are as followeth:

The Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance, is to receive all Orders and Warrants from the Master, and the other principal Officers, and to see them duly executed; and to make Orders, as the King's Occasion shall require. Also to give Orders for the Discharging the great Ordnance, when required, as, upon Coronation Days, Birth Days of Kings and Princes, Festivals, Triumphs, Victories, and the like. Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance.

HE is also to see the Train of Artillery and all its Equipage fitted for Motion, upon any Occasion, when it shall be ordered to be drawn into the Field.

THE Charge of the Surveyor of the Ordnance, is to survey all his Majesty's Ordnance, Stores, and Provisions of War, in the Custody of the Store-Keeper, which he is to see so distinguished and placed, as shall be best for their Preservation and Safety. He is to allow all Bills of Debts, and to keep a Check upon all Labourers and Artificers Work. Also, to see that all Provisions received be good, and serviceable, and duly proved; for which he must take the Assistance of the rest of the Officers, and the Proof-Masters, and see if they are marked with the King's Mark, if they ought so to be. Surveyor of the Ordnance.

THE Clerk of the Ordnance is to record all Orders and Instructions, given for the Government of the Office; as likewise all Patents and Grants, and the Names of all Officers, Clerks, Artificers, Attendants, Gunners, Labourers, and others, who enjoy the said Grants, or any other Fees from the King for the same. He is also to draw all Estimates for Provisions and Supplies to be made: Likewise all Letters, Instructions, Commissions, Deputations, and Contracts, for his Majesty's Service. Further, to make all Bills of Imprest, and Debentures for the Payment and Satisfaction of the respective Artificers, and Creditors of this Office, for Work done, or Provisions received. Also Quarter Books, for the Salaries, Allowances, and Wages of all Officers, Clerks, and others, belonging to the said Office. He is also to keep Journals and Ledgers of the Receipts and Returns of his Majesty's Stores, to serve as a Check between the two Accountants of the Office, the one for Money, the other for Stores. Clerk of the Ordnance.

THE Duty of the Store-Keeper, is, to take into his Charge, and Custody, all his Majesty's Ordnance, Store-Keeper.

Ordnance, Munitions, and Stores thereunto belonging, and to indent, and put in legal Security, for the safe keeping thereof, and for making just and true Account from Time to Time. He is to receive no Provisions whatsoever, that are manifestly unserviceable, or before they have been surveyed by the Surveyor. He is not to issue any Proportion of Ordnance; Munition, or Stores, except the same be agreed upon, and signed by the Officers, according to the Appointment of the Master of the Ordnance, granted upon Order of his Majesty, or six of the Privy Council, or the Lord Admiral, for Matters concerning the Navy. He is not to receive back any Stores, formerly issued, until they have been reviewed by the Surveyor, and register'd by the Clerk of the Ordnance, in the Book of Remains. He is to look that all his Majesty's Store-Houses be well repaired, and well accommodated, and that the Stores be kept in such Order, as is fit for the Service and Honour of the King.

Clerk of the Deliveries.

THE Duty of the Clerk of the Deliveries, is to draw all Proportions or Orders for Deliveries of any Stores or Provisions, and to see them duly executed, and, by Indenture, to charge the Particular Receiver of his Majesty's said Stores, whether Captain, Gunner, or others, and to register, as well the Copies of all Warrants, for the Deliveries, as the Proportions delivered, thereby to discharge the Store-Keeper.

Treasurer and Pay-Master.

THE Place of Treasurer, and Pay-Master, was formerly an Appendix to that of the Lieutenant-General; but King Charles II. ordered, That the Office of Treasurer should be no more executed by the Lieutenant, or any other Person, having other Charge, or Employment, in the Office of Ordnance: Since which Time there is a particular Office erected, distinct from any of the aforesaid Offices. [Thro' this Officer's Hands runs all the Money for the whole Office of Ordnance, as well the Salaries as the Debentures.]

THERE are other Subordinate Officers, who likewise hold their Places by Patent from the King. As, Master-Gunner of England.

THE Master-Gunner of England, who is to teach and instruct all such as desire to learn the Art of Gunnery, and to administer to every Learner an Oath, obliging him not to serve any foreign Prince or State, without Leave; nor to teach the Art of Gunnery to any, but such as have taken the said Oath; and to certify to the Master of the Ordnance, the Sufficiency of any Person, recommended to be one of his Majesty's Gunners, and his Ability to discharge the Duty of a Gunner.

Keeper of the small Guns.

THE Keeper of the small Guns, who hath the Charge and Custody of his Majesty's small Guns, as Musquets, Carbines, and Pistols, with their several Furnitures.

THERE are divers other inferior Attendants, and Artificers, as the Clerks, Proof-Masters, Messengers, Master-Smith, Master-Carpenter, Master-Furbither, Block-maker, and such like.

THERE is yet a further Superintendency and Jurisdiction peculiar to the Master of the Ordnance over all his Majesty's Engineers, employed in the several Fortifications of this Kingdom, most of which have their Salaries, and Allowances payable in the said Office, to which they are accountable, and from whence they receive their particular Orders and Instructions, according to the Directions and Commands given by his Majesty, and signified by the Master of the Ordnance.

The present OFFICERS of the Ordnance are as follow:

MASTER-GENERAL of the Ordnance, John Duke of Argyle, whose Salary is 1500 l. per Ann.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL, Sir Charles Wills, Knt. of the Bath, 800 l. per Ann. and 300 l. per Ann. for a House in the Minorities belonging to him.

SURVEYOR-GENERAL, Col. John Armstrong, 700 l. per Annum

CLERK of the Ordnance, Leonard Smelt, Esq; 600 l. per Ann.

STORE-KEEPER, George Gregory, Esq; 400 l. per Ann.

CLERK of the Deliveries, William-Rawlinson Erle, Esq; 340 l. per Ann.

TREASURER, John Plumtree, Esq; 500 l. per Ann.

SECRETARY to the Master-General, Mr. Cockburn, 200 l. per Ann.

THERE is at present no Master-Gunner; the last was Col. James Pendlebury.

KEEPER of the Armoury, William Nicholas, Esq; 60 l. per Ann.

KEEPER of the small Armoury, William Bacus, Esq; 80 l. per Ann.

CHIEF Engineer, Col. Lassels, 300 l. per Ann.

SECOND Engineer, Christian Lilly, Esq; 250 l. per Ann.

BARRACK-MASTER, Mr. Francis Maxwell, 40 l. per Ann.

BESIDES these, there are Store-keepers, at the several Garrisons, whose Salaries, are from 120 l. to 30 l. per Ann. together with a Wagon-Master, Fire-Master, Chief Bombardier, Petardier, Comptroller of the Fire-Works, and other inferior Officers, whose Salaries are more or less, as the Master of the Ordnance appoints.

THE Astronomical Observator, Dr. Edmund Halley, hath likewise 100 l. per Ann. paid him out of this Office.

BESIDES all these, there are three other Offices, very necessary and important, and in former Times settled and granted by Patent, tho' not so now, viz. those of the Tower-Smith, Carpenter, and Mason.

KING Edward I. in the first Year of his Reign, appointed the Tower-Smith to have Four-pence-Half-penny a Day for his Wages; and moreover, in a Schedule hanging to the Patent, de Gardinariis Regis capit. 3 d. per Diem, i. e. 3 d. a Day more from the King's Gardeners, or rather the King's Warders, or Guards, who were commonly stiled Gardeyns; Officers belonging to the Tower.

THE Chief Smith, the Mason, and Carpenter, were all in one Patent of King Edward III. Magister Wil. de Ramesey assignat. Capital. Cementarius Reg. ibidem & Capital. Supervisor omnium operum Reg. in omnibus Castris Reg. citra Trentam, percipiend. per Annum unam Robam et xii d. per Diem ad Scaccariam. Et de eod. modo pro Magistro Willielmo Hurle, quod sit Capital. Carpenterarius, &c. ut supra; & Walt. le Fevre, Capital Fabr. 10 Edward III. i. e. Mr. William de Ramesey is appointed Chief Mason of the King there, (at the Tower) and Chief Overseer of all the King's Works in all his Castles on this Side Trent; taking yearly one Robe, and 12 d. a Day at the Exchequer. And after the same Manner for Mr. William Hurle, that he be Chief Carpenter, &c. as before, and Walter le Fevre, Chief Smith, in 10 Edward III.

IT will not be amiss to make some Observation of these Offices and Officers as they stood in Queen Elizabeth's Time, and what Inspections were made of them, and Orders given, concerning them, in that careful Government.

ABOUT the Year 1584, (or perhaps somewhat later) Commissioners were appointed for the Surveying of the Office of Ordnance. The Commissioners were Lord Burleigh, Lord Treasurer, the Earl of Warwick, Master of the Ordnance, Sir

Sir Francis Knollis, Treasurer of the Household, Sir Christopher Hatton, Vice-Chamberlain, Sir Walter Mildmay, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Owen Hopton, Lieutenant of the Tower, John Hawkins, Treasurer of the Admiralty, William Dodington and John Conyers, Auditors of the Prests, William Borough, Clerk of the Ships.

THE Substance of their Commission was this: Authority was given to them, or to any three, (whereof one of the two Auditors to be one) both to consider of the Remain, that was left upon the last Survey taken the 17th Day of February, in the tenth Year of her Majesty, as of the Provisions since that Time made: And thereupon to consider how the same Provisions, &c. have been delivered and expended, and by what Warrant and Order.

Item, To make a perfect Survey of all the Ordnance that are remaining in the Charge of the Officers of the Ordnance, and the same to deliver in Charge to those Officers, to whom the Custody thereof belongeth; by such Book or Books, as to the said Commissioners shall be thought meet: To the End, they may yearly account as well for the Store presently remaining, as hereafter to be provided.

Item, AUTHORITY is given to any four of the said Commissioners, (whereof the Lord Treasurer to be one) upon such Survey taken, to make Allowance and Determination of all Accompts and Charges; which shall be a good Exoneration and Discharge for the said Officers against her Majesty, her Heirs, &c.

Item, To set down such Orders in Writing as they shall think meet, for the better ordering of the said Office, as well for the receiving and issuing of any Provisions, as for the abridging of any extraordinary and superfluous Charges and Allowances, as to establish any former or new Allowances for her Majesty's better Service herein.

Item, To cause such Things as have been lent out of the said Office, (by Warrant or otherwise) to be restored, or Money to be answered to the Lieutenant, to the Value of the same. And the same to be put in Charge with the said Officers.

Item, To appoint such Persons, as they shall think meet, to survey and take a Note of all her Majesty's Ordnance, &c. remaining in any Castle or Block-house, and the Broken and Unserviceable to exchange, or repair, as they shall see Cause.

Item, AUTHORITY is given to any of the said Commissioners, (whereof the Lord-Treasurer to be one) by Bill subscribed by their Hand, to gain Allowance for the Travel and Pains of any Person used in that Service, or any otherwise; touching the Execution of this Commission, to be paid by the Lieutenant of the Ordnance. Which Bills so subscribed, shall be allowed him upon his Account.

Now to look back to the first Officers employed in this great Trust, and their antient Fees.

IN the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Master of the Ordnance was the high born Ambrose Earl of Warwick, under whom were several other Officers made by Letters Patents, and their Salaries payable out of the Exchequer, viz.

THE Lieutenant of the Ordnance. The first Lieutenant was Sir Christopher Morrice, who was made by King Henry VIII. Anno Regni 36. The Fee then assigned to this Officer, was, 56l. 13s. 4d. Bromfield was in this Office, in the 5th of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Robert Constable and Sir William Pelham, Anno 1588, Sir George Carew, 1593.

NEXT, was the Surveyor of the Ordnance. The first Surveyor was Henry Johnson, constituted by King Henry VIII. in the 34th Year of his Reign. His Fee, then assigned, was, 36l. 10s. at 2s. by the Day. Randolph was in this Place, Anno Elizabeth 8. Afterwards John Powell, then William Partridge.

THEN is the Clerk of the Ordnance-General, sometimes stiled also, Clerk of the Armoury.

THIS Office is antient. The Fee, per Ann. was 12l. 3s. 4d. that is, 8d. by the Day. William Painter was in this Office when Queen Elizabeth first took the Scepter. Anthony Painter and John Bagnal enjoyed this afterward in Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and before them Mr. Pelham, Anno 13 Elizabeth.

THE next Officer is the Keeper of the Stores. The first Patent was to one Richard Bowland, in 14 Eliz. His Fee was 54l. 12s. per Ann. that is, 3s. by the Day. Before that Time, he had the Room of a Gunner at 12d. per Diem, and he did this Service. Humphrey Bowland was in this Office, Anno 1584. The Queen allowed 6000l. per Ann. for buying in Stores.

THE Keeper of the small Guns was the next. The first that had a Patent for this Office was E. Partridge, in the 2d and 3d of Queen Elizabeth, and next to him Nathaniel Partridge, his Son. This was no Office before Partridge's Time, whose Fee by the Year, was 15l. 4s. 2d. that is, 10d. by the Day. Afterwards Richard Powell succeeded in this Office under Queen Elizabeth.

THEN came the Clerk of the Deliveries. Fleming and Anthony, Anno 7. Edward VI. were the first appointed to this Office, but not in Patent, till about 16 Elizabeth, when Brian Hog had a Patent for this Place. The Fee both under King Edward and Queen Elizabeth, was, per Ann. 18l. 5s. at 12d. by the Day. The next that succeeded in this Place, was George Hog.

So that the Sum Total of these Officers amounted yearly to 203l. 10s. 10d.

BUT besides these first and antient Fees, they had these Fees and Allowances moreover granted them by the Queen, for their Diet, Riding-Charges, Boat-Hire, Wood, Coals, Ink, Paper, Keeping of Books, Wages of Clerks, &c. that is to say,

To the Lieutenant	72	00	0
To the Surveyor	32	03	4
To the Clerk of the Ordnance	68	05	0
To the Clerk of the Deliveries	18	05	0

BESIDES these principal Officers, the Master of the Ordnance had his Deputy, in which Place served Tho. Sharples, ——— Hocknel, and Geoffrey Turvell. The Lieutenant had his Deputy, (in which served Harman Harrison and Will. Horne) and Clerk. The other Officers had their Clerks. The Surveyor's Clerks were Henry Walton, John Pavy, and James Cudner, or Coderer. These were such as were daily attendant upon the Receipts and Issues of the Office, and for the Keeping and Engrossing of Books, appertaining to the same. These also had Allowances, but not in Precedent, which were generally to each Clerk, 18l. 5s.

IN the Year 1584, and the Month of June, the Officers petitioned for Augmentations of their Salaries, and for the Establishment of the Allowances of their Clerks, whereupon these Sums seem to be granted as Additions, viz.

Great Frauds, formerly committed by the Surveyor, Store-Keeper, &c.

IN the Reign of her said Majesty Queen Elizabeth, the Surveyor of the Ordnance, the Keeper of the Stores, and some other Officers, were found tardy in their Dealings, having upon Occasion, taken the Liberty to advance their own private Interests, at the Queen's Expence; but about the Year 1591, N. Rainberd, one belonging to that Office, as it seems, privately gave the Lord Treasurer Information, by a Letter, discovering their Shifts and Devices in drawing of Books; and Proportions, for their own Gain and Commodity; over-charging her Majesty with excessive Prices of Provisions brought into the Store from Time to Time. He informed also of a Book of Debts to be soon exhibited to his Lordship, wherein they proposed to demand Allowances for some Things already paid for by the Queen, as, upon due Examination thereof, by the Officers, generally would appear. As divers Emptions for the Ships were demanded in the same Book, which the Keeper of the Stores would alledge to be due to him, altho' her Majesty had already paid for the same. Also a Quantity of Iron Shot, lately brought into the Store, which in Truth, upon due Examination, would appear to be her Majesty's, being an old Remain, returned from Sea, at the Time of the Spaniards being here. There was a Bargain of 30,000 Pounds Weight of Copper Plate, and 200,000 Pounds of Match: Of the Copper, there was brought into her Majesty's Stores 13,000 Pounds Weight; and all at 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the

VOL. I.

Hundred Weight; but, indeed, the same was bought for betwixt 50*s.* and 3*l.* the Hundred: So the Queen lost in every Hundred 33*s.* 4*d.* the least. This Informer offered, when the Lord Treasurer should command him, to draw a Brief of the whole Deceit.

IN the Year 1578, there was another Discovery of embezzling the Queen's Gun-powder and Salt-petre, which Abuse had been practiced a good while before. And one of the Clerks, or some other belonging to the Stores, privately signified it to the Lord Treasurer; by which he went in Danger of his Life, were it known: Desiring it, therefore, might be taken Notice of some other Way. In order to which, he secretly delivered this Paper to the said Treasurer, which way the Queen might find out the Abuses in the Office of Ordnance, without any Suspicion of the Revealer of the same. Which Course was accordingly taken by the Lord Treasurer.

Anno 1587, about Michaelmas, the Earl of Warwick, Master of the Ordnance, sent a Gentleman of his, one Mr. Blincoe, with a Command to all the Gun-Founders in Suffex, to repair up to the City, on such a Day, there to understand his Pleasure, concerning their further Continuance in that Trade. Whereupon appeared Henry Nevil, and the rest of that Occupation; at the House of his Deputy Mr. Hockenal, who told them, that upon Complaint made to the Lords of the Council of the Abuse of the Transportation of Ordnance into foreign Countries, their Honours had referred it to the Earl of Warwick, to take Order for Redress of it. Whereupon he thought good to call them together, and had authorized them, the said Hockenal, with Blincoe, to deal with them, and to take sufficient Security against the like Abuses for the Time to come; and because it was thought convenient, that some Quantity of Ordnance should yearly be made for the necessary Provision of our own Navigation, they set down a general Rate yearly, which should serve the whole Realm, and out of that they allotted to every Founder a certain Quantity; but requiring at their Hands, that they should enter into Bonds, not to cast any greater Quantity, than should be allotted them; nor to sell any but in the City, nor to any Merchant, but such as my Lord, or his Deputy, should name, with certain other Conditions, of taking a Stamp for all Pieces out of the Office, and some other small Points; but that Article of Selling to none but such as should be appointed, caused some Disturbance, because they thought it tended rather to some private than publick Benefit.

ABOUT the Year 1593, Notice having been before taken of great Quantities of Iron Ordnance Cast by Founders and transported abroad by Merchants, certain Persons (whereof one Dickenson was Chief) went about to obtain of the Queen a Patent, for the Term of Twenty-One Years, to have the only Nomination and Appointment of such Founders as were to be allowed, and the sole Government and Disposition of Casting and Selling of Ordnance, and Shot of Iron; on Condition to pay her Majesty 40*s.* for every Ton of Ordnance that should be Cast and Sold within this Realm, and to keep fifty Tons of Ordnance in Readiness, ever to be Sold to her Majesty, upon any sudden Occasion; and to give an Account to the Lieutenant of the Ordnance, every six Months, of all the several Guns that should be Cast and Sold; and to build new Furnaces without any Charge to her Majesty, when any extraordinary Pieces were to be Cast for the only Use of her Highness, upon any reasonable Warning given.

FOR the backing of which Suit, they shewed, That a Gun-Founder had confessed, that of late

U he

he had known 2500 Tons of Iron Ordnance to be Cast in this Realm, or upward, in some one Year; which might prove a Thing, both dangerous to the State, and hurtful to the Subject: And that for these two Reasons.

First, That the more Ordnance is Cast, the greater is the Waste of Woods, Timber, and Ewre, and the less good Iron made for the Use of the Commonwealth. And,

Secondly, For that there is ever such an exceeding Quantity of Ordnance, ready made, and dispersed into many Places, as did allure bad People in the Night to convey, by Stealth, the same to the Water-side, and so into foreign Countries, where there was uttered three Times as much Ordnance as was used here by the English Subjects; and that, therefore, without Licence, or Payment of Custom.

AND these Disorders chiefly grew by the Willfulness, and over-grown Numbers of Founders, who, notwithstanding, had often been expressly forbidden to Cast any Guns by the Master of the Ordnance, and by the Lords of the Privy Council, in the Name of her Majesty: And for Observation thereof have been enforced to enter into Bonds; and yet, to this Day, no Means have been found sufficient to rule or restrain them.

FOR which Cause the late Master of the Ordnance, and the other Officers there, thought it best to abridge the Number of the Founders, and, by Licence from her Majesty, to establish some few of the fittest of that Company to continue those Services under, and by some necessary Orders and Penalties. By which Means there should be no more Ordnance Cast, than were needful, nor any transported without Intelligence for full Licence and Payment of Custom.

HERE Sir George Carew, the Lieutenant of the Ordnance (Anno 1593) interposed in Behalf of himself, as to whom of Right this Matter chiefly belonged, and that as well the Casting of Guns, as the Transportation of them, (which the Queen had granted, under the Great Seal, to certain Farmers) was, in Time past, ex Officio, in the Power of the Master of the Ordnance, or of the Lieutenant; and that no longer since, when Sir Robert Constable lived, whereby, in some sort, he held himself more interested in this Cause, than a meer Stranger; and in that Respect had good Hope the Queen would admit him to be her Farmer before any Man else, and the rather, for that herein he should advance her Benefit in a Thing which hitherto had been wholly unprofitable to her.

NEAR about this Time the Queen granted to John Powell, Esq; Surveyor of the Ordnance, a Patent by her Prerogative, to have Power and Authority to dig, open, and work for Salt-petre, in, or upon any the Ground, or Grounds, within the Realm of England and Ireland, where the Salt-petre, without Fraud or Covin, should be thought to be found; and the same to try out, and make into Powder, as well within her own Grounds, Lands, and Possessions, as any of her Subjects; so as the said Surveyor, or his Deputy, did reasonably agree accord, and satisfy the Parties according to Law, and with the Owner of any such Stuff, or Necessaries, as might chance to be taken for the Use of the said Works.

IN the Year 1595, William Partherick, Esq, Surveyor of the Ordnance, was appointed to ride to all the Forts, Castles, and Places of Defence, within the Cinque Ports, and their Members, as well to view and survey what Want of Ordnance, Powder, Shot, and other Munition of War, was in every of them; and also to see the Decays of their several Platforms, within every of the said Places of Defence. To the Intent further Order might be taken, as well for the repairing and amending thereof, as for the necessary Supplies of such other Furniture there needful. He was also to take Order for the sending up from Dover to the Tower, those Pieces of Brais that were broken, and to deliver certain Powder, remaining at Canterbury, left there since the Year 1588.

Of the MINT.

THE Office of the Mint is likewise kept in The Mint: the Tower of LONDON. The Moniers are a Corporation, settled by Charter of Edward III. and confirmed since by several of our Kings, consisting of,

I. THE Warden, who is the Chief, and by his Office is to receive the Gold and Silver Bullion, and pay for it in full Value; the Coinage being defrayed by a small Duty on Wine imported; so that the Bullion is coined for the Goldsmiths, or whoever bring it in, Gratis.

II. THE Master-Worker, who receives the Bullion from the Warden, causeth it to be melted, delivers it to the Moniers, and when minted, takes it from them again. His Allowance is according to the Pound Weight.

III. THE Comptroller, who is to see that the Money be made in Size; to over-see the Officers, and controul them.

IV. THE Assay-Master, who weigheth the Gold and Silver to be coined, and seeth that it be according to the Standard of Fineness.

V. THE Auditor, who is to make up, and audit the Accounts.

VI. THE Surveyor of the Melting, who is to see the Silver Cast out, and not to be altered after it is delivered to the Melter, which is after the Assay-Master hath made Trial of it.

VII. THE Clerk of the Irons, who seeth that the Irons be clean and fit to Work with.

VIII. THE Engraver, who engraveth the Stamps for the Money.

IX. THE Smiter of Irons, who, after they are graven, smiteth them upon the Money.

X. THE Melters, who melt the Bullion before it comes to the Coining.

XI. THE Blanchers, who anneal, boil, and cleanse the Money.

XII. THE Porter that keeps the Gate of the Mint.

XIII. THE Provost of the Mint, who is to provide for all the Moniers, and to over-see them.

XIV. THE Moniers, who are some to shear the Money, some to forge it, some to beat it broad, some to round it, and some to stamp, or coin it.

IN the Year 1344, King Edward III. in the 18th Year of his Reign, commanded Florences of Gold to be made and coined in the Tower, that is to say, a Penny-Piece of the Value of Six Shillings and Eight-Pence; the Half-penny Piece of the Value of Three Shillings and Four-pence; and a Farthing-Piece, worth Twenty-pence. Percevall de Porte, of Luke, being then Master of the Mint. This was the first Coining of Gold in the Tower, and also the first Coinage of Gold in England.

It is also recorded, That the said King, in the same Year, ordained his Exchange of Money to be kept in Sernes-Tower, a Part of the King's House in Buckler's-Bury. In Times before passed, all great Sums were paid by Weight of Gold and Silver, or so many Pounds or Marks of Silver, or so many Pounds or Marks of Gold, cut into Blanks, and not stamped. The smaller Sums also were paid in Sterlings, which were Pence so called, for they had no other Coins.

THE Antiquity of this Sterling Penny usually in this Realm, is from the Reign of Henry II. notwithstanding the Saxon Coins (before the Conquest) were Pence of fine Silver, the full Weight, and somewhat better than the latter Sterlings.

William the Conqueror's Penny also was fine Silver, of the Weight of the Easterling, and had on one Side stamped, an armed Head with a Beardless Face (for the Normans wore no Beards) with a Scepter in his Hand. The Inscription in the Circumference, was this, Le Rei Wilam. On the other Side a Cross double to the Ring, between four Rowels of six Points.

KING Henry I. his Penny was of the like Weight, Fineness, Form of Face, Cross, &c.

THIS Henry, in the 8th Year of his Reign, ordained the Penny, which was round, so to be quartered by the Cross, that they might easily be broke into Half-pence and Farthings.

IN the first, second, third, fourth and fifth of King Richard I. his Reign, and afterwards, Easterling Money is commonly mentioned.

THE Weight of the Easterling Penny may appear by divers Statutes, namely, of Weights and Measures, made in 51 Henry III. in these Words, Thirty-two Grains of Wheat, dry and round, taken in the Midst of the Ear, should be the Weight of a Sterling Penny; twenty of those Pence should weigh one Ounce; twelve Ounces a Pound Troy. It followeth in the Statute, Eight Pounds to make a Gallon of Wine, and eight Gallons a Busbel of LONDON Measure, &c.

KING Edward I. in the 27th of his Reign, held a Parliament at Stebunheth, in the House of Henry Waleis, Mayor of LONDON, wherein, among other Things handled, the Transporting of Sterling Money was forbid.

IN the Year 1351, William Edington, Bishop of Winchester, and Treasurer of England, a Wise Man, but loving the King's Convenience more than the Wealth of the whole Realm and Common People, (saith Walsingham) caused a new Coin, called a Groat, and a half Groat to be coined, and stamped; the Groat to be taken for 4*d.* and the half Groat for 2*d.* not containing in Weight, according to the Pence, called Easterlings, but much less, to wit, by 5*s.* in the Pound; by Reason whereof Victuals and Merchandizes became dearer through the whole Realm.

ABOUT the same Time also, the old Coin of Gold was changed into a new, but the old Floren or Noble, then so called, was worth much above the taxed Rate of the new; and therefore the Merchants engrossed up the old, and conveyed them out of the Realm, to the great Loss of the Kingdom: Whereof a Remedy was provided by changing of the Stamp.

IN the Year 1411, King Henry IV. caused a new Coin of Nobles to be made, of less Value than the Old, by 4*d.* in the Noble, so that fifty Nobles should be a Pound, Troy Weight.

IN the Year 1421, was granted to Henry V. a fifteen to be paid at Candlemas, and at Martinmas, of such Money as was then current Gold or Silver, not over-much clipped or washed, to wit, that if the Noble was worth 5*s.* 8*d.* then the King should take it for a full Noble of 6*s.* 8*d.* and if it was less of Value, than 5*s.* 8*d.* then the Person paying that Gold, to make it good to the Value of 5*s.* 8*d.* the King always receiving it for a Noble of 6*s.* 8*d.* and if the Noble so paid, was better than 5*s.* 8*d.* the King to pay again the Surplusage that it was better than 5*s.* 8*d.* Also this Year was such Scarcity of white Money, that tho' a Noble was of so good Gold and Weight as 6*s.* 8*d.* Men could get no white Money for them.

IN the Year 1465, King Edward IV. caused a new Coin, both of Gold and Silver, to be made, by which he was a great Gainer. For, of an old Noble, he made a Royal, which he commanded to go for 10 Shillings. To this Royal was put an Allay of 8*d.* which made it weigh the more; and it was smitten with a new Stamp, viz. a Rose. He also made half Angels of 5*s.* and Farthings of 2*s.* 6*d.* Angelets of 6*s.* 8*d.* and half Angelets, 3*s.* 4*d.* He made Silver Money of Three-pence, a Groat, and so of other Coins, after that Rate, to the great Harm of the Commons.

Rose Noble.

William Lord Hastings, the King's Chamberlain, being Master of the Mints, undertook to make the Monies, under Form following, to wit, Of Gold, a Piece of 8*s.* 4*d.* Sterling, which should be called a Noble of Gold; of which there should be fifty such Pieces in the Pound Weight, Troy. Another Piece of Gold, 4*s.* 2*d.* Sterling, and to be of them an hundred in the Pound. And a third Piece of Gold, 2*s.* 1*d.* Sterling, two hundred in the Pound, every Pound Weight of the Tower, to be worth 20*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* of Sterling, which should be 23 Carats, 3 Grains and a half, 5*ƥc.* and for 37*s.* 6*d.* of Sterlings. The Piece of Four-pence to be 112 Groats and Two-pence, in the Pound Weight.

IN the Year 1504, King Henry VII. appointed a new Coin, to wit, a Groat, and half a Groat, which bear but half Faces. The same Time also was coined a Groat, which was in Value 12*d.* but of those but few, after the Rate of 40*d.* the Ounce.

IN the Year 1526, 18 Henry VIII. the Angel Noble, being then the sixth Part of an Ounce Troy, which was 40*s.* Sterling, and the Angel was also worth two Ounces of Silver, so that six Angels were worth twelve Ounces of Silver, which was 40*s.* A Proclamation was made on the 6th of September, that the Angel should go for 7*s.* 4*d.* the Royal of 11*s.* and the Crown for 4*s.* 4*d.* And on the 5th of November following again, by Proclamation, the Angel was enhanced to 7*s.* 6*d.* and so every Ounce of Gold to be 45*s.* and the Ounce of Silver at 3*s.* 9*d.* in Value.

IN the Year 1544, 35 Henry VIII. on the 16th of May, Proclamation was made for the enhancing of Gold to 48*s.* and Silver to 4*s.* the Ounce; also the King caused to be coin'd base Monies (called Testons) to wit, Pieces of 12*d.* 6*d.* 4*d.* 2*d.* and 1*d.* in Weight, as the late Sterling, in Shew good Silver, but inwardly Copper.

THE Pieces had whole or broad Faces, and continued current, after that Rate, till the 5th of Edward VI. when they were on the 9th of July called down, the Shilling to 9*d.* the Groat to 3*d.* and on the 17th of August, from 9*d.* to 6*d.* 8*ƥc.* On the 30th of October it was published, that new Coins of Silver and Gold should be made, a Piece of Silver, 5*s.* Sterling, a Piece, 2*s.* 6*d.* of 12*d.* of 6*d.* a Penny, with a double Rose, a Half-penny, a single Rose; and a Farthing with a Port-cloze. Coins of fine Gold, a whole Sovereign of 30*s.* an Angel, 10*s.* an Angelet, 5*s.* Of Crown Gold, a Sovereign, 20*s.* Half Sovereign, 10*s.* 5*s.* 2*s.* 6*d.* and base Money to pass as before.

WHICH continued till the second of Queen Elizabeth, then called to a lower Rate, taken to the Mint, and refined, the Silver whereof being coined with a new Stamp of her Majesty, the Drofs was carried to foul Highways to heighten them. This base Money (for the Time) caused the old Sterling Money to be hoarded up, so that 21*s.* current was given for one old Angel to gild withal. Also Rents of Lands and Tenements, with with Prices of Viſuals, were raiſed far beyond the former Rates, and were not ſoon brought down again. Thus much for baſe Money coined and current in England; but of Leather Money, there is no Mention of any ſuch here. Philip de Commynes indeed writes of Leather Money, with a little Stud or Nail of Silver in miſt, being for many Years uſed in France, which was occaſioned by the Poverty brought upon that Nation, by paying a Ranſom of three Millions of Florences for King John, taken Priſoner by Edward, the Black Prince, at the Battle of Poitiers.

BESIDES the ſeveral Coins mentioned by Mr. Stow, the following are to be added.

Money coined
by King Edward VI.

THE Money coined in the Reign of King Edward VI. were Pieces of 5 s. of 2 s. 6 d. of 1 s. of 6 d. 4 d.  $\frac{3}{4}$  and ſome ſmaller Pieces. On the Pieces of 5 s. were ſtamped upon one Side, the King's Effigy on Horſeback, with the Date of the Year under the Horſe's Feet; and between the Rings, Edwardus D. G. Ang. et Fran. Rex. On the other Side, the Arms of England and France quarter'd, with this Motto, Posui Deum Adjutorem meum.

By Queen
Mary.

IN the firſt Year of Queen Mary certain new Coins were proclaimed of Gold and Silver, viz. a Sovereign of Gold, 30 s. an Angel, 10 s. of Silver, the Groat, half Groat, and Penny.

Phillip and Mary's Coin.

QUEEN Mary alſo coined the ſame Pieces as her Brother Edward VI. had done: And after her Marriage with King Phillip, both their Effigies were ſtamp't on one Side of the Piece, facing each other; and the Arms of England and France quarter'd, impaled with the Arms of Spain on the Reverse. About the Effigies was engraven, Phil. et Mar. D. G. R. et Reg. Ang. Fra. and about the Arms, their Motto.

Queen Elizabeth's Coin.

QUEEN Elizabeth coined the ſame Pieces of Money with King Edward VI. and with the ſame Arms and Motto, only her Effigy was a half Face, looking to the ſiniſter Hand.

King James's Coin.

KING James I. coined alſo Crowns of 5 s. Half Crowns, 2 s. 6 d. Shillings of 12 d. Six-pences, &c. Having his Effigy ſtamp't on one Side, with a Dexter Face, and this Inſcription about it, Jacobus. D. G. Mag. Brit. Fra. et Hiber. Rex. On the other Side, the Arms of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, quarter'd in this Order. In the firſt Quarter, the Arms of France and England quartered. In the ſecond Quarter, the Arms of Scotland. In the third Quarter, the Arms of Ireland. The Fourth, the ſame with the Firſt, with this Motto about them, Quem Deus conjunxit. Nemo ſeparet.

King Charles I's Coin.

KING Charles I. coined the ſame Peices, both of Gold and Silver, as his Father King James I. had done before him. His Effigy was a half Face, looking to the ſiniſter Hand; the Arms the ſame, but the Motto was Chriſto Auspice Regno.

The Coin of the Commonwealth.

Soon after the Death of this King, in the Year 1649, when England was voted by the Rump Parliament, a Free State, there was Money coin'd in the Tower, both of Gold and Silver, viz. 20 s. Pieces of Gold, and of Silver, Pieces of 5 s. Pieces of 2 s. 6 d. Shillings, Six-pences, Groats, Half Groats, and Pence. All which Pieces had upon one Side the Croſs of England, in a ſingle Eſcutcheon, and on the other Side, the English Croſs in one Eſcutcheon, and the Iriſh Harp in another, not impaled but joined together in two ſeveral Eſcutcheons. On that Side that had the Croſs of England, there was engraven, The Commonwealth of England: And on the other Side, where the Arms of England and Ireland were in two Eſcutcheons, was engraven, God with us; which occaſioned a witty Saying of an old Cavalier, I find, ſaid he, by this Coin, That God and the Commonwealth are of different Sides.

About the Year 1643 and 1644, King Charles I. was forced to coin Money at Oxford, and other Places, for the Supply of his Armies at that Time.

After the Reſtoration of King Charles II. King Charles II's Coin. which was in the Year 1660, and the 13th of his Reign, all the afore-mentioned Money (called the State's or Commonwealth Money) was called in and other Money coined.

The Money coined by King Charles II. of Gold, were Pieces called Guineas, (being made of Gold from that Place) of 20 s. Half Guineas at 10 s. and ſome Double Guineas of 40 s.

Of Silver alſo, he coined Crowns, Half Crowns, Shillings, Six-pences, &c. all which Pieces, both Gold and Silver, were not ſtamp't as his Predeceſſors were; but done in a Mill, and from thence called Milled Money, and to prevent clipping, or other defacing, were jagged on the outward Brim, the Crown and Half Crown Pieces have this Inſcription round the Edge: Deus et Tutamen.

Theſe Coins have on one Side the King's Effigy, with a half Face, looking to the Dexter Hand, and about it Carolus II. Dei Gratia: And on the other Side, four Eſcutcheons placed in Form of a Croſs, whoſe Baſe Points meet in the Center of the Piece, in which Eſcutcheons are the Arms of the Four Kingdoms, England, Scotland, France, and Ireland; and about them, Magnæ Britanniae Fra. et Hibernia Rex; and the Date of the Year.

King James II. coined alſo the ſame Pieces, both of Gold and Silver, bearing the like Inſcription, only the Name altered, and the Face looking towards the ſiniſter Hand. King James II's Coin.

KING William and Queen Mary coined the ſame Pieces, both of Gold and Silver, with the like Inſcriptions, the Names only alter'd, and their Faces, which are two, both looking towards the Dexter Hand, with the Arms of England on the Reverse. In the Center of the Arms, was an In-Eſcutcheon of Pretence, Billette, a Lion Rampant; but after the Death of Queen Mary, the Coin had only the Effigy of the King. King William and Queen Mary their Coin.

IN this King's Reign, the old Coin of England was ſo extremely debaſed, by clipping, which was got ſo far, that Half Crowns were reduced to Shillings, and Shillings were accounted large, that weighed 8 d. And moreover, one half of what paſſed was counterfeited, which was eaſily done, the old hammered Money being at firſt not very curious; this made foreign Exchanges riſe upon the English, for as Silver is the Medium of Trade, that Metal is by all Nations allowed to bear a certain intrinſick Value, and Coinage being invented to certify the Weight and Fineneſs of the Piece; any Nation that debaſes the Alloy, or diminſhes the Weight in its Coin, does ſo much abate the Value of that Coin in Foreign Markets, however Authority may be able to keep it up at Home. King William's alone.

THIS made Guineas run up to 30 s. a-piece, ſo that in the Year 1696, it was found abſolutely neceſſary, notwithstanding the expensive War with France, and the prodigious Difficulty of the Undertaking, to call in all the hammered Money, which was reputed to be about four Millions of the ſix, accounted the Running-Caſh of the Nation, and to have it new coined into mill'd Money, which before the End of the Year 1697, was thoroughly accompliſhed, and with that Frugality and good Management, that are hardly credible. The Calling-in the old Coin

THE late Earl of Hallifax was Chancellor of the Exchequer at this Time, and was greatly aſſiſted in this Affair by Sir Isaac Newton, who for the Signal Services he had done upon this Occaſion, was, about three Years after, made Maſter of the Mint, a Poſt, which as Monſ. Fontenelle, ſays, in his Life of this great Man, requires great Skill

Skill in Geometry and Natural Philosophy, and oftentimes demands both difficult Calculations and a great Number of Chymical Experiments : And of his Abilities in this Way, Sir Isaac has given Proofs in the Table of Assays of Foreign Silver, which he printed at the End of Dr. Arbutnot's Book.

Queen Anne's Coin. QUEEN Anne succeeding King William, had her Effigy in the Coin, looking towards the Sinister Hand, all her Money likewise milled, with the like Bearings on the Reverse.

King George I. and II. their Coins. THE Coins of his late and of his present Majesty King George I. and II. are likewise milled, on the Reverse the Arms of the Kingdoms, with an In-Escutcheon of the most illustrious and antient House of Hanover ; but in his present Majesty's Gold Coin, the Arms, on the Reverse, are in a Shield or single Escutcheon.

ALL Coins current in England, as well Gold as Silver, are several, and of a different Value, but all reduced to Pounds, Shillings and Pence. Only (in relation to the Necessity of the Poor, and Exchange of great Money) a small Piece of Brass, Copper, or Tin, called a Farthing, (being the fourth Part of a Penny) and a Half-penny (which is the Value of two Farthings) have been permitted to be coined, but no Man is compelled to receive them for Payment of Debt or Rent, which cannot be said of any Nation, or State in the World besides.

No Money, in any Mint, is made of pure Gold or Silver, being too flexible, and therefore allayed with Copper. The Standard of Crown Gold, is 22 Carats of fine Gold, and 2 Carats of Allay, in the Pound Weight Troy, which is divided into 44 Parts and a half, each Part is to pass for 30 s. and the half Part for 10 s.

THE Allay of some Gold Coins is all Silver; as the Guinea Gold, which renders the Gold Coin some more white, some more yellow.

THE Standard for Sterling Silver is, 11 Ounces and 2 Penny-Weights of fine Silver, and 18 Penny-Weights Allay of Copper, out of the Fire : So that 12 Ounces of pure Silver, without any Allay, is worth 3 l. 4 s. 6 d. and the Ounce is 5 s. 4 d.  $\frac{1}{2}$ . But with Allay, it is worth but 3 l. and the Ounce 5 s.

THUS the aforesaid Value of the Gold Coin stood for many Years, till about the Year 1717, the Guineas (by Proclamation) were reduced Six-pence each Guinea, and the other Coin in Proportion.

Now as to some antient Affairs relating to the Mint, and the Officers thereof.

IN the Year 1483, the first of King Richard III. John Wood, Esq; had a Grant for keeping the King's Coin and Money, of Gold and Silver, in the Tower of LONDON, and elsewhere in England.

IN the Year 1552, It seems all, or most of the Officers had been tardy, for King Edward VI. on the 21st of July in the 6th Year of his Reign, granted a Pardon to Sir John York, Knt. Under-Treasurer of the Coin-Money and Mints within the Tower of LONDON and Southwark; to Nicholas Throckmorton, Esq; one of the Under-Treasurers of the said Mints; to Sir John Godsalve, Knt. Comptroller of the Mint within the Tower; to Thomas Fleetwood, Gent. Comptroller of the Mint within the Tower and Southwark; to William Knight of LONDON, Mercer; Assay-Master of the said Mints; to William Dunch, Auditor of the said Mints; to William Billingsley, Assay-Master; to William Stanley, of LONDON, Goldsmith, Assay-Master; for all and all manner of Transgressions, Contempts, Abuses, and Offences, touching or concerning the said Mints of the Tower and Southwark.

Anno 1560, Base Monies being called-in by Queen Elizabeth's Proclamation, were received into the Mint, and fine Monies thereof made. And a Computation was given in from the Mint, of the base Monies received into the Mint since Michaelmas 1560, to Michaelmas 1561, and of the Charges of the Workmanship, or Coinage of the fine Monies thereof made, with a Note of the Provisions, and other Charges incident to the same, the Waste of Melting and Blanching being borne.

THE Total of the Mass of Base Money was, 631,950 Pounds Weight.

AT this Time there were odd Pieces coined, of which none are now current, or hardly to be found; namely, Four-pence Half-penny Pieces, Two-pence Farthing Pieces, and Penny Half-penny Pieces.

Anno 1572, Queen Elizabeth granted to John Lonison, during Life, to be Master-Worker of the Monies in the Tower, and elsewhere, through this Realm. And his Allowance was 14 d.  $\frac{1}{2}$  upon every Pound of Silver coined. This Man coined Money Six-pence Farthing in the Pound under the Standard, and short of the Weight for divers Years, pretending that his Indenture bore him out, as it seemed indeed to do. Richard Martin, Warden of the Mint, was the chief Man

A Pardon for all the Officers of the Mint.

Base Money called-in by Queen Elizabeth;

Man that sued him, his Office being to over-see Matters of the Mint. This Controversy between Martin and Lonison continued for some Years. For in the Year 1574, the Lord Treasurer left the Matter to Peter Osborn, the Remembrancer, an able and honest Man. Martin and Lonison had several Conferences before the said Osborn, expounding the Articles of their Indentures. Osborn bad them draw out two Books each, concerning their own Minds. The Warden did so, and sent his, by Osborn, to the Lord Treasurer, concerning the Meaning of the said Articles. Lonison had Order to draw out his Book, and that he should set down, simply, what he thought was the Meaning of the Articles for his Turn and Purpose. These two Books saved the Lord Treasurer abundance of Pains, and would serve to give Light to the Queen's learned Counsel, and the Judges, the more skilfully to judge of, and understand the Matter, and Artsmen also to find the Difference between them, which, it seems, was not so easily discoverable.

THIS held till the Year 1578, when the Queen appointed Commissioners to enquire into Lonison's Doings, who pretended to them, that he did it, because 14 d. was too little to bear the Charges. In fine, the Commissioners were contented to allow him 15 d. for every Pound Weight; and if he would not accept of that, to be discharged of what was past, and the Queen to make Choice of another Officer in his Place, and to allow him a Pension of 300 l. a Year, during his Life, to be paid out of the Coinage. The Commissioners were Persons of the highest Rank, viz. Nicholas Bacon, Lord-Keeper; William Lord Burleigh, Lord Treasurer; Thomas Earl of Sussex; Robert Earl of Leicester; Sir Christopher Hatton; Sir Francis Walsingham, and Sir Walter Mildmay, all Privy-Counsellors.

AND here, as Mr. Strype has done, we will subjoin the Report of the said Lords, and other her Majesty's Commissioners, touching this Controversy in the Mint, given May the 25th, 1578, because thereby somewhat of the Nature of the Mint, in those Days, may be known.

"First, THEY find that the Standard for Silver Monies, appointed by her Majesty, is eleven Ounces Two-penny Weights fine Silver; and Eighteen-penny Weights for Allay in every Pound Weight, which is the antient Standard of the Sterling of England.

"Secondly, THEY find, that every Person bringing Bullion to be coined, must deliver the same Bullion at the Fineness of the Standard.

"WHEREUPON they think, that no Bullion ought to be put to melting, to make Sterling Monies, of less Fineness than the Standard aforesaid.

"AND therefore do like best, (if it may so stand with her Majesty's good Pleasure) that the said Standard should, by the Over-sight and Avouchment of the Warden, be kept in the Commixture and Melting of the said Bullion, being the first and principal Action of the whole Work, which, they think, is agreeable with the Tenor of the Indentures, and is agreeable unto Justice, in yielding unto the Subjects as good Silver in their Monies, as they delivered to make the same; and is also most for the publick Utility of the Realm, in preserving the Riches of the Coin, being the common Measure and Value of all Things, bought and sold, both within the Realm and without.

"By which Restitution of the Coin to its Perfection, it will fall out, that her Majesty then must forbear a Part of that Gain which

"now she hath; albeit in the Riches of her Treasure it will be sufficiently recompenced.

"THAT whereout of the 18 d. which the Subject payeth for the Coinage, Waste, and Workmanship of every Pound Weight, her Majesty now hath 10 d. and the Master 8 d. There is taken from the Monies, as the Coinage is now in Weight and Fineness, 6 d. Farthing more, to make up 14 d. Farthing for the Master's Allowance, without which he cannot perform the Work. And if the Standard should be restored in Perfection, then the same 14 d. Farthing is to come out of the 18 d. paid by the Subjects, and not out of the Monies.

"AND so will remain to her Majesty upon the Pound Weight, 3 d.  $\frac{3}{4}$ . which, nevertheless, is more than any of her Majesty's Progenitors had in the like Case.

"AND yet the Commissioners think, that the Subjects, to have the Standard kept upright, and to receive their Money coined by Weight, as heretofore they have done, may be endured to pay 21 d. upon the Pound Weight for Coinage and Waste, which is 3 d. more than they now do.

"AND then will remain to her Majesty, upon every Pound Weight, 6 d. Three-Farthings, and the Master to have his 14 d. Farthing, being the Sum agreed on in the Bargain with him, and the Money kept in Perfection in Weight and Fineness.

"THE like Consideration is to be had in the Standard of the Gold.

"BUT if her Majesty shall not like to forbear so much of her own Commodity, (which, for the Respects aforesaid, they wish it may please her to do) then in a second Degree, they think it fittest, that the Matter be thus ordered.

"THAT the Bullion being delivered by the Subjects at the full Standard of eleven Ounces, Two-penny Weights fine, the same, should by the Over-sight and Avouchment of the Warden, be put to the Melting at eleven Ounces, one Penny-Weight fine, and be shorn at 3 s. 3 d. in the Weight; whereby will be gotten out of the Monies in Fineness and Weight 6 s. and a Farthing in the Pound Weight, as the half Remedy of the Allay and Shear.

"WHICH Profit they think meet to be reserved wholly to her Majesty, to be accounted, viz. for the Fineness by the Leiger, and the Melting Books, and for the Shear by the Teller's Books, as the only true Means to make the Accompt by.

"WHICH 6 d. Farthing being added unto the 18 d. paid by the Subjects for Coinage and Waste, will make 2 s. and a Farthing upon the Pound Weight; whereof deduct 14 s. and a Farthing in Money, by Tale, for the Master's Allowance, and then will remain to her Majesty 10 d. the Sum that now she hath.

"BUT because the Master doth alledge that 14 d. Farthing is too little to bear all his Charges, the Commissioners, in that Request, (to encourage him the better to serve her Majesty faithfully in the Place) do think it convenient, (if it may so like her Majesty) to make his Allowance, the Sum of 15 d. upon the Pound Weight.

"AND then shall remain to her Majesty 9 d. Farthing upon every Pound Weight, not much less than the Sum she now hath.

"THE like is to be had in the Standard of Gold; and whereas John Lonison, now Master-Worker of the Mint, hath been charged with the Breach of the Standard, whereby it is alledged, that he should be in Arrearage to her Majesty;

“ Majesty ; because, that in his Answer, it seems,
 “ he took it, that his Indenture gave him Power
 “ to proceed in the Course he hath done ; and “ that the Prosecution of the Suit in the same, “ hath been very chargeable to him, the Com“ missioners think convenient, that it may please
 “ her Majesty, for the ending the Controversy,
 “ to give him a Discharge for all those Things “ rising in Question heretofore ; and that he may “ pass his Account to the Warden accordingly.

“ AND that it likewise pleases her Majesty to “ give a Discharge unto Richard Martin, now “ Warden of the Mint, to reckon and pass the “ said Lonison's Accompt in Form afore-declared ;
 “ which Martin they do not find to have done “ any Thing, in this Controversy, thereby to “ have any particular Gain to himself ; but the “ whole Matters alledged by him to have tended “ to her Majesty's Service, and for discharging
 “ of his Duty belonging to the Office.

“ AND this being by her Majesty allowed,
 “ the Indentures are to be renewed.

“ Finally, IF Lonison will not accept
 “ of this last Offer, to have 15 d. upon “ the Pound Weight, and to be discharged of “ what is past, then the Commissioners think “ good, that her Majesty should make Choice of “ another Officer that will serve the Place, in “ such Sort as may be most beneficial to her Ma“ jesty.

“ NEVERTHELESS, because Lonison shall “ not be dismissed without sufficient Recompence
 “ for his Service and Interest, the Commissioners “ think convenient, that he have a Pension of “ 300 l. by the Year, during his Life, to be “ paid out of the Coinage ; or, that wanting,
 “ out of her Majesty's Receipt, and One Hun“ dred Pounds a Year, after his Decease, unto “ his Wife, during her Life, out of the Coinage.

Lonison not complying with the Commissioners, or dying before all was ended between the Queen and him, there was brought into his Executors, a Charge of his Debt to the Queen, for so much as in his Time, he had impaired the Monies of Weight and Fineness under their just Standard ; so that from April 1572, to October 1578, there remained due to the Queen, by him, for the Remedies of the Assay and Shear upon Gold, molten and coined, 62 l. 7 s. 11 d.
 and 8 Mites ; and also remained due and owing to the Queen for the Remedies of the Assay and Shear, upon Silver, molten and coined, 1876 l. 13 s. 3 d. and 8 Mites : Sum Total, due to her Majesty for Gold and Silver, according to the Leiger and Teller's Books, 1939 l. 1 s. 2 d.  $\frac{1}{2}$ , and 4 Mites.

UPON the aforesaid Resolution of the Commissioners for Lonison's Business, these Matters following, were concluded upon, or perhaps propounded, only (by the Lord Treasurer's Device chiefly) for the Coining of Gold and Silver, and for the Allowances to be made to the Warden and Master-Worker.

BESIDES the four Manner of Monies of Silver, one Piece of a Penny shall be coined, so as 720 thereof make a Pound Weight.

THE Bullion of Gold shall be coined at 23
 Carats, three Grains, one Quarter of fine Gold, and three Quarters of a Grain of Allay.

THE Silver Standard at 11 Ounces one Penny-Weight fine, and 19 Penny-Weights of Allay into the Melting Pot.

THE Gold to be 36 l. 1 s. 10 d.  $\frac{1}{2}$  the Pound Weight.

THE Silver at 3 l. 0 s. 3 d. the Pound Weight.

THE Warden shall take up in every Pound Weight of Gold 5 s. 10 d. Half-penny, out of which he shall pay to the Master-Worker 12 d.
 Three-Farthings.

Note, THERE shall be retained out of the Com-mixture of Gold one 18th Part of a Carat of Gold of every Pound Weight of Gold.

AND one Penny-Weight of Silver of every Pound of Silver, which the Master-Worker shall have to his own Use, besides the 3 s. 4 d. Half-penny aforesaid for Gold, and 12 d. Three-Farthings for Silver, towards all Manner of Charges.

FROM April 1572 to October 1573, Gold Monies coined were Poiz 583 Pounds Weight 11 Ounces, three Quarters. From the last of Oct.
 1573, to the 12th of July 1578, Gold Money coined were Poiz 629 Pounds Weight, eight Ounces, one Penny-Weight and six Grains.

FROM April, as aforesaid, to October, 1573, Silver Monies coined were 55,675 Pounds Weight, six Ounces. From October, as aforesaid, to July 1578, Silver Monies coined, were 94,238 Pounds
 Weight, 10 Ounces and 16 Penny-Weights.

Anno 1577, there was a Trial-Piece made, A Trial-Piece which Trial-Piece tried the Work-Master of made.
 the Mint's Monies ; which Mr. Martin, the Warden, brought into Goldsmiths-Hall, being a just and good Standard in Fineness, as he divers Times reported it to be, by Trial made thereof in France and Flanders, and by many other Trials of the same made, before the preferring of the same to the Goldsmiths : And another Trial-Piece was made, authorized by the Privy-Council, to touch Plate.

IN the Year 1570, and odd, one Nicholas Mint Ashes
Rykward, formerly a Dependant on Walter Pep- pard, belonging to the Queen's Mines in Ire- land, petitioned the Queen about the Mint Ashes. The Rubbish and Ashes of the Tower
 Mint were cast out as of no Value, and laid rejected for the Space of four or five Years, and other some 20, 40, 60, or 100 Years and upwards, after the Silver and other Metals had been tried, washed, fined, and molten. This Man thought, that by further trying, good handling, and Husbandry with Labour, these Heaps of Rubbish might be wrought to some Profit. In Consideration whereof he humbly besought the Queen to grant him, and his Assigns, all that Rubbish and Ashes of all her Mints, which had been so cast out in the Tower, or such Parts of them as she should please, with convenient Liberty to make, search, dig, take, and use the same, filling and making good the same Places and Grounds which he shall break, and leaving them in as good Case or better than he found them, during some reasonable Term of Years, by her Majesty to be limited, with Proviso, that none other should have, use, or occupy the Trying of the same Ashes or Rubbish, nor the Earths wherewith the same were mingled ; to be taken at some reasonable yearly Rent, or Part of the Gain or Profit that should grow thereby.

IN the Year 1597, some Goldsmiths, and A Complaint others, made a Complaint, and preferred a Peti- against Sir tion against Misdemeanors in the Mint, which Richard Mar- were likely to cause great Decay of her Majesty's tin, Warden Profit, by Thousands of Bullion that might and of the Mint.
 would come in ; utterly discouraging her Subjects that would bring Bullion into the Mint. The great Hindrance whereof they made to be ; for that Sir Richard Martin did detain great Sums of their Money by Force, which had been long before coined, converting it to his own Use.
 But this seems to be only the Complaint of some few peevish Folks ; there being but seven Hands to the Petition, and the two first, Women, viz.
Mary Feek, and Susannah Franknel. This Man laid long under the Spleen and Malice of some People,

People, but as formerly, in a Letter to the Lord Treasurer, he appealed to the Searchers of all Hearts, who best knew how unjustly he was accused, and earnestly desired an honest and indifferent Jury for Trial of his Cause; so it bespoke his faithful and good Service, that the Queen continued him thus long in her Service.

The King's
Seals to be engraven only in the Tower-
Mint.

ONE peculiar Privilege of the Mint in the Tower is, that the King's Seals are to be engraven there only, for tho' the Kings of England had several Mints in other Places in the Realm, yet it appears, by sundry Writs, recorded in the Exchequer, that when any Seals of the Kings in former Times were to be engraved, that a Writ was directed to the Warden of the Mint, setting forth the Form of such Seal, with a Command, that he should cause such a Seal to be engraven by the King's Engraver in the Mint, within the Tower of LONDON. And the same Seal, with a fair Pattern thereof, together with the same Writ, to return at a Day certain. And then these Seals so made and returned, were by the Lord Treasurer, and Barons, delivered unto such Officers, as should use the same. And the Purpose of having a Pattern, was for Judgment, if any counterfeit Seals should be used.

WHICH certain Customers and Alnagers in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and many other Officers, used her Seal in their several Offices, and caused the same to be made at their Pleasures; the Warden of the Mint complained of them to the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, shewing the afore-said antient Custom, and the Usefulness of it, and how this Making of Seals at the Officer's Pleasure tended to the deceiving and defrauding of the Queen and her People: And he required that some special Commandment should be given out for the Defacing of all such Seals as were counterfeit. And that the antient Records might be searched for the Penalties due to such Counterfeiture. And that it had been heretofore accustomed for the Warden, or Graver, by his Appointment, to make Search for such Counterfeit Seals; and he made Presentment thereof before the Lord-Treasurer and Barons. And they, viz. the Mint-Master and Graver, prayed his Lordship's Order in the Premises to be had.

Coining of Farthings.

ONE Thing more to be mentioned in relation to the Mint, is, concerning a Question started in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, about the Coining of Farthings: Whether to make them of Silver, or Silver debased, or Copper? If they should be made of the Standard of other Money, the Piece would be only two Grains, of that Smallness, as neither to be conveniently coined or handled for Payment; if a base Standard be appointed, therefore to increase the Weight, that every Farthing might weigh six Grains, (which is the smallest that conveniently can be) then there would be Eighty in every Ounce; and in every Pound Weight 960, and would be current for 20 s. The Workmanship thereof considering the Number of Pieces, the Difficulty of Melting, and Manner of Commixture would cost 2 s. 6 d. the Pound Weight, and for her Majesty's Revenue, at least, 6 d. So the Value in Silver cannot exceed 17 s. that is, 3 Ounces 3 Penny-Weights of fine Silver; and 8 Ounces 17 Penny-Weights of Allay. This small Quantity of Silver will make no Shew, and be but clearly lost, and be as easy to counterfeit, as if they were only Copper.

If they be only of Copper, the same might be faithfully made of one Penny Weight, the Piece, and so in a Pound Weight there should be 240, and be current for 5 s. and with a reasonable Revenue thereof to her Majesty, as of the other Monies, and Charges of Copper, Tools, and Workmanship will be worth their Value. They will be apt for Use, and of infinite Continuance, and in them there is no Precedent of embasing. This was offered by Mr. Martin, the Warden, and one Mr. Palmer, an Officer (as it seems) in the Mint.

QUEEN Elizabeth once farmed out the Mint to some private Subject, who seems to have been the before-mentioned Martin, the Mint-Master. The Inconvenience and Danger whereof to herself, and the Nation, some Person unknown, shewed in the following Paper, address'd to the Lord Treasurer. The Mint farmed.

THE Mint of this our Realm, with the Gain belonging to the same, is not a Thing fit to be converted to the Use of every private Subject in such Sort, as of late Time hath been, and yet doth continue, by reason of the Estate of the outward Doings of the whole Realm, as Things sold and bought, whatsoever, as well Foreign Commodities, as our own, and our Traffick abroad, with the ordinary Means to maintain the Treasure in competent Estate, and to defend the same from extraordinary Decay. All which Things depend upon those Doings, which of Right ought to be put in Practice in the Mint. And these Things are of so much the more Importance, by reason they are daily and continually in Use from Time to Time. And therefore, as they are certainly, or uncertainly dealt in, so will the Price of the said Commodities, and the Quantity of the Treasure follow accordingly, by some near Proportion to the more Profit or Prejudice of the Queen's Majesty and the whole Realm.

AND although we have a Mint, yet we have no Mines, and therefore the Treasure of this our Realm is rather to be maintained by Art, than by Nature. And there is some Difference between other Countries and us in the Government of the Treasure. And this Thing is to be observed, That the Occasions of Loss or Gain do continually fall out from Time to Time, and will so do, so long as we have Traffick with other Countries, and many Times in such Sort, as a private Subject is neither able to prevent the Loss nor to procure the Gain; as of late Time, there hath been Experience of both: And by the Ignorance of these Things, the Inconveniences and Losses which have happen'd to the Queen's Majesty, and the whole Realm, with the Gain, which in the mean Time hath been neglected, are not to be countervailed with the Sum of Ten hundred Thousand Pounds in one respect or other. And if every Thing be duly consider'd, it will appear, that those Doings which of Right ought to be put in Practice in the Mint, are Things of greater Charge than any private Subject is able to discharge. And if the Mint shall long continue in the Hands of a private Subject, in such sort as of late Time it hath done, in a short Time it will neither be profitable to Prince nor Subject, without some general Loss otherwise, as well to the Queen's Majesty, as unto the whole Realm. And therefore of Necessity the Mint ought to be in the Queen's Majesty's own Hands, whether the Gain be more or less: If not for Gain, yet to avoid the Danger of Loss otherwise, if the like Occasions should hereafter happen which heretofore have happened.

AND this is most certain, that there is not any private Subject living that will seek to have the Mint, but rather in respect of his own private Gain, than for her Majesty's Profit, and the Commodity of the whole Realm. And if a Mint-Master can make the Mint gainful unto himself, his Coin being restrained within certain Limits of certain ordinary Allowances, then much more may the Queen's Majesty make the same profitable, considering that her Majesty may urge the ordinary Allowances further than is convenient for any Mint-Master to do, and also may increase some extraordinary Causes of Gain, far otherwise wife than any private Subject is able to do. And for my own Part, I am certainly persuaded, that there is not any private Subject living, which knoweth what of Right belongeth to the Mint, that with a safe Conscience can either seek to have the Mint himself, or would be willing that any other should have the same in Use, but only the Queen's Majesty, if by any convenient Means it lie in him to prevent the contrary.

AND although it may be thought that such certain and apparent Gain, as the Queen's Majesty hath had by the letting out of the Mint to a private Subject, hath been much more profitable than otherwise it would have been, if the same had remained in her Majesty's own Hands; which notwithstanding, if every Inconvenience be duly observed, it will appear, that the secret Loss, which since that Time, hath happened to the Queen's Majesty, and the whole Realm, hath far exceeded any such Gain, and that in divers and sundry respects, not here to be set down at large, but otherwise, if without Offence, it may be thought convenient.

The OFFICERS of his Majesty's Mint in the Tower of LONDON, at present are,

THE Warden, or Keeper of the Charge of Coinage of Money, Sir Andrew Fountain, Knt. whose Salary, for himself and Clerks, is 640 l. per Annum.

MASTER-WORKER, John Conduit, Esq; for himself and Clerks, 580 l. per Annum.

COMPTROLLER, the Lord Aylmer, for himself and Clerks, 340 l. per Ann.

The COURT of RECORD, and RECORD-OFFICE kept in the Tower.

THE Court kept within the Tower of LONDON, is of great Antiquity, consisting of a Steward, a Deputy-Steward; and the Gentleman-Porter is in the Nature of a Sheriff of a County, having the like Power within the Liberty of the Tower, for which Compass the Court is held by Prescription, every Monday, for determining Matters, whether Actions of Debt, Trespass, &c. for any Sum.

THE Records are repositied in two Places, viz. in the Chapel, usually called Julius Caesar's Chapel in the White-Tower, and in the Record-Office, which is kept in the Place, called Wakefield's Tower, joining to the Bloody-Tower, near Traitor's Gate. This Office was repaired and beautified in the Reign of Queen Anne, at 2000 l. Expence, at least. The Entrance into it is very graceful and clean, through a small Yard paved with free Stone; and against the Stone-Walls are planted Phileries. The Stairs and Stair-Case mended and whited, and made much more commodious and lightsome. The Windows; which before were but small and darksome, are now fashed, and let in much more Light, so requisite for the Inspection of those obsolete, and, sometimes, obscure Writings. The Rooms, which are three in Number; one above another, besides the large round Room, where the Rolls lie, are all beautifully wainscotted and pannelled with right Wainscot. This Wainscot-Work is framed into Presses round each Room, within which are Shelves and Repositories for the Reception of Records, as they shall be sent hither, from Time to Time.

GREAT Quantities of other Records lie in the Chapel of the White-Tower, which were in great Confusion till Queen Anne's Accession to the Throne, when the Lord Hallifax, observing the deplorable Condition they were in, moved the Matter to the House of Lords, who forthwith appointed a Committee, (wherein his Lordship presided,) to inspect this Grievance; and to report their Opinions in what Manner it might be most effectually redressed; to this Committee, frequently revived, and for several Years under the Direction of the same President, we owe the Safety and now regular Disposition of these venerable Remains, justly esteemed to excel, in Age and Beauty, whatever the choicest Archives abroad can produce of the like Sort.

HERE Mr. Prinn, some Time Keeper of the Records, had gather'd out of large Heaps, covered with Dust and Cobwebs, Pope's Bulls, Parliament Writs, and Returns, and Letters, which he printed; but took less Care to sort and digest them, and leave them in Order for the Use of others.

Pope's Bulls he reduced to Order being in all 165, beginning at the Year 1256, to the Year 1406, where are Bulls of Alexander IV. Alexander V. &c. unto the Bulls of Gregory XII.

THE Records that lie in the Office, begin in the first Year of King John. For before that Time there were no Rolls, but only Chartæ Antiquæ, i. e. Antient Charters, or Transcripts made and done, a few before, the rest since the Conquest, until the Beginning of the said King John; then follow the Rolls of his Son, King Henry III. where the first Inquisitions; post Mortem, begin. Then the Rolls of King Edward I. King Edward II. King Edward III. of King Richard II. King Henry IV. King Henry V. King Henry VI. King Edward IV. but the Rolls of King Richard III. are kept in the Chapel of the Rolls in Chancery-Lane; where be also the Rolls of the succeeding Kings.

AND as the said Chapel of the Rolls, and the Petty-Bag-Office, do fill with Records out of other Offices, they have been, and still ought to be transmitted into the Tower after some Years.

THESE Records, in the Tower, among other Things, contain the Foundations of Abbies, and other Religious Houses: And those of later Date in the Chapel of the Rolls, contain the Dissolution of them, and also the Donation of the Lands belonging to them, whereof many Families are now possessed.

THESE Records consist also of Leagues of Foreign Princes, and Treaties with them; whereof several Volumes have been transcribed and printed by the Pains of Mr. Rymer, the late Queen's Historiographer. All the Atchievements of this Nation in France and other Foreign Parts; The Originals of all the Laws that have been enacted, or recorded unto the Reign of Richard III. The Homage and Dependancy of Scotland upon England; The Establishment of Ireland, and its Laws and Dominions; The Rymer's Foedera.

Dominion of the British Seas, totally excluding both French and Dutch from Fishing therein, without Licence from England, proved by several Prescriptions, and Records before the Conquest, the Interest of the Isles of Man, and of Jersey, Guernsey, Sark, and Alderney, being the only remaining Parts of the Norman Possession left to this Crown of England; The Title to the Realm of France, and by what Means obtained, and all that the Kings or Princes of this Realm, to the Time aforesaid, have done abroad, or granted and confirmed unto their Subjects at home or abroad; Tenures of all the Lands in England; Extents, or Surveys of Manors or Lands; Inquisitions post Mortem, of great Use upon Trials of Interest or Descent; Liberties and Privileges granted to Cities and Towns Corporate, or to private Men, as Court-Leets, Waifs, Estrays, Markets, Fairs, Free-Warren, Felons-Goods, or what else could come to the Crown, or pass out of it; Several Writs, Pleadings, and Proceedings, as well in Chancery, as in all the Courts of Common Law and Exchequer; Inspecimus's, and Enrolments of Charters and Deeds, made and done before the Conquest; Deeds and Contracts between Party and Party; and the just Establishment of all the Offices in the Nation; The Metes and Bounds of all Forests in England, with the several respective Rights of the Inhabitants therein, to common Pasture, &c. besides many other Privileges and Evidences.

THE following Records are, or have been in the Office, as they are mentioned in an old Book, called, The Repertory of Records; wherein is contained whatsoever may give Satisfaction to the Searcher for Tenures or Titles, viz.

ONE Kalendar, called, The Book of Names, made by Way of Alphabet, containing the Names of all Men, whose Offices or Inquisitions, (taken after their Deaths) are there to be found: In which you may see what Lands any such died seized of, with the Tenure of the same; and in many of them, the last Wills and Testaments of such Persons recited in the same; which Wills are sometimes to be found no where else.

Item, Divers Kalendars of Escheators Bundles; as one of each of these Kings, viz. Henry III. Edward I. Edward II. Edward III. Richard II. one of Henry IV. and Henry V. and lastly, one of Edward IV.

Item, The Book of Heirs of Henry III.'s Time, containing the Names of such Persons as had Offices found at that Time, declaring who were their Heirs, and their Age; and sometimes mentioning their Wives, with the Counties wherein they had any Lands.

Item, The like Books, severally made up, of the Times of Edward I. II. and III. and of Richard II. Henry IV. and V.

Item, A little Kalendar, by way of Alphabet, containing such Manors and Lands as were found in any of the aforesaid Offices or Inquisitions, in the County of Essex, but not perfect.

Item, The like Book of the County of Lincoln; the like Books of the Counties of Berks, and of Buckingham; and one great Book for the Counties of Somerset, Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall; but not by way of Alphabet.

Item, A Kalendar and Collection out of the old Rolls, called Charta Antiqua, without Date.

Item, A like Kalendar of the Rolls of King John, and another of King Henry III. unto the 11th of his Reign.

Item, A Kalendar and Collection of all Grants of Inheritance, granted by any of our Kings before Richard III. and as antient as there are any Records here. This, with the like, was transmitted hither out of Chancery.

Item, Certain Rolls of Edward I. for his whole Reign.

Item, Two Books, or Kalendars, of Free-Warrens, Markets, Fairs, Leets, and other Liberties, gathered out of the Charter Roll of the Time of Edward I. and during his whole Reign.

Item, An old Kalendar of Charters of Corporations, and other Liberties, granted, of Cities, Boroughs, Abbies, Colleges, and Cathedral Churches, during the said King Edward's Reign.

Item, A Kalendar, or Collection, of the Parliament Rolls of Attainders, Restitutions, Resumptions, from the 29th of Henry III. till the End of his Reign.

Item, Certain Paper Rolls, for Confirmations of Charters; and Liberties of Colleges, Corporations, and Religious Houses; and for Licenses of Lands to be given in Mortmain, from the first of Edward I. till the last of Edward IV. done by way of Alphabet.

Item, One Book of Confirmations of Charters, of Liberties of Colleges, Corporations, and Religious Houses; and for Licenses of Lands to be given in Mortmain, as aforesaid, collected out of the Patent and close Rolls of all the Time of Edward II. except two or three of the last Years.

Item, Certain small Bundles of loose Papers of like Nature, by way of Alphabet, of sundry Kings Times, confusedly laid together.

Item, A Collection of the Patent Rolls, gathered, of all Presentations made by the King to any Church, Prebendary, or Chapel, as well in the Right of the Crown, as in the Right of any other, the same being, for that Time, in the Hands of the King, from the First of Edward I. till the Midst of the Reign of Edward III.

HERE are also two Books, the one of the Taxation of all the Spiritual Livings in England, the other of the Temporalities.

Item, The antient Perambulations of the Forests.

SOME Parliament Busineses, &c.

SOME foreign Busineses, as Treaties.

HERE are also these particular Rolls, viz. Compotus totius Reventionis Principis Wallie, i. e. An Account of the whole Revenue of the Prince of Wales, in the Time of Edward III.; A Visitation of the Hospital of Bethlem, Anno 4 Henry IV.; another, De Superioritate Maris Anglie, Anno 26 Edward I.; Franchises of LONDON, confirmed by Parliament in the Time of Edward III. Roll 15; the Process of the Court Military, in the Cause of Arms between Richard le Scroope, Knight, and Grosvenor, in the Time of Richard II.

AMONG the printed Books belonging to this Office of Records, is a Book of Common-Prayer, under the Great Seal; which was that which was printed and authorized to be used in the Church of England, upon King Charles II.'s coming in: To which Recourse might be had, as the authentick Common-Prayer then established.

THE Sum Total of all the Rolls now in the Office, reckoning several lately rescued from the rude Heaps in the White-Tower, and brought in thither, are as followeth:

Edward IV. — — — —	150

THESE English Records preserved here, were, for some Time, accompanied with the Treasure of those of Scotland. For Oliver Cromwel, after he had beat the Scots in their own Nation, seized all the publick Registers, Records, and Rolls of that Kingdom, and sent them up to the Tower, where they lay for some Years, till King Charles's Restoration: And Pity it was they continued not there longer, since being sent back by that King's Order, to be laid up in the Castle of Edinburgh, they most unhappily perished, together with the Ship that carried them, being cast away near Holy-Island.

THIS Office is kept open, and Attendance constantly given here, from the Hour of Seven a Clock to One, every Day in the Week, except in the Months of December, January, and February; and in them, from Eight till One; saving on Sundays, Holidays, Publick Fasting and Thanksgiving-Days, and Times of great Pestilence.

THE Chief Officer, or Keeper of these Records, is David Polhill, Esq; and his Deputy Mr. George Holmes.

THE good Orders made for this Office, in the Reign of Queen Anne, whereof a Table was hung up, were, "That the Deputy and Clerks should duly and diligently attend in the Office, during the Times aforesaid, and give their best Attendance and Expedition, to all Persons resorting thither, in their Searches, in copying and examining Records. That they should not procure, or suffer any Books, Writs, Rolls, Memorandums, or Records, to be embezzled, falsified, corrupted, rased, blotted, torn or defaced: Nor carry, or cause any of them to be carried out of the Office; unless by special Order of the Queen, or Lord Chancellor, or Master of the Rolls, or of her Majesty's Judges, Barons of her Exchequer, or her learned Counsel at Law, or some other great Officers of State, for her Majesty's Service upon special Occasions. Special Entry to be made in a Book for that Purpose, of any particular Book, Writ, Roll, or Record, sent out; of the Person that sent for it, and that carried it out of the Office; the Day of the Month when carried out, and when returned: To be subscribed by the Clerk who carried and returned it; and to be brought back without Delay, when done with. Every Book, Writ, Roll, &c. removed out of its Classis, or Place, by reason of any Search, Examination or Transcript, to be returned to its proper Place immediately after made use of. That if any Membrana, or Schedule, be unstitched, or torn off, to be new stitched, or fastened again by the Clerk. All Books, Bundles of Writs, Rolls and Records, to be diligently inspected once every Quarter of the Year, to see if any be missing or misplaced. No Person to be suffered to tittle, or take Tobacco in the Office. No Fee to be taken from any Person for a Search, who thro' Ignorance desires to search any Book or Record not kept in the Office. No Fee for Searches, Copies, or Examinations of Records, other than the antient Fees of the Office. A particular Entry to be duly made of all Searches, Copies, and Examination of Records, and of Fees taken for the same. No clandestine Searches, and Examinations and Copies to be made, concealed, or not entred by the Deputy, or any Clerk. No Person to peruse any Record in private, but "only publickly in the Office. The first Comer to be first served, and dispatched without Delay, or Preference given to another that comes after. The Rooms in the Office to be kept clean, and swept once, or more, every Week; and the Writs and Records therein preserved from Cobwebs, Dust, Filth, and Putrefaction; and the outward Doors duly locked every Night, for the Preservation of the Records. The Deputy and Clerks to spend their vacant Time in the Office, in making exact Kalendars and Tables to the Records for publick Good; and in reducing the loose Records in the Office and White-Tower Chapel, that are useful, into Order and Bundles, as the Master of the Office shall direct them. Every Deputy and Clerk of the Office, before his Admission, voluntarily to make and subscribe such an Oath, before the Master of the Office, as is suitable to his Trust.

Now as to the Antiquity of this Office of Records kept in the Tower. The Antiquity of the Record Office.

THERE is an antient Record of the 34th of Edward III. wherein Mention is made, of a certain House within the Tower of LONDON, wherein the King [Edward III.] caused to be laid up the Rolls, and other memorable Matters of Chancery; as well from the Time of his Progenitors, heretofore Kings of England, as in his own, for the safe and secure Custody of the said Rolls, and memorable Things.

THE Place where these Records were then kept, was a certain House, which House was afterwards called a Tower; that, undoubtedly, which is now called Wakefield's-Tower.

IN the Record above specified, it is said to be in a certain House.

IN another Record of King Henry VI. Mention is made of a little House. Johannes Malpas habuit Officium Custodis Armaturæ infra Turrin LONDON, unâ cum parva Domo tunc vacant. infra dictam Turrin, juxta Turrin infra quam Rotuli Cancellariæ Regis continentur.

IN this House there was a Chamber, called the White-Chamber, contiguous to a Hall called the White-Hall, where one Robert de Hoton, by a special Order from King Edward III. in the first Year of his Reign, arrayed and set in Order the Charters, Writings, and Muniments, in two Chests. The same King gave Order to the Clerk of his Works within the Tower, to see to the Reparation of the Defects of this House, as well to the Roof, as the Doors, Windows, &c. There were other Places, where, in Times past, Rolls and Instruments were kept; as, in the Keeper of the Rolls of Chancery his Inn, and in the Priory of St. Bartholomew's. For so, in a Record 39 Henry VI. Mention is made of divers great Chests, containing Records of Pleas of the Common-Bench, which were in the Priory of St. Bartholomew's in West-Smithfield, to be removed to the Tower, by a Command from the King: For the chief and last Repository for these Records was the aforesaid House in the Tower, whither they were often remanded, by special Orders from the Kings successively.

THE Keepers of these Records were, sometimes the Kings Treasurers. Thus Walter Reginald, the King's Treasurer, seems to have had the Records in his Custody, who, as appears by a Record, was by King Edward II. enjoined to deliver to one Bensted, all the Writings and Instruments, touching the Negotiation of Peace, between King Edward his Father, and the King of France, which were in his Custody in the Tower.

IN the 1st of Edward III. Robert Hoton seems to have been Keeper of the Records. For in that Year a Writ was directed to him, that he should bring to the Exchequer, all the Writings, Muniments, &c. which belonged to Thomas, Earl Earl of Lancaster, deceas'd, which remained in his Custody.

IN the 14th of Edward III. William de Kildesby, Keeper of the Privy-Seal, seems to be also Keeper of the Records of the Tower. For there is a Tower-Record that runs thus; "All the Rolls, Bundles, and Memoranda of Chancery, which were in the House of John St. Paul, (i. e. Powel) then Keeper of the Rolls of the said Chancery, were sent by the King's Command to the Tower, and there were delivered to Will. de Kildesby, Keeper of the Privy-Seal of the said King, by William de Emeldon, Clerk of the said John."

IN the 10th of Richard II. one John Burton seems to have been Keeper of the Tower-Records, from a Record extant in the said Tower.

IN the 11th of Henry VI. Thomas Smith, Clerk, was Keeper of the Records, as appears by a large Exemplification of a Process in the Star-Chamber.

SOON after this, viz. the 14th of the same King, John Malpas, who was Keeper of the Armoury, had also this Place of Keeper of the Records; for a Record in that Office runs; " John Malpas hath the Office of Keeper of the Armoury within the Tower of LONDON, together with one little House, then vacant within the said Tower, within which are contained the Rolls of the King's Chancery."

ABOUT the 30th of Henry VIII. Ralph Pexal was Keeper of these Records; for in a Bill signed about that Year, the King commanded Ralph Pexal, termed Keeper of the Records, within the Tower of LONDON, that he rase, or cause to be rased, certain Words, negligently written, long before, in the Rolls of Chancery, of 22 Edward IV. then being in the Tower, viz. in a Levy granted to Edmund Church.

Edward Hales was Keeper of the Records in King Edward the VIth's Time. In the Time of his Custody of them, a great many Records lay in an old House in the Tower unknown, undiscovered, till Hoby, that belonged to the Ordnance, looking for a convenient Place to lay Gunpowder in, found, and gave the said Hales Notice of it, and to fetch some of them away: Many whereof had lain there so long by the Walls, that they were eaten and perished by the Lime.

IN the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, one William Bowyer, a Gentleman, bred up in the Study of the Law, by the Persuasion of Sir Thomas Parry, a great Man at Court, took on him this Trust.

WHEN he came into the Place, he found these Records in no Order, so that they could be but little serviceable to any that should consult them, not knowing where to find what they looked for. He therefore drew up at first a Compendium of the Records; from King John to the last Year of Edward IV. And at the Instigation of Secretary Cecil, and for his Service, at length, writ out, with his own Hand, many Repertoria, necessary either for the Queen, or her Subjects, viz. of all the Rolls of Parliament, all the Patents, and Rolls of Wales, of Gascoine, Scotland, Rome, France, Normandy, and Almain, from the first of King John to the last of Edward IV. and digested them all into six great Volumes, which employed him eight Years, and above 1000*l.* of his own Estate, beside all his Labour.

THE Keeper of the Records, succeeding Mr. Bowyer, were Thomas Heneage, and William Heneage; then Roger Wilbraham, Esq; 2 Jac. Robert Bowyer and Henry Elsing, Esq; 10 Jac. then John Burroughs, afterwards Knight, and Nicholas Parker, Esq; the one of Gray's-Inn, and the other of the Middle-Temple; the two next

Keepers, viz. Prinn and Petyt, were great and laborious Antiquarians.

THE last was succeeded by Richard Topham, Esq; as he was by the present Keeper, David Polhill, Esq;

THE Fee for searching the Records in the Tower, was at first but a Noble for opening the Door; afterwards 10*s.* in Queen Elizabeth's Reign; for which any one might have a whole Day's Search from Morning to Night, with the Attendance of one or two Clerks, and the free Use of all the Records there, and of as many Kalendars as had been made thereof by the continual Labour of twenty Years, and more: Now the Custom is to search four Terms more for the same Fee.

BEFORE the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Records of the Tower were search'd but seldom; but in and since her Time, they have been more resorted to, such Pains being taken in Sorting and Kalendaring the said Records, that the Search is much readier and more easy than it used to be.

Henry Lord Stafford, a learned Nobleman, who was Chamberlain of the Exchequer in King Edward the VIth's Reign, and to Queen Elizabeth, had a Key of these Records committed to him; and being a Man studious of such Antiquity, bestowed much of his Time thereon: And was one of the first that attempted the reducing them into Order. He made an Inventory of most of them, setting them in such Order, that he could have found any notable Matter enquired for. Which nevertheless, after, by tumbling and tossing were displaced again. He made also Repertories of every Matter from King John's Days, till Richard III. And of Charters, Rolls, Patent-Rolls, Parliament-Rolls, from Edward III. to Richard III. This Lord is also to be remembered with Honour, for the Informations he gave to Secretary Cecil in the very Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, of the Neglects and Embezlements of these precious Records; which had this Effect, that the Queen gave the Secretary, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and others, Commissions to view, see, and understand, how and where they were conveyed away; and to draw up Instructions for the better preserving, and Order in keeping them hereafter. Whereupon they appointed two Keys unto the Office, one whereof they committed unto the said Nobleman; and that a perfect Inventory should be made of the Books that remained: And he, for the more careful Preservation of them, kept one Fitz, his Servant to be always there ready with his Key, when any Search should be commanded to be made, and to keep a Book of Comptrolment, when any Records went out; and by what Warrant, and how they were brought in again. For Bowyer, the Keeper of the Records at this Time, did use for his own Ease to take home with him some Rolls, and return them at his Pleasure again.

So that these Records have been kept sometimes under two Keys; as when the Keeper had one, and the Chamberlain of the Exchequer another; that the Safety of these valuable Writings might not depend upon one Man, whose Clerks or Servants might embezzle them. Upon this Account it was, that the above-mentioned Lord Stafford alledged how dangerous a Thing it was for the Queen and Realm, that the same should be under one Key; and shewed, that by sundry Records remaining in the Treasury of the Palace of Westminster, there had been given Allowance unto the Clerks and Deputies of the Lord Treasurer, and Chamberlains, for the arraying, (i. e. setting in Order) and removing of the Records of the Tower.

THERE

THERE are no Rolls perfect, but only Fragments and Pieces, before the Reign of King John. The Reason whereof might be, partly, the Defacing of many, by their being ill laid up, or by the Negligence of former Keepers, who trusted the Office to Servants.

THERE were divers Castles and Towers, in antient Times, where the State-Records and other Rolls of Moment were used to be preserved, both in England and France; but the Tower of LONDON was always one.

IN the Reign of King Edward II. the chief Places appointed for preserving the Records, were the Castles of Pontefract in Yorkshire, Tutbury in Staffordshire, and Tonnebrug (Tunbridge) in Kent, and the Tower of LONDON; which four Places are mentioned in an old Record. Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Know ye, that we have assigned our beloved Clerks, Robert de

Hoton, and Thomas de Sibthorp, to search, array, and put in right Order our Charters, Writings, and other our Muniments, being within our Castles of Pontefract, Tutbury, and Tonnebrug, and those which came lately, and are in the Custody of our Keeper of our Tower of LONDON; and also all those which are in the House of the Friars Preachers within the City of LONDON; that is, the Black-Friars; a Place of Strength, where Parliaments used sometimes to sit, and where was a Tower.

IN those Times there were also other Records kept in the King's Dominions, in the Parts of France, viz. at the Towers of Bourdeaux and Baiou; which Places are mentioned in a Record in the Time of Edward III. to which, it is to be observed, the Tower of LONDON is also added.

CHAP. X.

Of divers remarkable ACCIDENTS and OCCURRENCES which have happened in, or concerning, the TOWER.

IN the Year 1196, William Fitz-Osbert, a Citizen of LONDON, feditiously moving the common People to seek Liberty, and not to be subject to the Rich and more Mighty, at length was taken and brought before the Archbishop of Canterbury in the Tower, where he was by the Judges condemned, had Judgment, and was by the Heels drawn thence to the Elms in Smithfield, and there hanged.

1242, King John wrote unto Geffery Magnaville, to deliver the Tower of LONDON, with the Prisoners, Armour, and all other Things found therein, (belonging to the King) to William, Archdeacon of Huntington.

THE Year 1216, 1 Henry III. the said Tower was delivered to Lewis of France, and the Barons of England.

IN the Year 1222, the Citizens of LONDON having made a Tumult against the Abbot of Westminster, Hubert of Burgh, Chief Justice of England, came to the Tower of LONDON, and called before him the Mayor and Aldermen, of whom he enquired for the principal Authors of that Sedition, amongst whom, one, named Constantine Fitz-Aelulfe, avowed that he was the Man, and had done much less than he thought to have done: Whereupon, the Justice sent him (with two others) to Falks de Brent, who with armed Men brought him to the Gallows, and there hanged him, and the other two.

IN the Year 1244, Griffith, the eldest Son of Luellin, Prince of Wales, being kept Prisoner in the Tower, contrived Means to escape, and having, in the Night-Time, made a long Line, of the Hangings, Sheets, Towels, and Table-Cloths, he let himself down from the Top thereof; but in sliding, the Weight of his Body, being a Fat Man, broke the Rope, and his Neck withal. His Carcass being found in the Morning, by the Tower-Wall, was a pitiful Sight to the Beholders, for his Head and Neck were driven into his Breast between both his Shoulders. The King, hearing thereof, punished the Watchmen, and caused Griffith's Son, who was imprisoned with his Father, to be more strictly confined.

VOL. I.

IN the Year 1253, King Henry III. imprisoned the Sheriffs of LONDON, above a Month; in the Tower, for the Escape of a Prisoner out of Newgate.

IN the Year 1260, King Henry, with his Queen, for Fear of the Barons, were lodged in this Tower; the next Year he sent for his Lords, and held his Parliament there.

IN the Year 1263, when the Queen would have removed from the Tower, by Water, towards Windsor, several Londoners got together on the Bridge, under which she was to pass, and not only used her with reproachful Language, but also threw Dirt and Stones at her, which forced her to return for that Time; but in the Year 1265, the Citizens were compelled to submit themselves to the King for it; and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, were sent to divers Prisons, and a Custos was set over the City, viz. Othon, Constable of the Tower.

IN the Year 1282, Luellin, Prince of Wales, came down from the Mountain of Snowdon, to Montgomery, and was taken at Bluith-Castle, where using reproachful Words against the English, Roger Le Strange ran upon him, and with his Sword cut off his Head, leaving his dead Body on the Ground. Sir Roger Mortimer, caused the Head of this Luellin to be set up on the Tower of LONDON, crowned with a Wreath of Ivy. This was the last Prince of the British Blood, who had any Rule or Dominion in Wales.

IN the Year 1290, the 18th of Edward I. several Justices, as well of the Bench, as of the Assizes, were sent Prisoners to the Tower, who, with great Sums of Money, regained their Liberty, viz. Sir Thomas Weyland, and several others.

Edward II. in the 14th Year of his Reign, appointed for Prisoners in the Tower, 2d. a Day for a Knight, and one Penny a Day for an Esquire, to serve for their Diet.

IN the Year 1320, the King's Justices sat in the Tower, for Trial of Matters, whereupon John Gisors, late Mayor of LONDON, and many others fled the City for Fear of being charged with Things they had presumptuously done.

IN

IN the Year 1321, the Mortimers yielding themselves to the King, he sent them Prisoners to the Tower, where they remained long, and were adjudged to be drawn and hang'd: But at length Roger Mortimer of Wigmore by giving his Keepers a Sleeping Potion, escaped out of the Tower, and his Uncle Roger being still kept there, died about five Years after.

IN the Year 1326, the Citizens of LONDON took the Tower, wrested the Keys out of the Constable's Hands, and released all the Prisoners, and kept both the City and Tower for the Use of Isabel the Queen, and Edward her Son.

IN the Year 1330, Roger Mortimer Earl of March, was taken and brought to the Tower, from whence he was drawn to the Elms, and there hanged on the common Gallows, where he hung two Days and two Nights, by the King's Command, and then was buried in the Grey Friars Church. He was condemned by his Peers, and yet never was brought before them: For it was not then the Custom, after the Death of the Earls of Lancaster, Winchester, Gloucester, and Kent, wherefore this Earl had that Law himself, which before he had appointed for others.

IN the Year 1360, John the French King being Prisoner in the Tower, King Edward III. being newly returned victoriously from France, the first thing he did was to visit his Prisoner, whose Ransom was assessed, afterwards, at three Millions of Florins, or Nobles; whereupon he was brought honourably to the Sea Side.

IN the Year 1381, the Rebels of Kent drew Simon Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Robert Hales, Prior of St. John's, and Treasurer of England, William Appleton, Friar, the King's Confessor, and John Legge, a Sergeant of the King's, out of the Tower, where the King was then lodged, and beheaded them on Tower-Hill. The particular History of which Rebellion is related in the following Manner, taken verbatim from the Annals of Mr. John Stow, in the Life and Reign of King Richard II.

The HISTORY of Wat Tylar's Rebellion.

IN the Year 1381, and the fourth Year of the Reign of King Richard II. was granted to the King a grievous Tax and Tallage of his Subjects, both Spiritual and Temporal, through which was raised in England a Shipwreck of great Troubles; for divers Courtiers, desirous to enrich themselves with other Mens Goods, informed the King and his Court, that the Tallage was not gathered up faithfully to the King's Use by the Collectors; whereupon they offered the King, that they would pay a great Sum of Money for the Farm of that which they should gather over and above that which had been paid, if they might be by the King thereunto authorized.

SOME of them getting the King's Letters and Authority, sate in divers Places of Essex and Kent, and handled the People sore and uncourtously, almost not to be spoken, for the levying of the said Sum of Money; which some of the People taking in evil Part, secretly took Counsel together, gathered Assistants, and resisted the Exactors, rising against them; of whom some they slew, some they wounded, and the rest fled.

THIS Tumult began principally in Kent, and after this Manner, as I find the same set down in a Chronicle of St. Alban's: One of the Collectors of the Groats, or Pole-Money, coming to the House of John (others say Wat) Tylar, in the Town of * Dartford in Kent, demanded of the said Tylar's Wife, for her Husband, for herself, for her Servants, and for their Daughter (a young Maiden) every one of them a Groat, which the Tylar's Wife denied not to pay, saving for her Daughter, who (she said) was a Child, and not to be accounted as a Woman. That will I soon wete, (answered the Collector) and taking the young Maiden dishonestly, turned her up to search whether she were undergrown with Hair or not; (for in many Places they had made the like shameful Trial) whereupon her Mother cried out, which caused Neighbours to come in, and her Husband (being at Work in the same Town tiling of an House) when he heard thereof, caught his Lathing-Staff in his Hand, and ran presently Home; where reasoning with the Collector, Who made him to be so bold? The Collector answered with stout Words, and strake at the Tylar; but the Tylar avoiding the Blow, smote the Collector with his Lathing-Staff, that the Brains flew out of his Head; where through great Noise arose in the Streets, and the poor People being glad, every one prepared to support the said John Tylar.

THUS the Commons being drawn together, went to Maidstone, and from thence back again to Black-Heath; and so (in short Time) they stirred all the Country (in a manner) to the like Commotion. Then besetting the Way that led to Canterbury, arrested all Passengers, compelling them to swear; First, That they should keep Allegiance to King Richard, and to the Commons; and that they should accept no King that was named John, in Envy they bare unto John Duke of Lancaster, who named himself King of Castile: And that they should be ready, whensoever they were called: And that they should agree to no Tax to be levied from thenceforth on the Kingdom, nor consent to any, except it were a Fifteen.

THE Fame of these Doings spread into Sussex, Hertford, Essex, and Cambridge Shires, Norfolk, Suffolk, &c. And when such Assembling of the common People daily took Increase, and that their Number was now almost infinite, so that they feared no Man to resist them, they began to shew some desperate Acts, as they had rashly considered on their Minds, and took in Hand to behead all Men of Law, as well Apprentices, as utter Barristers, and old Justices, with all the Jurors of the County, whom they might get into their Hands. They spared none whom they thought to be learned; especially, if they found any to have a Pen and Inkhorn about him, they pulled off his Hood, and all with one Voice crying, Hale him out, and cut off his Head. The Bondmen, and other of Essex, being joined with them of Kent on Black-Heath, there came Knights to them from the King, to enquire the Cause of their Assembly; to whom they made Answer, That for certain Causes they were come together to have Talk with the King, and therefore willed the Knights to tell him, That he must needs come unto them, that he might understand the Desire of their Hearts.

THE King was counselled by some to make Haste unto them; but Simon Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, and Robert Hales of St. John's, Treasurer, affirmed, That it was not meet for the King to go to such a rude Company, but rather some Order to be taken for their Suppression; which when the Commons heard, being moved to a furious Rage, they swore, That they would go and seek the King's Traitors, to take off their Heads. Forthwith they took their Journey towards LONDON, and came to Southwark, where they filled all the Places of that Borough, and the Country about: They spoiled the Archbishop's Palace at Lambeth, for Despite they bare him. The Lord Mayor of LONDON and Aldermen (fearing the City's Spoil)

* It should be Deptford.

Spoil) decreed to shut up the City Gates ; but the Commons of the City, especially the poorer People, favouring the Commons of the Country, would not suffer the Mayor to shut them out, but threatned Death to them that went about it.

ALL the Night following, to wit, Corpus Christi Eve, the Rebels enjoyed free Ingate and Outgate, and encouraged the Commons of LONDON, as also of all the Realm, to favour their Cause : For, said they, their Purpose was but to search out the Traitors of the Land, and so cease. The more Credit was given to their Speeches, because they took nothing from any Man, but at a just Price, and if they found any Man Thieving, they beheaded him. The Morrow after, to wit, on Corpus Christi Day, coming into the City, talking with the Commons of procuring Liberty to them, and apprehending of Traitors (as they termed them) especially the Duke of Lancaster, they shortly got all the poorer Citizens to conspire with them, and the same Day after it was grown somewhat warm, and that they had tasted divers Wines (for the Citizens did set open their Cellars for them to enter at their Pleasure) they exhorted each other, That going to the Savoy, the Duke of Lancaster's House (to which there was none in the whole Realm to be compared for Beauty and Stateliness) they might set it on Fire, and burn it to the Ground.

STRAIGHTWAY they ran thither, and setting Fire on it round about, applied their Travel to destroy it ; and that it might appear to the Commonalty, that they did not any thing for Avarice, they caused to be proclaimed, That none, (upon Pain of losing his Head) should presume to convert to his own Use, any Thing that was there, but that they should break such Plate and Vessels of Gold and Silver (as was there in great Plenty) into small Pieces, and then to throw the same into the Thames, and so all, whatsoever, was destroyed : But one of the Rebels, (saith Henry Knighton) contrary to the Proclamation, took a goodly Silver Piece and hid it in his Bosom ; but another, who espied him, told his Fellows, who forthwith hurled him and the Piece of Plate into the Fire, saying, “ We be “ zealous of Truth and Justice, and not Thieves “ and Robbers ”. Also two and thirty of those Rebels entered a Cellar of the Savoy, where they drank so much of Sweet Wines, that they were not able to come out again in Time, but were shut in with Wood and Stones, that mured up the Door, where they were heard crying and calling seven Days after ; but none came to help them out, till they were all dead.

THESE Things being done, they brake down the Place called the New Temple at the Bar, in which Place Apprentices at the Law were lodged, for Anger which they had conceived against Sir Robert Hales, Master of St. John's Hospital, unto which Hospital of St. John's the Temple belonged, where many Monuments, the Lawyers had in their Custody, were consumed with Fire. After a Number of them had sacked this Temple, what with Weariness of Labour, and what with Wine, being overcome, they lay down under the Walls and Housings, and were slain like Swine, one of them killing another for old Grudges, and others also making quick Dispatch of them.

ANOTHER Troop (in the mean Time) set Fire on the noble House of St. John at Clerkenwell, causing it to be burnt by the Space of seven Days together, not suffering any to quench it. On Friday they burned the Manor of Highbury, the whole Number of the common People (being at that Time) divided into three Parts : Of which Division, one Part was attending to destroy the Manor of Highbury, and other Places, belonging to the Priory of St. John ; another Company lay at the Mile's-End, East of the City ; the third kept at the Tower-Hill, there to spoil the King of such Victuals as were brought towards him. The Company that were assembled on the Mile's-End, sent to command the King, That he should come to them without Delay, unarmed, or without any Force, which if he refused to do, they would pull down the Tower, neither should he escape alive. The King taking Counsel, with a few unarmed Men, went toward them in great Fear, on Horseback, and so the Gates of the Tower being set open, a great Multitude of them entered into it.

THERE were (at the same Time) within the Tower, six hundred armed valiant Persons, and expert in Arms, and six hundred Archers, all which did quail in Stomach, and stood like Men amazed ; for the basest of the Rusticks, (not many together, but every one by himself) durst presume to enter the King's Chamber, and his Mother's, with their Weapons, to put in Fear each of the Men of War, Knights, and others. Many of them went into the King's Privy-Chamber and played the Wantons, in sitting, lying, and sporting on the King's Bed ; and, that which is much more saucily, invited the King's Mother to kiss with them, yet durst none of those Men of War (strange to be said) once withstand them : They went in and out like Masters, that were but base Slaves and of most vile Condition.

WHILE these rude Wretches sought for the Archbishop, running up and down with terrible Noise and Fury, at length finding one of his Servants, they charged him to bring them where his Master was, whom they named Traitor. The Servant not daring to displease them, brought them to the Chapel, where, after Mass had been said, and having received the Communion, the Archbishop was busy in his Prayers ; for not knowing of their Coming and Purpose, he had passed the last Night in Confessing of his Sins, and in devout Prayers : When therefore he heard that they were come, with great Constancy, he said, to his Men, Let us now go ; surely it is best to die, when it is no Pleasure to live : And with that the Tormentors entring, cried, Where is the Traitor ? The Archbishop answered, Behold, I am the Archbishop, whom you seek, not a Traitor : They therefore laid Hands on him, and dragging him out of the Chapel, they drew him forth of the Tower-Gate to the Tower-Hill ; where being compassed about with many Thousands, and seeing Swords about his Head, drawn in excessive Manner, threatning Death to him, he spoke unto them in these Words :

“ WHAT is it (Dear Brethren) you purpose to “ do? What is mine Offence committed against “ you, for which you will kill me? You were “ best to take Heed, that if I be killed, who am “ your Pastor, there come not on you the Indig- “ nation of the just Revenger ; or, at least, for “ such a Fact, all England be not put under In- “ terdiction.

SCARCE could he pronounce these Words, before they cried out with an horrible Noise, That they neither feared the Interdiction, nor allowed the Pope to be above them. The Archbishop seeing Death at hand, with comfortable Words, (as he was an eloquent Man, and wise beyond all the wise Men of the Realm) spake fairly to them. Lastly, After Forgiveness granted to the Executioner that should behead him, kneeling down, he offered his Neck to him that should smite off his Head. Being stricken in the Neck, but not deadly, he, putting his Hand to his Neck, said, Aha, It is the Hand of God. He had not removed his Hand from the Place where the Pain was, but that being suddenly stricken again, his Fingers Ends being cut off, and Part of the Arteries, he fell down ; but yet he died not, till being mangled with eight several

several Strokes in the Neck and Head, he fulfilled most worthy Martyrdom. There lay his Body unburied all that Friday, and the Morrow, till Afternoon; none daring to deliver his Body to Sepulture. His Head those wicked Villains took, and nailing thereon his Hood, they fixed it on a Pole, and set it on London-Bridge, in the Place where before stood the Head of Sir John Minstarworth.

THIS Archbishop, Simon Tibald, alias Sudbury, Son to Nicholas Tibald, Gentleman, born in the Town of Sudbury in Suffolk, Doctor of both Laws, was Eighteen Years Bishop of LONDON; in which Time he built a goodly College, in the Place where his Father's House stood, and endowed it with great Possessions, furnishing the same with Secular Clerks, and other Ministers; being valued, at the Suppression, at 122*l.* 16*s.* in Lands by the Year. He built the upper End of St. Gregory's Church at Sudbury. Afterward, being translated to the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, Anno 1375, he re-edified the Walls of that City, from the West Gate (which he built) to the North Gate, which had been destroyed by the Danes, before the Conquest of King William the Bastard.

HE was slain, as you have heard, and afterward buried in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury. There died with him Sir Robert Hales, a most valiant Knight, Lord of St. John's, and Treasurer of England, and John Legg, one of the King's Serjeants at Arms, and a Franciscan Friar, named W. Appledore, (Appleton) the King's Confessor, all whom they drew out of the Tower, and beheaded them on Tower-Hill; Richard Lions also, a famous Lapidary and Goldsmith, late one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, was drawn out of his House and beheaded in Cheap. Many that Day were beheaded, as well Flemings as Englishmen, for no Cause, but only to fulfil the Cruelty of the rude Commons. For it was a solemn Pastime to them if they could take any that was not sworn to them, to take from such a one his Hood, with their accustomed Clamours, and forthwith to behead him. Neither did they shew any Reverence to Sacred Places; for in the very Churches they did kill any whom they had in Hatred. They fetched 13 Flemings out of the Augustin Friars Church in LONDON, and 17 out of another Church, and 32 in the Vintry, and so in other Places of the City, as also in Southwark, all which they beheaded, except they could plainly pronounce Bread and Cheese: For if their Speech founded any Thing on Brot or Cawse, off went their Heads, as a sure Mark that they were Flemings.

THE King coming to the Mile's-End, the Place before recited, was greatly afraid, beholding the Mad-headed Commons, who with forward Countenances, required many Things, which they had put in Writing, and to be confirmed by the King's Letters Patent.

The DEMANDS made by the Rebels to the King at the Mile's-End.

I. " THAT all Men should be Free from Servitude and Bondage; so as (from thenceforth) there should be no Bondmen.

II. " That he should pardon all Men, of what Estate soever, all manner of Actions and Insurrections committed, and all manner of Treasons, Felonies, Transgressions and Extortions, by any of them done, and to grant them Peace.

III. " THAT all Men (from thenceforth) might be enfranchised, to buy and sell in every County, City, Borough, Town, Fair, Market, and other Places within the Realm of England.

IV. " THAT no Acre of Land, holden in Bondage or Service should be holden but for Four-pence: And if it had been holden for less in former Time, it should not hereafter be enhanced.

THESE, and many other Things they required, and told him moreover, That he had been evilly governed.

THE King perceiving that he could not escape, except he granted their Request, yielded to the same, and so craving Truce, departed from them; and the Essex Men returned homeward. On the Morrow, being Saturday, the 15th of June, the King, after Dinner, went from the Wardrobe in Tower-Royal, in LONDON, to Westminster, to visit the Shrine of St. Edward the King, and to see if they had done any Mischief there. Then went he to the Chapel, called Our Lady in the Pew, where he made his Prayers, and returning by the Suburbs of West-Smithfield, he found all that Place full of the Kentish Men; wherefore he sent to shew them, that their Fellows, the Essex Men, were gone home, and that he would grant to them the like Form of Peace, if it liked them to accept thereof.

THEIR Chief Captain, named John, or, as other affirm, Walter Hilliard, alias Tylar, being a crafty Fellow, and of an excellent Wit, but wanting Grace, answered, That he desired Peace, but with Conditions to his Liking; meaning to feed the King with fair Words until next Day, that he might in the Night Time have compassed his Purpose; for they thought (the same Night) to have spoiled the City, the King being first slain, and the great Lords that were about him, then to have burnt the City, by setting Fire to it in four Parts: But GOD that resisteth the Proud, did suddenly disappoint him. For, whereas, the Form of Peace was written in three several Charters, and thrice sent to him, none of them could please him; wherefore, at length, the King sent to him one of his Knights, named Sir John Newton, not so much to command as to intreat him (for his Pride was well enough known) to come and talk with him about his own Demands, to have them put into his Charter: Of which Demands I will set down one, that it may plainly appear, how contrary to Reason all the rest were.

First, He would have a Commission to behead all Lawyers, Escheators, and others whatsoever, that were learned in the Law, or communicated with the Law, by reason of their Office. For he had conceived in his Mind, that this being brought to pass, all Things afterwards should be ordered according to the Fancy of the common People. And, indeed, it was said, that he had (but the Day before) made his Vaunt, putting his Hand to his own Lips, That before four Days came to an End, all the Laws of England should proceed from his Mouth. When Sir John Newton was in Hand with him for Dispatch, he answered him with Indignation, " If thou art so hasty get thee to thy Master, for I will come when it pleaseth me. " Notwithstanding he followed on Horseback a slow Pace, and by the Way there came to him a Doublet-Maker, who had brought to the Commons threescore Doublets, which they bought and wore, and he demanded thirty Marks for them, but could have no Payment. Wat Tylar, answer'd him, saying, " Friend, appease thyself, thou shalt be well paid before this Day be ended, keep thee near to me, I will be thy Debtor.

SETTING Spurs to his Horse he departed from his Company, and came so near to the King, that his Horse had touched the Crupper of the King's Horse, and the first Words he spake, were these, Sir, King, seest thou all yonder People? Yea, truly, (quoth the King) wherefore sayest thou so? Because (said he) they be all at my Commandment, and have sworn to me their Faith and Truth, to do all that I would have them. In good Time, (replied the King) I believe it well. Then said Wat Tyler, Believest thou, King, that these People, and as many more, as be in LONDON, at my Command, will depart from thee thus, without having thy Letters. No, (said the King,) Ye shall have them, they be ordained for you, and shall be delivered to every one of them.

AT these Words, Wat Tyler, seeing the Knight, Sir John Newton, near to him, on Horseback, bearing the King's Sword, was offended, and said, It had become him better to be on Foot in his Presence. The Knight, not having forgot his old accustomed Manhood, answered, That it was no Harm, seeing himself was on Horseback: Which Words so offended Wat, that he drew his Dagger, and offer'd to strike the Knight, calling him Traitor. The Knight answered, He lied, and drew his Dagger likewise. Wat Tyler, not suffering such an Indignity to be done him, and before his Rustick Companions; made as if he would have run upon the Knight; the King, therefore, seeing the Knight in Danger, to assuage the Rigour of Wat, for the Time, commanded the Knight to alight on Foot, and to deliver his Dagger to Wat Tyler. But when his proud Mind could not be so pacified, but he would also have his Sword, the Knight answer'd, It was the King's Sword, and (quoth he) thou art not worthy to have it, nor durst thou ask it of me, if there were no more but Thou and I. By my Faith, said Wat Tyler, I shall never eat until I have thy Head; and would have run in upon the Knight.

AT that very Instant came to the King, William Walworth, Lord Mayor of LONDON; a bold, courageous, and brave-minded Man, with many Knights and Squires to assist the King, and he said, "My Liege, It were a great Shame; and such as never had been heard of, if, in thy Presence, they should permit a Noble Knight to be shamefully murdered, and before the Face of their Sovereign, wherefore he ought to be rescued, and Tyler, the Rebel, to be arrested." Which Words being heard; the King, altho' he were but of tender Years, taking Boldness and Courage to him, commanded the Mayor of LONDON to lay Hand upon him; the Mayor, being a Man of an incomparable Spirit and Boldness, without any further Delay, or Doubting, strait arrested him with his Mace upon the Head, and in such Sort, that he fell down at the Feet of his Horse. By-and-by they which attended on the King environed him round about, whereby he was not seen of his Company. And an Esquire, of the King's, called John Cavendish; alighted from his Horse, and thrust his Sword into Wat Tyler's Belly: Albeit, more Opinions do hold, that the Mayor did it with his Dagger, and many, besides, thrust him in, in many Places of his Body, and then drew him from among the People into the Hospital of St. Bartholomew; which when the Commons perceived, they cried out, That their Captain was traiterously slain, heartning one another to fight, and to revenge his Death, bending their Bows. But the King rode to them, saying, "What a Work is this, my Men? What mean you to do? Will you shoot at your King? Be not quarrellous, or sorry for the Death of a Traitor and Rebel; I am your King, I will be your Captain and Leader;

VOL. I.

"follow me into the Field, there to have what-soever you require.

THIS the King did, left the Commons, being bitterly bent in Mind, should set Fire on the Houses in Smithfield, where their Captain was slain. They, therefore, followed him into the open Field, and the Soldiers, that were with him, not knowing, as yet, whether they would kill the King, or be in Reft, and depart home with the King's Charter. In the mean while; worthy Walworth, the (for ever) famous Mayor of LONDON, to second his first Piece of Service, which fell out to so good Purpose, only with one Servant, riding speedily into the City, began to cry, "You good Citizens, come to help your King, that is in Doubt to be murdered, and succour me, your Mayor, that am in the like Danger. Or, if you will not succour me, yet leave not the King destitute." When the Citizens heard this, in whose Hearts the Love of the King was ingrafted, suddenly, and very seemly prepared, to the Number of 1000; they tarried in the Streets for some one of the Knights to lead them (with the Mayor) to the King. And by good Fortune, Sir Robert Knowles, a Freeman of the City, came in the very Instant, whom they all required to be their Leader. He gladly undertook Part of them; and Perducas Dalbert, the Lord Mayor, and some other Knights, led on the rest to the King's Presence. The King, and all that were with him, rejoiced not a little at the unhop'd-for Coming of these brave armed Citizens, who suddenly compassed the whole Multitude of the Commons.

THERE might a Man have seen a wonderful Change of God's Right Hand; how the Commons did now throw down their Weapons and fall to the Ground, beseeching Pardon, who, lately before did glory, that they had the King's Life in their Power, and now were glad to hide themselves in Caves, Ditches, Corn-Fields, &c. The Knights, therefore, desirous to be revenged, besought the King to permit them to take off the Heads of an Hundred or two: But the King would not condescend to their Request, but commanded the Charter which they had demanded, written and sealed, to be delivered to them for the Time, to avoid any more Mischief, as knowing well, that Essex was not yet pacified, nor Kent stayed, the Commons and Rusticks of which Counties were ready to rise again if he did not satisfy them the sooner. The Commons having got the Charter, departed homeward, and the rude People being dispersed and gone, the King called for his valiant Mayor of LONDON, William Walworth, whom (with great Honour) he Knighted there in the Field; and as he did very worthily deserve. The like he did to Nicholas Brember, John Philpot, Robert Lawnd, John Standish, Nicholas Twisford, and Adam Francis, Aldermen. Afterwards the King, with his Lords, and his Company, orderly enter'd into the City of LONDON with great Joy, and went to his Royal Mother who was lodged in the Tower-Royal, called the Queen's Wardrobe, and where she had remained two Days and two Nights very much abashed and amazed; but when she saw the King, her Son, she was highly comforted, and said, "Ah! fair Son, what great Sorrow have I suffered for you this Day!" The King answer'd, and said, "Certainly, Madam, I know it well; but now rejoice and thank God, for I have this Day recovered my Heritage, and the Realm of England, which I had near lost.

THE Archbishop's Head was taken off the Bridge, and Wat Tyler's Head set up in the Place.

HERE

HERE we are further to consider, that for an eternal Remembrance of this happy Day, and the City's Honour withal, the King granted, that there should be a Dagger added to the Arms of the City, in the Right Quarter of the Shield, for an Augmentation of the same Arms, and a Memory of the Lord Mayor's valiant Act, as doth appear unto this Day: For, 'till that Time, the City bare only the Cross without the Dagger.

AND whereas it hath been far spread abroad by vulgar Opinion, that the Rebel smitten down so manfully by Sir William Walworth, the then worthy Lord Mayor of LONDON, was named Jack Straw, and not Wat Tyler, I thought good to reconcile this rash conceived Doubt by such Testimony as I find in antient and good Records. The principal Leaders and Captains of the Commons, were Wat Tyler, as the first Man that took himself to be offended: The Second was John or Jack Straw; the Third, John Kirkby; the Fourth, Allen Thredder; the Fifth, Thomas Scot; the Sixth, Ralph Rugge. These, and many others, were Leaders of the Kentish and Essex Men. At Mildenhall, and Bury in Suffolk, was Robert Westbrome that made himself a King, and was most famous, next to John Wrawe, who being a Priest could not set Crown upon Crown; but left the Name of King and Crown to the same Robert. At Norwich, John Lister, a Dyer, exercised the Name and Power of a King, 'till he was taken and hanged for his Pains. Thus dangerously had this Rebellion dispersed itself abroad, but the happy and prosperous Success at LONDON, with other good Care for them further off, gave a gracious Issue to all in the End.

After the Death of Wat Tyler, and Jack Straw being taken, with divers others, as chief Actors in this monstrous Disorder, the aforementioned Lord Mayor sat in Judgment upon the Offenders, and pronounced the Sentence of Death upon them. At which Time the Lord Mayor spoke openly to him thus: "John, (quoth he) Behold, thy Death is at Hand without all Doubt, and there is no Way thro' which thou mayest hope to escape; wherefore, for thy Soul's Health, without making any Lie, tell us what you purposed to have done among you; and to what End you did assemble the Commons?" When he had stayed a while, as doubtful what to say, the Mayor begun thus again to him, "Surely thou knowest, John, that the Thing which I demand of thee, if thou do it truly, it will redound to thy Soul's Health, &c. He, therefore, animated by the Lord Mayor's good Words, began as followeth:

The CONFESSION of JACK STRAW to the Lord Mayor of LONDON, before his Death.

"Now it booteth not to lie, neither is it lawful to utter any Untruth; especially understanding that my Soul is to suffer straiter Torments, if I should so do. And because I hope for two Commodities by speaking the Truth: First, That what I shall speak may profit the Commonwealth: And Secondly, After my Death, I trust by your Suffrages to be succoured according to your Promises, which is, to pray for me; I will speak faithfully, and without any Deceit.

"At the same Time as we were assembled upon Blackheath, and had sent to the King to come unto us, our Purpose was to have slain all such Knights, Squires, and Gentlemen, as should have given their Attendance thither upon him. And as for the King, we would have kept him among us, to the End that the People might more boldly have repaired to us; for they would have thought, that whatsoever we did, the same had been done by his Authority. Finally, when we had gotten Power enough, that we needed not to fear any Force which might be made against us, we would have slain all such Noblemen as might either have given Counsel, or made any Resistance against us; especially we would have slain the Knights of the Rhodes or St. John's: And Lastly, We would have killed the King himself, and all Men of Possessions, with Bishops, Monks, Canons, and Parsons of Churches; only Friars Mendicants we would have spared, that might have sufficed for Ministration of the Sacraments.

"When we had made a Riddance of all these, we would have devised Laws, according to which Laws the Subjects of the Realm should have lived. For we would have created Kings, as Wat Tyler in Kent, and others in other Counties: But, because this our Purpose was disappointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who would not permit the King to come to us, we fought by all Means to dispatch him out of the Way, as at length we did. Moreover, the same Evening that Wat Tyler was killed, we were determined, (having the greatest Part of the Commons of the City bent to join with us,) to have set Fire in Four Corners of the City, and so to have divided, among ourselves, the Spoil of the chiefest Riches that might have been found, at our own Pleasure. And this (said he) was our Purpose, as God may help me now at my last End.

AFTER this Confession made, he was beheaded, and his Head set on London-Bridge, by Wat Tyler's, and many others.

Now to proceed to other Actions in the Tower.

IN the Year 1387, King Richard II. kept his Christmas in the Tower; and in the Year 1389, was sent Prisoner thither.

IN the Year 1414, Sir John Oldcastle broke out of the Tower; and the same Year a Parliament being held at Leicester, a Porter of the Tower was drawn, hanged, and beheaded, whose Head was sent up, and set over the Tower Gate, for consenting to one Whitlock's Escape out of the Tower.

IN the Year 1419, Fryar Randolph was sent to the Tower, and there slain by the Parson of St. Peter's in the Tower.

IN the Year 1426, a Fellow, who pretended to be sent from the Emperor to young King Henry VI. calling himself the Baron of Blackamore, and a great Physician, was hanged and quartered. His Head was set upon the Tower, and his Quarters upon Four of the Gates of the City.

IN the Year 1458, in Whitsun Week, the Duke of Somerset, with Anthony Rivers, and four more, kept Jufts before the Queen, in the Tower of LONDON, against three Squires of the Queen's and others.

IN the Year 1465, King Henry VI. was brought Prisoner to the Tower, where he long remained.

IN the Year 1470, the Tower was yielded up to Sir Richard Lee, Mayor of LONDON, and his Brethren the Aldermen, who forthwith entered the same, delivering King Henry from his Imprisonment, and placed him in the King's Lodgings there: But the next Year he was again sent thither a Prisoner, and there murdered, by the Bloody Hand of Richard Duke of Gloucester.

IN the Year 1478, George Duke of Clarence, by the Contrivance of the above-mentioned Richard,

Richard Duke of Gloucester, his younger Brother, was drowned in a Butt of Malmsey, in the Tower.

IN the Year 1483, the said Richard, being Protector of the King and Kingdom, convoked a Council in the Tower, at which, suddenly and unexpectedly, accusing the Lord Hastings of High-Treason, he swore by St. Paul, (his usual Oath) that he would not touch Bread, nor Drink, till his Head were stricken off, which was done accordingly, upon a Log of Timber, on the Green, before the Chapel in the Tower.

THE same Year young King Edward V. with his Brother, were murdered in the Tower, by Ruffians, hired for that Purpose by their bloody Uncle, Richard the Protector, afterwards King of England.

IN the Year 1485, John Earl of Oxford was made Constable of the Tower, and had the Custody of the Lions given him.

IN the Year 1501, in the Month of May, there was a Royal Tilt and Tourney of Lords and Knights in the Tower of LONDON, before the King.

IN the Year 1502, Queen Elizabeth, Wife to Henry VII. died of Child-birth in the Tower.

IN the Year 1509, Sir Richard Empson, Knight, and Edmund Dudley, Esq; Serjeant at Law, were committed to the Tower. These two were employed by King Henry VII. to raise Money, upon Penal Laws, for filling his Coffers, which they did very vigorously, in a Commission of Forfeitures; for which, in the First of King Henry VIII. they were both condemned and attainted by Parliament, and upon the 18th of August 1510, beheaded on Tower-Hill. Divers of their inferior Agents, called Promoters, were set on the Pillory in Cornhill, with Papers on their Heads, and forced to ride through the City with their Faces to the Horse-Tails.

IN the Year 1512, the Chapel in the White-Tower was burnt.

IN the Year 1513, Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, (whom Philip Duke of Austria had deliver'd up into the Hands of King Henry VII. on Promise that he would not put him to Death) was by Henry VIII. not being bound by his Father's Oath, caused to be beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1521, a Difference arising between Cardinal Wolsey and the Duke of Buckingham, the Cardinal found Means to take away his Life, alledging that the Duke should say to the Lord Abergavenny, who married his Daughter, That if King Henry should die without Issue, he expected to have the Crown himself; so that he, being tried by his Peers, was found Guilty, and on the 17th of May beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1534, John Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, and Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor, were committed to the Tower for denying to swear to the Act of Succession, made in the last Parliament; yet, both professing a Readiness to swear to the Succession itself, but not to the whole Act, wherein the Marriage with Queen Catharine, the King's first Wife, was declared to be against the Law of God; and wherein also were some Touches against the Pope's Authority: For this Refusal they were attainted by Parliament; and afterwards, in another Parliament, an Act passed for the King's Supremacy, and for abolishing the Pope's Power in this Realm: This Act they also refused to swear to. Upon the said Attainder, they were both executed on Tower-Hill, the Bishop in June 1535, and the Knight the Month following. Bishop Fisher was much lamented, being reputed a Man of great Learning, and of a good Life. The Pope had elected him Cardinal, and his Hat was come as far as Calais, but before it could come to England his Head was off. Sir Thomas More was both learned and wise, but so given to Jestings that he could not refrain from it, even under Misfortunes, and at the very Time of his Death. At his Entrance into the Tower, the Gentleman-Porter asked for his Fee, which is the upper Garment, he pulled off his Cap to give him, saying, This is the uppermost Garment I have; but that not sufficing, he pulled out a Handful of Angels and gave him: A Knight, who was in his Company, saying, He was glad to find that he was so full of Angels. Yes, answered he, I always love to have my best Friends about me. When he had been close Prisoner for some Time, his Books were all taken from him, whereupon he shut up all his Windows, and being asked, why he did so? It is Time, answered he, to shut up Shop when the Ware is all gone. When he was upon the Scaffold, the Headsmen kneeling down to ask him Forgiveness, I do forgive thee, said he, but I promise thee thou wilt get no Credit by cutting off my Head, my Neck is so short. And when he was to lay his Head down upon the Block, having a great Grey Beard, he stroked it out, and said to the Headsmen, I pray you let me lay my Beard over the Block, lest you should cut it; for tho' you have a Warrant to cut off my Head, you have none to cut my Beard.

IN the Year 1536, Queen Anna Bullen, King Henry VIII's second Wife, was in the Month of May brought to the Tower by Sir Thomas Audley, Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Cromwel, Secretary, and Sir William Kingston, Lieutenant of the Tower. At the Tower-Gate she fell on her Knees before the said Lords, beseeching God to help her, as she was Innocent of what she was accused. She was arraigned in the Tower before the Duke of Norfolk, he setting as High Steward of England: When her Indictment was read, she made such wise and discreet Answers, that she seemed fully to clear herself of every thing laid to her Charge; but she was nevertheless found Guilty, and beheaded in the same Month on a Scaffold upon the Green within the Tower; as her Brother, the Lord Rochford, was two Days before upon Tower-Hill; together with Henry Norris, Mark Smeton, William Brierton, and Francis Weston, all of the King's Privy-Chamber, about Matters concerning the Queen.

THE same Fate did the Lord Darcy undergo, on the same Hill, in June 1538, having been concerned in a Rebellion in the North.

ON the third of November following, Henry Courtney, Marquis of Exeter, Henry Pool, Lord Montacute, Sir Nicholas Carew, of Bedington, Knight of the Garter, and Master of the King's Horse, and Sir Edward Nevil, Brother to the Lord Abergavenny, were sent to the Tower, being accused by Sir Geoffrey Pool, the Lord Montacute's Brother, of High Treason: Three of them were beheaded on Tower-Hill on the 9th of January, and the other, viz. Sir Nicholas Carew on the 3d of March following.

IN the Year 1540, on the 28th of July, the like Punishment was inflicted on the said Hill, upon Thomas Lord Cromwel, Earl of Essex, the King's great Counsellor in the Dissolution of Monasteries, and Assumption of the Supremacy; together with the Lord Hungerford of Heitisbury.

IN the Year 1541, Margaret Countess of Salisbury, attainted two Years before, was beheaded within the said Tower. This Lady was the last of the right Line and Name of Plantagenet.

ABOUT a Month after, the Lord Leonard Grey, Deputy of Ireland, and Brother to the Marquis of Dorset, was beheaded on Tower-Hill, for suffering his Nephew Gerald Fitz-Garret to escape, who had been declared an Enemy to the State.

IN February following; Queen Catharine Howard, the King's fifth Wife, and the Lady Rochford, lost their Heads on the Green within the Tower.

IN the Beginning of the next Month Arthur Plantagenet, Viscount Lisle, base Son to King Edward IV. having been imprisoned upon Suspicion of a Design to betray Calais to the French, whilst he was the King's Lieutenant there, was now found to be innocent of the Fact, and thereupon, the King, to make some Reparation for his Disgrace, sent him a Ring, and a very gracious Messuage by Sir Thomas Wriothesley, his Secretary; whereat the said Viscount conceived so great a Joy that he died thereof the Night following.

IN the Year 1546, which was the last of the Reign of Henry VIII. Thomas Duke of Norfolk, and Henry Earl of Surrey, his Son, upon certain Surmises of Treason, were committed to the Tower of LONDON; the Earl, being no Lord of Parliament, was tried by a common Jury, and being found guilty, was beheaded on Tower-Hill. The Duke was attainted by Parliament, and kept in Prison till the first Year of Queen Mary, when the Attainder was reversed; the Special Matter upon which the Earl was tried, was bearing of certain Arms that were said to belong to the King, and to the Prince, tho' the Earl justified his Bearing them, as belonging to divers of his Ancestors, affirming withal, that he had the Opinion of the Heralds therein.

IN this same Year, William Foxley, Pot-maker for the Mint in the Tower, fell asleep on Easter-Tuesday, and continued sleeping for fourteen Days and fifteen Nights, and could by no Means be awakened during that Time, by Pricking, Cramping, Burning, or otherwise; but when he did awake, he was in as good Temper as if he had slept but one Night, and lived 40 Years after.

IN the Year 1552, the Duke of Somerset, Uncle to the King (Edward VI.) who had been chosen Protector of the King and Kingdom, was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1553, the young Lady Jane Grey was beheaded in the Tower, who, upon the Scaffold, made a most moving Speech to the Spectators, to this Effect, "That she came thither for an Example to Posterity, that Innocence cannot be any Protection against Greatness. And that she was to die, not for aspiring to a Crown, but for not refusing one when it was offered her."

HER Husband, the Lord Guilford, was beheaded the same Day.

ABOUT eleven Days after, Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, Father to the said Lady Jane, was also beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the same Year, Sir Thomas Wyatt was beheaded on Tower-Hill, whose Head was set upon the Gallows at Hay-Hill, near Hyde-Park, and his Quarters in several Places of the City. This Man, in Hopes of saving his Life, had accused the Lord Courtney, and the Lady Elizabeth, the Queen's Sister, of being privy to his Conspiracy; but at his Death he cleared them, and openly protested, that they were altogether innocent, and had never been acquainted with his Proceedings; however, this Matter was so urged against them by Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, that both of them were committed to the Tower in the Month of March, but were released from thence, tho' not out of Confinement, in May following. Bishop Gardiner's Malice was so great towards the Lady Elizabeth, that he had procured a Warrant to be framed under certain Counsellors Hands to put her to Death, which had been done, if Mr. Bruges, Lieutenant of the Tower, pitying her Case, had not gone to the Queen (Mary) to know her Pleasure, who utterly denied that she knew any Thing of it; by which Means her Life was preserved.

IN the Year 1555, Queen Mary discharged a great Number of Prisoners out of the Tower, namely, the late Duke of Northumberland's Sons, Ambrose, Robert and Henry, also Sir Andrew Dudley, Sir James Crofts, Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, Sir John Rogers, Sir Nicholas Arnold, Sir George Harper, Sir Edward Warner, Sir William Santlow, Sir Gowen Carew, William Gybbs, Esq; Cuthbert Vaughan, and others.

IN the Year 1573, Thomas Duke of Norfolk was beheaded on Tower-Hill, for High-Treason.

Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, having been committed to the Tower, being suspected of conspiring with Throgmorton, the Lord Paget, and the Guises, to invade England, and free the Queen of Scots, was, in the Month of June 1585, found dead in his Bed, shot into the Body with three Bullets under his Pap, and the Door bolted on the Inside. The Coroner's Inquest examining the Matter, brought in their Verdict Felo de se.

IN the Year 1590, in the Month of June, when Sir Michael Blount was first made Lieutenant of the Tower, Commissioners were appointed to take a careful View of the State of that Place, and the Prisoners therein, the Queen being in great Apprehension that Year of another Invasion from Spain, that threatened as much, or more than that in 1588. To make this Enquiry more exactly the following Memoranda were sent from the Lord Treasurer.

Commissioners appointed to view the State of the Tower.

"Imprimis, To enquire in what Repair are the Queen's Majesty's Lodgings, and all other Places for the Keeping of Prisoners, and the Lieutenant's Lodgings. And in what Part of the Queen's Privy Lodgings Prisoners are kept, and who they are.

"Item, To survey all Places, or Houses, or Lodgings, wherein any Persons do inhabit, or use to lodge; or how many of them have cause to dwell or lodge there, for the Service of her Majesty, within the Tower. And how many Persons are in every such Family or Lodging, Men, Women, and Children.

"Item, How many Families or Persons be lodged there, that have no ordinary Cause of Resort to the Tower for the Queen's Majesty's Service; and how long they have there continued; and by whose Means they came to those Dwelling-Places or Lodgings.

"Item, How many Prisoners are in the Tower, and in what Places they are lodged; and whether any Persons dwell so near to the Prison, as that the Prisoners and they may have secret Conference together.

"Item, To enquire of the Queen's Ordinary Yeomen-Wardens, whether they do their Service by themselves, or by their Deputies.

"Item, To enquire of the Houses lately erected against the Tower-Walls, or near to the Tower-Ditches, or Wharfs, and whether they are fit to be continued, or not, and who dwells in them, and to whom they pay their Rents.

"Item, What Annoyances are offered to the House and Ditches by the Citizens of LONDON, and the Inhabitants there adjoining, as well within the Liberties as without.

IN the Year 1600, Robert Earl of Essex lost his Head in the Tower, which he might have kept on longer, had he not been betrayed by the Lady Walsingham, to whom, after the Sentence of Condemnation, he sent a Ring, which the Queen had given him, as a Token that she would stick to him in any Danger. The Lady delivered not the Ring; and being a little after upon her Death-bed, she desired to speak with the Queen, and having disburthened a great Weight which lay upon her Conscience for that Act, the Queen flung away in a Fury, and never enjoyed herself perfectly after that Time; but she would break out often into Passion, and wring her Hands, crying, O Essex! Essex! And this Earl was the last who was executed within the Walls of the Tower.

IN the Year 1603, Sir Walter Raleigh was arraigned, and condemned, but kept Prisoner in the Tower, (where he wrote his History of the World) untill the Year 1617, when he was by King James I. allowed (upon his earnest Desire) to fetch Gold from a certain Mine in Guiana, in the West-Indies, wherein he miscarried. After which King James gave Way to have the Sentence of Death executed upon him, having first been brought to the King's-Bench Bar, the 27th of October, 1618, and there hearing the Sentence confirmed. From whence he was sent to the Gatehouse, and from thence next Morning to the Palace-Yard, where a Scaffold was erected, and there he was beheaded, after 14 Years Reprieve; which the World thought very hard of, having been a Person of such uncommon Merit.

IN the Year 1615, the Lady Arabella, a near Relation to King James I. having been privately married to Mr. William Seymour, the youngest Son of the Earl of Hertford, they were both committed to the Tower, where the Lady died.

IN the same Year Sir Thomas Overbury was poisoned in the Tower, for which the Earl of Somerset, and his Lady; were condemned; but most surprizingly pardoned, when the meaner Instruments made use of in that Murther, Sir Gervase Elwes, then Lieutenant of the Tower, Mrs. Turner, and divers others, were executed for it.

IN the Year 1621, Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, Lord Chancellor of England, was, for Bribery, displaced and committed to the Tower; but after some Days enlarged.

IN the Year 1625, the Earl of Arundel was committed to the Tower. The Year following the Earl of Bristol.

IN the Year 1631, the Earl of Castlehaven was executed on Tower-Hill for horrid Crimes of Incontinency.

IN the Year 1640, the Earl of Strafford was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1641, 12 Bishops were accused by the House of Commons, of High Treason, 10 of which were committed to the Tower, where they continued about four Months.

IN the Year 1642, Sir Richard Gurney, Lord Mayor of LONDON, was committed to the Tower.

IN the Year 1644, Sir Alexander Carew, who was Governor of St. Nicholas Island at Plymouth, was tried by a Court Martial, for endeavouring to deliver up the Island to the King, and sentenced to be beheaded, which he was a few Days after, upon Tower-Hill. By the said Court Martial, Sir John Hotham, and his Son, were arraigned, found guilty, and executed in the same Place.

IN the same Year, Dr. William Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury, was beheaded on Tower-Hill; his Corpse was at that Time interred in Barking Church, but 19 Years after, was removed to the Chapel of St. John's College in Oxford.

IN the Year 1646, Mr. John Lilbourn was committed to the Tower.

IN the Year 1647, Sir Thomas Fairfax, General of the Parliament Forces, was made Constable of the Tower.

IN the Year 1648, the Lord Capel, being Prisoner in the Tower, made his Escape; but on the 2d of February was taken at Lambeth, being betrayed (by the Waterman that carried him) and sent back to the Tower; and was beheaded with Duke Hamilton, and the Earl of Holland, in the Palace-Yard at Westminster, the 9th of March following.

IN the Year 1649, November the 13th, Mr. Walker, a Parliament Man, and the Author of the History of Independency, was committed to the Tower, where he died.

IN the Year 1651, March the 29th, at Five o'Clock at Night, Captain Brown Busbel was beheaded under the Scaffold upon Tower-Hill, by Order of Parliament; for that he had formerly delivered up to the King Scarborough Castle.

IN the same Year, about the 23d of August, Mr. Love, a Presbyterian Minister, and Mr. Gibbons, were beheaded on Tower-Hill.

ALSO in the same Year, about the Beginning of November, Major General Massey, being very much wounded, surrender'd himself to the Countess of Stamford; but the Lord Grey, her Son, secured and sent him to LONDON; thence he was sent to the Tower, and some Time after made his Escape.

IN the Year 1653, August the 20th, John Lilbourn, being acquitted by his Jury in the Guild-Hall, Hall, LONDON, was sent to Newgate, and on the 27th of the said Month from thence to the Tower.

IN the Year 1655, Colonel Overton was committed to the Tower.

AND in the same Year, on the 18th of May, three Serjeants at Law, viz. Maynard, Twisden, and Windham, were committed to the Tower. And on the 9th of June, the same Year, the Lord Willoughby, of Parham, was committed to the Tower.

IN the Year 1656, Novemb. the 1st, the Silver that was taken in the Spanish Galeon was brought into the Tower; and the Marquis of Baden and his Brother, imprisoned in the Tower. And in the same Year February the 9th, Miles Sundercomb was brought to his Trial at Westminster-Hall, and Sentence of Death passed against him for Treason; and on the 13th he was found dead, being said to have poison'd himself; but, notwithstanding that, on the 17th he was drawn at the Horse's Tail to Tower-Hill, where (under the Scaffold) a Hole being digged, he was turned in naked, and a Stake driven thro' him.

IN the Year 1657, July the 24th, Colonel Edward Saxby was committed to the Tower, and on the 17th of August following, Mr. Asbly and Mr. Alanson were committed to the same Place.

AND in the same Year on January the 13th, Colonel Saxby died in the Tower.

IN the Month of April 1658, Dr. Hewet was committed to the Tower. And on the 1st of June following, he and Mr. Mordaunt were brought to their Trials, before a High Court of Justice: Mr. Mordaunt was acquitted, but Sir Henry Slingsby and Dr. Hewet received Sentence of Death, and, on the 8th of June following, were both beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the same Year, August the 24th, the Duke of Buckingham was committed to the Tower.

IN the Year 1659, June the 29th, the Lady Mary Howard was committed to the Tower, and at the same Time many other Persons of Note were seized, and secured in several Prisons.

IN the same Year, Colonel Morley was made Lieutenant of the Tower, and on the 25th of the same Month, Sir Robert Pye, and Major Fincher were thither committed; and on the 21st of February following were discharged. Also on the 15th of March, the same Year, Bishop Wren, after 18 Years Imprisonment in the Tower, was enlarged.

IN the Year 1660, on January the 9th, Lambert submitted to the Parliament, but was committed to the Tower, from whence, upon the 9th of April following, he escaped; and upon the 21st he was proclaimed Traitor, upon the 22d he was taken by Colonel Ingoldsby, near Daven-try, and on the 24th was brought to LONDON, and again committed to the Tower.

IN the same Year, on June the 25th, Sir John Robinson, Knight and Baronet, was made Lieutenant of the Tower by King Charles II. soon after his Majesty's happy Restoration. On the 16th of September following, Robert Overton was committed to the Tower for Treason.

ON the 22d Mr. John (some Time Sir John Lentall) was committed to the Tower. On the 23d of March, Zachary Crofton, Presbyterian Minister, was committed to the Tower for Matters of High Treason.

IN the Year 1661, on Monday the 21st of April, King Charles II. made his Cavalcade from the Tower to Westminster, in such a glorious and splendid Manner, that it seemed to outvie whatsoever had been seen before of Gallantry and Riches. In Preparation to which Day's Solemnity, four stately and magnificent Triumphant Arches were erected by the City, (according as their Charter obliged them unto, upon such an Occasion) for his Majesty, to pass thro' the City to his Coronation.

THE First of them was erected in Leadenhall-Street, made after the Dorick Order, representing his Majesty's happy Arrival in England.

THE Second was a Naval Representation, and was erected in Cornhill, near the Royal Exchange.

THE Third, consisting of the Corinthian and Composite Orders, being the Representation of Concord, was erected in Cheapside, near Wood-Street End.

THE Fourth, consisting of the Dorick and Ionick Orders, and the Representation of Plenty; this was erected in Fleet-Street, near White-Fryars.

THE whole Manner of the Proceedings in this Cavalcade, is to be found in a Volume on that Subject, published by John Ogilby, with Sculptures.

IN the same Year, July 1, the Lord Mounson, Sir Henry Mildmay, and Mr. Robert Wallop, (three of the King's Judges in the pretended High Court of Justice) were brought to that Bar, in the Parliament House, and there sentenced to be drawn upon Sledges, with Ropes about their Necks, from the Tower to Tyburn, and back again to the Tower, which was accordingly executed on the 27th of January following.

ON the 16th of March, the same Year, Miles Corbet, John Okey, and John Baxster, or Baxsted, (three other of the King's Judges, who fled) were taken at Delft by Sir George Downing, and brought Prisoners to the Tower, and on the 16th of April following, they received Sentence of Death, and on the 19th of the said Month, they were all three drawn upon Sledges from the Tower to Tyburn, and there hanged and quartered.

IN the Year 1662, Sir Henry Vane was indicted and found Guilty of High-Treason, and Colonel Lambert, the like, on the 9th of June, and on the 11th both receiv'd Sentence of Death, but Lambert's Execution was respited, by Order from his Majesty, because of his prudent and civil Deportment at his Trial; but on the 14th, Sir Henry Vane was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

ON the 16th of January 1662, Mr. Edward Bagshaw, a Minister, was committed to the Tower for Treasonable Designs and Practices. Upon the 18th, Philip Gibbs was removed from Newgate to the Tower: And upon the 26th Archibald Johnston was committed to the Tower, for Crimes of High-Treason, and on the 22d of July following, was executed at Edinburgh, in Scotland, upon a Gibbet 22 Feet high.

IN the Year 1663, Abraham Goodman was committed to the Tower, for attempting to murder the Duke of Buckingham.

IN the Year 1665, on the 30th of October, Sir Thomas Bludworth was sworn Lord Mayor of LONDON; at the Outermost Gate of the Bulwark, by Sir John Robinson, Lieutenant of the Tower, by Virtue of his Majesty's Commission for that Purpose to him directed.

IN the Year 1673, a most strange and daring Attempt was made to steal the Royal Crown and Scepter out of the Tower of LONDON, by Thomas Blood, and others in Confederacy with him; the Manner of which is thus related by Mr. Strype, who says, he had it from Mr. Edwards himself, the Keeper of the Regalia.

ABOUT three Weeks before this Blood made his Attempt upon the Crown, he came to the Tower in the Habit of a Parson, with a long Cloak, Cassock, and Canonical Girdle, and brought a Woman with him, whom he called Wife; altho' in Truth, his Wife was then sick in Lancashire. This pretended Wife desired to see see the Crown; and having seen it feigned to have a Qualm come upon her Stomach, and desired Mr. Edwards (who was Keeper of the Regalia) to send for some Spirits, who immediately caused his Wife to fetch some; whereof when she had drunk, she courteously invited her up Stairs to repose herself upon a Bed: Which Invitation she accepted, and soon recovered. At their Departure they seemed very thankful for this Civility.

ABOUT three or four Days after, Blood came again to Mrs. Edwards, with a Present of four Pair of white Gloves from his Wife: And having thus begun the Acquaintance, they made frequent Visits to improve it: She professing, that she should never sufficiently acknowledge her Kindness.

HAVING made some small Respite of his Compliments, he returned again, and said to Mrs. Edwards, that his Wife could discourse of nothing but of the Kindness of those good People in the Tower. That she had long studied, and at length bethought herself of a handsome Way of Requital. You have, said he, a pretty Gentlewoman to your Daughter, and I have a young Nephew who hath two or three Hundred a Year in Land, and is at my Disposal. If your Daughter be free, and you approve of it, I will bring him hither to see her, and we will endeavour to make it a Match.

THIS was easily assented to by old Mr. Edwards, who invited the Parson to dine with him that Day, and he as readily accepted of the Invitation; who taking upon him to say Grace, performed it with great Devotion, and casting up his Eyes, concluded his long winded Grace, with a hearty Prayer for the King, Queen, and Royal Family. After Dinner he went up to see the Rooms, and seeing a handsome Case of Pistols hang there, he express'd a great Desire to buy them to present to a young Lord who was his Neighbour. That was his Pretence, but his Purpose, probably, was to disarm the House against the Time that he intended to put the Design in Execution.

AT his Departure, (which was with a Canonical Benediction of the good Company) he appointed a Day and an Hour to bring his young Nephew to his Mistress, and it was that very Day that he made his Attempt, viz. the 9th of May, about seven in the Morning, Ann. Dom. 1673.

THE old Man was got up ready to receive his Guest, and the Daughter had put herself into her best Dress to entertain her Gallant; when, behold, Parson Blood, with three more, came to the Jewel-House, all armed with Rapier-Blades in their Canes, and every one a Dagger, and a Pair of Pocket-Pistols. Two of his Companions enter'd in with him, and the third staid at the Door, it seems, for a Watch. The Daughter thought it not modest for her to come down till she was called, but she sent the Maid to take a View of the Company, and to bring her a Description of the Person of her Gallant. The Maid conceived that he was the intended Bridegroom, who staid at the Door, because he was the Youngest of the Company, and returned to her young Mistress with the Character that she had formed of his Person.

Blood told Mr. Edwards, that they would not go up Stairs, till his Wife came, and desired him to shew his Friends the Crown to pass the Time till then; as soon as they were enter'd the Room, where the Crown was kept, and the Door, as usual, was shut behind them, they threw a Cloak over the old Man's Head, and clapp'd a Gag into his Mouth, which was a great Plug of Wood, with a small Hole in the Middle to take Breath at; this was fasten'd on with a waxed Leather, which went round his Neck. At the same Time they fasten'd an Iron Hook to his Nose, that no Sound might pass from him that Way neither.

WHEN they had thus secured him from crying out, they told him, that their Resolution was to have the Crown, Globe, and Sceptre; and that if he would quietly submit to it, they would spare his Life, otherwise he was to expect no Mercy. He thereupon forced himself to make all the Noise that possibly he could, to be heard above: Then they knocked him down with a wooden Mallet, and told him, that if he would lie quietly they would spare his Life; but if not, upon the next Attempt to discover them, they would kill him, and pointed three Daggers at his Breast. But he strained himself to make the greater Noise. Whereupon they gave him nine or ten Strokes more upon the Head with the Mallet, for so many Bruises were found upon the Skull, and stabbed him into the Belly.

WHEREAT the poor Man, almost Eighty Years of Age, fell and lay some Time entranced; one of them kneeled on the Ground to try if he breathed, and not perceiving any Breath come from him, said, He is dead I'll warrant him. Mr. Edwards, came a little to himself, heard these Words, and conceived it best for him to be so thought, and lay quietly.

THEN one of them, named Parrot, put the Globe into his Breeches. Blood held the Crown under his Cloak. The Third was designed to file the Sceptre in two (because too long to carry) and when filed, it was to be put into a Bag brought for that Purpose.

BUT before this could be done, young Mr. Edwards (Son of the old Gentleman) who had attended upon Sir John Talbot into Flanders, and upon his first Landing in England, was with Sir John's Leave, come away Post to see his old Father, chanced to arrive at the very Instant that this was acting, and coming to the Door, the Person that stood Centinel for the rest, asked him with whom he would speak? he made Answer, he belonged to the House. But young Edwards perceiving, by his Question, that he himself was a Stranger, told him, that if he had any Business with his Father, he would go and acquaint him with it, and so went up, where he was welcomed by his Mother, Wife and Sister.

IN the mean Time, the Centinel gave Notice of the Son's Arrival, and they forthwith hasted away with the Crown and Globe, but left the Sceptre, not having Time to file it. The old Man recovering himself got upon his Legs, pulled off the Gag (for they concluded him dead, and surpriz'd with the Son's unexpected Arrival, had omitted to tie his Hands behind him) and cried out, Treason, Murther!

THE Daughter, hearing him, hasted down, and, seeing her Father thus wounded, ran out upon the Tower-Hill, and cried, Treason! The Crown is stolen! This gave the first Alarm, and Blood and Parrot, making more than ordinary Haste, were observed to jog each other with their Elbows as they went, which caused them to be suspected and pursued.

BY this Time young Mr. Edwards, and Captain Beckman, upon the Cry of their Sister, were come down, and left their Father, likewise, to run after the Villains, but they were advanced beyond the Main-Guard, and the Alarm being given loudly, to the Warder at the Draw-Bridge, he put himself in a Posture to stop them. Blood came up first, and discharged a Pistol at him. The Bullet (if any there were) miss'd him; but the Powder, or Fear, made him fall to the Ground, whereby they got safe to the little Ward-House-Gate, where one Sill, who had been a Soldier under Cromwel, stood Centinel, who, altho' he saw the Warder shot, made no Resistance.

Resistance. By whose Cowardice, or Treachery, the Villains got over that Draw-Bridge, and through the Outward Gate upon the Wharf, and made all possible Haste towards their Horses, which attended at St. Catharine's Gate, called the Iron Gate, crying themselves, as they ran, Stop the Rogues. And they were by all thought innocent, he being in that grave Canonical Habit, till Captain Beckman got up to them: Blood discharged his second Pistol at Captain Beckman's Head, but, he stooping down, avoided the Shot, and seized upon the Rogue, who had the Crown under his Cloak, yet had Blood the Impudence, altho' he saw himself a Prisoner, to struggle a long while for the Crown, and, when it was wrested from him, said, It was a gallant Attempt, how unsuccessful soever, for it was for a Crown.

A Servant belonging to Captain Sherburn, seized upon Parrot, before Blood was taken.

THERE was such a Consternation in all Men, and so much Confusion in the Pursuit, that it was a Wonder some innocent Persons had not suffered for the Guilty. For young Edwards over-taking one that was bloody in the Skuffle, and supposing him to be one of those, who had murdered his Father, was going to run him through, had not Captain Beckman, cried, Hold, he is none of them.

AND as Captain Beckman made more than ordinary Haste in the Pursuit, the Guards were going to fire at him, supposing him to be one of the Rogues, but one of them, who by good Fortune, knew him, cried out, Forbear; He is a Friend.

Blood and Parrot being both seized, as hath been said, Hunt, Blood's Son-in-Law, leaped on his Horse, with two more of the Conspirators, and rid far away; but a Cart standing empty in the Street, chanced to turn short, and Hunt run his Head against a Pole that stuck out; but he recovering his Legs, and putting his Foot in the Stirrup, a Cocker running to enquire after the Disaster, said, This is Tom Hunt, who was in that bloody Attempt upon the Person of the Duke of Ormond: Let us secure him. A Constable, being accidentally there, seized him upon that Affirmation, and carried him before Justice Smith; who, upon his confident Denial of himself to be Hunt, was about to let him go; but the Hue and Cry coming, that the Crown was taken out of the Tower, he was committed to safe Custody.

YOUNG Edwards proposed to Lieutenant Rainsford, to mount some of his Soldiers upon the Horses that were left, and send them to follow the rest that escaped; but he bad him follow himself, if he would; it was his Business: And led the Fellows Horses into the Tower, as forfeited to the Lieutenant.

Hunt (as has been said) was Son-in-Law to Blood, and trained up in his Practices.

Parrot was a Silk-Dyer in Southwark; and in the Rebellion had been Major General Harri-son's Lieutenant.

Blood was the Son of a Blacksmith in Ireland; a Fellow that thought small Villanies below him. One of his virtuous Comrades, having received Sentence of Death in Yorkshire for some Crime, he was rescued out of the Hands of the Sheriff's Men, as they were leading him to the Gallows. He, with others, laid a Design in Ireland, to surprize the Castle of Dublin, and the Magazine therein, and to usurp the Government: But being discovered by the Duke of Ormond, the Night before the intended Execution, some of them were apprehended, and suffered as Traitors; whose Death Blood, and the rest of the surviving Rogues, bound themselves by solemn Oath, to revenge upon the Duke's Person. This occasioned his third Enterprize: For he, with five or six more of his Associates, (whereof Hunt was one) well mounted, came one Night up to his Coach Side, before he came to his own Gate, dwelling then at Albemarle House, took him out of his Coach, forced him up behind one of the Horses, and were riding away with him as far as Berkely House; where the Duke threw himself off the Horse with the Villain, who had tied the Duke fast to him. The rest turned back, discharging two Pistols at the Duke; but taking their Aim in the Dark, missed him: By this Time the Neighbourhood was alarmed, and the Rogues having Work enough to save themselves, rid for it, and got away.

IT was no small Disrepute to that hellish Contriver amongst his Comrades, to fail in a Project which he had laid so sure, and represented to them so easy to be effected: Therefore, to redeem his Credit with them, he entered immediately upon the Contrivance of another, that should fully recompence all former Miscarriages, with an infallible Prospect of Gain, and the Reputation of a daring Villainy; which was that of sharing the Regalia.

IN the robustious Struggle for the Crown, as was shewed before, the great Pearl and a fair Diamond fell off, and were lost for a while, with some other smaller Stones: But the Pearl was found by Catharine Maddox (a poor Sweeping-Woman to one of the Warders) and the Diamond by a Barber's Apprentice; and both faithfully restored. Other smaller Stones were by several Persons picked up, and brought in. The fair Ballas Ruby belonging to the Sceptre, was found in Parrot's Pocket: So that not any considerable Thing was wanting, the Crown only was bruised and sent to repair.

YOUNG Mr. Edwards went presently to Sir Gilbert Talbot, and gave him an Account of all that had passed, who instantly went to the King, and acquainted his Majesty with it. His Majesty commanded him to make Haste to the Tower, to enquire how Matters stood; to take the Examination of Blood, and the rest; and to return and report all to him. Sir Gilbert accordingly went and found the Prisoners, whose Wounds had been already dressed, with their Keepers in the White Tower. Blood lay in a Corner, dogged and lowring, and wou'd not give a Word in Answer to any one Question.

HIS Majesty was in the mean Time persuaded by some about him to hear the Examination himself; and the Prisoners were forthwith sent for to Whitehall. Nothing but that could possibly have saved Blood from the Gallows; but that which ought to have been his surer Condemnation, proved to be his Safety. For all Men concluding, that none but those who had the Courage to venture upon such a daring Villany, as that of the Crown, could be guilty of the Practice upon a Peer of that Magnitude, as was the Duke of Ormond; especially the Parliament than fitting. Amongst other Questions, therefore, it was thought fit to interrogate him, Whether he had not a Hand in that Assault? For the Authors of it were as yet altogether in the Dark.

Blood, as if he had valued himself upon the Action, and possibly suspecting that the King might have made some Discovery of it already, without any manner of Scruple or Hesitation, confessed he had. It was then asked him, Who his Associates were? He answered, That he would never betray a Friend's Life; nor ever deny a Guilt, in Defence of his own. It was next asked him, What Provocation he had to make so bold an Assault upon the Duke of Ormond? He said, The Duke had taken away his Estate, and executed some of his Friends; and that he and many others had engaged themselves by solemn Oath to revenge it.

AND lest any of his audacious Villanies should lessen the Romance of his Life, by lying conceal'd in his Examination about the Crown, he voluntarily confessed to the King, that he had been engaged in a Design to kill his Majesty with a Carbine, from out of the Reeds by the Thames Side, above Battersea, where he often went to swim. That the Cause of this Resolution in himself, and others, was, his Majesty's Severity over the Consciences of the Godly, in suppressing the Freedom of their Religious Assemblies. That when he had taken his Stand in the Reeds for that Purpose, his Heart was checked with an Awe of Majesty, and he did not only himself relent, but diverted the rest of his Associates from the Design.

HE told his Majesty, That he had, by these his Confessions, laid himself sufficiently open to the Law; and he might reasonably expect the utmost Rigor of it; for which he was (without much Concern of his own) prepared: But he said withal, That the Matter would not be of that Indifference to his Majesty, inasmuch as there were Hundreds of his Friends yet undiscovered, who were all bound to each other by the indispensable Oaths of Conspirators, to revenge the Death of any of the Fraternity, upon those who should bring them to Justice, which would expose his Majesty, and all his Ministers, to the daily Fear and Expectation of a Massacre: But on the other Side, if his Majesty would spare the Lives of a few, he might oblige the Hearts of many, who (as they had been seen to do daring Mischiefs) would be as bold, if received into Pardon and Favour, to perform eminent Services for the Crown: And he pretended such an Interest and Sway amongst the Fanaticks, to dispose them to their Fidelity, as though he had been their chosen General, and had them all entered in his Muster-Roll.

IN short, Blood, and his Associates, were not only pardoned, and set free, but the Arch-Villain himself had 500 l. per Annum, settled upon him in Ireland, and was admitted into all the Privacy and Intimacy of the Court. Mr. Edwards had a Grant of 200 l. and his Son of 100 l.

THE famous Andrew Marvel, at the Time this Business happened, gives the following short Account of it, in a Letter to a Friend.

“ ONE Blud, (so he writes his Name) outlawed for a Plot to take Dublin Castle, and who seized on the Duke of Ormond here last Year, and might have killed him, a most bold, and yet sober, Fellow, some Months ago, seized the Crown and Sceptre in the Tower, took them away, and, if he had killed the Keeper, might have carried them clear off. He being taken, astonished the King and Court, with the Generosity and Wisdom of his Answers. He, and all his Accomplices, for his Sake, are discharged by the King, to the Wonder of all.

IN the Year 1677, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Salisbury, the Earl of Shaftsbury, and the Lord Wharton, were committed to the Tower, for proposing a Question in the House, about the Legality of the Parliament, which might raise Doubts and Jealousies, it was said, in the Minds of the King's Subjects. This Commitment was opposed by several Lords, who apprehended that it might prejudice the Freedom of Debate. The Earl of Shaftsbury continued in the Tower above a Year; but the other three, upon making their Submission, were sooner discharged.

IN the Year 1678, the Earl of Powis, Viscount Stafford, the Lord Arundel of Wardour, the Lord Petres, and the Lord Bellasis, were committed to the Tower, being accused of the Popish-Plot.

IN the Year 1679, the Earl of Danby was committed to the Tower by the House of Lords; but soon after pleaded the King's Pardon at the Bar of the said House.

IN the Year 1680, on the 29th of December, the Lord Stafford was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1681, the Earl of Shaftsbury, being accused of Treasonable Practices, was again committed to the Tower; but when he was to be brought on his Trial, the Jury returned the Bill Ignoramus.

IN the Year 1682, the Lord Russel, eldest Son of the Earl of Bedford, was committed to the Tower for High Treason; of which being brought in Guilty upon his Trial, he was condemned, and soon after executed in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields.

THE Earl of Effex, having been accused of being concerned in the same Conspiracy, was, quickly after the Discovery, committed to the Tower; where, on the same Day that the Lord Russel was tried, he was found with his Throat cut; but whether by himself, or any Body else, has been the Occasion of some Dispute.

ON the 7th of December 1683, Colonel Algernoon Sidney was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1685, James Duke of Monmouth was beheaded on Tower-Hill. When he went to the Scaffold he was attended by a very strong Guard, who, it is said, had Orders to shoot him, if any Attempt had been made of a Rescue, as had been talked of. The Executioner, at the Block, was in very great Disorder, trembling all over, and gave him at first only a slight Stroke, at which he turned and looked at him; then the Duke laid himself down again, and the Headsmangave him two Strokes more, but then threw down the Ax, and cried out, That he could not go on; but the Sheriff, with Threats, obliged him to take it up again; and so, at two Strokes more, his Head was taken off.

IN the Year 1688, Dr. Sancroft, Archbishop of Canterbury, and six other Bishops, viz. Dr. Lloyd, Bishop of St. Asaph; Dr. Kenn, Bishop of Bath and Wells; Dr. Turner, Bishop of Ely; Dr. Lake, Bishop of Chichester; Dr. White, Bishop of Peterborough; and Sir Jonathan Trelawney, Bishop of Bristol, were committed to the Tower. The Court expecting some Disturbance upon this Occasion, had ordered that they should be carried thither by Water; but the People ran in Crowds to the River Side, to wait their coming, and filled the Banks of the Thames, by which they were to pass, and expressed all the Transports that Love, Compassion, and Rage, could beget. They were soon after brought to their Trial, and acquitted.

IN the same Year the Lord Chancellor Jeferies was committed to the Tower, where he died, as some say, of Grief, others say, of drinking Strong-Liquors, but more likely of the Stone. This Gentleman had, by his Cruelty, render'd himself so very odious, that it was with much Difficulty they could secure him, as they were bringing him to the Tower, from the Fury of the Populace, who threatned to tear him to Pieces. He was taken in a Sailor's Habit, in a little House in Wapping, where he had concealed himself, in order to make his Escape to Hamburg.

IN the Year 1696, Sir John Fenwick, who was concerned in the Plot to assassinate King William III. was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1709, the Lord Griffin, committed for High Treason, died in the Tower. A Scaffold was erected upon Tower-Hill for his Execution, where it long continued, the Queen reprieving him from Time to Time, till his Death.

IN the Year 1716, James, Earl of Derwentwater; William, Lord Widdrington; William, Earl of Nithsdale; George, Earl of Wintoun; Robert, Earl of Carnwarth; William, Viscount Kenmure, and William, Lord Nairn, were committed to the Tower. They were all tried, and found Guilty of High Treason, but only the Earl of Derwentwater, and the Lord Kenmure, were beheaded; the Earl of Nithsdale, who was likewise order'd to be executed at the same Time, having found Means to escape out of the Tower, in Womens Apparel, the Night before.

IN the Year 1722, Francis, Bishop of Rochester, and Christopher Laver, Esq; were committed to the Tower for High Treason; the latter was condemned and executed for the same at Tyburn; and the Bishop, by an Act to inflict Pains and Penalties, was banished the Kingdom, and died in Exile.

MR. Kelly; and Mr. Plunket, who were committed at the same Time, remain still Prisoners in the Tower.

AND now to conclude this Chapter: The Tower of LONDON is not only a Jail for Prisoners, but a strong Fort, or Citadel, to defend or command the City; a Royal Palace for Assemblies and Treaties: It is the Treasury for the Jewels and Ornaments of the Crown; the great Archive which preserves all the antient Records of the Courts of Justice at Westminster: It is the Place for the Royal Mint and Coinage of Gold and Silver; and is the chief Magazine, or Arsenal, of the whole Land, for Martial Provisions.

C H A P. XI.

Of SCHOOLS, and other Houses of LEARNING.

IN the Reign of King Stephen, and of Henry II. (saith William Fitz-Stephen) there were in LONDON, three principal Churches, which had famous Schools, either by Privilege, and antient Dignity, or by Favour of some particular Persons, (as of Doctors) who were accounted notable and renowned for Knowledge in Philosophy: And there were other inferior Schools also.

UPON Festival Days the Masters made solemn Meetings in the Churches, where their Scholars disputed Logically and Demonstratively; some bringing Enthymems, others perfect Syllogisms: Some disputed for Shew, others to trace out the Truth; and cunning Sophisters were thought brave Scholars, when they flowed with Words. Others used Fallacies; Rhetoricians spake aptly to persuade, observing the Precepts of Art, and omitting nothing that might serve their Purpose. The Boys of divers Schools did Cap, or Pot Verses, and contended of the Principles of Grammar.

THERE were were some, which, on the other Side, with Epigrams and Rhymes, nipping and quipping their Fellows, and the Faults of others, (tho' suppressing their Names) moved thereby much Laughter among their Auditors.

THE three principal Churches which had these famous Schools by Privileges, Mr. Stow was of Opinion, must needs be the Cathedral Church of St. Paul for one, seeing that by a General Council, holden in the Year of CHRIST 1176, at Rome, in the Patriarchy of Lateran, it was decreed, "That every Cathedral Church should have its Schoolmaster to teach poor Scholars, and others, as had been accustomed, and that no Man should take any Reward for License to teach."

THE second, as most antient, may seem to have been the Monastery of St. Peter at Westminster, whereof Ingulphus, Abbot of Crowland, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, writeth thus:

"I, Ingulphus, an humble Servant of GOD, born of English Parents, in the most beautiful City of LONDON, for to attain to Learning, was first put to Westminster, and after to Study at Oxford, &c."

AND writing in Praise of Queen Edgitha, Wife to Edward the Confessor:

"I have seen her (saith he) often, when being but a Boy, I came to see my Father, dwelling in the King's Court; and often coming from School, when I met the Queen, she would oppose me, touching my Learning and Lesson; and falling from Grammar to Logick, (wherein she had some Knowledge) she would subtilly conclude an Argument with me; and, by her Hand-maiden, give me three or four Pieces of Money, and send me unto the Palace, where I should receive some Victuals, and then be dismissed."

THE third School seemeth to have been at the Monastery of St. Saviour at Bermondsey, in Southwark: For other Priors, as of St. John by Smithfield; St. Bartholomew in Smithfield; St. Mary-Overy in Southwark; and that of the Holy Trinity by Aldgate, were all of later Foundation; and the Fryaries, Colleges, and Hospitals in this City, were raised since them, in the Reigns of Henry III. and Edward I., II., and III., &c. all which Houses had their Schools, tho' not so famous as these first named.

KING Henry VI. in the 24th Year of his Reign, by Patent, appointed, That there should be in LONDON, Grammar Schools, besides St. Paul's, at St. Martin's le Grand, St. Mary le Bow in Cheap, St. Dunstan's in the West, and St. Anthony's. And in the next Year, to wit, 1394, the said King ordained by Parliament, That four other Grammar Schools should be erected; to wit, in the Parishes of St. Andrew's in Holborn; Albhalows the Great, in Thames-street; St. Peter's in Cornhill; and in the Hospital of St. Thomas Acons in West-Cheap: Since which Time, as divers Schools, by suppressing of Religious Houses, (whereof they were Members in the Reign of Henry VIII.) have been decayed; so again, have some others been newly erected and founded for them: As, namely, St. Paul's School, in the Place of an old ruined House, was built in most ample Manner, and largely endowed in the Year 1512, by John Collet, Doctor of Divinity, and Dean of St. Paul's, for 153 poor Mens Children; for which there were ordained a Master, Sur-master, (or Usher) and a Chaplain.

AGAIN, in the Year 1553, after the Erection of Christ's-Hospital, (in the late dissolved House of the Grey Fryars) a great Number of poor Children being taken in, a School was ordained there at the Citizens Charge.

IN the Year 1561, the Merchant-Tailors of LONDON founded a Free Grammar-School, in the Parish of St. Laurence Pountney, by Candlewick-Street, Richard Hills, Master of that Company, giving 500*l.* towards the Purchase of a House, called the Manor of Rose, sometime the Duke of Buckingham's.

OF these Schools more will be spoken of hereafter.

As for the Meeting of Schoolmasters on Festival Days, at Festival Churches, and the Logical Disputations of their Scholars, they have been long disused; but the School-Boys arguing about the Principles of Grammar, was continued even to the Time of Mr. Stow, who says, that he himself, in his Youth, yearly saw, on the Eve of St. Bartholomew, the Scholars of divers Grammar-Schools repair unto the Church-Yard of St. Bartholomew, the Priory in Smithfield, where, upon a Bank boarded about, under a Tree, some one Scholar hath slept up, and there hath opposed and answered, till he was by some Scholar overcome and put down; and then the Overcomer taking the Place, did as the first, and in the End, the best Opposers and Answerers had Rewards; which made both good School-Masters and Scholars, (diligently against such Times) to prepare themselves for the obtaining this Garland.

THERE repaired to these Exercises, (amongst others) the Masters and Scholars of the Schools of St. Paul's in LONDON, and of St. Peter's at Westminster, of St. Thomas Acon's Hospital, of St. Anthony's Hospital, whereof the last named, commonly presented the best Scholars, and had the Prize in those Days.

THIS Priory of St. Bartholomew being surrendered to Henry VIII. those Disputations of Scholars in that Place surceased, and was again (only for a Year or two) in the Reign of Edward VI. revived in the Cloyster of Christ's Hospital, where the best Scholars (then still of St. Anthony's School) were rewarded with Bows and Arrows of Silver, given to them by Sir Martin Bowes, Goldsmith.

NEVERTHELESS, however the Encouragement failed, the Scholars of St. Paul's, meeting with them of St. Anthony's, would call them St. Anthony's Pigs, and they again would call the other, Pigeons of St. Paul's, because many Pigeons were bred in St. Paul's Church, and St. Anthony was always figured with a Pig following him. And, mindful of the former Usage, did for a long Season (disorderly in the open Street) provoke one another with Salve: Salve tu quoque. Placet tibi mecum disputare? Placet. And so proceeding from this to Questions in Grammar, they usually fell from Words to Blows, with their Satchels full of Books, many Times in such great Heaps, that they troubled the Streets and Passengers, so that finally they were restrained, with the Decay of St. Anthony's School.

OUT of this School have sprung divers famous Persons, viz. Sir Thomas More, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England; Dr. Nicholas Heath, some Time Bishop of Rocheſter, and lastly, Archbishop of York, and Lord Chancellor of England; Dr. John Whitgift, Bishop of Worceſter, and after Archbishop of Canterbury, &c.

IN the Year 1582, there was founded a publick Lecture in Chirurgery to be read in the College of Physicians, then in Knight-rider's-Street, and to begin in the Year 1584, on the 6th of May, and so to be continued, for ever, twice in every Week, on Wednesday and Friday, by the Honourable Baron John, Lord Lomley, and the learned Richard Caldwell, Doctor in Physick, the Reader whereof to be Richard Forſter, Doctor of Physick, during his Life.

FURTHERMORE, about the same Time, there was also begun a Mathematical Lecture, to be read in an old Chapel, built by Simon Eayre, within the Leadenhall, whereof a learned Citizen, named, Thomas Hood, was the first Reader. But this Chapel, and other Parts of that Hall, being employed for Stowage of Goods, taken out of a great Spaniſh Carack, the said Lecture ceased to be read, and was then, in the Year 1588, read in the House of Master Thomas Smith, in Grass-Street, &c.

SIR Thomas Gresham, Knt. a Merchant of Gresham-College, LONDON, Agent to Queen Elizabeth, by his last Will and Testament, made in the Year 1575, gave the Royal-Exchange, and all the Buildings thereunto appertaining, that is to say, the one Moiety to the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, and their Successors, upon Trust, that they perform, as shall be declared, and the other Moiety to the Mercers, in like Confidence. The Mayor and Commonalty to find four to read Lectures of Divinity, Astronomy, Musick and Geometry, within his Dwelling-House in Bishopsgate-Street, and to bestow the Sum of 200*l.* to wit, 50*l.* a-piece, &c. The Mercers likewise to find three Readers, that is, in Civil Law, Physick, and Rhetorick, within the same Dwelling-House, and to bestow the Sum of 150*l.* that is, to every Reader, 50*l.*

THESE Salaries and other Bequests of Sir Thomas Gresham, are payable out of the Rents of the Exchange, and other Rents of Houses belonging thereunto; but the excessive Charges in rebuilding the Exchange, by a Model, which was shewn to, and approved by King Charles II. (which some say, cost not less than 80,000*l.*) hath put the Company in Debt, and somewhat postponed the Payment of the Salaries.

THE Will of Sir Thomas Gresham, dated in July 1575, the 17th Year of Elizabeth, for the Endowment of the Readers of these Lectures, was to this Tenor: "That one Moiety of the Buildings of the Royal-Exchange, with all Pawns, Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Messuages, Tenements, &c. Parcel of the said Exchange, after the Expiration of an Indenture Quadripartite, should remain unto the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, and to their Successors, upon Trust, to perform certain Payments, and other Intents hereafter limited: And the other Moiety to remain to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery of the Mercers of LONDON, and to their Successors, upon Trust and Confidence, and to the Intents hereafter-mentioned. And when that one Moiety of the said Exchange should come to the said Mayor and Corporation of the said City, they and their Successors, shall every Year give, and distribute, for the Sustainment of four Persons, to be chosen by the said Mayor and Commonalty, qualified to read the Lectures of Divinity, Astronomy, Musick, and Geometry, within his own Dwelling-House, within the Parish of St. Helen's in Bishopsgate-Street, and St. Peter's the Poor, the Sum of 200*l.* that is, to every of the said Readers, the Sum of 50*l.* yearly, each, for their Salaries and Stipends; to be paid at the Feasts of the Annunciation of St. Mary the Virgin, and St. Michael the Archangel. And further, to give and distribute the Sum of 53*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* yearly, unto eight Alms-Folks, whom the said Mayor and Commonalty, or their Successors appoint to inhabit his eight Alms-houses in St. Peter's the Poor; to every of them the said Alms-Folks, the Sum of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to be paid at the four usual Terms in the Year. And that the said Mayor and Commonalty should give and distribute at the Terms aforesaid to the Relief of the poor Prisoners in the Prisons, known by the Names of Newgate, Ludgate, the King's-Bench, the Marshalsea,

The Will of Sir Thomas
Gresham.

“ Marshalsea, and the Compter in Woodstreet, “ 50*l.* in Money, or other Provisions and Ne“ cessaries, viz. to every of the same five Prisons, “ 10*l.* at the four usual Feasts, or twenty eight “ Days next after.

“ AND as concerning the other Moiety, dis“ posed to the Wardens and Commonalty of the “ Corporation of the Mercers, they and their “ Successors yearly shall give and pay, to and for “ the Find and Sustentation of three Persons,
 “ by them, from Time to Time, to be chosen,
 “ and meet to read the Lectures of Law, Phy-
 “ sick, and Rhetorick, within his said Dwelling-“ House, the Sum of 150*l.* that is, to every of “ the said Readers, for the Time being, the Sum “ of 50*l.* for their Salaries and Stipends, at the “ two usual Terms of the Year, viz. the Annun- “ ciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and St.
 “ Michael. And that the said Wardens and “ Corporation of Mercers, and their Successors, “ shall yearly bestow and expend 100*l.* at four “ several Times in the Year, in and about the “ Expences and Charges of a Feast or Dinner for “ the whole Company, to be had and made in “ the Mercers Hall, in the End of every their “ Quarter-Day, the Sum of Twenty-five Pounds;
 “ and shall every Year give and distribute to the “ Relief of the poor Persons and Prisoners in the “ Hospitals and Prisons, known by the Name “ of Christ, or Christ's-Church, lately Grey Fryars
 “ in LONDON, the Hospital of St. Bar- “ tholomew, near Smithfield, the Spital and “ Bedlam, near Bishopsgate, the Hospital for the “ Poor in Southwark, and the Compter kept in “ the Poultry, 50*l.* in Money, or other Provi“ sions and Necessaries for them; that is, to “ every the said Hospitals and Prisons, 10*l.* at
 “ the four most usual Feasts, or within 28 Days “ after, &c.

“ AND as concerning his said Mansion-House,
 “ with the Gardens, Stables, and all and singu“ lar the other Appurtenances, &c. he willed “ and disposed, that they should remain, and
 “ the Use thereof be, to the said Mayor and “ Commonalty, and to their Successors: And “ also to the Wardens and Commonalty of the “ Mercers, to have and to hold in common,
 “ upon Trust and Confidence, that the same
 “ Mayor and Commonalty, and the said War“ dens and Commonalty of the Mercers, and “ their Successors, shall permit, and suffer, seven “ Persons by them to be elected and appointed
 “ in Manner and Form aforesaid, meet, and suffi“ ciently learned, to read the said seven Lectures,
 “ to have the Occupation of all the said Man“ sion-House, Gardens, and all other the Ap“ purtenances, &c. for them, and every of them
 “ there to inhabit, study, and daily to read, the “ said several Lectures.

“ AND his Will was, that none should be chosen “ to read any of the said Lectures, after being “ married; nor receive any Fee or Stipend ap“ pointed for the Reading of the said Lecture.

It is to be noted, That all this was thus dis“ posed and given only during fifty Years. Then “ after, the Will proceeds: “ That moreover he “ willed and disposed, that if the said Mayor
 “ and Commonalty, and the said Wardens and “ Commonalty, before the End of the said fifty “ Years, to them in Form aforesaid limited, “ should procure and obtain sufficient and lawful “ Dispensations and Licences, Warrant and Au“ thority had and obtained, should have and “ enjoy the said Royal Exchange, Messuages, “ Shops, Pawns, Vaults, Houses, and all other
 “ the Premises, &c. for ever severally, by such “ Moieties, Rates, and other Portions, and in “ such Manner and Form, as before was limited,
 “ upon Trust and Confidence, that they severally

“ for ever should do, and perform the Payments, “ Charges, &c. before limited and expressed.

“ AND he required and charged the said Cor“ porations and chief Governors thereof, with “ circumspect Diligence, and without long De“ lay, to procure, and so to be done and obtain“ ed, as they would answer for the same before “ Almighty God. For if they, or any of them, “ should neglect the obtaining of such Licence,
 “ or Warrant, (which he trusted could not be “ difficult, nor so chargeable, but that the “ Overplus of his Rents, and Profits of the “ Premises would soon recompence the same,
 “ because to so good a Purpose in the Common“ wealth, no Prince or Council in any Age “ would deny or defeat the same. And that if “ conveniently, by his Will, or other Convey“ ance, he might have assured it, he would not “ have left it to be done after his Death) then
 “ the same to revert to his right Heirs, whereas
 “ he meant the same to the Commonwealth.
 “ And then the Default thereof should be to the “ Reproach and Condemnation of the said Cor“ porations afore God. The proving of this “ Will bore Date, November 26, 1579.

THIS noble Gift was afterwards confirmed by Act of Parliament, in the 23d of the Queen, and was intituled, “ An Act for the Establishing an “ Agreement, between Sir Henry Nevyl, Knt. and “ Dame Anne Gresham, Widow, for the better “ performing of the last Will of Sir Thomas Gre- “ sham, Knt. deceas'd, and for the Payments of his “ Debts.” The Clause ratifying and confirming the Donation of the Exchange for the aforesaid Lectures, was in these Words:

“ AND the Buildings in LONDON, called
 “ the Royal Exchange, and all Pawns, and “ Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Messuages, Tenements,
 “ and other whatsoever Hereditaments, Parcel “ of, or adjoining to the said Royal Exchange in “ LONDON, some Time the said Sir Tho- “ mas Gresham's, shall be to the said Dame Anne, “ during her Life; and after her Decease, the “ one Moiety thereof to the Mayor, Commonal“ ty and Citizens of LONDON, by whatever “ special Name, or Addition, the same Corpo“ ration is made, or known, and to their Succes“ sors for ever, and the other Moiety thereof “ to the Wardens and Commonalty of the My“ stery of Mercers of the City of LONDON, “ that is to say, to the Body and Corporation of
 “ the Company of the Mercers of LONDON,
 “ by whatsoever special Name, or Addition,
 “ the same Corporation is made, or known, and “ to their Successors, to the good Uses and In“ tents, in the said Writing, last Will and “ Testament, limited, or appointed.

So that these Lectures began after the Decease of the Lady Anne Gresham, (which happened in the Year 1596) and so to continue for ever;
 whereupon the Lecturers were accordingly chosen and appointed to begin their Readings in Trinity Term 1597, which also they do at this Time perform. The Names of the first Professors were Anthony Wooton for Divinity, Dr. Matthew Gwinne, for Physick, Dr. Henry Mountlow, for the Civil Law, Dr. John Bull, for Musick, Edward
Breerwood, for Astronomy, Henry Briggs, for Geometry, and Caleb Willis, for Rhetorick, to the great Delight of many, both learned and Lovers of Learning.

THESE Lectures are read daily in Term Time, by every one upon his Day, in the Morning, betwixt Nine and Ten, in Latin, and in the Af-noon, betwixt Two and Three, in English, saving that the Musick Lecture is in English only, upon two

two several Days, Thursday and Saturday, in the Afternoons, betwixt three and four o' the Clock.

THE Professors of this College have been Men of excellent Parts, and well qualified to perform the same: But after the great Fire of LONDON, (this College escaping in that Conflagration) the City made Use of it for their Court and Chamber, and for other Publick Uses. The Inner Court-Yard for the Meeting of the Merchants, until such Time as the Royal Exchange could be re-built; also, the Galleries above the Court-Yards without, and the Piazza's about the Inner Court, where the Merchants met, were all converted into Shops for those who had been burnt out in the Fire of the Exchange. This Alteration did, for some Time, impede the orderly Course of the Reading the aforesaid Lectures: But afterwards the antient Practice was renewed.

THIS noble Foundation of Learning, Mr. Stow hath given a brief Account of; and Mr. Strype adds a few other Things, whereof he is silent. The Lady Gresham being dead, at whose Decease the Salaries for the Lectures were to commence from the Rents then growing out of the Royal Exchange, and the Mansion-House of Sir Thomas Gresham, and the Lecturers being now to be appointed, in the Year 1597; the Mayor therefore, Aldermen, and Commons, considering what a Trust this was committed to them, thought fit to write Letters to the University of Cambridge, importing, "How that they might the better discharge the Trust committed to them, both in Conscience, and in regard of their own Credit, as not doubting but the Eye of her Sovereign Majesty, her Honourable Council, and all other of best Judgment throughout this Land, would observe their Doings, with what Care and good Discretion they perform'd this Duty, being Matter of so great Importance to the Church of GOD, and this Commonwealth: And that for themselves, for Want of Judgment to discern Men of most Sufficiency in the said Faculties, they might make Default, and commit some Error in their Election: They thought good therefore to derive their Choice from the very Fountain, and in earnest and hearty Manner to crave the Help and Assistance of their learned Judgments; and to entreat of them the Nomination of two meet Persons, being unmarried, according to the Will of the Testator, of best Knowledge in every Faculty of those four that were referred to the bestowing of the City; being also furnished with good Utterance, and other meet and requisite Parts for the publick Profession of the said Arts, whose several Names they prayed them to set down, and send unto them, under the Signature of the University, that they might make Choice of the fittest Persons in every Faculty, being assisted by so many grave and learned Judgments; wherein, as they should perform a special Part of their own Duty, so they doubted not but that themselves should do a good acceptable Work to Almighty GOD, and bind them and the whole City in mutual Respects, and good Correspondence of like Desire to procure the Good, wherein they might, of that University.

To the like Effect they directed their Letters to the University of Oxford.

SOME of the Heads in Cambridge were jealous that these Lectures, being to be read in LONDON, might be prejudicial to that University, in hindering many from coming thither to study the Sciences, and drawing them to LONDON. This occasioned Dr. Fegon, the Vice-Chancellor, to refrain for a little Time to nominate any, before he had acquainted the Lord Burleigh, their High Chancellor, with it, and had his Allowance for the doing it.

THERE were two Things that those who had the Care of this College, in order to the Settlement thereof, were busy about; the one was in concerting, whether the Lectures should be read in Latin, or English; the other, for the Regulation of the College with good Rules and Orders.

CONCERNING the former, it was much controverted in which of the two Languages the Lectures should be read; and there were two Papers of Reasons assigned; one, Why the Lectures in Divinity should be read in English, all, or Part: And the other, Why all the other Lectures should be rather read in English, all, or Part: But the Judgment of learned Men differ'd, it seems, in this Point; some being for reading in Latin, some in English; the general Opinion was, That in the three Readings in the Week, the two former should be in Latin, and the last in English.

THE Reasons given in the aforesaid Papers, were as follow:

I. BECAUSE the Good that would ensue would be more Publick.

AND the Founder seemed to have a more special Respect to the Benefit of the Citizens; of whom few understood the Latin Tongue.

THAT there would be more Hope of Contribution from the Citizens for the perfecting this and other good Works, if they might be employed to the common Benefit of the People of the City.

THAT it would be less offensive and damageable to the Universities, that this Reading be in English.

THAT the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, to whom the Ordering these Lectures was committed by the Will of the Founder, thought themselves bound in Conscience to provide that they might be read to the greatest Profit.

THAT if they be read in Latin, some of the Learned might probably resort to them, at first, for Novelty's Sake; but in short Time, they would become solitary, and void of Auditors; whereby Occasion would be taken to convert the Revenue to some other Uses, or else to transfer the Lectures to the Universities; both which were contrary to the Founder's Meaning.

THAT the Grecians taught all Parts of Learning in their own Tongue; Varro, Cicero, and Cæsar, and other of the wisest and learnedest of the Romans, laboured to have the like done in the Latin: That the vulgar Tongues, at this Time, especially the Italian, French, and Spanish, both translate out of Latin and Greek, and write in their Languages all Parts of Learning; which hath much graced and benefited those Countries.

AND Lastly, It will farther the Estimation of Learning among the People, and will give them such a Taste of Learning as not to despise it, as the ruder Sort do; and make them withal to find their own Wants, and how necessary it is to have learned Men among them.

II. Reasons why the Divinity Lecture should be in English; viz.

THAT the former Reasons make most for the Divinity Lecture.

THAT the Exposition of the Texts of Scripture is fit for none more than the common People, who may and do mistake many Places of Scripture: And when Points of Doctrine, which they hear but shortly and slightly handled in Sermons and ordinary Lectures, shall be soundly and largely delivered in English, with plain Proofs of the Truth of our Doctrine, and Dis-proof of the Sophistry of the adverse Party; hereby Knowledge ledge will come to be well settled in the Minds of the People, in whom there is a great and general Want of it.

THAT many, able to understand Latin when they read it deliberately, will not be able to understand the Reader when he speaketh it.

THAT it will be a good Means to beget a Reverence towards learned Ministers, when Divinity, and the Study thereof, shall appear to be a greater and harder Matter than is apprehended by many; since many simple Men and Women take themselves to be great Divines, upon meer Ignorance and vain Presumption.

RECUSANTS, and other secret Papists, shall not be so easily able to shake the Faith, and disquiet the Minds of unlearned People, who, for want of Grounds, are snared and confounded with subtle Arguments, as Papists furnish themselves withal.

THAT that false and dangerous Opinion, That the Difference between us and the Papish Church is about small Trifles, and maintained by our Side for Contention rather than Conscience sake, may be found false and slanderous; and a true and grounded Detestation of Popery shall be bred in the Queen's Subjects Hearts.

THAT it may please God to make it a Means of the Conversion of some Papist, who, though they refuse to be present at Sermons, yet peradventure, will not shun altogether Scholastical Lectures.

IF it be objected, That it will not be fit to have all Controversies, or the Reasons of both Sides made known to the People, it may be answered, That the Practice of the Adversaries, who have contrived the Controversies, and framed their Reasons in the English Tongue, with as much Subtilty as they can, shew the Necessity of writing and reading Scholastically and Learnedly in English; that the People may be able to maintain the Truth professed by Soundness of Reason.

THERE is a Collection of Rules prefaced in these Words: "It is thought good by the Mayor and Aldermen, and Commons of the City; and by the Master, Wardens, and Company of the Mercers, to whom the Election of the said Professors, and the good Government of their said College is wholly committed, by the last Will of the said Founder, to devise and set down certain Ordinances for the good Government of the said College, in Manner following:

BUT the Reader may observe, by what will be said hereafter, that these Orders were never kept up to.

THE first whereof was, for a Priority among the Professors. This Priority to be in the Professors of Divinity, Law, and Physick, successively; so that these three principal Readers be Presidents in Succession. The Divinity Reader to be next the President. The other Readers, after the Divinity Professor, to have their Place according to their Seniority within the College.

THE Readers to lodge and common within the House, as Collegiate Persons.

DEPUTY Readers to be allowed by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Wardens of the Mercers.

A common Table, or ordinary Diet, to be kept by the Professors, within the College, by a common Charge.

No Stranger to be entertained at their common Diet, above three Meals within one Month.

THE publick Reading to be performed at five Terms; whereof the first to begin the Monday before Trinity Term, of the Common Law, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. the Space of thirty Days next ensuing; after which Term, a greater Vacancy and Intermision is granted to them for their private Study, and other Business; and for avoiding the Concourse of People in the Heat of Summer. The second Term to begin the first Monday in September, and to continue for a Fortnight. The third Term to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term; and to End with the same Term. The fourth Term to begin the Monday next after the Epiphany, and to continue for two Months, viz. the Space of threescore Days. The fifth Term to begin the Monday seven-night after Easter Day, and to End with Easter Term.

THE Divinity Lecture to be read thrice every Week, twice in Latin, and once in English, between the Hours of eight and nine in the Forenoon, a whole Hour at a Time. The Lecture to be read in Latin for the Sake of Strangers (whereby the Memory of the Founder may be divulged) on Mondays and Wednesdays. To be read in English, for the common Benefit of the People of the City on Fridays. Which English Lecture may be the Effect of the two former Latin Lectures.

THAT the Divinity Reader employ his Time in handling Controversies that concern the chief Points of Christian Faith, especially those with the common Adversary, the Church of Rome. And to endeavour to confirm the true Doctrine established in the Church of England; and to bolt out the true State of each Controversy, especially drawn from the Council of Trent, and the late Writers of refined Popery; and to overthrow their false Opinions. First, by Scripture, then by Consent of Antiquity; and lastly, by Schoolmen, and chief Writers, of their own Side; not intermeddling with Domestick Questions, or intestine Differences, touching the Rites and Manner of Government of the Church.

THE Law Lecture to be read thrice every Week for an Hour; the two former in Latin, and the third in English, as a brief Recapitulation of the two former. The Days to be Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

THIS Law Lecture, considering the Hearers, for the most Part, are like to be Merchants, or other Citizens, not to be read after the Manner of the University, upon any Text of the Civil Course, but to cull out such Titles and Heads of Law, as best may serve to the good Liking and Capacity of the Auditory, and are more usual in Practice, which may be handled after the Method of Waserbekius, and certain others, by Definition, Division, Causes, Effects, Contraries, &c. To which are added the Heads and Titles of such Matters as were fitted for this Place and Auditory.

THE Physick Lecture to be thrice every Week, viz. Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, between the Hours of 10 and 11. The two first Lectures in the Latin Tongue, and the third in the English, as a brief Collection and Recapitulation of the two former.

AND for the Matter of the said Lecture, it is to be wished, that the Reader follow Fernelius's Method, by reading Physiology, then Pathology, and last Therapeutic; whereby the Body of the said Art may be better imprinted by good Method in the studious Auditors, rather than be disjointed, and delivered out of Order, by Exposition of some Part of Galen, or Hippocrates.

THE Astronomy and Geometry Lectures to be read likewise, viz. either of them thrice every Week.

THE Geometrician to read every Trinity Term, Arithmetick. In Michaelmas and Hilary Term, Theoretical Geometry; and every Easter Term, Practical Geometry.

THE Astronomy Reader to read, first, the Principles of the Sphere, and Theories of the Planets, &c. then to apply them to Use, by reading Geography, and the Art of Navigation in some one Term of every Year. The Days for the Astronomy Lecture

The Divinity Lecture.

The Law Lecture.

The Physick Lecture.

The Astronomy and Geometry Lectures.

Lecture to be Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, between the Hours of Two and Three in the Afternoon. For Geometry, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at the same Hour. The first Reading of the said Lectures to be in Latin, the next in English, and so following in the same Order.

The Rhetorick
Lecture.

THE Rhetorick Lecture to be read thrice every Week, viz. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, for a whole Hour in the Latin Tongue, with a brief Recapitulation for one Quarter of an Hour in the English, between the Hours of Ten and Eleven in the Forenoon.

The Musick
Lecture.

THE Musick Lecture to be also read thrice every Week, viz. the Theorick Part, for half an Hour in the English Tongue, and the Practick Part, by Consort of Voices, or of Instruments, the other Half Hour: The Days appointed to be Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, in the Afternoon, between the Hours of Three and Four.

FOR the more Order and Comeliness, the Readers are to read their Lectures as the Manner is in the Universities, viz. in such Hoods, and Habits, as fit their Degree.

THE Keeper of the House, who is to keep the Place of Reading, Cloisters, Garden, and other open and common Places, and to see the Gates be shut and opened in convenient Times, to be appointed by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, with the Consent of the said Lecturers; and to have his Lodging within the said House.

IT has been said, That before the Trustees for this Benefaction proceeded to choose the first Professors, they sent Letters to the two Universities, desiring them to recommend to their Choice fit Persons, under the University's Seal: It is not known whether either of the Universities sent such Recommendations, but it is probable they never did, or at least, that the first Choice was made without any Regard to them; for at the first Election, two of the Professors were chosen by Recommendations from the Court, namely, Dr. Matthew Gwinne, Professor of Physick, and Dr. John Bull, Professor of Musick. The First, viz. Dr. Gwinne, had, by his Interest at Court, been sent into France, Physician to Sir Henry Unton, Leaguer Ambassador to the King of France from Queen Elizabeth; and after his Return, was designed to be made Physician to the Tower of LONDON; but the first Election of the Professors for Gresham College happening at that Time, the Lord Thomas Egerton, Baron Ellesmere, Lord High Chancellor of England, recommended him, in two Letters, to the Mercers Company, to be chosen Physick Professor, which they did accordingly; and he was about the same Time admitted Fellow of the College of Physicians. The other, Dr. Bull, Musick Professor, had for some Years been travelling into France, Spain, and Germany, as Mr. Wood tells us, in his Athenæ Oxonienses, and on his Return, was one of the Gentlemen of the Queen's Chapel, for four or five Years at least, before the Election of the first Gresham Professors; and as he was in the Service of the Court, and in the highest Esteem there, for his vast Knowledge in Musick, it is very likely he had his Recommendation from thence.

IF the Trustees did not take the Recommendations of the Universities to direct their Choice, yet they seemed to make their Methods and Customs the Pattern by which the Gresham Lectures were to be modelled, and accordingly the Gresham Professors began, and ever performed their Lectures in a Method and Course, in no material Point differing from the Universities, which appears to be altogether agreeable to the Intention of Sir Thomas Gresham, who, as he founded Professorships in the same Arts and Sciences as are in the Universities, must be supposed to design, that they should be cultivated in the same Manner at LONDON. Thus Sir George Buck, in his Treatise of the third University of England, namely, LONDON, says, That all the Liberal Arts and Sciences are there professed and taught, and that there are many and daily Lectures thereof read Particularly and Academically in Gresham-College, for which Reason, he afterwards styles Gresham-College, a little University, Academie Epitome. And besides, That the Method of the Lectures themselves, the Times of Reading them, and the Intervals between the Times of Reading, were, in a great Measure, conformable to the publick Lectures in the Universities, and in the same Manner performed when the Gresham Lectures were first instituted, is beyond Contradiction, plain, from the Conclusion of Dr. Gwinne's second Oration, read in Gresham-College, wherein he says, That the Exercises, or Lectures, required of the Professors in Gresham-College, are no other than what are required from the Professors in the Schools, and Lecturers in the Colleges in the Universities; and that as they, the Universities, had their Vacation Time, and Recesses between the Performance and Return of their Duty, so had Gresham-College; where the Lectures were read only at particular and appointed Times; namely, when such Exercises are usually performed in other the like Places: And that these usual and customary Times of Reading were the Term Times only, is plain from Stow; for it appears from the first Edition of his Survey, written the same Year that Dr. Gwinne read the aforesaid Lecture, and not above seven Months after the first Lectures were read, that the first Professors began their Lectures in Trinity-Term 1597. That every Lecturer had his particular Day in the Week, on which he was to read twice, once in English, and the other in Latin; and the same Practice appears to have been followed in 1603, from the second Edition of the Survey, published by Mr. Stow himself, in that Year, improved, augmented, and carefully corrected; and it is as plain, that the same Practice continued in the Year 1618, from the third Edition published by Mr. Anthony Monday; and in the Year 1633 from the fourth Edition published at that Time.

IN this Manner these Lectures began to be read; and thus they continu'd without any Interruption till the dreadful Fire of LONDON in 1666, when the Exchange of LONDON being consumed, this College was made Use of to supply the Want of Shops for the Inhabitants of the Exchange, and to be a Place for the Merchants to meet in, till such Time as the said Exchange could be re-built, as has been said before. After which the Lectures were again renew'd in the Manner they had before been practis'd; and thus continued till they had again been like to be interrupted in the Year 1699, thro' the Discouragement the Professors met with from the Trustees, who, under Pretence of a great Debt they had run into by Re-building the Royal Exchange in the sumptuous Manner it now appears, thought it good to stop the Professors Salaries; but they, however, did not think this a sufficient Reason to omit their Duty, but continued in the Discharge of it, notwithstanding this great Difficulty they had to encounter with: The Particulars of which Matter were as follow:

IN the Month of August 1699, a grand Committee for Gresham Affairs was summoned to meet, and the Professors directed to give their Attendance: When the Professors came, the Committee acquainted them, that Sir Thomas Gresham's Gift had greatly run them into Debt; that the Expence of Re-building the Exchange, (to do which they were forced to take up great Sums of Money upon Interest) was so great, and the Income of the Exchange so small, the Trade thereof being greatly fallen off, that the present Profits of the Exchange were less than the Interest of the Money borrowed to re-build it, whereby there was no Revenue left to maintain and support the Uses of Sir Thomas Gresham's Will; wherefore they were not in any Condition to pay the Professors Salaries any longer, nor any more could be at any Expence in Repairing the College, tho' they had ever, before that, kept in constant Repair both the publick Rooms of the College, and the private Apartments of the several Professors. The Professors used all possible Endeavours, in the most respectful Manner, to prevail with the Trustees to recede from these Resolutions, but without Success, till the following Year, when they were forc'd to apply to Counsel, to advise what proper Course to take to obtain Redress: The Counsel they apply'd to, were the then Attorney-General, Sir Thomas Trevor, and Mr. Henry Pooley, to whom they gave a short State of their Case in Substance, as follows:

Money.

Sir Thomas Gresham, by Will, made 1575, left one Moiety of the Exchange, &c. to the City of LONDON, to the Intent that they perform certain Payments mentioned in his Will; and the other Moiety thereof to the Company of Mercers, on the same Confidence and Trust: One of these Payments directed by the Will, was, that the City should find four Lecturers in Divinity, Geometry, Astronomy, and Musick, for ever, and pay them yearly 50 l. a-piece. And that the Mercers likewise find three Lecturers for ever, in Civil Law, Physick and Rhetorick, and pay them also 50 l. a-piece. As to his Mansion-House, with the Gardens, Stables, and Appurtenances, &c. the Will directs the same to be, and remain to the said City and Company, upon Trust and Confidence, that they permit and suffer the seven Readers aforesaid, there to inhabit, and have the Use thereof to study and read the said Lectures daily. On the next Year, an Act of Parliament passed for the better Performing this Will. The City and Company have accordingly enjoy'd this Gift, and have nominated the Readers, paid the Salaries, and kept the College in Repair ever since, till of late, which they now refuse to do, alledging, that they were at a vast Expence in Re-building the Exchange, and had borrowed vast Sums to do it, and that the Interest thereof being first paid, the clear Profits of the Exchange, &c. will not pay the Salaries and other Payments appointed. The Trustees farther pretend, That the Ground Sir Thomas built the Exchange on, was not his own Ground. On stating their Case after this Manner, the Professors made these Queries, and received the following Advice:

THE first Question is, supposing they [the Trustees] have borrowed Money to build, "Whether they, enjoying the Rents and Profits, as they do, under the Will, so confirmed by Act of Parliament, and the Act for Re-building the City, not appointing in what Manner the Exchange should be re-built, are not in all Events to pay the seven Salaries, and the other Charities yearly, and whether they can be now admitted to controvert the Title to the Ground, upon which the Exchange was built?

I conceive this City shall not now be admitted to controvert Sir Thomas Gresham's Right to the Ground on which the Exchange is built; and I conceive no extravagant or extraordinary Expences which the City may have been at in Building the Exchange more sumptuously than needful, only for their own Grandeur and Magnificence, shall be allowed to them to sink the Rents in Disappoint- ment of the Lecturers, and other Charities. The necessary Charges of Re-building, in such a Manner, as to make it answer a Rent sufficient to answer the Charities, must be allowed; and if after such an Allowance, the rest of the Profits will not be sufficient to answer the Charities, I conceive the City ought to account for all the Rents and Profits from the Death of Sir Thomas Gresham, that so the Surplus of Profits may be applied to make up the Deficiency that now is.

THE second Question is, "Whether the several Readers shall bring in a Bill in Chancery for Performance of the Will in their own Names, and for their Salaries only? or, Whether in the Name of the Attorney-General, at their Relation for the Payment of their Salaries, and the other Charities in the Will?

I conceive it is most proper to bring the Bill in the Attorney-General's Name, at the Relation of the Lecturers, &c.

MAY 17, 1700.

HENRY POOLEY.

UPON this Advice, the Professors, who still sought the Trustees to give them Redress, without running to Extremities, but could not prevail, filed a Bill in Chancery against the Trustees in Michaelmas Term, 1700. This Information was in Substance as follows: "That Sir Thomas Gresham, did, in the Reign of the late Queen Elizabeth, at his own Charge, build and erect in the City of LONDON, a Building, which was, by the said Queen, called the Royal Exchange; That by his last Will, made 1575, he left one Moiety of the said Exchange, &c. to the City of LONDON, and the other Moiety thereof to the Company of Mercers, upon this special and express Trust and Confidence, and to the Intent that they should perform the Payments, and other Intents, in that his last Will appointed to be done and performed." Then the Bill recites the several Payments of Salaries and other Charities mentioned in the Will, and proceeds: "That the Overplus of the Rents, and Profits of the Premises, above all the Payments thereout appointed, to issue by the said Will, would soon abundantly recompence such Charge and Trouble as the Trustees should be at: And as to his Mansion-House, now commonly called Gresham-College, he gave that, and all the Appurtenances thereto belonging, to the said City and Company, to have and to hold, upon this express Trust and Confidence, that they should permit the said seven Lecturers to have the Occupation of all his said Mansion-House, &c. for them, and every of them there to inhabit, study, and read, &c. That the said Trustees did pay the said Salaries and other Charities, until the 25th Day of March, 1699; but since that Time, have stopped further Payment, whereby the Salaries of the Professors are in Arrear from the said 25th of March 1699, to the present October 1700, altho' Application has been several Times made of late to the Trustees for the Payment of the said Salaries; and when the Performance of the Founder's Will has been earnestly pressed upon them, the Answer was, There was no Money to make good the said Salaries, &c. on which Pretence the Trustees do absolutely refuse to perform the Will of the said Testator, by paying the said Salaries, but do convert the Rents and Profits of the Premises devis'd to them, to their own respective Uses, and their Pretence for this Want of Money, is, That the Royal Exchange, and other Appurtenances devised to them

“ them in the said Will, were burnt in the Fire of “ LONDON; that they re-built the same at a “ vast Expence, borrowing Money for that Pur“ pose; and that the Incomes and Profits arising “ from the Exchange, thus re-built, does not an“ swer the Money that was borrowed to re-build
 “ the same. Altho’ this was true, the same “ ought not to prejudice the Payment of the said
 “ Salaries, &c. for that there was no Necessity
 “ for them to expend such vast Sums in outward “ Magnificence, and besides, they had, for above
 “ an hundred Years, enjoyed all the Rents and “ Profitsof the Premises, being a very great Re“ venue, much above the said Payments charged
 “ on the same: Besides, had not the Trustees “ thought it for their Advantage, and so had re“ fused to re-build the same, subject to the “ Trusts and Payments in the Testator’s Will,
 “ some other Ways and Means would have been “ found out, and provided for the Re-build“ ing, without defeating the several Payments “ appointed; and of this the Trustees are so “ sensible, that they have, ever since the Fire of “ LONDON, continued to pay the same,
 “ and but lately, as is afore set forth, stopp’d “ Payment; and for some farther Colour to make “ this Stop, do pretend, that, by a late Act of “ Parliament for the Relief of Orphans, &c. the “ Revenues of the City are appropriated to answer
 “ for ever a Fund of 8000 l. a Year, to pay these “ Orphans Debts, &c. which is only a Pretence
 “ to defeat the Founder’s Will, since this Act “ cannot affect the Salaries due to the Professors,
 “ &c. for that not the whole Benefaction of Sir “ Thomas Gresham, but only the Surplus of it,
 “ after paying the Uses of the Will, can be called “ or taken to be Part of the Revenue of the City.
 “ And so bent are the Trustees to defeat the Will “ of the Testator, that, tho’ by his said Will,
 “ his Mansion-House is expressly appointed for “ the Habitation of the said seven Readers, yet,
 “ to force the Readers from thence, they have let
 “ the said House run to Ruin, and refuse to repair
 “ and keep in Repair the same. All which Re“ fusal of Paying the Salaries, &c. and of Re“ pairing the Mansion-House, is against all Equi“ ty and good Conscience, and directly against “ the Will and Meaning of the Testator afore“ said, and a Breach of the Trust reposed by the “ said Will in them. To the end, therefore,
 “ that the said Trustees may answer the Pre“ mises, and be decreed to make good the Salaries,
 “ &c. and to pay the Arrear, and put the said “ Mansion-House, and keep the same, in Re“ pair, the Lord Chancellor is prayed to grant
 “ his Writ of Subpœna to the Trustees, com“ manding them personally to appear, &c.

THE Consequence of Filing this Bill, was,
 That not long after the Trustees met, and directed the Professors to attend, and at their Meeting, order’d the Payment of one Year’s Salary, telling them, That they would, in convenient Time, discharge the remaining Part of the Arrear, whereupon all Proceedings in Chancery were suspended.
 The Trustees said, likewise, That they had a Proposal to make for the mutual Advantage, both of the Trustees and Professors, to which they desired the Concurrence of the Professors: Which Proposal was to bring a Bill into Parliament for the Re-building Gresham-College into a Square (to be let out for Rent, for the Use and Advantage of the Trustees) and Providing Houses more commodious for the Professors, than the Lodgings they now enjoy; and to this Proposal all the Professors, save one, gave their Consent, and accordingly the Bill was brought into the House of Commons, in 1701, and carried there; but at the second Reading, in the House of Lords, it was rejected; upon the Petition of Dr. Robert Hooke,

VOL. I.

Geometry Professor, who had before denied his Consent to it. The Contents of this intended Act of Parliament were as follow: In the Preamble it sets forth, “ That the Royal Exchange
 “ was given to the Trustees in Trust, to pay out “ 603 l. 6 s. 8 d. per Ann. That this Exchange
 “ was burnt down in the great Fire of LON-“ DON, and so no Revenue left to pay the “ Annual Charge. That the Trustees re-built
 “ the Exchange at the Expence of 80,000 l. or “ thereabouts, and the Trustees lost thereby “ more than 2000 l. yearly, the Trade of the “ Exchange decreasing, and many of the Shops
 “ standing empty, altho’ considerable Abate-“ ments have been made to encourage Tenants.
 “ That Gresham-College is grown old and ruinous,
 “ and the Repairs thereof have been very Expen“ sive; but the said College standing upon a “ considerable Quantity of Ground, and great “ Part of it lying Waste, good Improvement may “ be made by Re-building it. That the Trus“ tees and Professors are agreed upon a Scheme “ of Building seven convenient Houses for the “ Lecturers, and a publick Hall, and likewise
 “ Alms-Houses in a more airy and convenient “ Place for the Alms-Folks.

“ WHEREFORE they pray, that it may be “ enacted, That it may be lawful to pull down
 “ the old College, &c. and to convert the Ma“ terials to their own Use, and also to let and “ dispose all, or any Part of the Ground belong“ ing to the said College, except such Part as

THE Bill being thus lost in the House of Lords, upon the Petition of Dr. Hooke, the Geometry Professor, the Trustees were much offended, and therefore went no farther in clearing the Arrears due to the Professors, than the above-mentioned Payment of the Year’s Salary, and laid aside this Project of Re-building till the Death of Dr. Hooke, which happened within a Year or two after; soon after which, the Trustees again resumed their Design of bringing their Bill into Parliament, as hoping now for better Success, when the main Opposer of it was dead;
 and then again they desired the Professors Consent and Concurrence, which they readily had;
 and accordingly, in the Year 1703-4, they brought into the House of Lords the same Bill as before, where it passed, but with the following Clause added. “ Provided always, that no Person shall “ hereafter be capable of being chosen a Lectu“ rer upon any Vacancy, except he be a Gradu“ ate in one of the Universities of this Kingdom.”
 There was likewise added a Penalty to the Bill, namely, “ That the Trustees should be obliged “ and required to build these Houses, Hall, and “ Alms-Houses, for the Lecturers and Alms-Folks, “ within five Years from the passing of this Act,
 “ upon the Penalty of 2000 l. to be forfeited to her “ Majesty, or Heirs, or Successors, &c.” But when this Bill came down to the House of Commons, Exception was taken to this Clause, and the Bill being on that Account rejected, hath never since been attempted again in Parliament.

IN the Year 1706, some Persons in Office, in the Parishes of St. Helen's and Broadstreet, did, contrary to all Custom and Usage, assess and tax the several Apartments of the Professors as distinct Houses; whereas the whole seven Lodgings (all which, as was well known, were only the single Mansion-House of Sir Thomas Gresham) had been before taxed but as one House: They likewise endeavour'd to bring the Professors into the Poors Rates, and other parochial Taxations, to subject their Salaries to the King's Taxes, and to lay other such-like Hardships upon them, nothing of which had ever before been so much as demanded of them. The Professors absolutely refused to comply with any of these Demands, and by proper Appeals, and other Methods, got themselves discharged from these Impositions. The Parish-Officers finding themselves disappointed, and not able to lessen their own Charges, by laying Part of them on the Professors, grew angry, and sought to give all the Molestation and Trouble they could to them; for which Purpose they employed Persons of mean and base Condition, perpetually to attend the Lectures, not to reap any Advantage thence, or even to satisfy any Curiosity, but to obtain Matter for Calumny or Complaint, and to give Notice if any blameable Omission should happen: And these Persons Behaviour was suitable to the Design they were sent to pursue, being always tumultuous and rude, and sometimes abusive to some of the Professors, during the Time of their performing their Duty. The Professors might have taken just Exception to such an Audience, or have refused to read to Persons so unqualified as they were: However, they never omitted their Lectures on this Account, but continued in the constant Discharge of their Duty, to the Disappointment of their Adversaries, who wanted nothing more than a just Occasion of Complaint; but as they could find no Neglect in the Professors of their real Duty, they had Recourse to an imaginary one, demanding of the Professors to read Lectures on Holidays; nay, of the Divinity Professor to read on Sundays: This they afterwards carried so far, as to insist on Lectures every Day in the whole Year. The Professors refusing Compliance with these Demands, their Adversaries had Recourse to Clamour and Noise; they printed Representations and Advertisements, that such Lectures were to be read on such Days, namely, on Holidays, when they knew no Lectures would be read, and pasted these up and down in the most publick Places, and by other Means dispersed them, and thus drew many Strangers thither, who being disappointed, and not knowing the Usage and Custom of the Place, were drawn in to join with them in their unreasonable Clamours: And among these were several Persons of good Fashion and Education; such, whose Attendance might have been a Credit and Reputation to the Professors, had they not fallen into the Prejudices before-named, and with great Zeal joined in the groundless Demand of Lectures every Day in the Year, instead of the known Duty of Reading them only in the Term Times. The Professors refusing to depart from what had been ever the Custom of the College, were menaced with Complaints to be made to the Committee for Gresham Affairs; and if Redress was not to be had there, of farther appealing to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen. And to make these Complaints more effectual, and pursue them with greater Vigour, the Complainants selected a Number from among themselves, to meet and consider how to carry on these Designs; at which Meetings they diligently went thro' the Founder's Will, to see if any thing was omitted that they could charge the Professors with, and there finding the Expression of, Studying and Reading daily, they fixed upon this last Word, and obstinately contended that nothing else was, or could be meant by it, than every Day in the Year; they likewise found Fault with the customary Hour of Reading, (two o'Clock) as unreasonable for them to attend, it falling at the Time of their Dinner. This was the Original and Progress of their Complaints, which they carried on farther, by using great Industry to get Hands to an Instrument, setting forth these Grievances, in order to be presented to proper Authority to obtain Redress; and accordingly Petitions were delivered in to this Effect, both to the Court of Aldermen, and Grand Committee for Gresham Affairs.

THE Professors proved, by sufficient Authorities, That from the first Institution, to the present Time of the Dispute, these Lectures were read only in Term Times. The first Author mentioned for Proof hereof, was Dr. Gwinne, in his Orationes Duæ; he was, as is before observ'd, chosen Professor of Physick at the first Election, and was directed to begin his Lectures in Trinity Term 1597. The ninth Lecture that he read is printed, and bears this Title, Prælectio nona, cum resumerentur Lectiones post Natalitia. The ninth Lecture, read when the Time of Reading came on again after Christmas. The Professors observed, from this Citation, that Dr. Gwinne beginning his Lectures in Trinity Term 1597, and his ninth Lecture coming after Christmas, in January, that is, in Hilary Term 1597-8, he could only have read in the Term Times: For just as in the then present Year 1706, so in that Year 1597, there would fall three Saturdays (which are the Physick Lecture Days) in Trinity Term, and five Saturdays in Michaelmas Term, so that he read eight Lectures only in 1597; there being just eight Saturdays within those Terms, and no more; and consequently the ninth Lecture must fall on the first Reading Time after Christmas; that is, on the first Saturday in Hilary Term in 1597-8, exactly, as he says it did, in the Inscription of his Lecture just now quoted. To this evident Proof the Professors added the Citations from the other Parts of Dr. Gwinne's Book.

THE next Author the Professors cited, was Mr. Stow, whose SURVEY was written in the Year 1598, the very Year after the first Institution of these Lectures; and he says, Page 57, Line 32, of his first Edition, as he does also in the second Edition, corrected and amended by himself, and published in the Year 1603, Page 76, Line 5; These Lectures are read Daily, Sundays excepted, in the Term Time, by every one on his Day, &c. and from thence they inferred, That the Words to read Daily, in the Founder's Will, might be either understood in the Sense of the Universities before-mentioned, or else in this of Mr. Stow, That each Lecturer should read on his particular Day assigned him in the Week; that so the Auditors, who had a Mind to attend any particular Science, might know on what Day to come, and not be disappointed.

THE next Author was Sir George Buck, in his Treatise concerning the three Universities of England, annexed to Stow's Chronicle, and dedicated to the Lord Chief Justice Coke, printed in the Year 1612, within fifteen Years of the Founding the Lectures; and he says, Page 980, Line 35. And these Lectures, viz. in Gresham College, must be read only in the Term Time.

THE

THE next Author mentioned, was the Editor of the third Edition of Stow, Anthony Monday, before cited, which he published in 1618, one and twenty Years after the Founding the Lectures, and he says, Page 123, Line 26, That their Lectures were read daily in the Term Times. The Professors observed, That this Author had been six and twenty Years one of the City Servants, in sundry Employments, had Encouragement from the whole Court of Aldermen, and Orders for the Perusal of whatever Helps he wanted, and that this Work was by them approved when finished, which cost him twelve Years Time in compiling; that therefore, he neither wanted Means of Knowledge, nor refused Industry for the obtaining it.

THE next Author was Dr. Holdsworth, who was chosen Divinity Professor in Gresham-College in 1630, thirty three Years after the first Institution; and his Divinity Lectures were published in 1661, by Bishop Pearson. Dr. Holdsworth tells his Auditors, It was three whole Months since his last Reading. Again, That those Lectures had been omitted for these three Months. Again, he concludes his Lecture with telling them; He should not read till that Day three Weeks, because the following Monday was a State Holiday, and the Monday after that, a Church Holiday. At the End of another Lecture, he says, He is sorry he is forced to break off abruptly in his Discourse, which must be the Work of the next Term. And again, he refers his Audience for the Remainder of the Argument to the next Term; and more to the same Purpose: And this Author continued Divinity Professor for nine or ten Years, with the greatest Applause. The next Author was Howell's Londinopolis, who publish'd his Work in 1657, sixty Years after the first Institution: And he says, Page 21, Line 29, These Lectures are to be read every Day in the Week in Term Time. The Professors were ready with Proof, that likewise ever since the Restoration, the Lectures were only read in the Term Time; and among other Instances of this Practice, they had the Example of the most celebrated Dr. Isaac Barrow, who was chosen Geometry Professor in Gresham-College in the Year 1662; being, at the same Time, Fellow of Trinity-College in Cambridge: All the while he continued Geometry Professor in Gresham-College, he was Fellow of Trinity; and as he read his Lectures in Term Times in Gresham-College, so in the Vacation Times, he went down to Cambridge, and attended his Duty and Fellowship there: But this, and the rest of their Proofs thereof, were not produced before the Committee, because the Petitioners were willing to allow, that Termly Readings only had been the Custom and Practice in Gresham-College, ever since the Restoration.

WHEN the Professors had given in this Proof, they observed, that the Argument by them offered, was of the strongest Nature, because it proved that reading the Lectures (in Term Times only) was the Original Practice enjoyn'd by the first Trustees, taken up by the first Professors, and followed by their Successors in all Times, that therefore this Practice could be no Corruption crept in by Degrees, either thro' the Sloth of the Professors, or the Connivance of the Trustees; but was founded in and continued by the full and free Approbation or Consent of both. They argued farther, That the first Trustees and Professors could not possibly be ignorant of that Expression in the Founder's Will, that say, The Professors are to inhabit, study, and read Daily, because that Part of the Will is, at all Elections, read to the Persons elected, in the Presence of the Electors, and if so, it was not conceivable that the first Trustees could understand the Word Daily, in the Sense of the Petitioners, to mean every Day in the Year, since they were so desirous of discharging their Consciences faithfully, as their Letter before-mentioned shews them to be; it is hardly possible they could sit down quiet and unconcerned, when they saw the first Professors begin and continue to read only in Term Time, in direct and open Violation of the Founder's Will, much less could they ever have been brought to give their Direction, or even Consent, that they should do so, nor can it be believed, that, had the first Professors thus understood the Word Daily to mean, they could ever have began and continued a Practice directly contrary to their Duty, unless they be supposed to have been Men of the most profligate and shameless Character possible, the very Reverse of which they had, as is before seen of Dr. Gwinne, and might easily be proved of the other Six. In the Conclusion, the Professors brought in the Books they cited, in order to submit their Citations to Examinations, and then called on the Petitioners to shew so much as one Proof or Evidence to the contrary.

THE Petitioners, who had in their Plea and in their printed Papers asserted, that at the original Institution, the Professors read every Day in the Year, and amongst these Professors, which they asserted did thus read, had named Dr. Gwinne and Dr. Holdsworth, &c. and had, with all Assurance, said, that their printed Works intimated as much (the direct contrary to which is true) and had farther laid down, that the Interruption of these every Day Readings was owing to the Civil War Time, to the great Sickness, or to the Fire of LONDON, thought fit no longer to insist on these Pretences, but fell to vilify and depreciate the Characters of the Authors quoted. Mr. Stow, they said, might easily be convicted of Falshood, and mistake even in what he writes concerning this Matter: His Authority was never admitted in any Cause or Court: He and the others were antiquated Authors. As for Dr. Holdsworth, he spoke in his own Cause, and might be convicted of Partiality, &c. and this laid the Professors under a Necessity of doing a needless Work, of justifying the Reputation of Mr. Stow, which, till that Time, had never been questioned; and the rather because one or two of the Committee spoke with Contempt of him, as an old, neglected, useless Author. The Professors referred themselves to Dr. Nicholson, then Dean, and afterwards Bishop of Carlisle, who gives the following Character of Mr. Stow and his Book, in his Historical Library, then printed in Octavo, but since, in 1714, in Folio. He says, Page 18, "John Stow wrote and publish'd "A Survey of LONDON.— The whole is "collected out of our best Historians and most "authentick Records, and discovers a great deal "of Industry and Accuracy in the worthy and "honest Author." And again, he says, Page 72, "Industrious John Stow deserves to be remem- "bred with Honour: He was a Member of the "Merchant-Tailors Company in LONDON, "and a special Benefactor to that City, in inqui- "ring after and preserving its Antiquities and "Records. He travell'd thro' a good Part of "England in Search after the Manuscript Histo- "rians, in the Libraries of our Cathedral "Churches, and was very exact and critical in "his Collections, and spent above forty Years in "these Studies. He always protested (and we "may take his honest Word for it) that he never "was sway'd by Favour or Fear in any of his "Writings; but that he had impartially, to the "best of his Knowledge, delivered the Truth. "This good Opinion the greatest of our Histo- "rians seem to have of him, since even Sir "Francis Bacon, and Mr. Camden, (not to "mention others of less Repute) have boldly "taken several Things upon his single Credit.

As to the next Author, Sir George Buck, quoted by them, he was not only a Man of Credit, but of Quality, being both one of the Gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber, and also Master of the Revels: This his Work he delivered to the Lord Chief Justice Coke, and dedicated it to him, leaving the Manuscript to be disposed of at his Lordship's Pleasure. The Lord Chief Justice was so well satisfied of his Integrity and his Ability, that he himself directed the Printing it, giving his Allowance for its Publication, and under his Hand giving his special Commendation and Approbation of it, as of a Work worthy the publick Light.

WHAT Character Mr. Monday's Work, which was the next Author quoted, deserves, is mentioned before. The Professors on this Head took Notice, how strange a Thing it was to make the Antiquity of these Authors an Exception to their Testimony, because their being old Authors gave their Evidence the greatest Strength, since they wrote of Things within their own Knowledge, and of Times in or very near to which themselves liv'd.

THE next Author, who was quoted by the Professors, was Dr. Holdsworth, a Man of the strictest Virtue, and most un sullied Reputation; though, at Random, his Character was excepted against, as is said before, by the Petitioners. He was, as the eminent Bishop Pearson tells us, the most celebrated Preacher of his Time, being Minister of St. Peter's Poor in Broadstreet, to which Living he was preferred in 1623 or 1624. He was a most faithful Pastor of his Parish, and a most conscientious Man; infomuch, that when the great Sickness happened in 1625, he refused to go into the Country, as most others did, but lived in his Parish, and constantly visited the Sick, despising the Contagion, and preferring the Discharge of his Duty to the Safety of his Person. In the Year 1630, he was, without making any Interest, or using any Solicitation (so great was his Reputation) chosen Divinity Professor in Gresham-College, of which he was a great Ornament nine or ten Years. He was a Person that so exactly adhered to his Duty, and so fearful of acting in the least against his Conscience, that in the Beginning of the Rebellion he was sequestered, plundered, and imprisoned four Years in the Tower, after which Time he was released; in every Part of his Life, being of an unblameable Carriage and a most holy Conversation. In short, he was, as Bishop Brownrig assures us, a most excellent Preacher, a most faithful Interpreter of Scripture, a Contemner of Riches, a most charitable Man, of strict Morals, and one of a most holy Life. This was the Character of those Men, whom the Petitioners represented as Men of no Weight, of no Principles, nay of Falshood and Partiality.

FROM thus supporting the Characters of the Authors cited by them, the Professors proceeded to justify themselves, as to the other Parts of the Charge against them. As to the not reading on Holidays, they insisted on their superior Obligation to attend their Duty at Church, as also on the perpetual Practice of the Universities, and of all their Predecessors, who never read Lectures on Holidays; an early Proof of which is found in Dr. Holdsworth, who says, as is before-mentioned, He should not read till that Day three Weeks, because the following Monday was a State Holiday, and the Monday after that, a Church Holiday. And in this Matter the Trustees were so far satisfied, that in their Order, presently to be mentioned, they did not comply with the Petitioners in this Point, in directing Lectures to be read on Holidays. As to the not reading in broken Weeks, the Professors justified that from the Practice likewise of their Predecessors, and also produced Letters from both the Universities, proving, that the Divinity Professor always opened the Term. As to the last Part of the Complaint, the Unreasonableness of the Hours, the Professors were indifferent whether they remained the same, or were altered.

AFTER both the Petitioners and Professors were withdrawn, the Trustees, after a long Debate, made an Order, dated October 4, 1706: The Preamble of which declares, That Application had been made by several Citizens and others, in relation to the Lectures at Gresham-College, setting forth, that the said Lecturers did not duly perform their Readings in Term Time, for that if any Term did not begin on a Monday, that was taken for a broken Week, and no Lecture that Week; and in like Manner, if any Term did not end on a Saturday, that was taken for a broken Week, and no Lecture performed; whereby the Inhabitants of this City, and others, were much hindered of the Benefit which they might reap by the said Lectures. Wherefore they do Order and Direct, That for the Future, those Lectures shall be performed, by the several Professors, on such Days of the Week as they now read in their several Sciences, at four Terms in every Year, as followeth, viz. The first Term to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term of the Common Law, and to end with that Term. The second Term to begin the Monday before Hilary Term, and to end with that Term. The third Term to begin the Monday Se'n-night after Easter-Day, and to end with Easter Term. The fourth Term to begin the Monday before Trinity Term, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. eight and twenty Days: And farther, it is ordered by the Committee, That the said Lecturers do begin to read their several Lectures at nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, and three in the Afternoon precisely. This Order likewise sets forth, that it was made after consulting the Founder's Will, and Articles that were made soon after the Trust came to the City and Company: The Professors comply'd with this Order, with Respect to the broken Weeks and Hours of Reading, but finding the Order direct them to read out of the Term, contrary to all Custom and Usage, and this also by Virtue of such Articles or Orders, as were never looked upon to have any legal Authority or Force, they went to Counsel, and were advised not to charge themselves with any new Duties, nor submit to the Authority of such Articles, as they had good Reason to believe were never duly signed, or legally ratified, wherefore the greatest Part of the Professors drew up a Paper, and waited on Sir Thomas Rawlinson, the Chairman of the Committee, with it, which was as follows: Reasons why the Professors have not, in all Points, complied with the Order of the Honourable Committee, dated October 4, 1706. First, "We are, " at our being chosen into our respective Places, " directed to perform our Duty, according to " the Custom and Practice of the Place. Secondly, " We are able to give unquestionable Proof, that " the Custom has been, without any Interruption, " to read only in Term Time, and since it has " been so, we are advised to be very careful how " we charge ourselves, or our Successors with unnecessary Burthens. Thirdly, We are informed, that the Ground upon which this Order to " read out of Term is founded, is taken from " some Articles which were never legally ratified, " or admitted, as legally ratified, either by the " then Trustees or Professors. We therefore, " that our Compliance with this Order might " not be looked upon as allowing of the Authority of those Articles, and so subject us to " the rest of them, which, when under Consideration

“ fideration appeared unreasonable, both to yours
“ and our Predecessors, have rejected it.” The Professors had made Application to obtain an Order to examine these Articles in the Original, in the Committee’s Books, but could not obtain Leave sufficiently to inspect them; however, when they came to the Lord Mayor, with the afore-mentioned Reasons, why they could not comply wholly with the late Order of the Trustees, they offer’d likewise to give into the Committee their Exceptions to the Legality and Validity of these Articles or Orders, in Substance as follows:

First, They had this to offer, namely, That none of their Predecessors ever acknowledged the Validity of these Articles, or owned the Obligation of them, because they, from the Beginning, acted quite otherwise than these Articles direct. The Articles direct, that the Professors shall read three Times in each Week, and that on three distinct Days in the Week; but it has been proved, that from the very Beginning, the Professors never have read otherwise than twice in the Week, and that both Times on the same Day. Again, the Articles direct, that the Professors should live and diet at a common Table, to be kept at a common Charge, but the Professors never had any such common Table, as Dr. Gwinne says, in his afore-mentioned Book, where, speaking of the Professors living together, he says, They live not together so as to have Commons at one Table. And as their Manner of living together, was altogether different from what these Articles direct, so also was their Method of Reading their Lectures; for none of all the Professors Lectures that have ever yet appeared in Print, have followed the Method directed by these Articles. The Articles say, that the Physick Professor shall follow the Method of Fernelius, by Reading Physiology, then Pathology, and lastly, Therapeutics, but Dr. Gwinne, the first Physick Lecturer, read upon the Aphorisms of Hippocrates, and Dr. Winston, who was chosen in 1616, eight Years after Dr. Gwinne, read Anatomical Lectures only. The same Difference may be seen between what these Articles direct the Divinity Professor, and what Method Dr. Holdsworth follow’d in his Divinity Lectures, before quoted, and so between what the Articles direct the Geometry Professor, and what Method Dr. Barrow and Dr. Hooke followed in their Lectures, now printed. From all which it is plain, that the Professors altogether neglected the Direction of these Articles, or Orders, as well in the Method of their Reading, as in the Manner of their Living, and therefore could never believe them to have any obligatory Force, or be of any Authority whatsoever.

Secondly, The Professors had this farther Consideration to offer, That these Articles were so far from being legally ratified, that they were never duly consider’d, being not so much as even consistent with themselves. For Instance, when they speak of the Times of all the Professors Readings in general, they make five Terms of Reading, but when they speak of the particular Professors Times of Reading, they make but four Terms of Reading; but farther, they enjoin what it is impossible the Professors should comply with, because the Amount of their Incomes could never defray the Expence that their Professorships must put them to, if the Directions of these Orders be comply’d with, since 50 l. a-piece is the whole of their Salaries, out of which it is impossible to support themselves, their private Servants, and likewise publick ones, for the Hall, the Kitchen and Cellar, and farther, for an hospitable Entertainment for Strangers; all which Expences these Articles direct, and besides the Musick Professor’s

Proportion to this Charge, he must, according to these Orders, be singly at the Expence of Seventy-five publick Concerts every Year, of Vocal or Instrumental Musick, which if properly performed, would so far exceed the Salary of one Professor, that it would hardly be supported by the Income of all seven. Again, a farther Proof, that these Articles are not Authoritative, might be taken from hence, that whereas the Professors at every one of their Elections, have the Founder’s Will, so much of it as concerns them, read over to them, to which they give their solemn Promise to conform themselves, so if they were obliged to any Compliance with the Directions of these Articles, that Part of them that concerns the common Duties of all the Professors, as well as what belongs to the particular Duty of each Professor, would at least be read to them, if not a Copy thereof be directed to be given them, at their Elections; but instead thereof, the Professors, tho’ they sometimes apply’d to the Trustees for Liberty, to inspect them carefully, have never been able to obtain Leave for a diligent Examination of them, these Articles then to be sure would never be kept from their Knowledge, if their Compliance with them was at all expected as Part of their Duty. But, lastly, The Professors were ready to appeal to the Trustees, whether they had not (at a former Meeting some few Years before, at which were present many of the Trustees, and the Professors, living in 1706) themselves disowned the Authority of these Articles. The Trustees, not many Years before, held a grand Committee within Gresham-College, in the Musick Professor’s Lodgings, about the Affair of Re-building the College, at which Meeting, upon some Discourse then arising, Part of these Articles were directed to be read, whereupon the Professors, then present, asked of the Trustees, whether these Articles had ever been signed by all the first Professors, or whether they were legally ratified by the first Trustees? To which the Trustees answered, Not that they knew of, but said, that they were produced as Papers that were very antient. And this was the Substance of what the Professors had to except against these pretended Orders.

THE Result of all these Complaints and Hearings ended in a fair Justification of the Professors. The Trustees not long after made an Order, that the Professors Salaries should be constantly paid them one Year under another, without troubling the Committee from Time to Time for particular Orders. And in the Year 1719, upon the Professors petitioning that the Year’s Arrear, then remaining, might be discharged, the Trustees, after some Debate, came to a Resolution, that, tho’ the Exchange brought them in Debt, yet that should not tend to the Prejudice of the Professors, but the Inconvenience thereof lie on the City, and Company of Mercers, wherefore they then order’d the immediate Payment of the said Arrear, and that the future Payments should be made regularly as they became due.

The Names of the present PROFESSORS,
Anno 1733, are,

Divinity,	John Bridgen, M. A.
Civil Law,	John Cuming, Esq;
Astronomy,	Mr. John Mackin.
Geometry,	Dr. Newland.
Rhetorick,	Mr. John Ward.
Physick,	Dr. Pemberton.
Musick,	Mr. Gordon.

The ROYAL-SOCIETY.

THERE is a more modern College instituted for Experimental Philosophy, called, The Royal-Society, founded also in the City of LONDON, and a great Ornament thereof. The Meeting of the Members of this Society used to be at Gresham-College, but is now in Crane-Court in Fleet-street.

THE Original of the Society was, about the Year 1650, at Oxford, and about the Year 1658, in LONDON, when divers learned and judicious Persons, of different Professions, used to have Meetings together, to consider, discover, and take Account of Philosophical Experiments, Observations, and Matters; to view and discourse upon the Production and Rarities of Art and Nature; to consider how they may be improved, and what to deduce from them for the Benefit of Mankind, and to make Record thereof for future Ages.

SINCE their first Institution, they have made a great many very delightful and profitable Experiments, relating to Eclipses, Meteors, Comets, and other Cœlestial Phœnomena; likewise to Mines and Minerals; to Animals and Plants; to Earthquakes, Fiery Eruptions, Inundations, Mountains, Lakes, Tides, Currents, the Depth of the Sea, with Abundance of the like Works of Nature; they have also much advanced the Art of Navigation, so useful to us, and improved that of Architecture, Civil, Military, and Natural. They have also been very industrious in promoting the Planting of Trees, as well for Fruit as for Timber, and other Uses, to the great Benefit of the Nation.

THEIR Experiments have been published from Time to Time, of which there are now 37 Volumes, under the Title of The Philosophical Transactions; and likewise an Abridgment of them is published by Mr. John Lowthorp, and other Fellows of the Society, in six Volumes in Quarto.

AMONG the first Persons that met, which was at Wadham-College in Oxford, at the Lodgings of Dr. Wilkins, late Bishop of Chester, were Dr. Seth Ward, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury; the Honourable Robert Boyle, Esq; Sir William Petty, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Goddard, Dr. Willis, Dr. Bathurst, Sir Christopher Wren, and some others.

By these Meetings for consulting the Matters aforesaid, they gained Applause, not only at home, but in foreign Parts, which augmented their Number, especially about the Year 1658, at which Time they had a Meeting at Gresham-College; and the greatest Part of them living in LONDON, they continued their Meetings at the said College, until the Year 1660, being the Time of the Restoration of King Charles II. soon after which his Majesty was so well pleased with the Design, that he granted them a Charter, bearing Date the 23d of April 1663, whereby they were made a Corporation, to consist of a President, of a Council of twenty, and of Fellows, as many as should be thought worthy of Admission, For promoting the Knowledge of natural Things, and useful Arts, by Experiments; wherein his Majesty stiled himself the Founder and Patron, Sovereign and Companion of this Society, giving them Power to purchase Lands and Houses; to have and use a common Seal, and Coat of Arms; to have two Secretaries; two, or more, Curators of Experiments; one, or more, Clerks; and two Servants at Mace. He likewise gave them Power to make Laws, Orders, and Constitutions amongst themselves; to have one, or more, Engravers and Printers, with Power to Print whatsoever they shall think good of their own Observations and Remarks; to take and anatomize dead Bodies, executed by Order of Law; to erect Colleges, &c.

THE Coat Armour granted to this Society by King Charles II. is Argent, on a Canton Gules, three Lions of England. The Supporters are two hunting Hounds, Emblems of Sagacity and Search, both Argent, and collar'd with Ducal Coronets, Or, Crest, on a Helmet Proper, and a Coronet, as before; an Eagle Proper, supporting with his Right Foot, an Escutcheon as the Canton. The Motto:

Nullius in Verba.

UPON their first Meeting in LONDON, their Number was much increased; Henry Lord Viscount Brouncker, the Lord Brereton, Sir Paul Neal, John Evelyn, Esq; Dr. Scarborough, Dr. Clark, and divers others, became Members of this Society, which continually augmented, so that at this Day, they are very considerable, according to the List we shall give our Readers.

The Office of the several MEMBERS of this Society.

THE President is to call and dissolve the Meetings; to propose the Matter whereon to consult; to put Questions; to call for Experiments; to admit of Members that from Time to Time shall be received into the Society. The President.

THE Treasurer receives and disburses all Monies. The Treasurer.

THE Secretary reads all Letters and Informations, Replies to all Addresses, or Letters from foreign Parts, or from others; is to take Notice of the Orders, and material Passages at the Meetings; registers all their Experiments and Conclusions; and publishes that which is ordered and allowed by the Society. The Secretary.

THE Curators, or Experimentors, are to receive the Directions of the Society, and at another Meeting to bring all to the Test, and the Society judgeth thereof; whereby the World may have the concurring Testimony of many Persons, of undoubted Credit, for the Truth of whatsoever they publish. The Curators.

Of the Election of MEMBERS into this Society.

THE Manner of electing Fellows, is, according to the Venetian Way, by Ballotting. At one Assembly the Candidate is proposed, by some who knows him well; the next Meeting he may be put to the Scrutiny, for which the Candidate must have the major Number of twenty-one Suffrages, at the least, and then at that, or the next Assembly, he may be introduced and solemnly admitted by the President: At his Admission, he subscribes this following Promise:

“THAT he will endeavour to promote the Good of the Royal-Society of LONDON, for the Improvement of natural Knowledge.

AFTER this, he may at any Time free himself from this Obligation, only by signifying, under his Hand, to the President, that he desires to withdraw from the Society.

WHEN any one is admitted, he pays to the Treasurer only 40 s. afterward 13 s. a Quarter, so long as he continues a Member; and this towards defraying some necessary Expences for making Experiments, &c.

THE Royal Society for Advancement of this noble Design, hath begun a Library, to consist only of such Authors as may be serviceable to their Design; towards which, the Lord Henry Howard, Earl Marshal of England, was pleased to bestow on the Society, his whole Library, then at Arundel-street in the Strand, (where this Society Society met for some Time after the Fire of LONDON) with a free Permission of changing such Books as were not proper for their Design; by which Means, and by other publick Gifts of Books, they will have a compleat Library of all that hath been published in antient and modern Languages, which either regard the Production of Nature, or the Effects of all moral Arts and Sciences.

The CURIOSITIES of the ROYAL-SOCIETY, which are now removed to their House in Crane-Court, were kept in a Repository in Gresham-College, which was the Gift of Daniel Colwell, Esq; Dr. Nehemiah Grew has given the following Catalogue of them, in a Volume, intituled, Musæum Regalis Societatis.

Several Human RARITIES.

I. AN Egyptian Mummy, given by Henry Duke of Norfolk, in Length five Feet and a half, defended with Thicknesses of Linnen Cloth, three Degrees of Fineness; on the utmost Cover is laid a white Paint, the Thickness of an Egg-shell, whereon are drawn the Hieroglyphick Figures of Men, Women, and Birds, of several Colours, but with rude Shapes; so mean was the Art of Painting among the Egyptians heretofore.

THE inmost Cover is wrapped round the Head, Trunk, each Arm and Leg a-part, like Swathing-Bands; about twenty of the utmost of these Folds are lightly tinged, the others more fully with a blackish gummy Substance, and the Flesh seems to be converted into black Rosin, which being held to the Flame of a Candle, is a little odorous and inflammable, and the Bones are of a black Colour, as if burnt: Whence it is probable, the Way of Embalming among the Egyptians was by boiling the Body in a long Cauldron, in some Kind of liquid Balsam; but 'tis likely a better Way would be by soaking the Body in some white Sort of Oil, and such as will dry, made and kept so hot as to evaporate the watery Parts, and the Flesh white and limber, which would be of good Use in the Business of Anatomy.

II. THE intire Skin of a Moor, tanned with the Hair on, every Part remaining.

III. ALL the principal Veins, Arteries, and Nerves, both of the Limbs and Viscera; the Gift of John Evelyn, Esq; who saw them taken out of the Body of a Man, and very curiously spread upon four large Tables. The Veins and Arteries are very well done, but the Nerves have been more truly represented by Dr. Lower.

IV. THE Skeleton of a Man, wherein the Number of Bones (about two Hundred and fifty) with their Dimensions, Figure, and Articulations, are obvious; given by Thomas Povey, Esq;

OF humane Bones are prepared the Spiritus Oleosus, &c. which is of undoubted Use in Hyfterical Passions.

V. THE Skeleton of a Woman, of equal Height with the former; by comparing these together, it appears, that the Os Ilium is larger, and more outward, in the Female, for the more easy Labour. It is also half an Inch broader in the Female, for the better Sustentation of the Fætus in the Womb. The Vertebræ of the Loins are larger and stronger in the Male, being thereby better fitted for bearing Burthens; and as in the Male there are thirty two Teeth, and in the Female twenty eight, so the nether Chap in the Male is half an Inch broader than the Female, as being made to accommodate a bigger Muscle for the Motion of those Teeth, and the Angles subjected to the Os jugale, are half an Inch more distant; for that a Man, being fitted in other Respects to undergo more Labour, his Chaps also should be the better made to eat the more: Also the Skull of the Male is much bigger, and so capable of more Brains.

VI. A Tooth taken out of the Testicle of a Woman half an Inch long, pointed like the Eye-tooth of a Man; given by Dr. Tyson.

VII. HAIR taken out of the Ovary of a Woman by the same Hand; it is Grey, and one Hair longer than the rest, three Quarters of a Yard.

VIII. A Piece of Bone, voided by Sir William Throgmorton, with his Urine, one third of an Inch over.

IX. A Relation of a Bullet voided by the Penis with Urine.

X. A Stone voided by the Penis of a Man at Exeter, given by Dr. Cotton, of a Pyramidal Figure, in Length two Inches and a Quarter.

OF human Stones, either of the Kidnies or Bladder, are prepared the ChrySTALLINE Salt, and the Elixir Medicines.

Of QUADRUPEDES.

XI. THE Sloath: He comes near the Bear Kind, and breeds chiefly in Florida and Brasil; it is so slow of Motion, as to be three or four Days in climbing up and coming down a Tree; his Fore-Feet are almost double to those of his Hinder.

XII. THE Foot of a white Greenland Bear, six Inches broad.

XIII. THE Trunk of a Tyger, near five Inches, or from the Goom to the Apex near two Inches, an Inch over, and two and a half about. This Tyger weighed 435 Pound.

XIV. A Fore Claw of the same Tyger, in Shape like a Car's, an Inch broad, and two and a half long. Tygers abound in Mexico, Brasil, and East India.

XV. A Stone taken out of a Dog's Bladder, given by Seth, late Lord Bishop of Sarum, above one Inch and an half thick, two and an half over, and above three Inches long.

XVI. THE great Tamandua, or Ant-Bear, feeds on Ants, he useth his Tail for a Cover, which he flings sometimes over his whole Body, like a Squirrel.

XVII. THE Skull of a River-Horse, or Hippopotamus. If we respect his Figure, he was more properly a River Ox. The same Animal, which in Job is called Behemoth. This Creature, full grown, is four Yards and a half long, two Yards high, and one Yard and a half broad, short legg'd, cloven hoofed, having four Hoofs, a Tail like a Tortoise, which he twists like a Hog, Head almost like an Ox, his Chaps wide, his Eyes small, his Fore-Teeth very great, some of them half a Foot round, and above three Quarters long; Rings of his Teeth are believed to be effectual against the Cramp. He is found in the River Nile, Bamboth, and Cango.

XVIII. THE Quills of a Porcupine, which on Occasion the Creature can shoot at his pursuing Enemy, and erect at Pleasure; bred in India, Africa, and Æthiopia.

XIX. THE Flying Squirrel, of a dark grey Colour, about five Inches and an half from his Nose to his Buttock; this Creature, for a good Nut-tree, will pass a River on the Bark of a Tree, erecting his Tail for a Sail.

XX. THE Horns of a Roe Deer of Greenland, about an Inch long, and half an Inch over. Deer in New Mexico are so big, that they breed them to draw as Oxen.

XXI. THE Rock Doe, a Creature of admirable Swiftmess, and whose Horns grow sometimes backward over their Buttocks.

XXII. THE

XXII. THE Horns of a Spanish Ram, in Length three Yards, and one Yard between the Tips.

XXIII. THE Tail of an Indian Cow, its Hair about one Yard and a Quarter long, near as soft and fine as Womens. This Cow is worshipped by the People near the River Ganges.

XXIV. THE Skin of a young Rhinoceros. This Creature is near as big as an Elephant, but not so tall, he will lick a Man to Death by raking away the Flesh to the Bone, with a rough and sharp Tongue. They breed in India, about Bengall, and the River Ganges.

XXV. THE Leg-Bone of an Elephant; it was brought out of Syria for the Thigh-Bone of a Giant. 'Tis about one Yard and six Inches long, and above a Foot about in the smallest Part: The Elephant, to which it did belong, might be about five Yards high. These Creatures are brought from Ceylan, Sumatra, Cochin, Siam, &c. but they breed most in Aracan and Pegu, those in the first Place are most docile; the Ethiopians behind Mosambique eat them, and sell their Teeth; the Indians use them to draw and ship their Goods. In Winter, when it begins to rain, they are mad, and so continue from April to September, chained to Trees, and then become tame again.

XXVI. A round hairy Ball, near three Inches over, taken out of the Stomach of a Calf, also several others.

XXVII. HALF a Fibrous Ball taken out of the Stomach of a Sheep. It consists of most fine herby Threads, or Fibres, very compact, covered with a black, shining and thin Cuticle; a Piece thereof fired, burns like Match-cord, always to Ashes. The hair Balls are supposed to be made by the Motion of the Stomach, as Wool is compacted, by the Hand in making a Hat.

XXVIII. Several Sea and Land Tortoise-Shells. The Difference is, that the Sea Tortoise, has a more rude and softer Shell, and the Feet of him more like the Fins of a Fish, as proper to swim with, also in Bulk; some on the Brazilian Shore are sufficient to dine 80 Men, and so great in the Island Cuba as to creep along with five Men on their Backs; he squirts the Water out of his Nostrils like a Dolphin. In Generation the Embraces of the Male and Female, are said to continue a Lunary Month. They are catch'd by being turned on their Backs when they come to the Shore as they lie; they will sometimes fetch deep Sighs, and shed abundance of Tears.

XXIX. THE Heart of a Sea Tortoise, about as big as a Lamb's.

XXX. THE Pizzle of a Sea Tortoise; 'tis fourteen Inches long, and two and an half in Circumference, in Substance like a Bull's. Great Efficacy is attributed to it, in curing Fits of the Stone.

XXXI. THE Egg of a Sea Tortoise, white and spherical, about the Bigness of a Hand-Ball, the Shell rather thinner and softer than an Hen's. She lays them in the Sand, where they lie till they are hatched, sometimes above 100 at a Breed.

XXXII. A Camelion's Skin; it is every where rough, as it were, with little round Blisters, or Knobs, those on his Head and Back greater than those of his Legs, Sides and Belly, which gives an Appearance of different Colours, into which, some say, he can turn himself. His Tail is as long as a Lizzard's, but slenderer. He is said to live by the Air.

XXXIII. A Crocodile about two Yards and a half long. In the Bay of Panama, near the Isthmus of America, are some, affirmed to be 100 Feet long. This is the Animal which in the Book of Job is called the Leviathan, falsely taken for the Whale, as Bochart hath demonstrated: They have no Tongue.

XXXIV. HERE is the Skeleton of a Crocodile four Yards and three Quarters long. The Head two Feet, the Neck near one Foot and an half; the Trunk four Feet; Tail seven Feet; his Teeth about 60.

XXXV. A Scaly Lizzard one Yard and an half long. He is said to be a most tame and innocent Creature; he changeth from green to hairy Colour when angry. In Brazil are a Sort five Feet long, and being flea'd and foddren, for Whiteness, Sweetness, and Tenderness, surpass all other Meat.

XXXVI. A Land Salamander; Bartholine tells of one that was kept nine Months without Food.

Of SERPENTS.

XXXVII. A Snake. In Barbados there are some will slide up a Wall of an House; in Brazil some are said to be 25 Feet long and upwards.

XXXVIII. THE Cuticula (or thin Skin) of an English Viper, which they cast off at Spring and Fall, done in the Space of 24 Hours from all Parts entire.

XXXIX. THE Skin of a Bocguacu, a Serpent, of all other Kinds the greatest, but not so venomous as some.

XL. THE Skin of the Hibaboca, whose Bite, of all other Kinds, is most pernicious, 'tis healed by a Cataplasm, made of the Head.

XLI. THE Skin of a Rattle-Snake, a Serpent so called from the Rattle at the End of his Tail, that of this is composed of 16 white Bones, very hollow, thin, hard and dry, and therefore very sonorous, and the Tail of every uppermost Bone running within two of the Bones below it, they have not only a moveable Coherence, but multiply the Sound, each Bone cutting against two others at the same Time. This Rattle warns Travellers to avoid them. The largest are in Panuco in Mexico.

Of BIRDS.

XLII. A Batt, or Flitter Mouse, of the West-Indies, from his Nose End to his Anus, near a Foot, his Body near three Inches over, his Head two Inches and a half long, and one and a half over, his Nose like a Dog's, the End about half an Inch broad, his Ears extream thin, about three Quarters of an Inch long, and as broad, an Inch and a half asunder, his Eyes one third of an Inch long, he hath 36 Teeth, the Wings extended, are two or three Inches above a Yard wide, from End to End.

THE Chineses esteem them as delicate Meat.

XLIII. The Head of an Ostrich. It is the greatest Bird in the World when he holds up his Head and Neck, near two Ells high; he flies not, because his Wings are short, but with the Help of them can out-run a Horse; a Powder of his Stomach dissolves the Stone, saith Schroder.

XLIV. A Cassowary, the greatest Bird next an Ostrich, his Bill almost like a Goose's, and hath three Toes without a Heel.

XLV. The Head of a Sea-Eagle. The Eagle is said to build Yearly on the Rocks of Snowdon, in North Wales, and Anno 1668, an Eagle's Nest was found on the Peak in Derbyshire, flat, about two Ells Square, and a young one in it.

XLVI. The Bird of Paradise; they breed in the Molucca Islands, and are worshipped by the Natives, for their Beauty, and because they know not from whence they come.

XLVII. The great red and blue Parrot, sent thither from Java, there are above 20 Sorts; the greatest called Cockatoone, the middlemost, Papijays, and the least Parroquets, they breed very very numerously in both the Indies, and fly in great Flocks in Barbados.

XLVIII. The Bill of a Bird, called, in Brasil, Coa, in Shape and Bulk like a Parroquet: He feeds on all Kind of venomous Things, but is himself a Cordial.

XLIX. A young Linnet, preserved in rectified Spirits of Wine seventeen Years; given by the Honourable Robert Boyle, the first Inventor of that Way of preserving Animals.

L. The Head of the horned Crow, or Rhinoceros Bird, and the Beak, which is a precious Antidote against all Manner of Poison.

LI. The Leg of a monstrous Bird, half a Foot long, two Inches and a Quarter about, and hath five Toes, and great black Spurs.

LII. Two Heads of the Grosbeak; his Beak is so strong, that he can crack an Olive Stone.

LIII. A Humming-Bird, from the Top of his Breast to the End of his Tail, two Inches; a Bird of radiant Colours: This Bird and Nest is said to weigh but twelve Grains; his Feathers, set in Gold, sell at a great Rate.

WATER-FOWLS.

LIV. The Jabirus's Head; he is bigger than a Swan; the Bill is above a Foot and a half long, his Beak bending upward.

LV. The Horn of the Unicorn-Bird; he is headed and footed like a Dunghill-Cock, tailed like a Goose, with a Horn on his Forehead, somewhat as the Unicorn is pictur'd; his Spur grows on the Fore-Joint of the Wing.

LVI. The Head of a Shoveler; he is like a Hern, only his Bill is flat like a Shovel; he feeds on Shell-Fish, wherewith having his Crop full, he lets them lie warm there till they open, and then disgorging, picks the Meat out of the Shell.

LVII. The Sea-Curlew, whose Colours so alter, that he is at first Black, then Ash-coloured, next White, after that Scarlet, and last Crimson, which grows the richer the longer he lives.

The PALMIPEDES, or Web-footed BIRDS.

LVIII. The Phœnicopter; there are many of them in Peru, and in Winter in France; his lower Beak is longest, the Tongue was a delicious Morfel among the Romans.

LIX. The Loon; his Legs are broad and flat, his Claws like a Man's Nail, he is as big as a Goose; they breed in Farra and other Scotch Islands.

LX. A Shag's Foot; he is a little bigger than a tame Drake; he and the Cormorant are the only Palmipedes that sit and build in Trees.

LXI. The Pelican; which makes a Noise like an Ass; from the End of its Bill to its Rump, an Ell long, tho' the Trunk of its Body is not a Foot; its Crop extends to the End of its Bill, and, 'tis probable, that the Meat herein warmed, is partly disgorged by the Female to feed her Young, which might give Occasion to the Fiction of her feeding her Young with her own Blood.

LXII. The Soland-Goose, about the Bigness of ours, but larger Wings; she is said to find out the most agreeable Fish to carry to her Young, by swallowing and disgorging several. Out of the Fat of this Bird the Scots make an Oil for the Gout; their Young are a great Dainty.

LXIII. The Penguin; his Wings are so short he cannot fly, but swims fast; they work themselves, as the Conies, deep Burrows by the Sea-side.

LXIV. The Puffin; when they fight, they will hold so hard by their Bills, as to break one another's Necks; what they eat in the Day they disgorge a good Part of it in the Night, into the Mouths of their Pullen.

N<sup>o</sup> 9. VOL. I.

LXV. The Tropick-Bird, so called, because never to be seen but between the Tropicks.

EGGS, and Nests of BIRDS.

LXVI. Ostrich Eggs, about five Inches and a half Diameter.

LXVII. That of a Caslowary, a perfect Oval, at both Ends alike; Diameter about three Inches and a half.

LXVIII. The Egg of a Red-shank, acutely Conical, as big as a Rook's.

LXIX. The Egg of a Swan, with another within it; given by Sir Thomas Brown of Norwich, who has observed the like in Hens and Turkeys. It is observed, that Nature is so intent on finishing her Work, that she is oftner known to over than underdo it, as you may find twenty Eggs with two Yelks, or twenty Animals with two Heads, for one that has none.

Also 'tis observed, that the Figure of the Egg answers to that of the Trunk of the Bird whence it comes.

LXX. Here are some Eggs perfectly Spherical; and there is an Account also of the Nests of several foreign Birds, and several other Eggs.

FISHES, Viviparous, or that bring forth their Young alive.

LXXI. The Rib of a Triton, or Merman, about the Length, but thicker than a Man's; the Fish was taken near Brasil.

LXXII. A Bone, said to be taken out of a Mermaid's Head.

LXXIII. One Joint of the Back-bone of a Whale; (called a Vertebra) it weighs near thirty Pounds Averdupois.

LXXIV. The Pizzle of a Whale, in Length above a Yard, and, near the Root, half a Foot round; but its very End scarce an Inch.

LXXV. Part of the Ear-Bone of a Whale, as big as a Man's Fist, and as hard as any Bone. Wormius mentions a Manuscript, accounting for twenty two Kinds of Whales; and the last, save one, said to be near a hundred and thirty Ells long; but the last of all liker an Island than an Animal. In Iceland they are so common, that the hard Bones are used for impaling Gardens, &c.

LXXVI. The Horn of the Sea-Unicorn; given by Sir Joseph Williamson, eight Feet long, trait and white, with spiral Furrows; the greatest Circumference about seven Inches: The Horn, with the Flesh itself, is described by Wormius to be thirty Ells long.

To shew that it expells Poison, he mentions this to be given a Dog, after a Dose of Arsenick, and to another twelve Grains after a Drachm of Nux-Vomica, both which lived, whereas two other Dogs, having the same Doses without the Horn, died: This is attested by several Physicians of Note. The Sea-Unicorn, he says, is a less Whale.

LXXVII. A Saw Fish; also the Saw, or spired Snout of a Saw Fish, four Feet long; the Fish to which this belonged was five Yards, and, had it lived, would have been eight Yards in Length.

LXXVIII. The Head of the Rapier Fish; he grows sometimes to the Length of five Yards; he preys on Fishes: The Whale, to shake off the Sword-Fish and Theshal, his two mortal Enemies, leaps sometimes more than his own Length above Water.

This Fish is taken in the German Ocean, Black Sea, and the Danube.

LXXIX. The Head of the Manati (or Sea-Cow) like that of an Ox; the Body long like that of an Otter; the two Feet like an Elephant's; sometimes she is about twelve Yards long, and four broad; she feeds on the Grass on the Banks of the Sea; calves, and suckles her Young, as some

some other Fishes, with two Dugs. An Indian King is said to keep and feed one of them with Bread 26 Years, in a Lake near his House, cross which it would carry 10 People on its Back with Ease.

LXXX. The Balance Fish; his Head like the Beam of a Balance, his Eyes being at the two Extrems; they breed near Smyrna.

LXXXI. The Morfe's Skull; he sometimes grows to be bigger than an Ox, has four Feet, and breeds about the Isle of Madagascar.

LXXXII. A Piece of a Morfe's Hide, above half an Inch thick.

LXXXIII. The Male, or White Shark, two Yards long, they are sometimes seven or eight Yards long, their Teeth standing in a six-fold Row, and their Throat being as wide as their Body, they sometimes bite off a Limb, or swallow Men whole.

LXXXIV. The Spotted Hound Fish; the Female often brings forth twice in a Month.

LXXXV. The Head and Tail of a Dolphin; that, to which this Head belonged, was above two Yards and a half long; he is said to swim faster (by the Help of his Tail) than all other Fishes.

LXXXVI. The Skeleton of a Porpus, or Sea Hog; the Bones of the Fore Fins resemble Hands and Fingers, the Tail Fins like those of two Feet conjoined, he is about one Ell long, the Guts are 11 Times the Length of the Fish.

LXXXVII. The Sea-Calf, or Seal; this is about one Yard long, his Fore Feet are fit for going, his hinder Feet like Fins, he is all over Hairy, and Mr. Ray says, some are as big as a Heifer of two Years old.

LXXXVIII. A Sturgeon; he is said to be sometimes six Yards long, has a long Snout, and a very little Mouth, also two Moon Fishes, and some others.

Oviparous FISHES, or those that bring forth by Egg or Spawn.

LXXXIX. A Shiphalter; this Fish, by the Help of a Coronet, or Sucker, on his Head, can stick fast to a Ship, or even to a Stone, so as to pull one of 12 or 14 Pound from the Ground, and is said to stop a Ship under Sail, as the Remora.

XC. The Globe Fish, like a Hedge-Hog; he is found in the River Nile; also two Sea Porcupines.

XCI. The Star-Gazer, so called, because he looks directly against the Sky; also several Coney Fishes, and some others.

SCALED FISHES.

XCII. The Cucupu Guacu, as the People of Brazil call it, two Yards long, his Mouth, open, makes a Circle of about a Foot Diameter, likely the biggest of scaled Fish, except the Sturgeon.

XCIII. The File Fish, so called from his Likeness to a File, if the last and least of his Fins be depressed, two others will be so also, but not otherwise.

XCIV. The Snipe Fish, a small Fish, with a long Bill and large Eye Orbits.

XCV. The Swallow Fish, so called from the Length of his Gill Fins, extending like Wings to the End of his Tail, his Body like a Herring; they often fly above Water to avoid being preyed on.

XCVI. Kite Fish, another Flying Fish, with shorter Wings but broader.

XCVII. The Needle Fish, so called, as being long and small; and some other scaled Fish.

Exanguious (or Bloodless) FISH.

XCVIII. Horned Lobsters. All Lobsters use their Tail as Fins, wherewith they swim backward, reaching sometimes 10 Yards at a Jirk or Spring.

XCIX. The Claw of a great Lobster, above a Foot long, so that the Lobster must have been a Yard long. Aristotle notes, that the right Claw of all Lobsters and Crabs is biggest.

C. The Preke, or Poulps, they have eight Fingers or Arms, wherewith they swim and attack their Prey, and if they are pursued, they presently cast forth a black Liquor, and so darkening the Water make their Escape.

CI. Several Star Fishes, all have their Mouth in the Middle, some have five Rays, by the Help of which they swim very swiftly, but there are others also with six, and with 12 Rays or Arms.

Whirled and single SHELLS.

CII. Several Wilks, one above a Foot in Length.

CIII. The Conical Snails, &c. It is affirmed by Aristotle, that the Rounds in the Wilk's Turban shews the Years he is old: A Wilk being burnt, powder'd and mixed with cold Oyl, to the Consistency of Glew, is an admirable Remedy against Baldness, the Head being shaved and rubbed therewith: Also Milk drank out of these Shells, is observed to be good against a Chin-Cough.

CIV. The Slick Sailer; two here, one near a Quarter of a Yard long; the Animal is of Kin to the Polypus, famous for the Art of Navigation; he rises to the Top of the Water with his Shell inverted, and being there returns it, then having a thin Membrane spread against the Wind for a Sail, two Feet for a Rudder, and two for a Helm, he sails along, and in case of Danger fills his Shell with Water, and sinks himself to the Bottom of the Sea.

CV. The Pearly Sailor, so called from his Colour on both Sides, like Pearl; hereof Necklaces are made.

CVI. Several Venus Shells, so called from their Beauty, the Italians use them in polishing Paper, &c. the Egyptians their Linnen, &c. good to cure Ulcers in the Corners of the Eyes.

CVII. The Sea Ear, from its being shaped like a Man's Ear. The Goldsmiths in France split them into thin Plates, wherewith they beautify Cabinets.

CVIII. The Conick and other Limpets, headed and horned like a Snail; they are used by our Fishermen for Baits, but when they are touched will stick so fast to the Rocks, as hardly to be loosed without cutting.

SHELLS, Double and Multiple.

CIX. A Sea Wing, a Quarter of a Yard over, and two Feet long.

CX. A Sea Oyster. Rondeletius says, that in India some are 2 Feet long.

CXI. Escallop-Shells; some are taken near Portland and Purbeck; Rondeletius prefers them before Oysters; and Linscholen saith, That by Malacca (in the East-Indies) Shells like these are found, that two strong Men can scarce draw.

CXII. Black gaping Cockle, swimming open on the Water, use one Shell as a Boat, the other as a Sail, and scour along.

CXIII. Mother of Pearl, so called from its Colour; the Shell is said to be found near the Island Borneo, (in East-India), some weighing 47 Pounds.

CXIV. Great waved Muscle, three Quarters of a Foot, some are a Foot in Length.

THE Natives of Brazil use Muscle-Shells for Spoons and Knives, these, and those of all Sorts of Shell-Fish, being burnt, are of a Caustick Nature, their Powder is a good Dentrifice.

INSECTS

INSECTS with naked WINGS.

CXV. Several Bees; their under Wings are least, for their easier Flying. The Honey-Bag is their Stomach, which having filled more than to satisfy, they vomit up the greatest Part of the Honey to be preserved against Winter.

AUTHORS who have writ on their Policy, Generation, Conservation, Diseases, and Use, are, Aristotle, Moufet, Butler, and Rusden; but what is said of their spontaneous Generation is fabulous. The Ashes of Bees are put into most Compositions for breeding Hair.

CXVI. Several Sorts of Flies; the Hair of the Head often wet with the Water of common Flies, distill'd in Balneo Mariæ, will grow to a very great Length. Flies swallowed, cause violent Vomiting; and Butterflies are Diuretick.

INSECTS with sheathed WINGS.

CXVII. The Tingle Worm, that with the least Touch drops a Kind of Oily Liquor from his Mouth, and being bruised, yields a fragrant Smell; they are numerous in Germany.

CXVIII. The great Bull Chafer, the biggest of Insects yet known; Length of this, about five Inches, over his Back above two Inches and a Quarter.

CXIX. The Toddy Fly, whose utmost Length is about five Inches, but not so broad as the last; they will drink themselves drunk with the Liquor of a Toddy-Tree, whence their Name.

CXX. A Stag Beetle, from his Horns, branched like those of a Stag, his utmost Length about three Inches, his Horns wore in a gold Ring, are said to be good against the Cramp.

Creeping INSECTS.

CXXI. The smallest Ant, or Emmet, hardly bigger than a Flea; they are said to build their Nests with Clay and Lome, as big as a Bee-Hive, in several Cells; they are numerous throughout all India, so that they are forced to set the Feet of their Cupboards and Chests in Cisterns of Water, to preserve their Cloaths and Victuals. Concerning their Species, Nature, Generation, Use for Feeding Pheasants, and Partridges, see Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 23, and 64. The Liquor of Ants is commended by Schroder, for a most excellent Ophthalmick (or Remedy against Sore Eyes.)

CXXII. The Webb of a Bermuda Spider, so strong as to snare a Bird as big as a Thrush. Spiders, saith Aristotle, cast Threads, not from within, as Excrement, but from without. Of the History of Spiders, see the Observations of Mr. Lister, Lib. de Araneis.

CXXIII. The Silk-Worm Bombyx; the full History hereof is written by Malpighius, as to the Manner of his Feeding, the several Changes he undergoes while a Worm, and while transformed into an Aurelia, and thence to a Butterfly, with the Generation afterwards, &c.

CXXIV. The Bags of the Virginian Silk-Worm.

CXXV. The Palmer Worm, so called, for that he has no certain Home or Diet.

CXXVI. The Hair Worm, little thicker than a Horse-Hair, and about three Quarters of a Foot long; also Water Scorpion, Water Worm, and some others.

WOODS, BRANCHES, and LEAVES.

CXXVII. A Piece of the Wood of the Cove Tree.

CXXVIII. Part of an Arm of the Stinking Tree, smelling like human Excrement.

CXXIX. A Piece of Serpent Wood, an excellent Remedy against the Biting of Vipers.

CXXX. Part of the Trunk of a young Mountain Cabbage. 'Tis said, by Mr. Stubbs, Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 36, That it is one Sort of a Palm Tree; it grows in Jamaica, and Barbados also, where it is confidently reported, there was one of about 300 Feet high; the Sprouts of one Year are eaten both boiled and raw, being good Meat both Ways.

CXXXI. A Piece of a Branch, naturally shaped like a Penis, with Testicles annexed.

CXXXII. A Pipe made of a hollow Branch, and twisted into a loose Knot, in which one Part of the Branch is incorporated with the other.

CXXXIII. Two large Branches, incorporated in the Form of a Saltire Cross.

CXXXIV. Two Branches growing together like a long Cross, or our Saviour's Cross.

CXXXV. A Palmeto Leaf, one Yard and a half long.

CXXXVI. Another Sort of Palm Leaf, of half a Yard long, and seven Inches broad at one End, in some Places one third of an Inch thick, of a wonderful Substance; Leaves are used in some Places, where they grow, for Garments, and thatching Houses, they lop the Wine Palm above two Feet above the Ground, and of the Liquor that runs from it make an excellent Wine, called Mignol, like white Champaign; the fruitful Kinds flourish chiefly in Egypt, and Syria, the hottest Part of the Indies and Canary Islands, of which one is the Palm Island, the barren Kind in Italy and Sicily.

CXXXVII. The Palm Net, or Bag, some Part of it hath been cut off, yet it is above two Feet long, and a Foot broad at the Bottom.

FRUITS, as the APPLE, PEAR, and PLUM-kinds.

CXXXVIII. A Male, a Female, and a crown-ed Orange.

CXXXIX. An Hermaphrodite Lemon, exhibiting the Pudenda of both Sexes.

CXL. Stones of Fruit above two Inches long; the Mamma Stone, two Inches and a half long, and two Inches and a half over; another pointed Stone, three Inches and a half long, and one and a half over, on one Side very convex, on the other almost flat; another as big as a Pullet's Egg, many of these described, and likewise some India, &c. Fruit.

CALIBASHES, and some other like FRUITS.

CXLI. Calibashes of several Kinds.

CXLII. A great belly'd Baobab, 13 Inches long, one Foot and a half in Compass; it grows in Zeilan, and in Egypt, the Juice thereof is of an acidulated Taste very grateful, of which the Egyptians make much Use, especially when they travel, to quench their Thirst.

CXLIII. The Genipat, about the Bigness of a Walnut, it grows on a tall Tree; the Natives of Brasil use this Fruit against Diarrhoea's, and also to paint themselves; they chew the Pulp, and then squeezing the Juice out rub it upon their Body, as it dries it turns to a blackish Blue; this they do when, on any solemn Occasion, they would be fine.

NUTS and divers other like FRUITS.

CXLIV Cocoa-Nuts, three; the biggest of them about one Foot in Length, and one and three Quarters in Compass; they grow on the Tops of tall Trees in the East and West Indies; some are Elliptical, other more Orbicular. The Cocoa is one of the most useful Trees in the World; of the Husk, or Cover, all manner of Ropes are made; of the Shells are made Ladles, Wine Bottles, and other Vessels, the inmost Cover next the Kernel is a pleasant Meat, and of the Liquor thereof they make a good Drink (called Sura) and other Liquors, of the Blossom of which they also make Vinegar in India, of the Kernel they make a Milk, which they eat there with their Rice Meat; also Oil, both to eat and burn; of the Leaves of the Tree they make Sails for their Ships, Covers for Houses, and Hats; and of the Wood they make Ships.
ed

CXLV. Several Yecotle Fruits; and,

CXLVI. Palmacoco's.

CXLVII. A Butter-Nut, from the Oil that comes from the Kernel.

CXLVIII. The Purging Chesnut.

CXLIX. A Vomiting Nut; with several other Nuts and Acorns described.

BERRIES, CONES, LOBES, and other Parts of TREES.

CL. The Berries of the Mastick-Tree; it flourishes in Italy, Spain, and other Places.

CLI. Aromatick (or Spice Smelling) Indian Berries.

CLII. A Cane of the Cedar of Mount Lebanon; some on this Mount are said to be twelve or fourteen Fathoms in Circumference.

CLIII. Several Canes of the wild Pine; of this they make Pitch in Burgundy, &c. Shrubs and Arborefcent Plants.

CLIV. The Berries of the Indian Jessamin.

CLV. The Beidel Ossar, i. e. The Egg or Cod of the Ossar; this Shrub grows near Alexandria in Egypt. One Plant, at an Incision of the Bark, will yield four Pounds of Milk, a Drachm and a half of which will purge a Man to Death; but outwardly, is an excellent Remedy for the Itch.

CLVI. A Cod, with the Wool and Seed of the Cotton Shrub.

CLVII. The Rose of Jericho, an Aromatic, found on the Banks of the Red-Sea.

CLVIII. Poison Berries of Bermudas.

CLIX. The Stalk of a Plant like a Net: Prince Maurice brought it with him from Brasil.

CLX. Several Spikes of Mayz, or Indian Wheat; the Plant grows to the Height of six or eight Feet, on which Spike grow several thick Husks, which preserve it from Birds and Weather; the Stalk and Husk are Fodder for Cattle, the latter are also wove into Baskets, and the Corn, while tender, is a pleasant Food; they eat it when ripe, either boiled or parched. The English make good Bread thereof, (but mix it not near so stiff as our Wheat Meal) also Beer. The Indians, who eat it much, are seldom troubled with the Stone; but the best Food they make thereof they call Samp.

CLXI. A Sort of Mambu, or great Indian Cane, of a Straw-colour; some of them grow ten Yards high, and proportionably thick, and jointed: About Malabar in Bantam, the Cane is much used in Buildings.

CLXII. The Sugar Cane; also the Cod and Seed of the greater Cardamum; it grows in Java two Yards high. The Indians season their Meat therewith.

CLXIII. Paper Reed; it grows in Sicily and the Nile, three Yards above the Water, which is said to be that which Moses was hid in by his Mother. It was formerly made into Paper fit to write on, and used for dilating Fistula's, &c.

STALKS and ROOTS.

CLXIV. A Sort of Snake-weed, whose Root is used for the Biting of the Rattle-Snake: The Virginian is excellent in some Fevers.

CLXV. The Root Ninsin, much relied on in Fevers in East India, and so valued in China, that one Pound is sold for three Pounds Weight of Silver.

CLXVI. The Root of an Egyptian Arum; this Root where it grows, is annually renewed out of the Stalk; the Egyptians eat it several Ways.

CLXVII. A Pair of large Ginger-Roots, the best grow on the Coast of Malabar.

FRUITS.

CLXVIII. A warted Gourd, (and several others) this is one Foot in Length, and two in Compass.

CLXIX. Also the Cods of Guinea Pepper, Dog's-Bean and Woad, the Water-Calthrop, several Sorts of foreign Beans, Pease, Vetches, Seeds, &c.

MOSESSES, MUSHROOMS, &c.

CLXX. About twenty four Species of Mosses, gather'd mostly in a Wood in Surrey, and given by John Evelyn Esq; and some Foreign, Woody, and Cortical.

CLXXI. A great Fistular-Mushroom, given by Sir Robert Southwell, half a Cone; the Diameter of the Base, near half a Yard, and a Quarter in Height.

CLXXII. A Cork Mushroom, eight Inches Diameter; Colour of a Cork.

CLXXIII. Kermes-Berries and Cochineal; a Scruple of the latter, added to an Ounce of Saccharum, makes a most curious Purple.

SEA-PLANTS, (of two Sorts, Woody, and Horny) and SPONGES.

CLXXIV. A Horny Shrub, with loose Branches, a Yard and a half high, bends like Whalebone, and stinks like Horn in burning; and (as many others described) Semi-perspicuous, growing mostly in the Mediterranean Sea.

CLXXV. A great Sea Fan (so in Shape) three Quarters of a Yard high, near one and a half broad; and several others, like Nets, open and closer; they grow in the American Sea; they receive their Nourishment from the Sea-Water, and such nutritive Bodies wherewith it is impregnated.

CLXXVI. The Horn-Plant, two Yards three Quarters high; at the Bottom, not above two Inches about, whence it grows all the Way to the Top, where it is seven Inches in Compass. The Indians make Horns thereof for Hunting, &c.

CLXXVII. A Tuft of Coralline; the inward Plant is Fibrous: It is esteemed an excellent Remedy against the Worms.

CLXXVIII. Several Sea Wracks; the beard-ed one grows in East India; of excellent Use for making Tinctures, both for Painting and Dying.

CLXXIX. A great Sponge of a flat Oval Figure, near one Yard and a half in Compass; and several Kinds of Sponges. The famous ones are found about the Islands of Fero.

ANIMAL-BODIES petrified.

CLXXX. Part of the Upper-Jaw; and three very great double Teeth, with Fragments of other Bones, (all supposed to be of the same Animal) found seventeen Feet Under-ground, near Canterbury.

CLXXXI. A petrify'd Crab, very hard, and as heavy as a Peeble; but dissoluble with Acids.

CLXXXII. A Fish Mould.

CLXXXIII. A Stone, like the Vertebra of a Fish; given by Sir Philip Skipton.

CLXXXIV. The Tooth of a Tyger, growing to a Kind of Lime-Stone.

CLXXXV.

CLXXXV. A great double Tooth, about five Inches long, and two broad, twice as big as a Sea Horse's, as hard as Flint.

CLXXXVI. The Shark's Tooth, (in every Respect like it) yet if it be such, then that to which this belonged, must, in Proportion, be thirty six Feet long.

CLXXXVII. The Hermaphrodite; a black Stone, not much broader than Half a Crown, dissoluble by no Acid, accounted an Amulet in Hysterical Fits.

CLXXXVIII. Several Sorts of Thunder-Stones (supposed by some, to fall with the Thunder) and Helmet-Stones.

CLXXXIX. A Cornu Ammonis, of an Ash-Colour, about two Yards in Circuit.

CXC. A petrified Oyster, and Wilk, growing together.

CXCI. A petrified Cockle, immersed in a Flint.

CXCII. A toothless Muscle bedded in a Lump of Irish Slate, but not petrified, &c.

Vegetable BODIES petrified, and other like Stones.

They represent Fruit, Parts of Flowers, Leaves, Branches, Stalks, Trunks, and Roots.

CXCIII. A petrified Catharine-Pear, or a Stone very like one, natural in Colour, &c.

CXCIV. A petrified Damascene Plum, of a black Colour.

CXCV. Petrified Nux Vomica, exactly respondent to that of the Shop, &c.

CORALS, and other like Marine Productions.

CXCVI. Several Sorts of Coral; a Joint of the shallow-jointed Coral, near one Inch and a half Diameter, two and a half long, solid, heavy, and white.

CXCVII. The crowned ocular Coral, given by Sir John Hoskins. Coral is fished for from the Beginning of April to the End of July, in the Mediterranean Sea only. The Honourable R. Boyle affirms, That while it grows it is often found soft and succulent, (Kircher.) That it lets fall a spermatic Juice, which propagates on steady Bodies. Of Coral, are chiefly prepared, the Powder, ground on a Marble; the Magisterial Salt, and the Tincture, to good Purpose in some Fevers, &c.

CXCVIII. The rubbled Alcyon, given by Capt. Tho. Fissenden; it looks not much unlike Linnen-Cloth.

CXCIX. Several Fungites, or spongy Substances, one given by Sir R. Murray; they are found in the Indian Sea.

G E M S.

CC. A Rock of Diamonds, given by Sir Robert Murray; they cut Glass very deep and easily. The principal Diamond Mines, now known, are four, viz. That of Raolconda, discovered 250 Years since; these are the clearest and best. A 2d, called Gams, found about 150 Years since, sometimes above 60,000 Men, Women and Children work in it: This Place affords the largest Diamonds, but not so clear as the others; there was one here found that weighed 900 Carats. A 3d, That of Govel, in Bengala, they are fair pointed. The 4th, Those of Succadan in Borneo. Rough Diamonds are often figured naturally into triangular Plains. Diamonds receive no Hurt, but are rather mended by the Fire; some being rubb'd, attract vigorously, and by Water, made a little more than lukewarm, will shine in the Dark, (Mr. Boyle.) The Water of those which are drawn not from the Rock, but the Ground, partake of the Colour of the Soil or Ground, and some are found as yellow as a Topaz; they are split by a small Wire, daubed with Oyl and Powder of Diamonds, drawn to and fro, like a Saw. Of the Bastard Diamonds in England, the Cornish are best.

CCI. Several Chrystals. A Chrystal Column, an Inch Diameter, and half a Foot long.

CCII. A Massy Piece of Chrystal, bigger than any Man's Head, very clear, beyond that of Ice, of the same Thickness, Weight 39 Pounds and a Quarter, Avoirdupoise. A Drachm of the Powder of Chrystal, with Oyl of Sweet Almonds, is a present Remedy for those that have taken Sublimate, and also for Bilious and Chylous Diarrhæas; when calcin'd (by some called Pulvis Cæsaris) of excellent Use against the Epilepsy, or Convulsions.

CCIII. And several other Chrystals in different Figures. Chrystal grows in most Countries.

CCIV. An Amethyst found growing in Scotland, given by Sir Robert Murray; they grow chiefly in India, Bohemia, and Saxony.

CCV. Two Sapphires polished into a flat oval Figure; the best grow in Bismagar.

THE Sapphire (saith Boetius) being applied to any bruised Part, prohibits the Inflammation.

CCVI. Several Granates, from the Size of a Pea to a Mustard Seed. The Spanish exceed the Oriental of Calecut, Cambia, &c.

CCVII. Several Topazes; the best are found in India.

CCVIII. The Agate, so called from the River Ashates, in Sicily, near which it was first found; they grow in India, Bohemia, and Germany.

CCIX. The Onyx, so called, because the Colour is not unlike the Nail of a Man's Finger; here are 11; they grow both in the East and West Indies, and Europe.

CCX. The Sardonyx, as it were compounded of the Sardus and Onyx, found in several Parts of Asia; also Jaspis and Jaspers, several Sorts, and Nephritick Stones.

CCXI. The Turcois, as brought from Turkey; the best are the bluest.

CCXII. Several Sorts of regular Stones, as the Eagle Stone of several Kinds, the Male and Female, more or less solid, from the Bigness of a small Walnut, to that of a large Apple; they are so called from the vulgar Opinion, That when she sits she carries it to her Nest, to keep her Eggs from being Addle: This Stone is found in Apu-lia, Germany, Misnia, &c. much accounted by some, as an Amulet (or to be worn about the Neck) against Abortions.

CCXIII. The Tode Stones, and also the Knit Bone; found most in Saxony, and the Palatinate. This Stone is esteemed for expediting the Coalition of broken Bones; also several Sorts of Stalactates and Belemnites, the Worm Stone, Netted Stone, Bolthead, &c.

CCXIV. And these more accumulative, as the Grape Stone, Star Stone, Sieve Stone; also Spars, or Gem like Stones, as the Silver Ore, Mother Spar, Metallic Spar, Shod, Yellow, Tin Spar, Iron Spar, Copper Spar, Mundic Spar, Talks, and Lead Spar.

CCXV. Bonoman Stone; given in Powder is a strong Emetic.

CCXVI. Slate, waxen Vein Stones, Thrum Stones, and the Amianthus.

CCXVII. The Blood Stone; found in Germany, Bohemia, and Silesia, among Iron Mines, of a dull red Colour, celebrated against an Hæmoptoe, or large Flux of Blood, &c. So much for Gems and Stones semiprecious.

STONES IRREGULAR.

As Gems are chiefly distinguish'd by their Colours; and all other Stones regular by their Figure, so these by their Degrees of Hardness.

CCXVIII. Emery, Smiris; of a kind of blackish Iron Colour, the hardest of unfigured Stones, and and is therefore used for polishing and cutting all Gems, except Diamonds, &c.

CCXIX. Flints of all Colours; some so clear, that Jewellers cut and sell them for Bohemick Diamonds.

CCXX. A Piece of Egyptian Marble, consisting of blackish Ground, as it were, inlaid with little green Pieces, and other Species of Marble.

CCXXI. Lapis Lazuli, or Blue-Stone, vein'd with yellow: This Stone is usually found in Gold Mines in Africa and Asia. There are those fixed, which keep their Colour, being put into the Fire: Also the unfixed, of which Knife-hafts and Spoons are sometimes made; but especially that excellent Blue, called Ultra-Marine. The Powder is an excellent Cathartic, sometimes works by Vomit. It hath been successfully used in Quartans and Malignant Fevers, and yields a Narcotic, or stupifying Oil.

CCXXII. Load-stone, Magnes, from Magnesia, a Country between Thessaly and Macedonia, where it is said to be first found; here are several, both great and small, one weighing about sixty Pounds, given by Dr. Edward Cotton, dug out of the Ground in Devonshire; it moves a Needle at nine Feet Distance: The Power dependeth not on its Bulk, some have taken up sixty, some eighty Times their own Weight. It is found true by Experience, that the more they are used the stronger they attract, and, found also, rubbing the Parts attracting and attracted together, effects the same.

CCXXIII. Several Sorts of Alabafter; a Scruple given in Milk, is affirmed to be a certain Cure of a Dysentery, or Bloody-flux.

CCXXIV. Also Drop-stone, Glists, Soap-stone, Pumice-stone, Cynder from Mount Aetna, &c.

GOLD, SILVER, and COPPER.

CCXXV. Gold Ore, and golden Sand, from the River Tagus, with a Lump of pure Gold, melted out of the Sand; also Grain Gold, taken out of the River Danube, and given by John Vandenbempde, Esq; &c. The Ductility of Gold is admirable; one Grain is extended to above fifty Inches Square in Leaves; and one Ounce, employ'd in gilding small Hair-wire, will be extended to almost a hundred Miles, as Mr. Boyle observed.

THE Uses of Gold are infinite; Gold hung over Vinegar produces a Blue, preferred by some Painters to Ultra-Marine.

CCXXVI. Pure plated and capillary (or hairy) Silver and Ore, white, yellow, blue, purple, green, black, &c. For refining Gold and Silver Ore, see Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 142.

CCXXVII. Several Sorts of Copper Ore, good for the Eyes; as observed of the Labourers in those Mines.

TIN, LEAD, and IRON.

CCXXVIII. Several Sorts of Tin Ore; Tin is mixed with Copper in making Metal for Bells, Organ-Pipes, &c. Proportion about two Parts to seven.

CCXXIX. Several Sorts of Lead Ore, some will cut Glass. See Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 28.

CCXXX. Lead, besides its common Use, is for refining Gold and Silver.

CCXXXI. Brush Iron, Brush Ore, mixed Ore, and ordinary Ore.

CCXXXII. Two Bones (Part of a Man's Foot) turned into Iron Stone. A good Account of Iron Mines, published in the Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 137.

Several Medicinal Uses of IRON, or STEEL, ANTIMONY, MERCURY, and other METALLICK BODIES.

CCXXXIII. Styriated (or fibrous) Antimony, grain'd Antimony, and Antimonial Ore.

ANTIMONY is of excellent Use for refining of Gold; Founders add a little to their Bell-metal, to make it more sonorous; also used in casting Iron Bullets, to make the Metal run the better: Its cathartic Property was first observed by Paracelsus.

CCXXXIV. Mercurial Ore; with this the Tin-Foil is made to stick to the Back-sides of Looking-glasses. It is used also Medicinally.

CCXXXV. Several Pieces of Cinnabar, or red Mineral-stone; Marchasites, or those partaking of the Nature of Metal; a Fire-stone and Mundic (or hard stony Substance, found in the Tin) Ore.

SALTS.

CCXXXVI. Natural Salt Armoniack; Salt from Teneriffe, Sal Gemma, Sal Fossilis, &c.

CCXXXVII. Several Sorts of Vitriols, Verdigrease, Ore of Copperas, &c.

CCXXXVIII. Aluminous Earth; Nature of Alum, see Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 103. The Alum-stone is found in some Hills in Yorkshire, and near Preston in Lancashire.

SULPHURS.

CCXXXIX. A Piece of opacous, (or dark) yellow Amber, half a Foot long; given by Thomas Henshaw, Esq; found in Holstein, eighteen Feet under Ground; also other Pieces of Amber, some semiprecious. Amber is found in Pomerania, the Coast of Prussia in the Baltick Sea; the King of Prussia farms it out for 20,000 Crowns per Annum: It is used Medicinally. Oil of Amber against Hemorrhoides. (Mr. Boyle, &c.)

CCXL. Pit Ebony; native Sulphur (or Brimstone) of several Colours; and Sulphur Ore. For Sulphur, Copperas and Alum, see Philosophical Transactions, N<sup>o</sup> 104.

EARTHS.

CCXLI. Two Parcels of Earth rained on the Archipelago, upon the Eruption of Mount Vesuvius, December 1631; given by John Evelyn, Esq; It began to rain about ten at Night, and continued 'till two next Morning, so that it lay two Inches thick on the Deck of Captain Badily's Ship, who sent this Relation: While it rained no Wind stirred, and fell in several Parts 100 Leagues distant. See Philosoph. Trans. N<sup>o</sup> 21.

CCXLII. Other Earth rained on Teneriffe, of a pale Clay Colour.

CCXLIII. Fine Sand from a Pit near Buley in Kent. Of this is made the clearest and best English Glass, and other Sorts of Sand.

CCXLIV. Melita Earth, Samos Earth, Stone Marrow, Boles Red Lemnos Earth, Green Earth, Blue Earth, Brown Earth, Black Earth, Irish Slate, &c.

THINGS relating to CHYMISTRY, and other Parts of NATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

CCXLV. The Oil, Spirit, Volatile, and fixed Salts, both of the Serous and Gumous Parts of Human Blood, and that of an Ox.

CCXLVI. The Oil of Tobacco; one or two Drops of it put on a Cat's Tongue, killed her in less than a Minute before the Royal Society: In Lint, held between the Teeth of those that smook, gives Ease, or cures the Tooth-ach, but but apt to make those sick who do not take Tobacco; also Oils of Lawang Bark, Camphire, Mace, and several Salts.

CCXLVII. Sal Armoniack sublimated, also the Spirit thereof.

CCXLVIII. A Phosphorus (Hermetick) which is a mixed Matter, and being exposed about half a Minute to the Sun, Day-light, or Candle, or Fire, will shine in the Dark for some Minutes; this made by Dr. Slare. Mr. Isaac experienced, That if he exposed it to the Light a little before Sun-rise, it presents a bright rosy Hue, and advances in fiery Colour as the Sun approaches the Meridian, and after Sun-set, declines to a pale Wan Colour.

INSTRUMENTS relating to NATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

CCXLIX. An Air-Pump, contrived by the Hon. R. Boyle, Esq; an Engine to exhaust the Air out of any Vessel.

CCL. The Condensing Engine, (whereby much Air is crowded into a little Room.)

CCLI. A Weather Clock, by Sir Christopher Wren; augmented by Dr. R. Hook.

CCLII. An Instrument whereby the Quantity of Rain that falls in any Time on any Piece of Ground is measured: Contriv'd by Sir Christopher Wren.

CCLIII. The Model of an Instrument to fetch Earth, and other Bodies, from the Bottom of the Sea; contrived by Dr. Hook.

CCLIV. A Lamp Furnace, by the same Gentleman, designed for the Hatching of Eggs, in order to observe the Process of Generation, as also Digesting of Liquors. Also, by the same Author, a Pair of Semicylindrical Lamps, which is to feed the Flame, to secure it that it never desert the Flame, and also to keep it of equal Strength.

CCLV. The Model of an Eye, in which the Humours are represented by Glasses of an answerable Figure.

CCLVI. A Burning Glass, half a Foot Diameter.

CCLVII. Another, i.e. two thin Concave Glasses set together, and so to be filled up with Water when used; contrived and given by Bishop Wilkins.

CCLVIII. A large Microscope with three Glasses fitted for all manner of Positions; it magnifies to 100 Times the Area's Appearance; also a less.

CCLIX. An Otocoustick to help the Hearing, given by Bishop Wilkins; this is of Ivory, there is another of Copper, funnell'd and belly'd in the Middle. A third of Tin, Conical, with a Cochlea within it, the best is the first.

CCLX. A Pair of Hydrostatick Scales, used to examine the Specifick Gravity of Bodies, &c.

CCLXI. A Box of Anatomick Instruments, viz. Saws, Knives, Chizzels, Forceps, Laver, Tenter, Syringe, Pipes, Probes, and Needles.

THINGS relating to MATHEMATICKS and MECHANICKS.

CCLXII. A reflecting Telescope, contrived by Sir Isaac Newton; one of which, less than a Foot long, magnifies as much as another of six Feet long, and the Object much more clearly represented.

CCLXIII. An Instrument for working Questions by Multiplication and Division; contrived by Dr. Hook.

CCLXIV. A better Sort, made to work in a Coach, given by Bishop Wilkins.

CCLXV. The Model of a Geometrick flat Floor; contrived by Dr. Willis.

CCLXVI. The Model of the Hull of a double bottomed Ship, contrived by Sir William

Petty, with two Heads, two Rudders, two Holds, two Keels, &c.

CCLXVII. An Instrument invented by Sir Christopher Wren, to demonstrate how far a Ship, against the Wind, may sail.

CCLXVIII. An orbicular Load-Stone, immersed in the Center of an Horizontal Table, like a Globe, with the Poles in the Horizon, together with 32 Needles upon the Margin of the Table, by which the different Respect of the Needle to the several Points of the Load-Stone, and other Particulars, may be observed; contrived by Sir Christopher Wren.

CCLXIX. Two Dipping Needles, designed for taking of Longitudes.

CCLXX. A Canoo, or Boat, in the Shape of a Shuttle; given by Mr. Hocknell.

CCLXXI. A Gun, affixed to an Iron Triangle; contrived by the Lord Viscount Brouncker, for the making Experiments of the Recoiling of Guns.

CCLXXII. An Assayer to try the Strength of Gunpowder; contrived by Prince Rupert.

CCLXXIII. A Wind Gun; given by the famous Bishop Wilkins.

CCLXXIV. A Gun which discharges seven Times one after another presently; given by Dudley Palmer, Esq;

CCLXXV. An Indian poisoned Dagger, Length about 14 Inches, and one Inch broad, the Scabbard one intire Piece of Wood, &c.

CCLXXVI. A Brazilian fighting Club, of Brazil Wood, an Ell long, Diameter at one End four, at the other two Inches and a half, and in the Middle two.

CCLXXVII. A West India Target, also a Bow, Arrows and Quiver.

CCLXXVIII. A Pot of Mæassar Poison, wherewith to poison Arrows; given by Sir Ph. Vernatti.

CCLXXIX. A Siam Drum; given by Mr. John Short.

CCLXXX. Assay Scales included in a Case, with Glass Pannels, to weigh with out of the Air.

CCLXXXI. A China Statera, by which they weigh their Gems, &c.

CCLXXXII. A Pair of wooden Bellows, contrived to save Leather; given by Sir. R. Murray.

CCLXXXIII. A Rupee, and a half Rupee; (both given by George Ent, Esq;) and several other Sorts of Money of East-India.

CCLXXXIV. A Saffron Kiln; given by Charles Howard, Esq;

CCLXXXV. A Machine for Plowing, equal Sowing and Harrowing, all at once; given by John Evelyn, Esq;

CCLXXXVI. A Cyder Press, contrived by Dr. Hook, for better Dispatch and Breaking of Apples.

CCLXXXVII. A Cup turned out of Sassafras, and a Box turned out of a Nut-shell.

CCLXXXVIII. An Indian Pail and Potager, made out of the Bark of a Tree.

CCLXXXIX. An Indian Rush-basket, and another made there, of Porcupine Quills.

CCXC. An Indian Peruke, made of Feathers of several Colours, and an Indian Mantle made of Feathers.

CCXCI. An Indian Bracelet, for the Wrist, made of the Feathers of the Indian Sea Curlew.

CCXCII. A Pair of Iceland Gloves and Boots, given by Mr. Henshaw, made of Deer Skin.

CCXCIII. An Indian Scepter, made of a Sort of Cane, one Yard long.

CCXCIV. The Fan of an Indian King; given by Mr. Whistler.

CCXCV. Three Landskips, and a Catoptrick Paint; given by Bishop Wilkins.

CCXCVI.

CCXCVI. An Instrument, wherewith to draw Perspective; contrived by Sir Chr. Wren.

CCXCVII. An Optick Box, used as a Help in Drawing.

CCXCVIII. The Pictures of a Musk Deer of Java, of a Basilisk, a Plant called Minfin, and several Indian Plants; also of the Clove, Nutmeg, &c. Trees.

CCXCIX. An armed Soldier, with the Prospect of an Army; given by Mr. William Brownettall, very curiously drawn with his Pen.

CCC. A Jewish Phylactery.

CCCI. Examples of China, Arabick, and Malabarine Letters and Languages.

CCCII. Two carved Shells of Mother of Pearl, where Andromeda is chained to a Rock; Perseus on a Pegasus, Neptune, Diana, &c. are finely represented.

CCCIII. Thirty-six other Pieces of Ivory, with Images carved on each, &c.

CCCIV. A Box of Cups (Turn'd Work) from Norimberg, being 100, one within another, the Bowl of the utmost, being about two Inches Diameter; given by Dudley Palmer, Esq;

CCCIV. A solid Triangle, and the Head of a Princess with her Hair, both turned.

CCCVI. Two half Bodies in Armour, and the Head of Sir R. Murray in Wax-work.

CCCVII. The Effigies of John Howard, the first Duke of Norfolk, from whom the present Duke is the 11th Inclusive; also the Pedigree of the Family.

CCCVIII. A Roman Urn of Glass, with a Handle, above 1500 Years old, given by Sir Christopher Wren.

CCCIX. Stones, seeming a Sort of coarse Marble, long since found near the Foundation of Charing-Cross; given by Sir Joseph Williamson.

CCCX. Mosaick Work, found under Ground in Holborn, and near the Bath.

CCCXI. Several Examples of Mortars of old Castles, and Roman Buildings, given by John Aubrey, Esq; for comparing them with those now in Use.

CCCXII. A Roman Money Pot, given, with several Roman Coins, found in the Year 1651, in Weekfield, in the Parish of Hedington, in Wiltshire, half full of Roman Coins, Silver, and Copper, of several Emperors, near the Time of Constantine.

CCCXIII. A Burning Glass contrived, and given by that most excellent Mathematician and Philosopher, Sir Isaac Newton, Knt. composed of seven circular fine Glasses, each about a Foot Diameter, and a little Concave placed, one in the Centre, and six round that, with their Edges close together, set in Cork, and all fixed in a Wainscot Frame, that in the Center, somewhat deeper than the rest; it melts any Kind of Metal, and even vitrifieth Brick or Tile.

The Metal is held in the Focus, 22 Inches from the Centre of the middle Glass.

CCCXIV. A Swimming Stone, about one Foot and a half, solid.

CCCXV. A Cane, 26 Feet long.

CCCXVI. Also a Pegue Hat, and Organ, the former of Cane of a red Colour, curiously manufactured.

CCCXVII. A Pair of Ox Horns, about two Yards between the Tips, measured close to the Scalp; given by Mr. Houghton.

CCCXVIII. A Colt with two hinder Legs only, the Skin stuffed; here is also the Skeleton.

CCCXIX. The King of the Birds of Paradise.

CCCXX. A Chusan Chair, of natural Growth, as well as Shape, a very extraordinary Curiosity, given by the Lord Somers, Anno 1702, as brought from China; it has the Rails, Pillars or Feet, Back and Elbows appearing on a transient View, or at some Distance finely carved (tho' no Tools seems, when you are near, to have touched it) in the Figures or rough Designs of Cupids, Crocodiles, &c. The Wood is very hard, ponderous and of a whitish Colour, and is said to be the Root of a Tree: Some will have it to be a Tea Tree, but whether its Bulk be not too great for that (as being so large that a Person of a middle Size may sit in it) ought to be considered.

CCCXXI. An East India Snake, and Rattle Snake.

CCCXXII. A Skeleton of an Ostrich; a Dog without a Mouth.

CCCXXIII. The Model of the Temple at Jerusalem, given by Mr. Povey.

CCCXXIV. A large Cylindrical Piece of a petrified Tree about 14 Inches Diameter, and the like Depth; brought from Antigua, and given by Benjamin Middleton, Esq; 1695, &c.

To this Repository many Curiosities, of Nature and Art, have been since added by the worthy Members of the Society, and other ingenious Persons, whereof we shall not pretend to give our Readers a Catalogue, which is indeed not easy to come at; the Rarities are at present in some Confusion, being taken down to be cleaned, and set in Order.

THERE is also another Servant, besides what are before-mentioned, belonging to the Society, who is called the Operator, and is to provide proper Matters, wherewith to make Experiments and to expose the Museum to Strangers.

THE Time of the Society's Meeting is on Wednesdays, at three of the Clock in the Afternoon; and the Time of electing Members for the Council, out of the Fellows, is upon the Feast of St. Andrew, the 30th of November, in the Morning, after which they all dine together at a Venison Feast. Of the Council, eleven, that is, the President and ten more, are elected every Year out of the old ones, and the other ten out of the rest of the Fellows.

WE think it not improper to take Notice in this Place, as others have done, of which had great Honour while it continued; but is now extinct.

The Learned Society of ANTIQUARIES,

IT was begun in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, by several Persons of Honour and Learning, and was called the Society, or College of Antiquaries, of which Dr. Gibson, the present Bishop of LONDON, gives some Account in his Life of the learned Camden, who was one of the Society.

THEY met one Day in the Week at Darby-House, where the Heralds Office was, and still is kept; and their Business was to confer together concerning the Antiquities of this Land; and at each Meeting two Questions were propounded to be the next Week discussed, each shewing their Opinions of them; and that which seemed most material, was, by one appointed for that Purpose, entered into a Book, that it might be of Use afterwards, and remain to Posterity. This Society increased daily, many Persons, both learned and noble, joining themselves as Members thereof, but at length it flagged, and so was discontinued for twenty Years; but was revived again, by divers ingenious Gentlemen, in the Year 1614. Some of the Members were Sir James Ley, Knt. Attorney of the Court of Wards, afterwards Earl of Marleburgh, and Lord Treasurer; Sir Robert Cotton, Knt. and Baronet; Sir John Davies, King James's Attorney for Ireland; Sir Richard St. George, then Norroy; Mr. Hackwel, the Queen's Solicitor; Mr. Camden, Clarencieux; Sir Henry Spelman, Knt. and some others, whereof the two last were of the original Foundation.

THESE prudently began this Society, by drawing up some Rules of Government and Limitations to be observed among them; whereof this was one, That for avoiding Offence, they would meddle neither with Matters of State, nor Religion. At one of these Meetings they agreed upon two Questions, according to their former propounded Method, one whereof was touching the Original of the Terms, of which Sir Henry Spelman saith, That it being obscure, and generally mistaken, he took some Pains about it. But before the next Meeting, understanding the King took some Dislike to the Society, and being informed, that they had resolved to decline all Matters of State (which very Caution might have given the King some Jealousy) they forbore to meet any more; and so this brave Society sunk: But some Benefit of it remained; namely, what that learned Knight had prepared concerning the History of our Terms. It remained in MS. in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; since printed, tho' not correct.

To this Society of Antiquaries, Camden refers himself, when Brookesmouth, York Herald, made Exceptions to several Genealogies of Noblemen, in his Britannia, as false, in a Treatise of his, printed Anno 1599, called, A Discovery of Errors, &c. In Answer to which, that learned and modest Man vindicates himself, in a few Sheets at the End of the Edition of his Britannia, Anno 1600, from the Calumnies of that Herald, and at last refers the Accounts he had given of those ancient Pedigrees excepted against, either to the Earl Marthal, or to the College of Heralds, or to the College of Antiquaries: Qui statis Temporibus conveniunt, & de rebus antiquis conferunt: Quorum plerique etiam in Genealogiis sunt exercitati: i. e. "Who at set Times meet, and confer concerning Antiquities, divers of whom are skilled in Genealogies.

THIS College is situated near the North-East Angle of Philip-Lane, by London-Wall, near Cripplegate, adjoining to St. Alphage Church: It was anciently a House of Nuns, afterwards, Anno 1329, an Hospital was founded here by William Elsing, Mercer, for 100 blind Men, and called Elsing Spittle; the same Person, in the Year 1332, founded here a Priory for Canons Regular, which was surrender'd to Henry VIII. Anno 1530, and about 100 Years after, the Rev. Dr. White, Residentary of St. Paul, and Vicar of St. Dunstan's in the West, founded the present College and Hospital.

IT consists of a handsome Hall, the President's Lodgings, with Chambers for Students, and a spacious Library. Over the outer Door-Case, toward London-Wall, which is adorned with two Columns, their Entablature and pitch'd Pediment, of the Tuscan Order, is this Inscription, in Letters of Gold.

Vade & fac similiter.

THIS College was purchased, at the Charge of about 3000 l. for the Use of the Clergy of LONDON, by the Executors of Dr. White, before-mentioned. He gave also to the said College and Alms-Houses for 20 poor People, viz. 10 Men, and 10 Women, 160 l. per Annum for ever, of which 120 l. per Annum is for the Maintenance of the Alms-People, and 40 l. per Ann. to bear the Charges of the Foundation; and for four Dinners for the Clergy, who are to have four Latin Sermons in the Year, one every Quarter; and upon these Days are to dine together in the College.

IN the Year 1631, the 6th of Charles I. the Clergy of LONDON were incorporated under the Great Seal of England: By which all the Rectors Rectors, Vicars, Lecturers and Curates are constituted Fellows of this College, which is governed by the President, two Deans, and four Assistants, who are yearly elected every third Tuesday after Easter, when there is an Election Sermon preached at the Church of St. Alphage.

The FOUNDATION.

THE Will of the Founder, Dr. Thomas White, bore Date, Anno 1623; he made two Executors, Mr. John Simson, Rector of St. Olave's Hart-Street, in LONDON, who died 1633, and John Keeling of the Inner-Temple, Esq; It was several Years before all Things were adjusted and a Place found out and appointed for the Situation of this intended College.

Anno 1627, the Place on which the College now stands was purchased: It was a religious House, as is before-mentioned, and was founded to the Honour of the Virgin Mary, for one Master and four Secular Priests; afterwards settled on Augustin Fryars, Anno 1340. Upon the Dissolution, 31 Henry VIII. it was granted to John Williams, Esq; (afterwards Lord Thame) reserving a Quit-Rent to the Crown of 1 l. 17 s. 2 d. per Ann. His only Daughter Margery was married to Henry Norris, who in the 5th of Queen Elizabeth, conveyed it to Sir Rowland Havard, Alderman of LONDON for 700 l. and afterward Sir John Havard, Son of Sir Rowland, sold it to Robert Parkhurst, except the abovesaid Quit-Rent, and 4 l. per Annum for ever, left by his Father to the Poor of St. Alphage, to be distributed in Bread. Parkhurst, 3 Car. I. sold it to the Executors of Dr. White, who, in Pursuance of their Trust, conveyed it to the President and Fellows of Sion College.

AFTER their being incorporated, the Governors and Clergy being summoned, Anno 1632, agreed upon a Common Seal, which had round it Scillum Collegii de Sion Londini; and upon it the Good Samaritan, with this Inscription, Vade & fac similiter. St. Luc. 10. 37.

THE Bishop of London is Visitor; but no Bishop ever visited it till July the 16th 1695, when Dr. Compton, Bishop of LONDON visited it.

The ALMS-HOUSE

consists of twenty distinct Rooms for ten Men within the College, and ten Women without. They are to be nominated, four by the City of Bristol, where Dr. White was born; eight by the Merchant-Tailors Company; six by the Parish of St. Dunstan's, where he was Minister 49 Years; and two by St. Gregory's Parish, where he had lived about twenty Years; except any of the Kindred of either of his Wives appeared, who were first to be considered, not exceeding four at a Time. All which are to give Security, at their Admission, that they be no Charge to the College, nor the Parish of St. Alphage. The College appoints one to take Care of them; to distribute the Charity, and to eject in Case of Delinquency.

BESIDES the Munificence of the Founder, one Mr. Brewer, by his last Will, made in the Year 1684, gave them a Farm in Hertfordshire. They are paid Quarterly by the College: Formerly their Allowance amounted to 6 l. per Ann. each, but this is somewhat abated by the Value of Rents being sunk, as one Manor in the Hundreds of Essex, from 120 l. per Ann. to 70 l. per Ann.

The LIBRARY.

This was not appointed by the Founder, but was erected, by Mr. Simpson, one of his Executors, at his own proper Cost and Charges. It is a spacious Room 121 Feet in Length, and 30 Feet broad, furnished with Wainscot Stalls, Desks, Seats, and other necessary and useful Ornaments. It contains Books on the following Subjects, each Class marked, and the Title of the Subjects which the Books therein consist of, are;

The BOOKS in this LIBRARY were given by several Benefactors, the chief of which were as follow:

SIR Paul Bayning, Knt. and Bart. Baron of Horkefley, and Viscount Sudbury, in the Year 1629, gave 50 l. to purchase Books; the Lady Anne, his Wife, after his Decease, gave 50 l. more.

SIR George Crooks, Knt. one of his Majesty's Justices of his Pleas gave 100 l.

Rebecca, Lady Romney, Widow to Sir William Romney, late Alderman of LONDON, in the Year 1630, gave 100 l.

Mr. William Gonnell, late Citizen and Girdler, and Merchant-Adventurer of LONDON, gave, by his Will, 100 l. and Mr. John Greenough, late Citizen and Woolman of LONDON, gave 50 l. both in the Year 1631.

Richard Watson, D. D. of St. Mary Aldermary, was likewise a Benefactor, in the Year 1632; as was John Harper, Treasurer of Christ's Hospital, in the Year 1633. The same Year Mr. Robert Parkhurst, Citizen and Alderman of LONDON, gave 50 l.

Sir Paul Pindar, Sir John Wolstenholme, Sir Abraham Dawes, Sir John Jacob, Knights, and John Harrison, Esq; chief Farmers of his Majesty's general Customs, gave 100 l. Anno 1635.

THE first of these, viz. Sir Paul Pindar, gave divers Manuscripts.

BOOKS were likewise given by Henry Fetherston, Michael Spark, John Day, Stationers, and divers City Ministers, whose Names are gratefully preserved in a large Vellum Book in the College, given by the aforesaid Mr. Simpson, where the Names of the Benefactors, with their several Gifts, are recorded.

THIS Library was also much augmented by the Library of the Cathedral of St. Paul's, which was carried to Camden-House, and thence brought to the College, Anno 1647.

BUT in the Year 1666, the dismal Fire, which consumed this famous City, burnt also this College, with the Library, and a third Part of the Books, as also the Hospital for twenty poor People, many convenient Chambers for Students, besides those that were reserved for the Meeting of the Governors and Fellows, and for the Clerks and Library-Keeper to dwell in; the whole Fabrick, at a moderate Estimate, being worth 4000 l. There were also lost the Rents of several Chambers within, and certain Tenements without the College, to the Value of 106 l. 6 s. per Annum.

BENEFACTORS since the Fire were in the Year 1667, Sir John Shaw, Sir John Wolstenholme, Sir Robert Vyner, Sir Edmond Turner, Knights and Aldermen, Edward Backwel, and Francis Millington, Esqs; chief Farmers of his Majesty's general Customs, who gave 300 l. Griffith Owen, Citizen and Brewer, 100 l. Edward Lord Bishop of Norwich; Dr. William Sancroft, Dean of St. Paul's, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury; Dr. Robert Pory, Residentiary of St. Paul's; Dr. Edward Stillingfleet, Residentiary of St. Paul's; Dr. Simon Patrick, Rector of Covent-Garden; Dr. John Lake, Rector of St. Botolph Bishopsgate; Dr. William Bell, Vicar of St. Sepulchre's, and divers other Reverend Divines of the City.

IN the Year 1670, Daniel Mills, D. D. Rector of St. Olave's Hart-street, President this Year, gave 40 l. He also caused to be set up nineteen compleat Stalls, or Desks, and three half ones, wherein Books are placed for publick Uses: He wainscotted the upper End of the Library, and set up a Repository for Books, wherein now standeth the great Bible of France, in many learned Languages, and whereon is placed the large Registry of Benefactors: He also, by himself, and Procurement of others, was very beneficial in re-building of the College and Library.

THIS Library was also enlarged by the Jesuits Books that were seized Anno 1679; and, at the Motion of the Governor, what were not before embezzelled were granted by King Charles II. to the College, as also by the Benefaction of the Lord Barkley, who gave half his Uncle Cook's Books to this Library, and promised the other half at his Death. Many others gave Books, whose Names are inserted in the Catalogue of the Benefactors, and set down according to Order, in every Book they gave. Mr. Brewer's Name must not be forgotten, tho' his good Intention succeeded not, who left his Books to the Library, but his Executors pretended there were not Assets sufficient to satisfy his Debts. Mr. Wynn, Citizen and Dyer, gave 100 l. the Interest to be laid out Yearly in Books. Mr. Calfe 20 l. per Annum, for the same Use, payable by the Leather-sellers Company.

THIS Library is to be survey'd twice a Year; and had, at first, a Library-Keeper, an Under Library-Keeper, and an Ostiary; now one serves for all, who is the Reverend Mr. William Reading. This Gentleman, with a great deal of Care and Industry, made a Catalogue of the Books, which he printed by Subscription in the Year 1721, under the following Title:

Bibliothecæ Cleri Londinensis in Collegio Sionensi Catalogus, duplici forma concinnatus. Pars prior exhibet Libros juxta ordinem Scriniorum distributos, & ad proprias Classes redactos. Pars altera omnium auctorum nomina, & rerum præcipuarum capita, ordine Alphabetico complectitur. Auctore GULIELMO READING, Bibliothecario.

WHICH Work was recommended to the Publick, by the under-written Certificate, signed by three of the Governors, and the Register.

At a Court at Sion College, Monday, November 6, 1721.

“ WHEREAS Mr. Reading, Keeper of
“ the publick Library in Sion College, “ has, pursuant to an Order of former “ Governors of this College, bestowed very much “ Time and Pains in preparing for the Press, a “ double Catalogue of all the Books contained “ in the said Library, answerable to the Title
“ herein above recited: And whereas, by Reason “ of the Smallness of his Salary, and a heavy “ Debt, which has lain upon the College ever “ since the Re-building of it after the Fire of “ LONDON, there is no possible Way for
“ the Library-Keeper to print his Catalogue,
“ and get something for his laborious Work,
“ (which by the Estimate of a skilful Person,
“ will make a Book of two Guineas Price in “ Sheets) but by the Assistance of about two “ hundred Subscribers, advancing a Guinea a “ piece. We the present Governors of Sion “ College, do very heartily recommend this Undertaking to all the Clergy and Gentry, who “ may have Occasion for it, being persuaded, that “ it will be useful, not only in the Library,
“ for readily finding the Books there, but likewise in the Studies of all Lovers of Learning,
“ for their Information of many excellent Authors, which are here to be met with, upon
“ the most important Subjects.

THIS whole College being consumed by the Fire, the Re-building of the Alms-House, and the Library, cost above 1300 l. the Hall, and all the other Buildings cost above 2000 l. more, as was computed in the Year 1688. The Wainscoting of the Hall cost 140 l. and as for the Chambers of the Students, which before the Fire were wholly for such, no Women being then permitted to inhabit there, and amounted to a considerable Revenue to the College of about 54 l. per Ann. the Ground was let out to build upon at Ground-Rents.

The present GOVERNORS of Sion College, who were chosen on Tuesday the 17th of April last, 1733, are as follow :

PRESIDENT.

Dr. Joseph Watson, Rector of St. Stephen Walbrook.

DEANS.

Dr. Edward Arrowsmith, Rector of St. Olave's Hart-street.

Dr. Anthony Ellys, Rector of St. Olave's Old Jury.

ASSISTANTS.

Dr. Crow, Rector of St. Botolph's Bishopsgate.

Dr. William Berryman, Rector of St. Mary Ax.

Dr. Joseph Trapp, Vicar of Christ Church.

Mr. Thomas Moore, Minister of St. Botolph's Aldersgate.

CHELSEA COLLEGE.

BESIDES Sion College, there was another College for Divines, situated in a Place adjacent to the Cities of LONDON and Westminster, called Chelsea College.

It was built on a Piece of Ground in the Parish of Chelsea, called Thame-Shot, containing about six Acres, and founded about the Beginning of King James I's Reign; endowed liberally, but not sufficiently, by Dr. Matthew Sutcliff, Dean of Exeter, for a Provost and Fellows, who were to devote themselves to Polemical Divinity, to vindicate the Reformation of Religion, from Time to Time, against all Popish Writers. In this College also were to be maintained two Historians, to record and publish all Matters worthy of Remark in this Church and State. Dr. Sutcliff, the worthy Founder, who had earnestly employed his Pen, in Behalf of Religion, against Parsons the Jesuit, did, in his Life-time, settle four Farms in Devonshire, on this College, to the Value of 300 l. per Annum, and upon his Death, by Will, dated November 1, 1628, bequeathed unto Dr. Prideaux, and Dr. Clifford, as Feoffees in Trust, the Benefit of an Exent on a Statute of 4000 l. acknowledged by Sir Lewis Steukley.

KING James I. approved of this Design, and, when the Building began, laid the first Stone himself, and gave all the Timber requisite to it, to be fetched out of Windsor Forest. Mr. A. Monday, in his Edition of Stow's Survey, gives the following Account of this College :

"NOT far from Westminster, by the River, there is erected a goodly Building, not yet finished, for Students in Divinity, commonly known by the Name of Chelsea College, whereof I thought fit to make mention, because I find an Act of Parliament, made in the seventh Year of King James I. in the Behalf of the same College; as also a Declaration published by Authority, in the Year 1616, containing the Reasons that moved his Majesty and the State to erect the same; which here followeth :

"WHEREAS his Majesty, of his most Royal and Zealous Care for the Defence of true Religion, now established within this Realm of England, and for the Refuting of Errors and Heresies repugnant unto the same, hath been graciously pleased, by his Letters

" Patents under the Great Seal of England; to Found a College at Chelsea, near LONDON, and therein to Place certain learned Divines; and to Incorporate the same by the Name of, The Provost and Fellows of the College of King James in Chelsea, near LONDON, of the Foundation of the same James King of England; and hath of his most gracious Bounty and Goodness, not only endowed the same with certain Lands, Privileges, and Immunities; but hath also, for their further Maintenance and Sustentation, given unto them a Capacity and Ability, to receive and take from his Majesty, or any of his loving Subjects, any Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Gifts, Benefit, and Profits whatsoever, not exceeding in the whole, the Yearly Value of three thousand Pounds, as in and by the said Letters Patents doth more at large appear. And whereas also, it is manifest and evident, that the bringing in of fresh Streams of running Water into the City of LONDON, is very convenient, necessary, and profitable, as well for the private Use of such as shall Rent the same, as a Help for cleansing the said City in the Time of Sickness, and preserving the same against all sudden Adventures of Fire: It is therefore enacted, &c. That it shall, and may be lawful to the said Provost and Fellows, their Successors, Deputies, and Assigns, at all and every such Place and Places, in the open Fields or Marshes, lying between the Bridge called Lock-Bridge, in or near the Parish of Hackney, in the County of Middlesex, and the Bridge called Bow-Bridge at Stratford Bow, in the Parish of Stepney in the said County, (as by the said Provost and Fellows, their Successors, Deputies, or Assigns, by, and with the Consent and Allowance of the Occupiers and Owners of the Soil in the said Place or Places, and in Default of such Assent and Allowance, by such Composition, first to be made with the said Occupiers and Owners of the said Soil, as by the Commissioners, by Virtue of this Act to be in this Behalf appointed, shall be thought fit and convenient) to dig or cut from, and out of the main River of Lee, on that Side or Bank of the same River which is next unto the City of LONDON, a Ditch, or Trench, not exceeding in Breadth ten Feet, or to scour, cleanse, or enlarge unto the Breadth aforesaid, any old Ditch, or Trench, there already made; and the same Ditch, or Trench, either old or new, so to be made, or to be cleansed, to convey by and thorough the said Fields and Marshes, in all Places convenient, in such Sort as the same may again be returned, and made to open itself into the main River, within such convenient Distance from the Mouth thereof, as to the said Commissioners shall (for the Intents and Purposes hereafter expressed) be thought fit: Upon which Ditch, or Trench, or Places near adjoining thereunto, it shall and may be lawful to the said Provost and Fellows, their Successors, Deputies, or Assigns, to erect, or cause to be erected, certain Engines, Water-Works, or Water-Wheels, as also Houses or Coverings requisite for the same, where, by the Assent of the said Commissioners, the same shall be agreed upon, to be no Lett or Hinderance to the ordinary Passage of Barges, Boats, or other such Vessels, upon the said River of Lee, and by and through the said Ditch, or Trench, to carry and convey so much of the Water of the said main River, as by the said Provost and Fellows, their Successors, Deputies, or Assigns, shall be thought requisite and necessary to be used for the Working or Motion of the said Engines or Water-Wheels, and shall also

" also by the said Commissioners be thought to " be no Prejudice or Hindrance to the ordinary " Passage of Barges, Boats or other Vessels, upon
 " the same River: And that it shall and may " be lawful to and for the said Provost and Fel" lows, their Successors, Deputies, and Assigns,
 " (in all Places apt and convenient within a con" venient Distance of the said Engines, or Wa" ter-Works) to dig for the taking and further
 " opening of Springs of fresh Water there found,
 " or to be found on the West Side of the said
 " River, next unto the City of LONDON,
 " and the Water of the said Springs to carry and
 " convey by and through certain little Gutters,
 " or Trenches, or Pots, or Pipes, under the " Ground, into one Pit, Pond, or Head, of con" venient Largeness to be made, by the said Pro" vost, and Fellows, their Successors, Deputies,
 " or Assigns, in some Places apt for the same:
 " And that it shall and may be lawful to and for
 " the said Provost and Fellows, their Successors,
 " Deputies, and Assigns, having by Art, and " Slight of Engines, and Water-Works, or by " any other Means, or Device, raised the Water
 " of the said Springs, and so much of the said
 " Water, there running, in the said Ditch or " Trench, as shall be thought necessary, to such " Height, and into such Place, Pond, Head, or " Receipt, (as to them shall seem in that Behalf " requisite) to convey and carry the same into
 " close Pipes under the Ground from the said
 " Water-Works, and the said other Places of " Receipt, unto the City of LONDON, and
 " the Suburbs thereof, for the perpetual Main" tenance, and Sustentation of the said Provost,
 " and Fellows, and their Successors by the Rent
 " to be made of the said Waters, conveyed as " aforesaid; and that for the Convenience of the " said Water, it shall and may be lawful, to and " for the said Provost and Fellows, their Succe" ssors, Deputies, and Assigns (in all Places con" venient between the said Water-Works, and " the said City of LONDON) to dig, cut,
 " and open the Ground to such Depth and " Breadth, as shall be convenient for the laying
 " in the said Pipes, or Pots, through which the " said Water shall pass, and for making little " Conduit-Heads, for Vents unto the same, for " the better Passage of the said Waters, and the " same Ground so opened for the Purpose afore" said, (after the said Pipes or Pots are laid in " and placed) the said Provost and Fellows, their " Successors, Deputies, and Assigns, shall with " Turf, Earth, Gravel, and other Materials,
 " again fill up and cover.
 " AND be it, &c. that it shall and may be " lawful to and for the said Provost and Fellows,
 " their Successors, Deputies, and Assigns, from " Time to Time, and at all Times convenient,
 " with their Men, Horses, Carts, or other Car" riages, to have free Entry and Passage, by, over,
 " and through any Ground or Land, in Places,
 " and at Times meet and convenient for the do" ing and performing of any Thing, requisite, for
 " the making of the said several Passages of Wa" ters, or for the doing of any other Act or " Thing, concerning the same, authorized by
 " this Act, as also for the continual Preservation " and Reparation of the said Works, as often as " Need shall require. And be it, &c. that the " Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great
 " Seal of England, for the Time being, by Com" mission under the Great Seal of England, at " the Request and Charges of the said Provost
 " and Fellows, their Successors, Substitutes, and " Deputies, or upon the Complaint, or Petition,
 " of any Person, or Persons, whom it may con" cern, shall nominate, appoint and authorize by " Commission, or Commissions, under the Great
 " Seal of England, seven discreet and sufficient

" Persons, whereof two shall be Justices of the " Peace, of the County of Middlesex, and two of " the City of LONDON, and three others at
 " the Choice and Appointment of the said Lord
 " Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, every of the said
 " Persons having Lands and Tenements, of the " clear yearly Value of 40 l. at least, which said
 " seven Persons or any four or more of them shall " have Power to order and set down what Rate
 " or Rates, Sum, or Sums of Money shall be paid
 " by the said Provost and Fellows, as well for " Satisfaction and Recompence of Damages, in " making the fore-cited Works, or any Thing be" longing to the same, as also for any Manner of " Damages to be sustained, in the Mending or " Reparation thereof, from Time to Time, or " any other Costs or Charges sustained, by Rea" son of the same, to the Lords Owners, and

 " interested in the said River, or Waters, for " which Composition is to be made by the Intent
 " of this Act, if the Parties cannot of themselves
 " agree, and in what Manner the same shall be " paid. And that for the Recovery of such Mo" ney as shall be so ordered and set down by the " said Commissioners, or any four or more of " them, the Party or Parties to whom the same " Money shall be due and payable, by the true
 " Intent of the said Order, shall or may recover
 " the same, together with the reasonable Costs
 " and Damages for the Forbearance thereof,
 " against the said Provost and Fellows, by Action
 " of Debt, Bill, or Plaint, in any of his Maje" sty's Courts at Westminster, wherein no Essoign,
 " or Protection, shall be allowed. Provided al" ways, and it is further enacted, &c. That the " said Water shall not be conveyed through the " House, Garden, or Orchard, of any Person, " or Persons, or through any Part thereof, or " through any Corn Field, while the Corn is " growing, or standing, in the same, without the " Consent first had of the Owners and Occupiers
 " of the said Houses, Gardens, Orchards, and
 " Corn Fields, Anno 7 Jac. Cap. 9.

The following is a brief DECLARATION of the Reasons that moved his Majesty and the State to erect a College of Divines, and other learned Men at CHELSEA.

" UNDERSTANDING by Experi" ence, that want of Information hath
 " hinder'd Mens Devotion in contri" buting toward the Erection and Donation of " Chelsea College, we have thought it very fit,
 " together with his Majesty's Letters, seconded
 " by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, to de" clare the Reasons that caused this Work to be " undertaken; and to add such Motives, as we " have supposed may be most effectual to give " Satisfaction to his Majesty's Desire, and Per" fection to this Honourable Design.
 " First, It was considered, That the Pope's " Agents travelled by Sea and Land, wrote Books
 " in Favour of their Faction, devised Lies and " Slanders, to bring Religion and the Professors
 " thereof into Hatred, and not sparing any stand" ing in their Way, by Falshood and Treachery
 " oppugned Kings and Princes, that could not en" dure the Pope's Tyrannical Government. And " for this End, Men of ready Wits, good Speech,
 " long Experience, and competent Learning,
 " have been maintained in Colleges, furnished
 " with Books, holpen with Counsel and Direc" tions, bound with Laws and Oaths, to uphold
 " the Papal Hierarchy and Heresy; and, which
 " moveth much, encouraged with great Promises,
 " and large Rewards.
 " WHEREUNTO, albeit, private Men, piously " affected, have from Time to Time opposed

them-

“ themselves ; yet because they wanted Encouragement to undertake so great a Labour, Counsel of their Antients to direct them, Books and Libraries to instruct them, Forms of proceeding to keep them in Compass, and Rewards to maintain them, those excepted that are due for Ecclesiastical Cures : It was further advised, That to make a sufficient Defence for the Truth of Religion, and Honour of the State, and a strong and continual Opposition against the continued Lies, Slanders, Errors, Heresies, Sects, Idolatries, and Blasphemies of our Adversaries, it was necessary to unite our Forces, and to appoint special Men, that without other Distraction might attend the Cause of Religion and the State, being furnished with Directions, Instructions, Counsel, Books, Presses, competent Maintenance, and other Necessaries.

“ THIS then was the Reason why this College, by his Majesty and the State, was first designed, and a Corporation granted with large Privileges, viz. That a select Number of Divines, and others, should be gathered together into one Body, and united with one Form of Laws, and there maintained, who, being furnished with Books, and directed by Men of Experience and Action, might always be ready to maintain our Christian Faith, to answer the Adversaries Calumniation, as well against Religion as the State ; to defend the Majesty of Kings and Princes against the Usurpation of Popes ; the Liberty of Christians against the Yoke of Superstition ; to supply the Defect of Teaching, where Appropriations have devoured the Ministry ; by Teaching and Conference, to convince the obstinate Papist and Atheist, and by all lawful Means to maintain Truth and discover Falshood.

“ THIS is the College commended by his Majesty, and intended by the State, and easy to be perfected, if it please all true Christians to further it with their Help and Favour, according to some Proportion of their Means.

HIS Majesty's Letters, directed to my Lord of Canterbury, were in these Words :

Right Trusty, and well-beloved Counsellor, We Greet you well.

“ WHEREAS the Enemies of the Gospel have ever been forward to write and publish Books for confirming erroneous Doctrine, and impugning the Truth ; and now of late seem more careful than before, to send daily into our Realm such their Writings, whereby our loving Subjects, tho' otherwise well disposed, might be seduced, unless some Remedy thereof should be provided : We, by the Advice of our Council, have lately granted a Corporation, and given our Allowance for erecting a College at Chelsea, for learned Divines to be employed to write, as Occasion shall require, for maintaining the Religion professed in our Kingdoms, and confuting the Impugners thereof. Whereupon, Dr. Sutcliff designed Provost of the said College, hath now humbly signified unto Us, That upon divers Promises of Help and Assistance towards Erecting and Endowing the said Collège, he hath, at his own Charge, begun, and well proceeded in the Building, as doth sufficiently appear, by a good Part thereof already set up in the Place appointed for the same. We therefore being willing to favour and further so religious a Work, will and require you to write your Letters to the Bishops of your Province, signifying unto them in our
N<sup>o</sup> 10. VOL. I.

“ Name, That our Pleasure is, they deal with the Clergy, and other of their Diocese, to give their charitable Benevolence for the perfecting of this good Work, so well begun : And for the better Performance of our Desire, We have given Orders to the said Provosts, and his Associates, to attend you and others, unto whom it may appertain, and to certify Us, from Time to Time, of their Proceedings.
Thetford, the 5th of May, 1616.

THESE Letters the Archbishop of Canterbury sent Abroad to the Bishops of his Province, and seconded them in these Terms :

“ Now, because it is so Pious and Religious a Work, conducing both to God's Glory, and the saving of many a Soul within this Kingdom, I cannot but wish, that all devout and well-affected Persons should, by your self and the Preachers in your Diocese, as well publicly as otherwise, be excited to contribute, in some measure, to so holy an Intendment now well begun. And altho' these and the like Motions have been frequent in these latter Times, yet let not those whom God hath blessed with any Wealth, be weary of well-doing ; that it may not be said, that the idolatrous and superstitious Papists be more forward to advance their Falshoods, than we are to maintain God's Truth. Whatsoever is collected, I pray your Lordship may be carefully brought unto me ; partly that it pass not through any defrauding Hand, and partly that his Majesty may be acquainted what is done in this Behalf.

Your LORDSHIP's

very Loving Brother,

G. CANTERB.

THE like Letters were written to the Lord Chancellor, and the Lord Mayor of LONDON.

NOTWITHSTANDING all the Pains and Endeavours that were taken, and the Encouragement given to bring this good Work to Perfection, there was only one Range of Building erected, and that hardly finished, which cost 3000 l. as Mr. Fuller, in his Church History, saith he was informed. This was begun and done chiefly by Dr. Sutcliff, but was scarce an eighth Part of the intended Edifice, which was to have been a double Quadrangle, besides Wings on each Side : However Provosts and Fellows were appointed from Time to Time. The first Provost, and Set of Fellows, nominated by the King himself, were,

Matthew Sutcliff, Dean of Exeter, PROVOST.

The seventeen FELLOWS.

John Overal, Dean of St. Paul's.

John Morton, Dean of Winton.

Richard Field, Dean of Glocester.

Robert Abbot, S. T. P.

John Spencer, S. T. P.

Miles Smith, S. T. P.

William Covitt, S. T. P.

John Howson, S. T. P.

John Layfield, S. T. P.

Benjamin Charrier, S. T. P.

Martin Fotherby, S. T. P.

John Boys, S. T. P.

Peter Lilie, S. T. P.

Fra. Burley, S. T. P.

Ric. Bret, S. T. P.

Will. Hellier, Archid. Barnstable.

John White, Soc. Coll. Manchester.

William Camden, Clarencieux,

John Haywood, Leg. Doct. } Historians.

NONE, who were actual Bishops, were capable of Place in this College, and when some of these were afterwards advanced to Bishopricks, others translated to Heaven, King James, by his Letters Patent 1622, Nov. 14, substituted others in their Rooms, amongst whom the Archbishop of Spalato (but then no more than Dean of Windsor in England) was most remarkable.

To advance this Work, the King, 1616, sent his Letter to Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury (as was mentioned before) to stir up all the Clergy in his Province to a liberal Contribution. He accordingly wrote his Letters to the Bishops to deal with their respective Clergy and others of Ability, to give their charitable Benevolence for perfecting so pious a Design. But the Collections came in but slowly and sparingly, so that finally the Building stopt and went not forward, and so by little and little fell to Decay and Ruin. And at last there was a Decree in Chancery, made by Coventry, Lord Keeper, that three of those four Farms formerly given to the College, should return again to the Possession of the Heir general of Dr. Sutcliff; and this by the Consent of Dr. Featly the third Provost of the College, and Dr. Prideaux surviving Trustee. Suits were also commenced about the Title of the very Ground it stood on, between William Lord Mounson, who married the Widow of the Earl of Nottingham, that granted the Lease of the Land, and the fourth Provost. This Provost was Dr. Samuel Wilkinson, living about the Year 1654 or 1655, when Dr. Fuller wrote his History, to whom the said Provost imparted the Records of the said College.

At last, there remaining not Fellows enough to continue the Corporation, the Land on which the College was built fell to the Crown; after which it was leased out, and King Charles II. after his Restoration, gave it to the Royal Society, who bought out the remaining Term of the Leases, and having kept it some Years to little Purpose, sold it to Sir Stephen Fox, who probably purchased it for the said King Charles II. and he founded it a-new, though not for the same, but for another Good, as will be spoken of hereafter.

CHAP. XII.

Of the INNS of COURT and CHANCERY.

HAVING done with the Colleges founded for Divinity, and Philosophy, we come of Course to the Houses of the Law: Whereof there were very lately fourteen, but the Lease of Sergeant's-Inn in Fleet-Street, from the Dean and Chapter of York, being expired, the Judges and other Gentlemen of the Law are removed from thence; so that, at this Day, there remain but thirteen, eight of which stand in the Liberties of the City, and five in the Suburbs thereof; which are as follow,

Within the Liberties.	{ Sergeant's-Inn in Chancery-Lane , for Judges only.
	{ The Inner-Temple , } Houses of Court.
Without the Liberties.	{ The Middle-Temple , }
	{ Clifford's-Inn , in Fleetstreet ,
	{ Thavies-Inn , in Holborn ,
	{ Furnival's-Inn in Holborn ,
	{ Barnard's-Inn , in Holborn ,
	{ Staple's-Inn , in Holborn ,
	} Houses of Chancery.
Without the Liberties.	{ Gray's-Inn , in Holborn ,
	{ Lincoln's-Inn , in Chancery-Lane ,
Without the Liberties.	{ } Houses of Court.
	{ Clement's-Inn ,
	{ New-Inn ,
	{ Lion's-Inn ,
	} Houses of Chancery.

THERE was in antient Time, in Scroop's Court in Holborn, an Inn also for Sergeants only; and where Somerset-House now stands, an Inn, called Chester's-Inn, from its Nearness to the Bishop of Chester's House; but more commonly Strand-Inn, in the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaster, which was pulled down with many other Buildings, in the Reign of King Edw. VI. to make Room for the House of Edward Duke of Somerset, Protector of the Realm, who had also his Materials from St. John of Jerusalem, which, being looked upon as little better than Sacrilege, many of those Historians who delight in Judgments, make to be the Cause of the Sentence that was passed upon him, to be beheaded, and the Infatuation of himself and his Counsel, who forgot to demand his Clergy, which by the Laws of England might have saved him.

Justice Fortescue, in his Book of the Laws of England, makes mention of a 10th Inn of Chancery, in the Reign of Henry VI. but does not name the Place where it stood.

THE Houses of Court are filled partly with young Students, and partly with Graduates and Practisers of the Law: But the Inns of Chancery, being as it were Provinces, severally subjected to the Inns of Court, are chiefly furnished with Officers, Attornies, Solicitors, and Clerks, who follow the Courts of King's-Bench and Common-Pleas.

AND yet there are some other, being young Students, that come thither sometimes from one of the Universities, and sometimes immediately from Grammar Schools. And these having spent some Time in studying upon the first Elements and Grounds of the Law, and having performed the Exercises of their own Houses, called Boltas, Moots, and Putting of Cases, they proceed to be admitted and become Students in some of these four Houses or Inns of Court, where continuing the Space of seven Years, or thereabouts, they frequent Readings, Mootings, Boltings, and other learned Exercises; whereby, growing ripe in the Knowledge of the Laws, and approved withal to be of honest Conversation, they are either by the general Consent of the Benchers, or Readers, being the most antient, grave and judicious Men of every Inn of Court, or by the special Privilege of the present Reader there, selected and called to the Degree of Utter-Barristers; and so ena-enabled to be common Counsellors, and to practise the Law, both in their Chambers and at the Bars.

OF these, after they have made one farther Step of Preferment, and are become Benchers, there are two chosen every Year to be Readers there, who make their Readings twice in a Year also, viz. in Lent, and in the Beginning of August.

FOR the Help of young Students in the Inns of Chancery, they likewise choose out of every Inn of Court, a Reader there, being no *Bench*er, but an Utter-Barrister, of ten or twelve Years Continuance; from those of the said Degree of Counsellors, or Utter-Barristers, having continued therein the Space of fourteen or fifteen Years, the chief and best learned, are elected by the Benchers, to increase the Number of the Bench among them; and so, in their Time, become first single, and then double Readers to the Students of those Houses of Court: After which last Reading, they become Apprentices of the Law; and in Default of a sufficient Number of Sergeants at Law, these are, at the Pleasure of the Prince, to be advanced to the Places of Sergeants; out of which Number of Sergeants the vacant Places of the Judges are commonly filled, altho' sometimes they are raised, by special Favour, to the Dignity both of Sergeant and Judge at the same Time.

THESE Sergeants may plead in any of the Courts, and none but Gentlemen of that Degree in the Common Pleas: The Judges being commonly chosen out of the Sergeants, do therefore call them Brothers, and hear them with much Respect; and from the Time of their being called to this Dignity, they hold no Room in the Inns of Court, being translated to the Sergeants Inn, where none but the Sergeants and Judges dwell together.

THE Study of the Law hath not been allowed to be in any other Places than these Inns of Court; for some Schools being once set up in the City, for reading and teaching the Laws, the King thought fit to have them restrained by Proclamation, as appears by this Record, about the 28th of Henry III.

Mandatum est Majori, & Vicecomiti, LONDON, &c. i. e.

“COMMAND is given to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LONDON, That they cause Proclamation to be made thro' the whole City, and firmly to forbid, that any one should set up Schools of the Laws in the said City, and teach the Laws there for the Time to come: And if any shall set up such Schools there, that they cause them to cease without Delay. Witness the King, at Basing, December 11.

THESE Houses are call'd Inns, being the old English Word for Houses of Noblemen, and which is of the same Signification with the French Word Hotel at Paris. Of each House in particular, more will be said in its proper Place.

THE Inns of Chancery were probably so called, because they, for the most Part, consisted of such Clerks as did chiefly study the Forming of Writs, which belonged to the Cursitors, who are Officers of Chancery; but are now taken up by Attornies, Solicitors, and such as belong to the Courts of Common-Pleas and King's-Bench; but formerly were preparatory Houses for younger Students, as well as for the forming of Writs, as aforesaid: And many were enter'd here before they were admitted to the Inns of Court; as some are at this Day.

THE Inns of Court were so named, as some say, because the Students therein are to serve the Courts of Judicature; or else, because these Houses antiently received the Sons of Noblemen, and Gentlemen of the better Sort, which is the Opinion of Fortescue.

THESE Societies are no Corporations, nor have any judicial Power over their Members, but have certain Orders among themselves, which, by Consent, have the Force of Laws. For slight Offences they are only excommunicated, that is, put out of Commons; which is, not to eat with the rest in their Halls: And for greater, they lose their Chambers, and are expelled the House; and being once expelled, they are not to be admitted by any of the other three Societies.

THE Members, when they meet in Chapel or Commons, or when they attend the Courts at Westminster, wear decent black Gowns; but out of those Places, go habited like other Gentlemen.

THESE Societies have no Lands or Revenues, except their Houses; nor have they any thing to defray the Charges of each House, but what is paid at Admittances, and Quit-Rents for their Chambers, with the Purchase Money for Chambers, when any fall to the House.

THE Gentlemen in the Societies are divided into four Classes: 1. Benchers: 2. Utter-Barristers. 3. Inner-Barristers; and 4. Students.

BENCHERS are the Seniors, to whom the Government of the House, and ordering Matters thereof, is committed: And out of these a Treasurer is annually chosen, who receiveth, disburseth, and accounteth for all Money belonging to the House.

UTTER-BARRISTERS are such, as for their Learning and Standing, are called by the Benchers, to plead and argue in the Society doubtful Cases and Questions, which are called Moots, from Mooting, the old Saxon Word for assembling together, or else from the French, Mot, a Word; and whilst they argue the said Cases, they sit outermost on the Forms of the Benchers, which they call the Bar. Out of these Moot-men are chosen Readers for the Inns of Chancery, belonging to the Inns of Court, whereof they are Members; where, in Term Time, and grand Vacations, they argue Cases in the Presence of Attornies and Clerks.

ALL the rest of the Society are accounted Inner-Barristers, who for want of Learning or Time, are not to argue in these Moots; and yet in a Moot before the Benchers, two of these Inner-Barristers, sitting on the same Form with the Utter-Barristers, do, for their Exercises, recite by Heart, the Pleading of the same Moot Case, in Law French, the one taking the Part of the Plaintiff, and the other of the Defendant.

THEY divide the Year into three Parts.

I. THE Learning Vacation.

II. THE Term Times.

III. The dead, or mean Vacation.

THEY have two Learning Vacations, viz. Lent Vacation, which begins the first Monday in Lent, and continues three Weeks and three Days; and Summer Vacation, which begins the Monday after Lammas Day, and continues also three Weeks and three Days. In these Vacations are the greatest Conferences, and Exercises of Study, in the following Manner.

THE Benchers appoint the eldest Utter-Barristers to read among them openly in the Hall, whereof he hath Notice half a Year before; he then, the first Day, about eight o' Clock, makes Choice of some Act or Statute, whereupon he grounds his whole Reading for that Vacation, and declares such Mischiefs and Inconveniences as were not provided against before the same Act; and

and then recites certain Doubts and Questions which he hath devised, that may grow upon the said Statute, and declares his Judgment therein: After which, one of the younger Utter-Barristers repeats one Question propounded by the Reader, and, by Way of Argument, labours to prove the Reader's Opinion to be against Law; and after him, the Senior Utter-Barristers and Readers, one after another, according to Seniority, do declare their Opinions and Judgments in the same, and then the Reader, who put the Case, endeavours to confute the Objections laid against him, and to confirm his own Opinion. After which the Judges and Sergeants, if any are present, declare their Opinions; then the youngest Utter-Barrister again rehearſes another Case, which is prosecuted as the former was. And this Exercise continues daily three or four Hours. Out of those who have read once in the Summer Vacation, and are Benchers, is chosen always one to read in Lent, who observes the same Method and Order as the former. Out of these Readers, Sergeants at Law are usually chosen.

The Manner of MOOTING in the INNS of COURT.

IN these Vacations, after Supper in the Hall, the Reader (with one or two of the Benchers) comes in, to whom one of the Utter-Barristers propounds some doubtful Case, which being argued by the Benchers, and lastly, by him that moved the Case, the Benchers sit down on the Bench at the upper End of the Hall; and upon a Form in the Middle of the Hall sit two Utter-Barristers, and on both Sides of them, on the same Form, sits one Inner-Barrister, who in Law French doth declare to the Benchers some kind of Action; the one being (as it were) retained for the Plaintiff, and the other for the Defendant: Which ended, the two Utter-Barristers argue such Questions as are disputable within the Case. After which, the Benchers do likewise declare their Opinions, as how they take the Law to be in these Questions.

The Manner of MOOTING in the INNS of CHANCERY.

IN the Learning Vacations, each Utter-Barrister, that is a Reader in the Inns of Chancery, goes with two Students of the same Inn of Court to the Inn of Chancery, where he is appointed to read, and there meet him commonly two of each of the Inns of Court, who, sitting as the Benchers do in the Inns of Court at their Moots, hear and argue the Case.

IN Term Time the only Exercises of Learning, is Arguing and Debating Cases after Dinner, and Mooting after Supper, in the same Manner as in the Vacations.

THE Time between the Learning Vacations and Terms, is called the Mean Vacation; during which Time, every Day after Dinner, Cases are argued as at other Times; and after Supper, Moots are brought in, and pleaded by the Inner-Barristers; in the Presence of the Utter-Barristers, who sit there in the Room of the Benchers, and argued by them, as the Benchers do in Term Time, and Learning Vacations.

EVERY Quarter, commonly the Benchers cause one of the Standing Officers of the House to summon a Parliament, which is only an Assembly and Conference of Benchers, and Utter-Barristers, who are called the Sage Company, and meet in a Place called the Parliament Chamber, and there treat of such Matters as shall seem expedient for the good ordering of the House, and the Reformation of such Things as they shall judge meet to be reformed. Here are the Readers for Lent, and the Summer Vacation elected; also a Treasurer is chosen, and the Auditors appointed to take the Accounts of the old Treasurer, &c. Here Offences committed by any of the Society are punished. In these four Inns of Court are reckoned about 800 Students.

DURING the Time of Reading above-mentioned, which used formerly to continue three Weeks and three Days, the Reader was wont to keep a constant and splendid Table, entertaining the Nobility, Judges, Bishops, principal Ministers of State, and sometimes the King himself; inasmuch that it hath cost a Reader above 1000*l*.

AFTERWARDS, he, who hath been Reader, wears a long Robe differing from other Barristers, and is then in a Capacity to be made a Sergeant at Law.

The Manner of electing and calling the SERGEANTS at LAW.

WHEN the Number of Sergeants is small, as Sergeant Benlows was once the only one, the Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, by the Advice and Consent of the other Judges, signifies the same to the King, and who are fit for that Degree, or else presents their Names to the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, who, by the King's Writ, sends to each of them to appear on such a Day before the King to receive the State and Degree of a Sergeant at Law.

At the appointed Time, being habited in Robes of two Colours, viz. Brown and Violet, they come into Westminster-hall, accompanied by the Students of the Inns of Court, and attended by a Train of Servants and Retainers in certain peculiar Cloth Liveries. In Queen Elizabeth's Reign, they were usually Mus-colour on the right Side, and Murrey Colour on the Left; here they take a solemn Oath, perform the antient Ceremony of Counting, and have their Coifs of white Linnen or Silk put on, without any black ones over them, afterwards they give Rings to the several Judges and Sergeants, besides others to the Nobility and many of their Friends, some of 40*s*. and some of 20*s*. Value, whom they also entertain with a magnificent Dinner.

IT was formerly usual for the new Sergeants to walk two and two, Arm in Arm, to Westminster-Hall from the Place where the Feast was intended to be kept; but that Custom has been long discontinued, as well as the Words that were wont to be spoke by the Judges upon the appearing of the Sergeants upon a Call, i. e. Metbinks I see a Brother.

THE Gentlemen of this Degree were heretofore called Narratores in Latin, and in French Countors, i. e. Pleaders. According to the Opinion of Sir Edward Coke, Rep. Lib. 9, they are upwards of 1100 Years standing, and we find the Degree mentioned in a Stat. 3. of Edward I. Chap. 29.

Of the ELECTION of JUDGES.

OUT of these Sergeants Judges are chosen; and therefore it is that they wear always the white Linnen Coif, which is the principal Badge of a Sergeant, and which he wears even in the Presence of the King.

WHEN any of the Judges are wanting, by Death, or otherwise, the King, by the Advice of his Council, makes Choice of one of the Sergeants to supply his Place; and by Letters Patent sealed by the Chancellor, who, sitting in the Midst of the rest of the Judges in open Court, declares to the Sergeant the King's Pleasure, and to the People the King's Goodness, in providing or supplying the Bench with such able and honest Men, as that Justice may be done impartially.

ally and expeditely to all his Subjects: And then causes the said Letters Patents to be read. And being departed, the Chief Justice places the said Sergeant on the Bench, Junior of all the rest: And having taken the Oath, "Well and Truly" to serve the King, and his People, in the Office of Justice; to take no Reward; to do "equal and speedy Justice to all, &c." he sets himself to the Execution of his Charge.

The Judge's Oath.

His Salary.

THE Sergeant being thus advanced to a Judge, hath great Honour, and a very considerable Salary of 1500 l. per Annum, besides great Perquisites.

AND now, in some Things, his former Habit of a Sergeant is altered. His long Robe and Cap, his Hood and Coif are the same: But there is besides, a Cloak put over him, which is closed on his Right Shoulder; and his Caputium is lined with Miniver; that is, divers small Pieces of white rich Furr; but the two Lord Chief Justices, and the Lord Chief Baron, have their Hoods, Sleeves, and Collars, turned up with Ermine.

Of the Manner of keeping Christmas in the INNS of COURT.

IF the House (a little before Christmas) is furnished with such a Number of Students, and of such Quality as are fit to keep a solemn Christmas, then they meet together, and hold a Parliament, as they call it, and there choose and appoint certain Officers of their own Students, in Imitation of the King's Court, viz. a Comptroller, and a Treasurer, with other great Officers; and these bear Rule in the House during the whole Time of Christmas, and are to behave themselves in that Port, Gravity, and Authority, as if they were so in the King's House.

DURING the Time of Christmas, they used to have several Diversions, as Feasting every Day, Musick, Singing, Dancing, and Dicing; to which last all Comers were admitted, and was so high, that the Box-Money has amounted to 50 l. a Night, which, with a small Contribution from each Student, has defrayed the Charges of the whole Christmas. These Revellings gave Occasion to so much Mischiefe, by Persons losing their Money, and by Apprentices robbing their Masters, &c. that they are prudently laid aside.

SOMETIMES, when they had a young Gentleman who would be profuse, they created him Prince, and he had all his Officers, and a Court, suitable to one with that Title. At such Times most of the principal Nobility, Officers of State, &c. were splendidly entertain'd. These Sports and Feastings used to last from All-Saints Day to Candlemas, in each House; and some young Student was chosen Master of the Revels.

ALL these Inns of Court and Chancery, being not far distant from one another, make as it were an University of Lawyers, the most famous in the World, consisting of so many Persons, eminent for their sound Judgment and fine Parts, as well as, many of them, for their Births, being the Sons of Gentlemen of great Estates and Quality.

THE Fees, in old Times, from a Client to a Sergeant at Law, for Advice in his Chamber, or for Pleading in any Court of Judicature, was but 20 s. and the Fee of a Barrister 10 s. which is more than is now given in our neighbouring Nations; but, at present, in England, it is usual to give the Counsellors 10 l. or 20 l. at the Pleading of any considerable Cause; so that there are some Lawyers who gain 3000 or 4000 l. Yearly in Fees, purchase great Estates in a small Time, and are sometimes advanced to the Peerage. After the Inns of Court and Chancery, it cannot be improper to come next to

DOCTORS-COMMONS:

OR the College of Civilians in LONDON, which is situated on the West Side of St. Bennet's Hill, or on the South Side of Great-Knight-Rider-street, almost over-against the College of Herald's. This College is called Doctors-Commons, because several learned and grave Civilians reside here in a Collegiate Manner, commoning together, and is the chief Place in his Majesty's Dominions for the Practice of the Civil Law; and all Persons who have Business relating to that, or to the Ecclesiastical Laws, or have Occasion to consult with learned Men in that Faculty, may repair hither, where their several Chambers, Apartments, and Offices are.

HERE is also a spacious Room for a Library, replenished with a great Number of Books of all Sorts, but especially of History, and of that Faculty, given by divers of this College: And among the rest, the whole Library of Sir John Gibson, Knight, some Time Chancellor to Archbishop Grindal; and his two Successors of York, and Judge of the Prerogative-Office, Ancestor to James Gibson, Esq; the late Town-Clerk, who bestowed it. This Library is, and will be, in a growing Condition, every Archbishop and Bishop, at their Confirmations, presenting 20 l. or more, to the said Society, to buy Books: The last Archbishop of Canterbury gave 50 l. for that Use.

As to the original Foundation of this Place, Dr. Henry Harvey, Doctor of the Civil and Canon Law, and Master of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge, Prebendary of Ely, and Dean of the Arches, a learned and good Man, purchased and provided this House for the Civilians and Canonists to dwell in, being then an old Stone Building belonging to St. Paul's Church, but let out. Before which Time they lodged in Pater-Noster-Row, in a meaner and less House; afterwards, and still, a Tavern, known by the Sign of the Queen's Head; which had some Time been a House for a Residentiary of St. Paul's.

THE Causes whereof the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law take Cognizance, are, Blasphemy, Apostacy from Christianity, Heresy, Schism, Ordinations, Institutions of Clerks to Benefices, Celebration of Divine Service, Matrimony, Divorces, Bastardy, Tythes, Oblations, Obventions, Mortuaries, Dilapidations, Reparation of Churches, Probate of Wills, Administrations, Simony, Incests, Fornications, Adulteries, Solicitation of Chastity, Pensions, Procurations, Commutation of Penance, Right of Pews, and other such like Matters.

Causes belonging to the Civil Law.

THE Courts belonging to the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law are divers.

Courts:

I. The Court of Arches; which is the highest Court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Judge of which is called, the Dean of the Arches, and the Jurisdiction of this Judge extends thro' the whole Province of Canterbury; and upon any Appeal, he forthwith sends out his Citation to the Judge and Appellee. To his Office of Dean of the Arches, or Official of this Court, is joined a peculiar Jurisdiction of thirteen Parishes in LONDON, termed a Deanary belonging to the Archbishop, and exempt from the Authority of the Bishop of the Diocese of LONDON. This Court was formerly kept in Bow-Church in Cheapside; and the Church and Tower thereof being arched, the Court was from thence called the Arches, and is so still. Besides the Judge afore-mentioned, this Court hath a Register, or Examiner, an Actuary, a Beadle or Crier, and an Apparitor, besides Advocates, and Procurators, or Proctors.

Court of Arches.

IN the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Whitgift being Archbishop of Canterbury, and Dr. Cofins Dean of the Arches, a Paper was drawn up by Order, wherein it was written, That there should be, as by antient Usage and Custom, Time out of Mind, but twelve Doctors of Law admitted, who were called Advocates, to Plead; and ten Proctors, to be as Attornies; tho' there were then treble the Number. These, after they are once admitted by Warrant and Commission, directed from the Archbishop, and by the Dean of the Arches, may then exercise as Advocates and Proctors there, and in any other Court.

Court of Audience.

II. The Court of Audience. This was also a Court of the Archbishop's, which he used to hold in his own House, where he received Causes, Complaints, and Appeals, and had learned Civilians living with him, who were Auditors of the said Causes, before the Archbishop gave Sentence. This Court was kept in later Times in St. Paul's. The Judge of this Court was stiled, Causarum, Negotiorumque Cantuarien. Auditor Officialis. It had also other Officers as the other Courts.

THERE were antiently Complaints made of this Court, once in the Reign of King Henry VIII. on Account of the Troubles and Inconveniences it caused both to the Clergy and Laity, Men being forced up to LONDON, oftentimes from the remotest Parts, for a slanderous Word, or any trifling Thing: And therefore there was a Convocation that took Notice of this Court, and made Complaint of it to that King, and urged, That the Archbishop's Court of the Arches, kept at LONDON, besides his other Courts kept within his own Diocese, was sufficient, being authorized to hear and determine all Causes and Complaints appertaining to a Metropolitan. It was also complained of in regard to the Place where it was kept; namely, in LONDON, within the Church and Jurisdiction of another Bishop: But this Stir seemed partly to be moved out of an Ill-will in the Po-pish Clergy towards Cranmer, who was then Archbishop. They suggested also, That the Archbishop kept his Court, as he was Legate of the See of Rome, inasmuch as no Archbishop within Christendom, ever had any Authority to keep any such Court, but only Legates of the See of Rome: And that therefore if the King thought fit to continue the Use of it, it would be advisable he should give it to somebody else, by Special Commission from himself, and at his Pleasure. Whereupon the Archbishop was fain to enter his Protest, That he kept not his Audience Court by Virtue of his Title of Legatus ratus; and pleaded, That the Parliament had confirmed the former Privileges of the Archbishops of Canterbury, whereof this Court was one. And so this Court continued long after: But after the Civil Wars under King Charles I. it was disused.

Prerogative Court.

III. The next Court for Civil Causes belonging to the Archbishop, is the Prerogative Court, wherein Wills and Testaments are proved, and all Administrations taken, which belongs to the Archbishop by his Prerogative; that is, by a Special Pre-eminence, that this See hath in certain Causes above ordinary Bishops within his Province: This takes Place where the Deceased hath Goods to the Value of Five Pounds out of the Diocese; and being of the Diocese of LONDON, to the Value of Ten Pounds. If any Contentions grow, touching any such Wills or Administrations, the Causes are debated and decided in this Court.

To this Court belongs a Judge, who is stiled, Judex Curie Prerogative Cantuariensis, and a Register, who hath convenient Rooms in his Office, for the disposing and laying up safe all original Wills and Testaments; and whither any may have Recourse, that have Occasion to search such Wills: And for a Shilling may read any one of them over; and for other moderate Prices, at so much a Sheet, may have the whole, or some Part of any of them, transcribed and copied for his Use. This Register also hath his Deputy, besides several Clerks.

THIS Prerogative Office is now kept in the Dean of St. Paul's Court.

To these add, Fourthly, The Court of Faculties and Dispensations; whereby a Privilege, The Faculty Court. or Special Power is granted to a Person by Favour and Indulgence, to do that which by Law otherwise he could not; as, To eat Flesh upon Days prohibited; To marry, without Banns first asked in the Church three several Sundays, or Holydays; the Son to succeed his Father in his Benefice; For one to have two or more Benefices incompatible; For Non-Residence; and in other such like Cases.

THIS Authority was given to the Archbishop by the Statute of 25 Henry VIII. Cap. 21. And the Chief Officer of this Court is called Magister ad Facultates.

THERE is a Register also belonging to this Court.

IN these Dispensations the Archbishops have always used to be very tender, and to refuse many that come for them, unless upon very good Reasons and Considerations.

BESIDES these Courts peculiarly pertaining to the Archbishop of Canterbury, there is,

Fifthly, The Court of Admiralty, which was Court of Admiralty. erected in Edward III's Time. This Court belongs to the Lord High Admiral of England, who hath the Government of the King's Navy, and the Hearing of all Causes relating to Merchants and Mariners. He takes Cognizance of the Death or Maim of any Man, committed in the great Ships riding in great Rivers, beneath the Bridges of the same next the Sea. Also, he hath Power to arrest Ships in great Streams, for the Use of the King, or his Wars. And in these Things this Court is concerned.

THE Judge of this Court must be a Civilian; and his Title is, Supremæ Curie Admiralitatis Angliæ Locumtenens Judex. The other Officers of this Court, are, a Register, and a Marshal, who carrieth a Silver Oar before the Judge; besides an Advocate, and Proctor of the Admirals.

THE Judge, Clerk, and Sergeant of this Court, used to have the Goods and Chattels of all attainted for Pyracies for their Trouble in keeping of Sessions: But about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign the Lord Admiral pass'd all his Interest in the Goods of Traitors and Pyrates to that Queen.

Dr. David Lewis was Judge of the Admiralty in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Anno 1573, and in the Year 1580, that Office decaying much, he made a Complaint to the Lord Treasurer, shewing him by what Means it came into so low a Condition, which was in these Words:

"First, There is no standing Fee incident to the same. The Commodities thereof do grow only by the Great and Little Seals, and by such Instruments and Decrees that do pass in Causes depending there. The Judge, Clerk, and Sergeant, were wont to have the Goods and Chattels of all attainted for Pyracies, for their Travail in keeping of Sessions: Which they have not now, by reason that the Lord Admiral hath of late passed all his Interest in the Goods of Traitors and Pyrates, in her Majesty.

“ THE Cafes that are treated of in the Court
 “ of Admiralty do proceed only of Things done
 “ upon, and beyond the Seas ; and yet the Judge “ cannot enjoy the fame, by reason of Prohibi- “ tions out of her Majesty’s Bench, denied to “ none that will sue for them. By reason where“ of, and that the Suitors of the Court of the “ Admiralty be many Times vexed with Actions “ upon the Cafe, for suing their Merchants and “ Mariners, be so terrified, as they have for“ faken the Court of Admiralty ; and do now
 “ sue for Things done beyond and upon the Sea,
 “ at the Common Law, in her Majesty’s Bench,
 “ and in the Guildhall, LONDON : And the “ fame are maintained there, by furnishing the “ Matters to be transacted in some Place upon
 “ the Land ; where in Truth the fame was “ done beyond and upon the Sea : And there “ may no Traverse be admitted touching the “ Place.

“ Finally, The Company of Merchants trading
 “ in Spain and Portugal, have of late obtained “ Privilege of her Majesty, under the Great “ Seal, not only to make Laws and Ordinances,
 “ but also to hear and determine all Quarrels, “ Suits and Strifes happening between any of “ the said Company, or between any of them
 “ and any other, tho’ he or they be not of their “ Company ; and to punish such, as will not “ obey them therein, by Imprisonment. Where-
 “ by the Judge of the Admiralty shall not here“ after have to do with any Matter happening “ between the said Merchants, either upon, or “ beyond the Sea. Whereas before, the Court “ of Admiralty stood chiefly by such Causes as “ grew in Spain and in Portugal : And now the “ fame being transferred to the Knowledge of “ Merchants, the Court of Admiralty is brought “ to utter Ruin ; so that the fame is not worth
 “ the keeping.

THE said Dr. Lewis, in the said Year 1580, gave this Account of himself : That he had served in that Court of Admiralty then Twenty-two Years ; and before that, was an Advocate about eleven Years, having withal the Officialty of Surrey. That he continued an Advocate after he became Judge, five or six Years, so as to make a competent Living thereby : But afterwards when Sir William Peter and Dr. Wotton began to withdraw themselves from this Court, the said
 Judge was driven to give such Attendance there, that he was forced to forego both his Officialty and Advocateship. And yet, so long as he enjoyed his Office of Admiralty whole, and without Impair, he took this Hindrance in good Part, in Hopes of Recompence some other Way : And hereupon he grounded his Complaint.

THIS Court, in antient Times, was kept at St. Margaret’s-Hill in Southwark, but is now held in the Hall in Doctors-Commons, where the other Civil Courts are kept ; only upon the Trial of Pyrates, and Crimes committed at Sea, the Court often sits at the Sessions-House in the Old-Bailey.

THE next is the Court of Delegates ; to which High Court Appeals do lie from any of the former Courts. This is the highest Court for Civil Causes. It was established by an Act in the 25th of Henry VIII. Cap. 19. wherein it was enacted, “ That it should be lawful, for Lack of “ Justice, at or in any of the Archbishops Courts,
 “ for the Parties grieved to appeal to the King’s “ Majesty in his Court of Chancery. And that “ upon every such Appeal, a Commission under
 “ the Great Seal should be directed to such “ Persons as should be named by the King’s “ Highness, like as in Case of Appeals from “ the Admiralty Court, to determine such Ap“ peals, and the Causes concerning the fame,

“ and no farther Appeals to be had or made
 “ from the said Commissioners for the same.”

THESE Commissioners are appointed Judges only for that Time, and are commonly of the Spirituality, as Bishops ; of the Common Law, as Judges of Westminster-Hall ; as well as those of the Civil Law ; and these are mixed one with another according to the Nature of the Cause.

THIS Commission of Appeal may be granted in three Cafes. I. When any Sentence is given in any Ecclesiastical Cause by the Archbishop, or his Official. II. When any Sentence is given in any Ecclesiastical Cause in Places exempt. III. When Sentence is given in the Admiralty in Suits Civil and Marine.

A Commission of Review is sometimes granted by the King, under the Broad Seal, to consider and judge again, what was decreed in the Court of Delegates : But this is seldom, and upon great, and, such as shall be judged, just Causes, by the Lord Keeper. This is done purely by the King’s Prerogative ; since by the Act for Delegates no farther Appeals were to be had or made from those Commissioners.

THIS Court is called the Delegates, because delegated, or appointed, by the King’s Commission.

THE Practisers in the Courts aforesaid are,
 Advocates and Proctors.

ADVOCATES are such as have taken their Degree of Doctor in the Faculty of the Civil Law ; or (when this Kingdom submitted to the Papal See) of the Canon Law, or of the Decrees ; that is, Canons and Decrees made and enjoined by Popes. These are retained as Counsellors or Pleaders. And they must first, upon their Petitions to the Archbishop, have his Fiat, and then they are admitted by the Judge to practise.

THE Manner of their Admission is solemn.
 Two Senior Advocates in their Scarlet Robes with the Mace carried before them, conduct the Doctor up the Court with three low Reverences, and present him with a short Latin Speech, together with the Archbishop’s Rescript : And then having taken the Oaths, the Judge admits him, and assigns him a Place or Seat in the Court ;
 which he is to keep when he pleads.

THE Habits they use in Court, both Judges and Advocates, are a Scarlet Robe, and a Hood lined with Taffata, if they be of Oxford ; if of Cambridge, white Miniver, and round Caps of black Velvet.

PROCTORS, or Procurators, the other Sort of Practisers, are they who exhibit their Proxies for their Clients, and make themselves Parties for them, who draw and give Pleas, or Libels and Allegations in Behalf of their Client, produce Witnesses, prepare Causes for Sentence, and attend the Advocates with the Proceedings.
 They are admitted also by the Archbishop’s Fiat ;
 introduced by two Senior Proctors ; they wear black Robes, and Hoods lined with white Fur.

IN Henry the VIIIth’s Time, the Number of the Proctors was found a Grievance : And that they were so clamorous by reason of the Plenty of them, that neither Judges nor Advocates could be heard ; that they retained and concluded Causes oftentimes without the Advocates, and thrust themselves into Causes without the Knowledge or Will of the Parties. In order to the reducing these Evils, Archbishop Cran- mer (that great and ever memorable Reformer of Abuses) thought good to begin with restraining the Number of them. And whereas they were about twenty in the Court of Arches, and twenty-four more, he made an Order that thenceforth there should be no more admitted till the Number was reduced to Ten ; and then that Number never to be increased. And this was confirmed confirmed by the Chapter and Convent of Christ-Church, Canterbury. Though some looked upon this as a Craft of the Proctors of that Time, that all others being excluded from being Proctors, they might have all the Business of the Arches in their own Hands: But this Order gave Offence to many, and a Petition was drawn up against it and presented to the Parliament. Therein they shewed how prejudicial this would be to the Commonwealth, because the Number of ten Persons was not sufficient to dispatch the Causes that came into that Court; and so there must be Delays and prolix Suits; and that it was a great Discouragement to young Men in studying the Law; and contrary to the Canon and Civil Law, that permits any Man to be Proctor for another, a few excepted. Thus much for those Practitioners, the Proctors.

The Times of Sitting.

THE Terms for the pleading and ending of Causes in these Civil Courts, are little different from the Term-times of the Common Law. The Order as to the Time of the Sitting of these Courts is thus: The Sitting of the Court of Arches hath the Pre-eminence of Sitting first, according to the Quality of that Court, and regulates the Sittings of the others. The Sitting of the Court of Audience is the next Morning after the Sitting of the Court of Arches. The Prerogative Court sits in the Afternoon, as the Audience set in the Morning. The Court of the Admiralty is held on the same Day with the Arches, but in the Afternoon.

THIS College was consumed by the general Devastation that happened by Fire to the City, Anno 1666: And then Exeter-House, in the Strand, was employed for the same Use, where the Civilians had their Chambers, and Offices; and the Courts were kept in the Hall: But after some Years the Commons being rebuilt far more conveniently, and more sumptuously than before, the Civilians removed thither again.

FOR the Relief of the Subjects, in case of any hard Dealings feared from Civil or Ecclesiastick Laws, the Lords Chief Justices may stop Proceedings in these Courts, and call the Matters in Controversy to be heard before them, by a Writ of Prohibition; which lies of one that is impleaded in the Court Christian for a Cause that belongeth to the Temporal Jurisdiction; whereby, as well the Party and his Counsel, as the Judge himself and the Register, are forbidden to proceed any further in that Cause. The Law Books shew the Causes for which this Prohibition lies. Bracton saith, It lies not after a Sentence given in any Cause.

BUT these Prohibitions were so frequently granted, and in Causes that seemed properly Ecclesiastical, that the Civilians and Ecclesiasticks have sometimes made great Complaints of them, as exceeding injurious to their Practice, and vexations to the Subject; and also seeming to derogate from the supreme Authority, in taking away Causes from the High Commission and Delegates, which acted by a Special Commission from the Prince.

THUS in the Year 1573, under Archbishop Parker, the Judge of the Admiralty being Dr. David Lewis, the Lord Chief Justice had very often granted Prohibitions out of the Court of King's-Bench to this Court, almost to the Ruin of it: Whereupon in the Year aforesaid the Lord Admiral used sharp Speeches to him for it; and warned Dr. Lewis, that when such Prohibitions should be granted again, to spare to move the Lord Chief Justice, but to make the Lord Treasurer acquainted with it. Accordingly, when another Prohibition was granted the same Year, Dr. Lewis wrote of it to the Lord Treasurer, signifying what just Cause of Grief he had, by reason of a Prohibition granted the Day before, in a Cause which he had described in a Paper inclosed: And that this, and one more before, were two such Precedents, that if they took Place, in a short Time would utterly overthrow the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty: That he was therefore forced to crave his Lordship's Favour, to be a Means to the Lord Chief Justice and his Colleagues to stop the same: For if these Prohibitions were not prevented, he should not be able to shew his Face in that Court any more; these Prohibitions tending so much to his Discredit, and the utter Ruin and Subversion of the Jurisdiction of the Admiralty.

IN the Year 1580, under Grindal the next Archbishop, Dr. Lewis complained again to the Lord Treasurer of the Decay of his Office, and drew up the present mean State of the Judge and Court of Admiralty. He shewed how the Causes which were treated of in this Court, proceeded only of Things done upon and beyond the Seas; and yet the Judge could not enjoy the same, by reason of Prohibitions out of her Majesty's Bench; denied to none that would sue for them. By reason whereof, and that the Suitors to this Court were many Times vexed with Actions upon the Case for suing there, Merchants and Mariners were so terrified, that they forsook the Court of Admiralty, and sued for Things done beyond and upon the Sea, at the Common Law, in her Majesty's Bench, and in the Guild-Hall of LONDON: And the same were maintained there by surmising the Matters to be contracted in some Place upon the Land, where, in Truth, the same was done beyond and upon the Sea; and there might no Traverse be admitted touching the Place.

AND these Prohibitions were grievous to the other Courts as well as this; and chiefly the Ecclesiastical.

AGAIN, about the Year 1598, under Archbishop Whitgift, these Prohibitions lay heavy upon the Civil Courts; and then a notable Paper was drawn up for the Consideration of the Queen or the Parliament, entitled, Certain Collections and Inferences concerning Matter of Prohibitions and Consultations: Not unfit to be thought upon for the better Preservation of her Majesty's Jurisdiction Ecclesiastical; which were these, viz.

I. SINCE by the Laws and Institutes of this Realm, the Libel is appointed as a Rule for the granting of Prohibitions and Consultations, How can a Prohibition duly be granted, either before the Libel is exhibited in the Ecclesiastical Court, or without Sight and diligent Perusal thereof, or upon any other Matter or Suggestion that may be probably gathered out of the same?

II. WHERE the Cause originally is undoubtedly of Ecclesiastical Cognizance, Why should any Prohibition be granted (as almost all be) upon any Matter pleaded at Bar, or by Way of Exception, tho' merely Temporal; the Law itself, and common Reason being plain and evident to the contrary? For, such Matter incident comes not there to be finally sentenced and determined; but it is used as a Means and Furtherance for the Decision of his Principal: And supposing the Law were otherwise, then might either Party at their Pleasure, by pleading some Matter Temporal, make any Cause Ecclesiastical whatsoever, subject to a Prohibition.

III. SINCE the Prohibition once granted, (though never so unduly) must needs bring with it a Delay of Justice, intolerable Expences, and many great Inconveniencies to the Party prohibited, Why are Prohibitions so usually granted, without calling or hearing both Parties, and the Judge Ecclesiastical also (si sua putaverit interesse) contrary to the common Rules of Justice in all Causes, especially in Matters of so great Prejudice?

IV. Can

IV. Can it be thought expedient, or reasonable, that the Plaintiff, making Choice of the Court Christian for his Relief, should afterwards in the same Cause, be suffered to procure a Prohibition? Were it not sound Discretion and Policy, to cut off such wilful, malicious Vexation of a Subject, and publick Scandal to Justice, howsoever the Law be defective and silent in that Behalf?

V. To sue for a Prohibition not till after Conclusion in the Cause, is very preposterous and inconvenient: But after Sentence given, in Bracton's Opinion, is altogether unlawful; much more after two or three Instances, and as many Sentences past: And yet in all these Cases Prohibitions are common and ordinary.

VI. What Law or Reason can be pretended, why the Judge Ecclesiastical, after Consultation delivered unto him, may not condemn the Party who brings the Prohibition, in Expensis retardati processus, in Case the Judges shall refuse, as oftentimes they do, to assess double Cost and Damage, according to the Statute, or in any other Case whatsoever, wherein the Judges can, or will allow no Charges at all?

VII. If in the Prohibition directed to the Ecclesiastical Judge, the Suggestions appeared notably false, vain, or frivolous, as in some of the late hath been seen; Why may not the Temporal Judge, in that Case, justly be presumed, wittingly and willingly, to infringe the Liberties of the Church; and thereupon, after due Circumstances observed, be declared and denounced Excommunicate, according to the Statute in that Behalf established?

VIII. Is there either Warrant, or Colour of Law, that any Prohibition should be grounded upon any of these Surmises; viz. That Matters Testamentary and Matrimonial only be Ecclesiastical; or that the Law Civil requireth two Witnesses, where the Common Law accepteth of one? Seeing by the first Suggestion, divers and sundry Causes undoubtedly known, and confessed to be of Ecclesiastical Cognizance, are falsely supposed to be of Temporal Jurisdiction; and by the second, unlearnedly misconceived, no Cause so purely Spiritual, but must be determined at the Common Law?

IX. Were it not very convenient and necessary, considering the very long, tedious, and chargeable Suits in obtaining Consultations, together with the manifold Difficulties which accompany such unwelcome Motions, that the Temporal Judges would be pleased, for Relief of poor Subjects, within some reasonable and competent Time to determine the Questions depending before them, as touching Consultations; and that hereafter the Spiritual Courts be not kept in Suspense for two, three, or fours Years, as often it hath been; before the Consultations can be procured, notwithstanding the best and uttermost Endeavours of the Defendant, and the manifold Justice of this Demand?

X. It seemeth by the Scope and Purport of all the most antient Statutes in that Behalf provided, that the Prohibition and Consultations, as other original Writs, ought not to be granted but in the Court of Chancery, by the Lord Chancellor of England; and howsoever of late Years the Course hath been drawn another Way, yet no doubt the Power of the Chancellor is no whit thereby restrained, but that he may lawfully (and it were to be wished he would) resume and put in Execution his antient Right and Authority: So should not her Majesty's Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction be driven as now it is, to admit the Censure and Judgment of those, who indeed be principal Parties, as touching the Question of Prohibitions.

XI. What Cause or Grievance soever, cannot be redressed by any Writ but of the Chancery, there the Statute expressly forbiddeth the King's Prohibition to take Place; but it is manifest and notorious, that most of the Prohibitions now-a-days, or rather all, be granted in Stay of such Complaints, as wherein neither by any Writ out of the Chancery, nor any other Course of Proceeding at the Common Law, the Subject can receive sound Justice, or final Censure.

XII. Can it be warranted, either by Law or Statute, that after Consultation once granted in the King's-Bench, a second Prohibition should be granted out of the Common-Pleas in the same Cause, the Matter not being augmented, enlarged, nor otherwise altered. And yet howsoever the Statute be plain and evident to the contrary, divers such Prohibitions have been of late obtained.

XIII. If such Care and Consideration had been taken in the Granting of Prohibitions, as were fit and necessary in Causes of such great Moment, the Judges Temporal would never have granted so many Consultations as have been granted within the Compass of three or four Years.

XIV. Forasmuch as both the Jurisdiction Ecclesiastical and Temporal, are now united in the Crown of the Realm, which was heretofore de facto severed, and derived from several Heads and Authorities; and for that the Ground and true Original Cause of Prohibitions was none other than the aforesaid Severance and Partitions of Jurisdictions, May it not be very probably drawn into Question, Whether, as the Case now standeth, any Prohibition at all, may, in sound Construction of Law be warranted; at least, how the Form and Manner of Prohibitions heretofore used, may not, without Offence and Derogation to the Queen's Prerogative Ecclesiastical, be retained and practised, as though the two Jurisdictions remained now distinct, and as several as before; and as though her Majesty's Jurisdiction Ecclesiastical may not, with as little Prejudice to the Crown, encroach upon the Temporal, as the Temporal may upon the Ecclesiastical?

XV. But in Case the Prohibition, by Force of so many Years, Use, and Custom, may not now conveniently be discontinued, either in Matter or Manner, yet, in true Sense and Meaning of Law, What Reason can be devised, why the Prohibition should be extended to the Restraint of her Majesty's High Commission, or Court of Delegates, both of them being authorized under the Great Seal of England, and established by Act of Parliament; and neither of them so much as thought upon, for divers hundred Years after the Prohibition was current in England, neither by colour of any Argument or Similitude that can be drawn to the Case of ordinary Jurisdiction, either as then it was, or now it is used?

XVI. And for that her Majesty's Delegates have no general Commission, ad Universitatem Causarum, but for every several Cause of Appeal, receive a special and particular Commission, it may seem somewhat strange and extraordinary, that any Subjects should presume to countermand her Majesty's express Command, and to forbid the Judges Delegates to proceed any further in any one Cause, which her Majesty hath especially and particularly commanded them to hear and determine.

As, under three Archbishops, through the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, these Prohibitions were not at all liked by the Civilians; so in the Reign of King James I. under Archbishop Bancroft, in the Year 1606, the Convocation then met, and stirred in it, praying some Redress, by a Petition of the Lower House to the King, to this Purpose:

The Convocation petition
King James I.
about Prohibitions.

" Most humbly beseeching your most Excellent Majesty, your faithful Subjects, the " Clergy of the Lower House of Convocation,
" for themselves and the rest of the Brethren in
" the Ministry: That whereas they have been " very much of later Years defrauded of their " Tithes, and debarred from obtaining their " Right, due unto them, by your excellent Laws
" of this Church, through Prohibitions procured
" by those which wrong them, out of your Ma" jesty's Temporal Courts, to your Suppliants
" great Hindrance, Molestation, and utter Im-
" poverishing in Time, if Remedy be not pro" vided; beside the Stopping of Justice, Occa" sion of Perjury, and further Wrong, and Over" throw of your Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, as " though it were an unjust Usurpation of foreign " Power against your Majesty and Crown; and " not to do Execution of your Majesty's own
" rightful Power and Jurisdiction in Causes Ec" clesiastical: It may please your most Excellent Majesty, upon due Notice given, and
" in tender Consideration of our Grievances
" herein, to take some speedy Order for the " Help and Relief of the same, in such Man" ner as to your Highness's Wisdom, Piety,
" and Clemency, shall seem just, fit, and
" convenient; and your Majesty's Suppliants " shall evermore, as they are bound, with all " due Thankfulness, pray unto God for your " Majesty's long and happy Life, and prosperous " Reign, &c.

The COLLEGE of HERALDS.

THIS College, or Corporation, consists of a certain Number of Persons skilled in Coat Armour: Their Business being to grant Arms to Persons of Wealth and Merit; to register Descents and Pedigrees at their Visitations or otherwise; to regulate Abuses in such as bear Arms, not belonging to them; and they are made Use of in Affairs of State for Proclaiming Peace or War. They are to attend at Feasts of Kings or Princes, at Cavalcades, Coronations, Funerals, &c. of Kings, Queens, and Persons of Quality: At which Times they are to be in their Heralds Coats. The Office of Arms.

THIS College is situated near Doctors-Commons, between St. Bennet's Hill, and St. Peter's Hill, and was the antient House of Thomas Stanley, Earl of Derby, given to this Society by Queen Mary, that they might reside together for the better Consulting the Affairs of the Office, and for Keeping their Books of Arms, Descents, &c. in an Office together. Since the Fire of LONDON, Anno 1666, which consumed the whole House, it is well and conveniently rebuilt, with a large Hall for Keeping the Court of Honour; together with a Library, and Houses and Apartments for the King's Heralds and Pursuivants.

By their Charter, first granted them by King Richard III. and after by succeeding Kings, they had several Privileges allowed them, and are freed from all Tolls, Subsidies, and Offices of Trouble in the Kingdom. Their Privileges.

THEIR Society consists of four Kings at Arms, eight Heralds, and four Pursuivants at Arms, who are as follow;

FIRST, Garter King at Arms, instituted by King Henry V. whose Office is to attend at the Solemnities of the Knights of the Garter, and to cause their Arms to be hung up upon their Seats or Stalls after their Instalment; to carry, or cause to be carried, the Garter to Kings and Princes beyond Sea, that are elected of this Order.

der; to take Cognizance of the Arms of the Nobility; to make Supporters to those new created to any Degree of Peerage, and to marshal the Solemnities at the Funerals of the Nobility.

ANTIENTLY, this, as also the other Kings at Arms, were created and crowned by the Kings themselves, and the Heralds and Pursuivants had their Creation from the King's Hand: But of late Days, the Earl Marshal, who is Head of this College, hath a special Commission for every particular Creation, and to perform the same, as the Kings formerly did.

THE Ceremony used at his Creation and Crowning is this: There is a Sword and a Book provided, whercon he takes an Oath, to obey, first, the supreme Head of the Order of the Garter, which is the King, in such Things, as belong to his Office; to give Notice to the King, upon the Death of any of the said Order; and to instruct the Heralds and Pursuivants in Doubts relating to the Office; which said Oath is thus administered: He kneels down before the Earl Marshal, and laying his Hand on the Book and Sword, he takes the aforesaid Oath, which is read to him by one of the other Kings at Arms: Then the Letters Patent are read, during which Time, the Earl Marshal pours Wine out of a Bowl on his Head, and gives him the Name of Garter; and then he is invested with his Coat, which is of Velvet, richly embroidered with the Arms of England, &c. also with a Collar of SS and a gilt Crown on his Head.

HIS Salary is double to what the other Kings have; and he hath Fees at the Instalments, with a yearly Allowance, given by the Knights of the Garter; and hath their uppermost Garment at their Instalment.

CLARENCIEUX is the next of the Kings, so called from the Duke of Clarence, to whom he first belonged: For, Lionel, third Son to King Edward III. married the Daughter and Heir of the Earl of Ulster, in Ireland, and had with her the Honour of Clare, in the County of Thomond; whereupon he was afterwards Duke of Clarence, which Dukedom escheating to King Edward IV. he made this Herald a King at Arms, and stiled him Clarencieux. His Office is to marshal and dispose of the Funerals of the Gentry under the Degree of a Baron, on the South Side of the River Trent, that shall have any publick Ceremony made at their Interments. He is also to keep his Visitations within his Limits, for the Registering of Families, taking Account of Coat Armour.

NORROY is another King; his Office is the same of that of Clarencieux, for the Gentry on the North Side of the said River Trent; and these two are called Provincial Heralds, the whole Kingdom being divided into two Provinces betwixt them: Another was added to the Number, in the late King's Reign, called Glocester King of Arms, and Hanover Herald.

THE eight Heralds are, 1. Somerset, 2. Richmond, 3. Chester, 4. Windsor, 5. York, 6. Lancaster, 7. Bath, 8. Brunswick. The Office of these Heralds is to wait at Court; to proclaim Peace and War: On the Death of the King or Queen to proclaim the next to the Crown, and to attend at publick Solemnities, &c.

THE four Pursuivants are, Portcullis, Rouge Dragon, Blue Mantle, and Rouge Cross. These give their Attendance also in the Office for the aforesaid Matters.

A Herald is created with the like Ceremonies as the Kings, except a Coronet; and his Coat must be of Sattin, embroider'd with the King's Arms, as aforesaid. He is brought before the Earl Marshal, betwixt two other Heralds: Their Oath is, "To be true to the King; serviceable to Gentlemen; to keep Secrets; to assist the distressed Gentlemen, and Gentlewomen, Widows, and Virgins; to avoid Taverns, Bawdy-Houses, and Dice.

THE Pursuivant is also created by Letters Patents: His Coat is to be of Damask, with the King's Arms embroider'd. He is to be introduced by two other Pursuivants. His Oath is, "To be true to the King; serviceable to all Christians; to keep Secrets; to be sober, lowly and humble.

The MEMBERS of this COLLEGE are;

THE Earl Marshal and Hereditary Marshal of England, His Grace, Edward Duke of Norfolk.

THE Deputy Earl Marshal of England (appointed by the King) and the Officers under his Jurisdiction.

THE Right Honourable Francis Howard, Earl of Effingham, Deputy Earl Marshal of England.

PROCTORS to the Earl Marshal's COURT.

Mr. William Jones.

Mr. Edward Alexander.

Mr. Mark Holman, Register.

Mr. Thomas Housman, Marshal of the Court.

Mr. John Phillips.

THESE being all the King's Servants in Ordinary; have yearly Salaries. The Heralds, 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* each; the Pursuivants, 20*l.* each.

IN the Reign of King Richard III. their Fees granted by that King, were to John Moore, King of Arms in the North Parts, 20*l.* for Term of Life. To John Water, alias York Herald, the Lordship of Bayhal, to the Value of 100*s.* and an Annuity of 8*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* of the Revenue of Huntingfield in the County of Kent. To Thomas Holme, alias Clarencieux, King of Arms in the South Parts, 20*l.* of the Customs and Subsidy of Exeter and Dartmouth; and 20*l.* more;

more, of the Annuity of the Lordship of Walden, in the County of Essex, for Term of Life. Glocester Herald, to him, his Heirs and Assigns for ever, the Manor of Oven in Kent, with all the Lands, Tenements, &c. late Sir John Fogg's.

BESIDES these Salaries, when the Kings of England went their Progresses, they commonly took their Heralds along with them, and these then had their daily Allowances. Thus in the Year 1552, in a Progress of King Edward VI. he took along with him in his Retinue the Four Kings at Arms, reckoning in Ulster for the Fourth, Somerset Herald, Rouge Dragon, and Blue Mantle, Pursuivants; and appointed Allowances to them for their Diet, from July the 5th, to the 7th of October, (which was the Time of the King's Progress) viz. to Garter 10s. by the Day, to the three other Kings, 6s. 8d. per Diem, to Somerset, 4s. and to the two Pursuivants, 2s. each.

THE Usefulness of this College appears, in that it is an Office Conservatory of antient Honour, and of the Memory of Persons of Nobility, and Merit, either for their Learning, Ecclesiastical Preferments, Exploits in War, Service to the Commonwealth, Wisdom in Government, Favour with their Princes, or the like; together with their Pedigrees and Posterities, in whatsoever County in England they have lived. It is also highly useful, for the ascertaining many Doubts relating to Names and Families, and putting a Conclusion to Contentions in Law about Right Heirs, Legitimacy, Primogeniture, &c.

And as the Office is Honourable, and of great Import, so none are to be admitted to it, but Persons learned, and of ingenious Education, and studious of Heraldry, and able to trick Coats of Arms, and to paint, as may appear by the Suit of Anthony Hall, Anno 1593, to the Lord Treasurer, who acted then in the Earl Marshal's Office, by a Special Commission from the Queen; that his Son Anthony Hall, might be admitted a Pursuivant at Arms, being a Scholar bred up at Cambridge, in Emanuel College, and since professing the Law at Bernard's-Inn, and by the Lord Anderson's Gift, Clerk in the Prothonotary's Office in the Common-Pleas, and his Inclination apt to gather Gentlemen's Coats, as well on Church Windows, Stone Walls, as on Noblemen's Tombs, whereby he had collected some 30,000, or more Coats of his own Tricking and Writing; besides a pretty Skill in Counterfeiting Pictures after the Life, or otherwise.

Sir Gilbert Dethick, Garter, Principal King of Arms under King Edward VI. was instrumental in procuring the House, College and Corporation of the Heralds, with their Privileges; for tho' Queen Mary, vulgarly, and according to Stow, hath the Praise of this Gift, yet indeed, it more truly belonged to that King. For, (as appears in a Volume of the Cotton Library) in the Year 1552, the Earl of Derby's Place was then in the Tenure of Sir Richard Sackville, Knt. when the said Place, with divers other Messuages and Hereditaments, were sold to King Edward by an Indenture bearing Date November the 24th, Anno Regni 6. For which the King in Exchange, made over to the Earl certain Lands, called Leonard's Lands, joining to the Earl's Park, called Knowsley Park, in the County of Lancaster, and lately belonging to the Monastery of Briscoe, of the Yearly Value of 20s. with other Lands, &c. to the Yearly Value of 4l. 10s. and a Mese and a Grange, called Badley Grange, of the Value of 42s. per Annum in Ghesbire. All which amounted to the Value of 7l. 12s. The Date hereof was January the 24th. This Gift, very probably was confirmed by Queen Mary, King Edward's Successor.

BUT tho' the Heralds had now a College, or General Office, yet for some Time after they had not the Conveniences of Habitations here, to dwell together, but lived at their own private Houses, where they could provide themselves; whereby they kept their Visitation-Books at Home; for so Leigh's Words import, in his Accidents of Armoury, speaking how far the Heralds were sometimes to seek, when the Gentlemen of antient Blood came to see their Pedigrees; because they had no separate House where they might plant their Offices, and in that Place to make their Libraries for their Provinces. For as they were all now here, now there; so when they died, their Wives sold for a little Money their Books of Visitation, which cost them much Travail.

THIS Office for preserving of Honour was antient. For, when in the 28th of Henry III. Gerald Fitz Maurice (who was Justice of Ireland) died, as it seems, at Canterbury, King Henry III. (near five hundred Years ago) viz. Ann. 1244, issued out his Command to the Keepers of that Archbishoprick, Quod emi faciunt unum pulchrum Lapidem, ponend. super Corpus Geraldii Fil. Mauric. Justiciar. Hibern. In quo fieri faciant Scutum ipsius Geraldii cum Armis suis. Teste Rege apud Roff. 20 Die Novembr. i.e. That they cause to be bought a fair Stone, to be laid upon the Body of Gerald Fitz Maurice, Justice of Ireland; whereon to be set his Shield with his Arms.

AND in the Time of Edward I. Thomas Earl of Lancaster, Leicester, and Derby, and Constable of England, ordained by special Reformation, That no Man should wear any Hood on his Shoulder in Time of Mourning, except he were a Gentleman; but only a Tippet of three Nails Breadth. Also that no Parson, Curate, Churchwarden, or others, should put down any Achievement, Coat of Arms, or Pinion, or erase any Tomb out of Churches, or Church-yards: And that no Goldsmith, Coppersmith, Glazier, Painter or Marbler, should have to do with Arms, without the Consent of the Kings of Arms of that Province: And that they should not set a Merchant's Mark within an Escutcheon: And that this should be the more diligently looked to, he ordained, That all the Kings of Arms should keep their Chapters once every Quarter of the Year at least: And that they should make their Visitation in their Provinces, or their Marshals for them, every seventh Year. To conclude, He ordained the Herebaughts (i.e. Heralds) at the Interment of every Gentleman (where they were called to that Service) should take the Pedigree with diligent Examination of old Folks, then living, and to record the same.

IN former Times, the Number of the Officers that belonged to this Corporation was not fixed, the Precedency uncertain; and Contentions and Differences sprang up among them concerning their Rights and Privileges.

THERE was formerly another King of Arms, who was called Ulster, first created by King Edward VI. chiefly for the Use of Ireland; and the first that enjoyed it, was Bartholomew Butler (Anno 6 Edward VI.) York Herald. Then was made also Philip Butler, alias Athlone, Pursuivant of Arms there. And upon their Creation, a Warrant was issued to Sir Rafe Sadler, Knight of the King's Wardrobe to deliver to Bart. Butler, alias Ulster, King at Arms of Ireland, one Coat of Blue and Crimson Velvet, embroidered with Gold and Silver upon the same with the King's Arms. And to Philip Butler, alias Athlone, Pursuivant of Arms there, one Coat of Sarsenet of the King's Colour, with the Arms laid on with Gold and Purple.

THIS

THIS Place was possessed in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, by one Nicholas Narboon, who was raised from being Richmond Herald, to be Ulster King.

THERE were formerly Exeter, Leopard, Faulcon, Carlisle, &c. Heralds.

THE Pursuivants formerly were of two Ranks, Ordinary and Extraordinary; the Ordinary were the afore-mentioned; the Extraordinary were these: Faulcon, (afterwards a Herald,) Antelope, Cadran, Guifnes, Hammes, Berwick, Comfort, Roseblanch, Callis, Ricebank, Wallingford, Mountorguile, Nottingham, Barnes, Boloin: But these Extraordinary Pursuivants in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign ceased.

IN the same Reign were great Dissentions and Animosities among the Heralds concerning their Rights, Fees, and Precedencies, insomuch that they presented Petitions and Informations one against another unto the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, and the Lord Admiral, who then executed the Office of Earl Marshal; which occasioned the said Lords to make an Order, dated October 22, 1597, entitled,

The ORDER of placing the Kings, Herald, and Pursuivants at Arms, by the Lord Burleigh, Lord High Treasurer of England; and the Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England; by Force of her Majesty's Commission under the Great Seal of England, to us directed in that Behalf.

THE Controversies among these Gentlemen were on the following Account:

IT was the proper Office and Benefit of Clarencieux King of Arms, to give Arms and go in Visitations; but Dethick (who was made Garter in the 29th Year of Queen Elizabeth) claimed the same Privileges, as additional to his Office; and that by Virtue of two Commissions, one of Henry VII. and another of Henry VIII. to his Predecessors to be joined in Commission with Clarencieux; and accordingly had procured of Queen Elizabeth, her Letters Patents under her Great Seal, for the Office of Garter, with Words expressive of more Power than ever were in any Garter's Patent before, viz. To Visit, Correct, and give Arms, absolutely of himself; whereas Clarencieux and Norroy, being Provincial Kings of Arms, could not give Arms without Consent of the Earl Marshal; which was an Abuse.

BUT Cook, Clarencieux, in a Paper to the Commissioners of the Office of the Earl Marshal, shewed the true Reason of those Commissions, namely, That Roger Macado, a Briton born, was Clarencieux in Henry VII. (and so continued all that Reign) who being an old and impotent Man, and not well understanding our Language, did agree with Garter, that then was, (viz. Sir John Wrythe or Wriotbesley) to take the Office upon him, and to give Arms, and go in Visitations; for which Garter paid to Clarencieux forty Marks per Annum, which was to be paid out of the said Garter's Fee: And this appeared by the said Garter's Letters Patents; and because Garter would have some Authority of himself to shew, and also for that he thought it not for his Credit to be Deputy to Clarencieux, he procured a Bill, signed by Henry VII. wherein Garter was joined with Clarencieux.

THERE was also a second Commission, obtained by the same Garter, of King Henry VIII. to the same Import with the former, empowering him to give Arms, and go in Visitation with Clarencieux that then was, viz. Thomas Benolt, who was for the most Part employed beyond the Seas, and had no Books to exercise his Office, for at that Time Garter had gotten all the Books of Office into his own Custody, by reason of his former Dealings with Macado; so that in Truth, he was driven of Necessity to agree with Garter in like Order, to execute his Office, as Macado had done: And thereupon Garter, shewing to the King the Agreement and Consent of Clarencieux, obtained of the King the said Commission, Clarencieux being then beyond the Seas: At whose Return, finding himself not well used by Garter, and that the Credit of his Office (of Clarencieux) was greatly diminished by the said Garter, would have broken off with him for dealing any farther with him; which Thing Garter would not by any Means consent unto, but stood upon the Authority of the King's Bill assigned. Benolt then was forced to acquaint the King with some of the Abuses of Garter; and among others, how he had given Arms to a Bondman: Hereupon, the King examining the Cause of Clarencieux's Grief and Complaint, and finding that Garter had wronged him, devised and granted to him a Commission, under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date the 21st of Henry VIII. wherein he did inhibit the said Garter, and all others, to deal or meddle either in giving of Arms, or going in Visitation, in the said Clarencieux's Province. Since which Time, all the Clarencieux's have had their Commissions successively one after another, and have ever since gone in Visitation, and given Arms as by the Books of Visitation and Grants of Patents, may appear.

AND, That long before those two Bills, signed by those two Kings, Clarencieux did give Arms, and go in Visitation, without Garter, by Virtue of his Office, and without any Commission, as appeared by divers Visitation and Gifts of Arms; and for these Reasons, he earnestly petitioned the Lord Burleigh and Lord Howard, to obtain of the Queen a Reverse of Garter's Patent.

THESE, and the like Matters, gave great Offence to Garter; and, to be even with Cook, Clarencieux spared not to impeach him in another Address to those Noblemen: As, concerning his Birth, being sprung of a Tanner; his Ignorance of Languages, not being able to speak French; of his dissolute Life; being Guilty of haunting Taverns, marrying another Man's Wife; Prodigality, and running into Debt; injuring the Office; in that he and Chester had spoiled the Library in the Office of Arms of more than forty or fifty Books at one Time ; that he made Multitudes of Gentlemen by himself, under the Name of Principal King of Arms ; (being but Clarencieux) that his Deputy ranged over all the Realm, giving, altering, and changing Shields of Arms, and Cognizances of Honour, to all Sorts of Men, and of all Faculties ; obtruding Arms to some, and exacting Fees exceeding the Queen's Fifteens ; and many Pedigrees were unregistred : And as his Deputy went about in sundry Shires of England, so he went about in LONDON, into all Companies and Societies, and in every Street, commanding Merchants, Mechanical Men, and Artificers before him, at sundry Taverns, and gave and allowed Arms to all manner of Persons, at all Prices, and for good Chear, contrary to all Honour ; and yet wasted all : That he had a Grant of the Queen, worth a thousand Pounds, but consumed it. He was charged also for giving the Earl of Desmond's Arms to one Captain Cheston.

OF these Matters Garter complained ; and by the Queen's Authority restrained and reformed them : But Secretary Walsingham took and detained the Queen's Letters Patents of the same, permitting this Man, and others, Garter's Enemies, to proceed in that Abuse. He petitioned then her Majesty, That a Commission might be given to examine this, to the Lord Hudson, Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Treasurer, Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, the Earl of Ormond, Sir Christopher Hatton Lord Chancellor of England, Baron Buckhurst, and Sir John Wolley, Chancellor of the Garter.

It was charged also upon this Officer, That in the Year 1571, he contrived and set out a great Pedigree, painted on Vellum, for the Duke of Norfolk, since his first Imprisonment in the Tower, for his Design of marrying with Mary Queen of Scots ; which was finished with his Arms on the Right Hand, and the Arms of that Queen on the Left, largely painted. He also set out and marshalled the Duke's Pedigree in Glass, in the Windows of the great Chamber at the Charterhouse, quartered with the Arms of the Daughter of Edward Duke of Bucks, attainted.

How much there was of Truth in these Things, it is not easily determined, for Dethick was a Man of great Pride and Passion (whereby he procured to himself many Enemies) otherwise a Man of Worth and Learning. His Father Sir Gilbert Dethick, Garter, had been in the Office sixty two Years, and he himself had been sent in her Majesty's Service of the Garter, with the Right Honourable the Lord Hudson to Lions in France, and with the Earl of Suffex to the Emperor at Vienna, and with the Lord Buckhurst to the French King, Charles.

AND as these publick Employments were for his Honour, so it must be recorded for his Commendation, That he endeavoured to redress many Things amiss in the Office and Officers, reduceable to these Articles following :

I. The Contents of their Corporation in all Points, for the Assembly, Government, Erudition, &c. in the Office of Arms, to be kept and observed.

II. Chapters General and Particular to be had and summoned.

III. The Order and Attendance for waiting at the Court in High Feasts, to be dutifully performed.

IV. The House and College of the Office of Arms to be in good Order, inhabited, and repaired.

V. The General Library in the Office and Records there, to be preserved, ratified, and augmented.

VI. The Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms, to be there at convenient Times attending, upon Pain.

VII. The Visitations made by Garter, Clarencieux, and Norroy, to be limited or appointed to the Heralds, or Pursuivants, and no other.

VIII. The Burials, or Funerals, to be orderly and duly served, and Certificates entered.

IX. All Painters, Glaziers, Goldsmiths, &c. for dealing in Arms and Pedigrees, to be inhibited.

X. Arms, Crests, Pedigrees, Searches, and all Precedents and Acts of Honour and Gentility, and all other Things, with the Consents of the three Kings of Arms, in the General Office, to be set out and registered.

XI. The Profits and Commodities faithfully collected, and generally, to such as deserve well, duly parted.

BESIDES all this, Dethick, Anno 1584, being then York Herald, propounded the setting up of an Office in the Court of Wards, for enrolling Descents and Pedigrees of every one that was Ward, or sued Livery ; for the politick Preservation of the Remembrance of Parents and Progenitors, and of the Conjunction of Blood and Kindred with good Proportion ; to preserve that Law in Magna Charta, Chap. v. and the Statutes at Marton, Capitul. vi. and vii. wherein the Disparagements for Marriages are especially forbidden. The Wards did not enjoy the Benefit of Law in that Point : So that some Preservation in Blood in the Course of that Court, might go jointly together with the Preservation of the Inheritances.

THE establishing of such an Office in the said Court of Wards, as he shewed to the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, Master of that Court, would first tend to the adorning of it, for the Honour and Renown of the Queen, tending to a more perfect Preservation of the Genealogies and Descents of her Wards, and to perpetuate the same, and most convenient for the Nobility and Gentry of her Realm. And, Secondly, It would be a good and direct Means to try and keep the Records of the Truth, against sundry Occurrences and Subtilties, contrived in Prejudice of the Minors and Heirs of the said Court.

AND whereas it might be objected, that such an Office seemed to be needless, since the Heralds in their own Office were diligent to search and register all Pedigrees : To this he answer'd, That the Heralds of Arms had been, for Time long past, Messengers of Princes, allowed for their Languages, Travel, and Experience : But as for their Dealings in Pedigrees of Nobility, they did but privately collect and observe the Marriages and Issues of Princes, Nobles, and Gentlemen, for their better Knowledge and Remembrance ; whereof they took Notice upon Sight, Relation, or slender Surmises. But this Business was intended to be committed to the Custody of one secret and sworn Officer, an Herald : And the Pedigrees, and Consanguinities to be register'd in this Court, should be grounded upon Matter of Record and Warrant, provided by Offices, Traverses, and Inquests, containing the Names of the Persons, Times, and Ages. Secondly, The Form and Manner of the Pedigrees in this Court, should contain in the Roundel or Circle of each Descent, a certain Notice of the Age, Time, Liveries, and Objt of each Person. Thirdly, This would be very grateful to the Ward in his Minority, to have so careful a Remembrance of his Pedigree ; and it would carry with it a Proof of the Deserts of Ancestors towards their Posterity : For herein some Note should should be made of the Tenure of the Lands and Manors, with this Addition, if thought proper, of Primus Acquisitor; which might affect Children with a grateful and respectful Sense of those from whom they are sprung, and from whom they derived their Estates and Honours.

Garter gives
Mr. Rotheram
Lord Grey of Ruthyn's Coat.

THIS Garter, in the Year 1595, fell into new Troubles, being cited by Earl Marshals Commissioners, for giving George Rotheram, Esq; the Coat of the Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, belonging to Henry Earl of Kent: To which by a Letter to Sir John Pickering, Lord Keeper, he answer'd, that the said Rotheram, a Year before, had requested him to take Notice, according to the Custom of his Office, of certain Records, one out of the Tower, and other Evidences, and by an antient Book, and a Monument, or Tomb-Stone, with Arms in the Church of Luyton, to set down his Pedigree, pretended from Anthony, Lord Grey of Ruthyn; which Pedigree he did exemplify for him, without any farther Approbation or Confirmation of the same, to be true; but only according to his Proofs shewn him, which he, the said Rotheram was to produce or defend by Laws, and not by his Office: And so he, the said Garter, reckoned himself to stand discharged.

Sentence against Garter in Favour of the Earl of Kent.

BUT the Complaint made by the Earl of Kent, to the Court of Earl Marshal, ran against both Garter and Rotheram: And the Sentence also was against both, which was given in Favour of the Earl in June, Anno 1597, after long Hearings at sundry Times, whereby it was adjudged, "That the said Detbick Garter, and "Rotheram had manifestly done Wrong to the Complainant, for so are the Words of the Sentence, in making and publishing that Pedigree, in a Case so long suspended without Claim, to make a Shew that the said Rotheram was descended Lineally from Catharine, a Daughter of Anthony Lord Grey of Ruthyn, who was proved before them by divers Means of good Credit to have died without Issue. And the Commissioners of the Office of Earl Marshal, Judges in this Cause, did revoke and annul the Bearing of the said Arms of the Earl of Kent, Quarterly by Rotheram, and judged them to be unlawfully borne, and determined that Part of the Pedigree, made by Garter, to be unlawfully borne, by which the said Rotheram was made the Cousin and Heir General of Edmund, Earl of Kent, by Anthony, eldest Son of the said Earl, reserving to themselves Power to tax the Costs and Expences of the Complainant against the Defendants.

It is not certain how Garter got off from this troublesome Affair; but he was afterwards Knighted, and some Time after that, in the first Year of King James I. deposed.

THE Quarrel in these Times between the two Kings, Garter and Clarencieux, in regard of their Rights and Encroachments upon each other, made the Lord Treasurer Burleigh, bethink himself of joining them both into one, that the Office might hereafter be enjoyed by one Person, Cook, Clarencieux, being now dead; but the Establishment of the Corporation by Parliament, whereby these two Kings were appointed, obstructed this Design, and other Considerations made it inconvenient: Wherefore some other Expedient was propounded for the begetting and continuing of better Agreement between these Kings; and particularly, that the Earl Marshal, in preferring Clarencieux to the room of Garter, would take Order, that his Successor in the Office of Clarencieux, might remit some Part of his Interest in Matters of Profit; then Garter might be well provided for, and the Corporation no Way altered.

Robert Cook, Clarencieux, dyed in the 37th Year of Queen Elizabeth, that is, about the Year 1593. Then the Lord Burleigh acting as Earl Marshal, knowing he had many Books of Heraldry (some whereof he had taken out of the Office violently) sent to the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs to take an Inventory of his Books; which they did, and returned a Catalogue of them. Then Detbick, Garter, propounded to the said Lord, that they might have them at a reasonable Price to the Office, being sorry, as he said, that the Mayor and Merchants of LONDON should have the Perusal of the Honourable Secrets of the Office at Arms, and have the Custody thereof, who might not arrest their Bodies, and yet keep their Records. By this Catalogue Cook seems to have been a very diligent Man in his Science; for it consisted of a vast Collection of Descents and Pedigrees of English Noblemen, Gentlemen and Strangers, Statutes of the Order of the Garter, antient Patents, Evidences, Certificates, Visitations of the Counties of Leicester, Warwick, Lincoln, the City of LONDON, Surrey, Kent, Hampshire, Suffex, and Cornwall; Cambridge, Hertford, Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Jufts, Proceedings to Coronations, and Combats, divers Books of Tricks of Arms, Escripts, Writings, Muniments, with Seals to the same, Notes of the Wars of King Edward III. and many other old Papers and Offices from Henry III. to Henry VI.

Richard Lee, Richmond Herald, succeeded Cook in the Office of Clarencieux: Against him also Garter took great Offence, accusing him to have invaded his Office for the Burial of Bishops, and the Lord Mayor of LONDON. He accused him also to the Commissioners of the Earl Marshal's Office, for using an Hearse in the Funeral of a Knight Batchelor, viz. Sir Richard Baker. To which he answered for himself, That Knights Funerals had, according to Custom, Hearses, as well as Barons; nor did Hearses make Difference or Distinction between those two Degrees, and that the Using thereof was left to the Discretion of the Officers at Arms, as more indifferent: And that the said Hearse of that Knight wanted Ornaments, wherewith properly the Hearses of Barons were garnish'd. Garter also accused the said Lee, that he had allowed, and set out the Arms, and Funerals, of one Bucher, a Mercer of LONDON, a Man of small Parentage, with Helmet, Crest, Coat of Arms, Penon, and a Pall, and himself Attendant in his rich Coat.

THERE was another Herald belonging to this College at this Time, and a Man of Note for his Virtues. His Name was Brookes, or Brookesmouth, York Herald, being preferred thither from being Rouge Crofs Pursuivant, about the Year 1592. He understood neither Latin nor French, to qualify him for his Place, but having been once a Painter, he had an excellent Hand in Tricking Coats of Arms, hardly to be equalled by any of the rest, as appears by a Book still remaining in the Office, of his own doing, containing the Arms of the Nobility: Which curious Skill of his was the Reason that the Lord Burleigh favoured him, and once gave his Hand for him to be preferred to be Norroy against Camden, namely Anno 1593, when Edmund Knight, Norroy was very sick and Camden, was nominated to the Place.

THIS Brookesmouth is best known for his presumptuous Attempt to confute several of the learned Camden's Genealogies of the Nobility in his Britannia; against whom, that excellent Man (an unequal Match for him) vindicated himself so fully, and shewed so plainly the Ignorance and Malice of his Antagonist (and yet with much Gentleness and Modesty) that he was thenceforth esteemed esteemed a very ignorant Man in Heraldry and a notorious Calumniator to all Posterity. Besides this, he was of a very scandalous and evil Life. He once broke open the Office, and took away all the Books belonging to it, and an Iron Chest, and took thence the Order and other Muniments. He was once condemned at Newgate for two Felonies, and burnt in the Hand. He was also guilty of Whoredom and Uncleaness. He was supposed to be a Procurer of perjured Persons in the Star Chamber, detected in the Court of Requests. Twice degraded, and the Queen's Coat of Arms, which he wore, was pulled over his Ears. And for his Ignorance of Languages and Learning, and other Misdemeanors, by the Judgment of the Earl of Leicester, and all wise Men, thought to be unfit to be an Officer of Arms, or to be permitted to come to her Majesty's Presence, being a Vagabond, and not worth 3*l*. But after Leicester's Death, he began to shew himself again; and afterwards got such Friends and Credit, that he dared to oppose himself against Garter, and vexed him both in the Exchequer and Star Chamber, by slanderous Acts and Suits commenced against him, and a great many vexatious Interrogatories, chiefly taken out of Informations, the said Garter had, in Conscience and Care of the Office, given the Lord Treasurer concerning him; so that he was fain, Ann. 1594, to beseech the said Lord to consider of his Credit and Service to the Queen for thirty Years, trusting that he would have Respect to him for his Office, Place and Parents, and how Brookesmouth spared not Time, Means, Place, or Persons to discredit him. In short, he rendered himself uneasy to all the Society, so turbulent was he in his Office, impugning all their honest Proceedings in Matters of Funerals, and other Cases of Office, insomuch that Sir Edward Hoby, Knt. deputed by the Lords in Commission for the Office of Earl Marshal, writ to them in this Manner: "There is one Brookesmouth, now York, a wonderful lewd Fellow, untemperate, quarrelsome, and all the Office weary of him." Yet he endeavoured afterwards to obtain that Place of Norroy, with much Assurance of his own Qualifications, tho' he missed it.

DURING these Quarrels of the Kings and Heralds among themselves, the Office was much neglected, the College ran to Ruin for Want of Reparation, and the Books were embezzled. The Lord Treasurer Burleigh, and the Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, were commissioned by the Queen to act in the Office of Earl Marshal of England; being authorized with full Power, from Time to Time, to call before them all Officers of Arms, Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants, and to cause due Inquisition to be made of all Manner of Arms by them given to any Person without good Warrant, or usurped and taken by any Person without the like Warrant; and upon due Examination and Trial thereof, to revoke and disannul all such as should be so unlawfully assigned or usurped. By Virtue of this Commission and Authority, in this decayed Estate of the Heralds College, they deputed Sir Edward Hoby, and Sir George Carew, Knights, to view it, and make Statutes and Orders for its better Regulation for the future: Which they did; laying before them the true Intent of their first Charter, and drew a Book for the Reformation of the Office, and presented, Anno 1596, to the said two Peers. It bore this Title;

"ORDERS to be observed and kept by
"the Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms
"that now are, or hereafter shall be, and esta"blished by us, the Right Honourable the Lord
"Burleigh, Lord High Treasurer of England;
"Charles Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord

"High Admiral of England; and Henry, Baron
"of Hundson, Lord Chamberlain of her Maje"sty's Household, Knights of the most Noble
"Order of the Garter, and deputed by Com"mission for the Office of Earl Marshal of Eng"land.

THE Dedication of these Orders, to the Lords aforesaid, giving an Account of the Reason and Occasion of making them, was in the following Words:

"THAT whereas it had pleased their Lord-
"ships by Virtue of her Majesty's Commissions
"to their Lordships, granted for the Exercise of "the Earl Marshal's Office of England, to au"thorize, ordain, and depute them, Sir *Edward
"Hoby*, and Sir George Carew, Knts. for the "View of the present State of the Office of "Arms, commonly called Darby-House, in "LONDON: These were to signify unto
"their Lordships, That according to the Instruc"tions and Charge given in that Behalf unto "them, they had oftentimes made their Repair
"unto the said Office, and, as far forth as they "might, had accomplished the same in all "Points.

"AND forasmuch as they found the House
"itself to be fallen into great Ruin, through
"Want of due Reparations, an habitable Use,
"the Office discontinued, and in as great De"cay for Lack of Books, and general Exercise
"therein, Garter and Clarencieux, at open
"Wars for their Livings and Profits; and the "Heralds and Pursuivants, Factionous among them"selves, daily Arresting, Suing, and Undoing
"one another: Their Opinions therefore were,
"that there could be no speedier Reformation
"of all their Errors and Abuses, than the Re-"establishment of the general Office, according "to the true Extent of their Charter and Cor"poration, which appointed one Place, one "Common Seal, and mutual Consent to all "their Deeds, and to be governed by the Earl "Marshal, or Marshals, for the Time being, as "had been accustomed. Out of whose Ordi"nances Statutes and Decrees heretofore made,
"they (the said Sir Edward Hoby, and Sir
"George Carew) had also gathered a Method,
"or Form of Government which they held very
"expedient and necessary.

"ALL which, standing with their Lordship's "good Likings, they humbly presented to be "ratified by their present Authorities under "their Hands and Seal: So that from henceforth
"the same might not be altered, nor frustrated,
"but be recorded in Chancery, until by Parlia"ment it might be made an Act irrevocable, to "their Lordships perpetual Memory. Dated "September 28, 1596.

THE Exordium of the Book shew'd some of the Antiquities of this Office; viz.

"First, That it appeared unto them the "Commissioners, that sundry antient Ordinan"ces, Statutes and Decrees had been made and "established (as well by the most High and "Mighty Prince Thomas of Lancaster, Duke of "Clarence, &c. as by divers other Constables
"and Earl Marshals of England, succeeding un"til the Time of Thomas, late Duke of Nor"folk) for the good Estate, Rule, and Govern"ment of the Office and Officers of Arms.

"THAT it was manifest also by a memo"rable Chapter, holden by the King's Heralds
"and Pursuivants at Roan in Normandy, tem"pore Henry V. what necessary Orders were to "be had and observed amongst themselves, and "their Successors for ever.

"FURTHER, That in the Time of Ri"chard III. the Kings, Heralds, Pursuivants
"of

“ of Arms, were by special Charter, under the “ Great Seal of England, made one Body Politi“ tick, in Name and Fact, and Collegiate, at “ Colc-harbour, in the City of LONDON, “ confirming therein Garter, Principal King of “ Arms of Englishmen, and Clarencieux and “ Norroy Provincial Kings, by the Names of “ King of the South, and King of the North,
 “ to be continued in Succession.

“ Henry VII. and Henry VIII. confirmed and “ allowed their Letters Patents, and by Signa“ tures licensed their Authorities.

“ Edward VI. amplified their Liberties and “ Privileges under his Great Seal.

“ AND Queen Mary re-established their Cor“ poration in Derby-House in LONDON, as “ a College wherein the Kings, Heralds, and “ Pursuivants should inhabit, assemble, commu“ nicate, exercise, and keep all their Books, “ Rolls, and Muniments, for their better Eru“ dition, and good Estate of her Majesty's Of“ fice of Arms.

“ ALL which being for many Years discon“ tinued, thorough great Disorders amongst “ themselves, and the Non-residence of late Earl “ Marshals, whereby many gross Absurdities
 “ and Abuses had been ingendered and commit“ ted; it was now her Majesty's high Will and “ Pleasure, that they, the said Commissioners, “ should enquire, see into, and reform all such “ Errors and Abuses, as they found in the said “ Office, and Officers of Arms; and therefore “ had established such good Orders and Decrees
 “ as might, from henceforth, by no Remove,
 “ Change, or Election, of any Earl Marshal,
 “ or Marshals, be revoked, altered, or made “ void, any Ordinance, Statute, Act of Office, “ Charter, or Decree, heretofore made, to the “ contrary hereof notwithstanding.

AND then follows the Orders; the Titles whereof are; 1. The Site of the House appropriated to the College of Heralds. 2. Records to be safely kept. 3. Daily Attendance in the Office. 4. Prerogative and Office of Garter.
 5. Burials, &c. for Garter. 6. Office of Provincial Kings. 7. Burials, &c. for the Provincial Kings. 8. Arms to be given with the Consent of the Earl Marshal. 9. None to trick or publish Arms to Posterity, without Privy of the Office. 10. Chapters to be holden for Learning, Knowledge, and Doubts. 11. Allowance for Pursuivants. 12. Avoiding of Controversies among them. 13. How far Authority is yielded to the King's Chapter. 14. Power in Visitations. 15. Oath for Performance and due keeping of these Statutes.

Preferments in this Office should be obtained gradually.

THE common Practice of attaining to Preferment in this Office is gradual; first a Pursuivant, then a Herald, before any arrive at the Profit and Honour of a King at Arms: A very reasonable Method, that the Heralds should be taken from the Pursuivants, and the Kings out of the Number of Heralds, and that generally by the Antiquity of standing, whereby the Hope of future Advancement might be a Spur to their Diligence, in the Study of Arms, and that Kings, by long training up in that Science, might be substantially learned and exercised in the History of Arms, of whom the greatest Knowledge, in such Points, was reasonably looked for, so to be the Arbitrators of those Matters, and to whom the rest were to apply themselves for Resolution in any Difficulties or Questions thereof.

AND therefore when Mr. St. George; (afterwards Sir Richard St. George) a learned Man, and of great acquired Knowledge, particularly in Heraldry, was recommended to the Lords Commissioners, and petitioned for the Place of Norroy, the Heralds and Pursuivants petitioned

the same Lords; shewing, “ That it was con“ trary to all Order of the Office, or was there “ Precedent of the like, since their first Cor“ poration, and a great Wrong and Disgrace to “ them, that a Man, who had never been em“ ployed in her Majesty's Service one Day, “ should overgo so many that had spent both “ their Youth and Wealth in her Service, and “ overthrown their better Fortunes, by the “ Hopes and Expectations of Preferment here,
 “ when it fell.

IT may be mentioned for the Honour of the Heralds, that from some of them have sprung very noble Families; and others have been adorned with excellent Learning. The Right Noble Family of the Wriothesleys, Earls of Southampton, was derived from John Wrythe, or Wriothesley, in the Reign of Edward IV. who was first Antelope Pursuivant, or Faulcon, according to Dugdale's Baronage; and after, by Degrees, came to be Garter, and received Knighthood.
 He had Issue Thomas, Garter, and William Wriothesley, York Herald, whose Son, Sir Thomas, was first a Clerk of the Signet in the Reign of King Henry VIII. then made Coroner and Attorney in the Court of Common-Pleas, soon after Principal Secretary of State; and in the 30th of
Henry VIII. was sent Ambassador to the Lady Regent in the Netherlands, to treat of a Marriage between King Henry and Christiana Dutcheß of Milan, a beautiful Lady, then in those Parts.
 Two Years after he was made Constable of the Castle of Southampton; and two Years after that, had the like Command for the Castle of Port-chester, and was made one of the Chamberlains of the Exchequer; a Year after that, viz.
 35 Henry VIII. upon the League made by King
Henry and the Emperor Charles, he was appointed one of the Commissioners for managing the Treaty conducing thereunto: And the first Day of January, the same Year, he was advanced to be a Baron, by the Title of Lord Wriothesley, of Titchfield in the County of Southampton;
 which Titchfield was a Monastery newly dissolved, which he had obtained. In the 36th of this King, he was made Lord Chancellor of England; and at the End of the same Year, was installed Knight of the Garter; and the King, on his Death-bed, constituted him one of his Executors, and appointed him of Council to his Son Edward, who was to succeed him: And three Days before the said Edward's Coronation, he had the Title and Honour of Earl of Southampton, as appears by Patents bearing Date the 16th of February, in the first Year of Edward VI. But by reason of the great Factions in this Reign, he was divested of his Office of Lord Chancellor, put from the Council, and afterwards confined; and the Honour continued in his Family for three or four Generations.

YET to higher Honour did the Posterity of another Herald arrive, viz. Pain Roet, Knight, Pain Roet, Fur-Guienne King of Arms, who had two Daughters, Anne, the younger, whom Geoffrey Chaucer ther-in-Law to (our antient famous Poet) married; by whom he Chaucer.
 had Sir Thomas Chaucer, Knight, whose Daughter Alice was matched with Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, (by whom she had no Issue) and afterward with William de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, who had by her John Duke of Suffolk, and others. Roet's other Daughter, Catharine, who was the Elder, married to Sir Otes Swinford, and afterwards to John of Gaunt, the great Duke of Lancaster; of whose Issue by her, came a most Royal and Illustrious Off-spring, viz. eight Kings, four Queens, and five Princes of England; six Kings, and three Queens of Scotland; two Cardinals, above twenty Dukes, and almost as many Dutcheßes, of the Kingdom of England; divers Dukes of Scotland, and most

most of all the now antient Nobility of both these Kingdoms: Many other Potent Princes, and eminent Nobility of Foreign Parts.

THOSE that brought Honour to this Office, for their Learning or Writings, were divers in the latter Days of Queen Elizabeth, some of whom are as follows:

Robert Glover. Robert Glover, Somerset Herald; a Man of great Reading, and infinite Pains and Industry, who began the Book, called The Catalogue of Honour, in Latin, which was finished by Mills, his Kinsman; wherein he undertook to clear the Descents from Royal Pedigrees of our Kings and Queens. He had Abundance of Rolls and Pedigrees, and antient Writings of Heraldry, which he had gathered together for his Use, besides vast Collections made by his own Hands, and Travail, touching Arms, Books of Visitation of 24 Shires, and Miscellanea, wrote by himself. Camden mentions him oft, with Honour, and acknowledged he made much Use of him in Genealogies. Glover also communicated to Dr. David Powell a Copy of the History of Cambria, translated by H. Lloyd: He was thus useful in promoting the Knowledge of the antient History of Britain, and would doubtless have been much more, had he not been taken away so early, being at his Death but Forty-five Years old. In the Parish-Church of Cripplegate (where he was interred) is a decent Monument set up to his Memory, with an Inscription in Latin.

Francis Thynne.

Francis Thynne, Lancaster Herald, was well versed in our English History, and thoroughly studied in Heraldry, before he sued (Anno 1593) to be admitted into this Office: When he offered himself to the Lord Burleigh for his Skill in that Learning to be examined even in the deepest Points of Armoury, which he thought could not be attained to without Knowledge of Philosophy and History, he signified then, that he had drawn out a Series of the Lord Treasurers, and composed a certain Circular Pedigree of the Earls and Viscounts of England. In Behalf of himself, thus he wrote to the aforesaid Lord:

“ How worthy I may be thereof, (the Place
“ of an Herald) it becometh not me to speak, “ because to praise myself, were Vanity; to “ dispraise myself, were Folly; and to compare “ with any of the Office, were odious. Yet this “ much without Offence I may say, That I be“ seech your Lordship to put me to Trial, whe“ ther I may not in Skill of Learning, even in “ the deepest Points of Armoury, (which cannot “ be known without the Mysteries of Philoso“ phy, and the Judgment of Histories) deserve
“ that Place as well as some others. Many, I “ know, have, and do labour for the Offices of “ Clarencieux and Norroy, of whom I am not to “ speak, altho’ I know who they are; what they “ can do; how learned they be; how meet for “ those Places; how able to serve their Prince
“ and Country; and of how great Continuance “ in Heraldry: But yet, if it like your Lord“ ship to cast a favourable Liking to him, who “ hath wholly tied himself to you and to your “ House, it may be that he which cometh last “ may be preferred before the first.

Wood, in his Athenæ Oxoniensis, mentions several of his Works, some printed, and some in Manuscript. Among the former are the Annals of Scotland, continued where Hollingshed left off, viz. to the Year 1586. He drew up, besides the Catalogue before-mentioned, another of the English Cardinals, which is printed in Hollingshed, at the End of Queen Mary: Likewise a Catalogue of the Lord Chancellors in MS.

another also, alphabetically disposed, of such as had wrote on the English History, whether Englishmen or Foreigners, which is printed at the End of Hollingshed’s History. There are also remaining in MS. Thynne’s Discourses of Arms; Collections of Antiquities; Sepulchral Inscriptions, collected by him as well in the Churches of England, as other Parts; Notes on Chaucer’s Works, with which he intended to put out that Author with a Comment, tho’ he performed it not; but he assisted Speght with his Notes and Directions, and with considerable Materials for writing Chaucer’s Life.

SIR William Segar, Garter, wrote a Book entitled, Honour, Military and Civil.

SIR Richard St. George, Clarencieux, another learned Man of this Office. This Gentleman was in the Society of the great Antiquarians of those Times, Sir Robert Cotton, Camden, Spelman, and others; and was one of those, who endeavoured to revive the College or Society of the Studios of Antiquity, and their learned Meetings, that had for some Time ceased. Of him Weaver makes mention with Honour, and particularly, that he was ready to give him his Assistance in his Book of antient Funeral Monuments that he was writing.

John Hart, Chester Herald, wrote a Book of the English Orthography.

To these may be added, Vincent, Brook, Lant, Sandford, and the elaborate Antiquarian, Sir William Dugdale, and lastly, Elias Ashmole, Esq; Windsor Herald.

BUT Camden, Clarencieux, is an eternal Monument of Honour to this Society, who, besides his Modesty, and the Simplicity of Manners that adorned his great Learning, left two most incomparable Books to Posterity, his Britannia, and his Annals of Queen Elizabeth. To which, his Remains may be added, set forth after his Death, by John Philpot, Somerset Herald, who also may be reckoned among the Learned of this College, being Author of an History of the County and Families of Kent, called Villare Cantianum.

Mr. Gybbon, a learned Pursuivant, diligently collected out of the English and Scotch Authors, and other foreign Writers, a large Account of the great and important Services of the Heralds in former Times, which Collections he entitled, Heraldo Memoriale; shewing how antient Heralds have been; their Retaining to Princes; their Employments in War and Peace, and in Proclaiming and Publishing weighty Things; the great Esteem of them, with their Rewards and other Accidents that happen’d to them.

Gybbon Author of Heraldo Memoriale.

And, first, as for their Antiquity, they were in Request among the antient Grecians. Homer, in the second Book of his Iliad, speaks of nine Heralds in the Grecian Army; and the Romans made great Use of them: And as in Messages of War, and the like, so in Funerals, it was a Custom among them, that the Heralds dismissed the Mourners with the Word Ilicet, or Ire licet; i. e. You may withdraw. And this Ceremony is taken Notice of by the Describer of the Funeral Solemnity of the Lord Henry de la Tour, Marshal General of the Field and Armies of Lewis the XIVth of France.

THEY have been immediately retained by Kings and Princes, and have gone abroad with them to their Wars, and in their Progresses; and have been dispatched by them to other Princes upon important Messages, and especially upon Warlike Occasions. The chief Nobility also have had their Heralds. The Earl of Northumberland sent an Herald, named Northumberland, to King Richard II. (ultimo Reg.) for a safe Conduct, to come and commune with him. The Duke of Bedford had his Herald, named Bedford, whom he he sent, after the Crowning of Charles VII. of France, to defy him. The same Duke sent the Herald, Anno 1433, from Laigny, to the Lord Gaucourt, to offer him Battle, which was warily refused. The Duke of Glocester, and Earl of Pembroke, had his Herald, named Pembroke, whom he sent, Anno 1436, to defy the Duke of Burgundy. Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, had Suffolk Herald, and Marteon Pursuivant. The Marquis of Dorset kept Grooby Herald. Arthur Plantagenet, Viscount Lisle, had Lisle Pursuivant. Baron Hastings had Hastings Pursuivant; and Sir John Chandois, and Sir John Falstolph, had their Heralds; and so had Cardinal Wolsey, according to Stow.

THE French King, Contempary with our King Henry V. had his King at Arms, named Montjoy; the Duke of Burgundy, about that Time, had Toison d'Or, his King at Arms. The Scotch King had his King at Arms, stiled Lion; and they have commonly been about Princes in their Courts. It is noted by the Historian, as a strange Piece of Negligence in King Lewis XI. of France, That he had oftentimes neither Officers of Arms, nor Trumpeters in his Court; and therefore (when he had Occasion for an Herald) sent a Valet, or Yeoman, in a Coat of Arms, made of a Trumpet Banner, to King Edward IV.

THEY have been chiefly made use of in great Wars, between Princes in Hostility, for carrying Messages, Defiances, &c. Henry, King of Castile, sent an Herald to the Black Prince, to know why he invaded his Kingdom.

Montjoy, King of Arms, was sent from Roan from the French King, and Thirty-five of his Council, to assure King Henry V. he should have Battle given him; and King Henry gave a great Reward, as well as a gallant Answer.

AGAIN, They sent an Herald to the said King, in a scoffing Way, to demand what Ransom he was willing to give: To which he returned a stay'd and sober Answer. This was before the Battle of Agincourt, Anno 1403.

AFTER they were broken and defeated, King Henry perceiving they began to rally, sent an Herald to them, assuring them, That if they persisted, he would not only slay all the Prisoners already taken, but all such as he should take hereafter.

AFTER the Battle, Montjoy, and four other Heralds, came to know the Number of the Prisoners, and to desire Burial of the Dead; and the King granted their Request, and feasted them.

MESSAGES previous to War, and Defiances, were used to be done by Heralds.

War denounced by Heralds. DENUNCIATION of War between Princes is by Heralds.

THE French King's Marshal, Bonciquaut, by an Herald, denounced War against Pope Benedict XIII. upon his Refusal to surrender the Popedom.

A French Herald at Arms, Anno 1635, sent from Paris to Flanders, by sound of Trumpet, denounced and proclaimed War against the King of Spain, and all his Dominions. This Herald fixed up, and left the Defiance in all the Towns as he passed.

Henry V. in the third of his Reign, sent Antelope Pursuivant at Arms, from Southampton to the French King, to demand Restitution of what he detained wrongfully from him.

Windsor Herald was sent, Anno 1418, to summon Roan.

Edward IV. sent an Officer at Arms, a Norman born, to defy the French King, Lewis XI. Anno 1474.

THE Duke of Bedford, sent Bedford, his Herald, to defy Charles VII. the French King: And Humphrey Duke of Glocester, by his Herald, defy'd the Duke of Burgundy, as before mentioned.

THE Emperor's Herald defy'd Francis I. King of France; and giving his Master all his Titles, of Castile, Leon, Arragon, Naples, &c. in a long Roll, King Francis commanded his Heralds to receive the Challenge, and repeat France as many Times as the other had Kingdoms, and petty Titles.

THE Earl of Surrey, 13 Henry VII. sent Norroy King of Arms to the Captain of Hayton-Castle, (which was one of the strongest Places between Berwick and Edinburgh) to deliver him the said Castle, which he refused, affirming, he was assured of ready Succours.

WHILST the said Earl lay at Hayton, the King of Scotland sent to him Marchmont, and another Herald, with a Challenge either to Fight Army to Army, or Person to Person, upon certain Conditions; which Conditions were refused, upon discreet Considerations; and the Earl sent back the Herald well rewarded.

THE Duke of Bedford, 1 Henry VII. marching against the Rebels, headed by the Lord Lovel, commanded the Heralds to make Proclamation, That if they would lay down their Arms, they should have Pardon.

HERALDS also have been employed in, and after Battles fought; as in some Instances before. The Battle of Veruol, Anno 1424, in the Reign of Henry VI. was so uncertain for a while, that no Herald could tell to which Party Fortune would be favourable. Afterwards, by Report of Montjoy, King of Arms for France, and the English Heralds there present, were slain of the French and Scots 9700, and of the English 2100.

As in publick Wars, so they have been concerned about private Combats and Challenges. In the Year 1380; was a Combat between Sir John Annesley and Thomas Katrington, who was accused by the said Knight for betraying the Fortress of St. Saviour, in the Isle of Constantine in Normandy. The Heralds in this Combat did their Duty, in calling the Combatants to the Performance thereof.

THE Heralds did the same likewise in the famous Combat intended between the Dukes of Hereford and Norfolk; which the King took up. The Cereimonial Circumstances and Proceedings are well worthy the Reading.

IN a Combat, Anno 1467, between the Bastard of Burgoine and the Lord Scales, the Advice of the Officers of Arms, as well as of the Constable and Marshal, was asked and followed.

THEY have likewise been employ'd in Jufts and Turnaments.

NOR have they only been used in War, but in Peace also; as in Proclamations and Cavalcades, in attending Funerals, in giving Coats of Arms, and such like.

WHEN Knights have been created, they have been proclaimed by the Voice of Heralds: So Camden shews in his learned Book, that Knights made in Scotland are proclaimed by the publick Voice of an Herald.

AT the Baptism of Madame Isabelle of France, to whom our King Henry VIII. was Godfather, the Infant's Name was proclaimed by the Kings and Heralds of Arms, both of France and England, having their Coats of Arms adorned with the Arms of both Kings.

HERALDS attended at the Christening of Queen Elizabeth and King Edward.

THE Proclamation of the Truce between King Henry II. of France, and Charles V. Emperor, with his Son Philip King of England, was performed by four Heralds.

WHEN Pope Clement VII. was received at Marseilles, three Heralds at Arms marched just after fifty Swissers richly apparell'd; the Heralds having their Coats of Arms blue, with Flowers-de-Liz of Gold.

AND when Ferdinand, Anno 1527, was to be made King of the Romans, before him went ten Troops, and an Herald at Arms, whom the Master of the Ceremonies with the Royal Banner followed.

WHEN Frederick Duke of Prussia was to be proclaimed King of that Country, the Grand Marshal of the Court, and the Grand Marshal of Prussia went at the Head of a great Number of Gentlemen, richly clad and well mounted. Then followed twelve Heralds at Arms, preceded by four and twenty Trumpets, and two Kettle-Drums, and followed by a Squadron of Dragoons. The Cavalcade having shewed itself in the principal Streets of the City of Coningsberg, the Heralds made Proclamation.

They marshal
Funerals.

THEY are also employed in attending at, and marshalling the Funerals of the Nobility, which Part of their Office, they think unjustly invaded by Undertakers, and other Tradesmen.

Mercator in Lorrain, shews how the Body of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, was by Boiset, Herald of the Golden Fleece (at the Command of Charles V.) transported from Nantz to Bruges.

They take away, as well as give Coats of Arms.

AND as they give, so they sometimes take away Coats of Arms.

Non solum Potestas conferendi nova Insignia sed Potestas augendi, mutandi, diminuendi Insignia vetera, est, penes Principem, & ejus Heraldos, i. e. It is in the Power of Princes and their Heralds not only to give new Arms, but to increase, change, and abate antient Coats.

Mackenzey saith, from Cassaneus, that Heralds devised Godfrey of Boloin's Coat.

WHEN any Person is forfeited in Parliament in Scotland, Lion and his Brethren, Heralds, come in with their Coats and Formalities; and Lion doth publickly tear the Arms of the Party forfeited: And if he be a Cadet of a Family, he saith openly, The tearing of these Arms shall be without Prejudice to the Nobleman, or Chief, whose Arms these are. After which, he and his Brethren go to the Cross, and there hang up the Shield reversed, the Base or lowest Point upward.

THE Esteem and Value Princes have had for their Heralds, appears from hence; namely, how they have resented Violences and Affronts used towards them. An Instance of this happened in the seventh of Richard II. Henry Spencer, the Warlike Bishop of Norwich, undertaking Pope Urban's Quarrel against Pope Clement, raised 2000 Horses and 15000 Foot, and landed at Calais; and performed great Feats of Arms in Flanders. At length a Flemish Army approaching, he sent an Herald to know what Pope they adher'd to: But the Army being of West Flanders (raised by themselves) and not understanding the Law of Arms, slew the Herald. At which the English were so enraged, that joining Battle, 9000 Flemings were slain, according to Walsingham.

THEY have commonly had high Respects, and honourable Presents from those Princes to whom they have been sent, whatever their Messages have been.

THE King of Scotland sent an Herald to King Henry IV. to deliver up George of Dunbarre, Earl of March, who was fled into England. The Herald had an honest, honourable, and discreet, but negative, Answer.

WHEN the Duke of Glocester sent his Herald Pembroke to the Duke of Burgundy, though it was to defy him, he was rewarded with a Cup, and Money.

King Henry VIII. Anno 1513, being at Tours, a King of Arms of Scotland, called Lion, with his Coat of Arms on, was by Garter, King of Arms, brought to the King's Presence, and delivered a Letter to him from the Scotch King: And notwithstanding the King was angry at some Words of the Herald, yet he commanded Garter to take him to his Tent and treat him. After this the Letters were read and answer'd, and an hundred Angels given to Lion at his Departure.

Rouge-Croix, a Pursuivant at Arms in the Reign of King Henry VIII. was sent to the Scotch King invading England, who detained him, and sent one Hay, an Herald at Arms, to the Earl of Surrey, who hearing of his coming, sent York Herald to accompany him, such Respect in those Days was paid to Heralds.

THEY have sometimes been sent upon Messages so unwelcome to them to whom they came, that they have been slain, and sometimes ill treated, as the Flemings served Henry Spencer's Herald, spoken of before.

Sabellicus, in his History of the Venetians, mentioneth an Herald of theirs sent to Francis Carrera, who cut off his Nose and Ears.

Laurentius Valentius mentioneth an Herald belonging to the Earl of Urgelles, who carrying a Defiance to the Earl of Cordouna, was very ill treated by Ferdinand, King of Arragon.

IN Kett's Rebellion under King Edward VI. an Herald was sent to proclaim a Pardon if the Rebels would lay down their Arms: To which a saucy Answer was returned by Kett, maintaining himself a true Subject, and that he needed no Pardon, being no Offender.

AFTER three Hours Fight, and a sturdy one, Norroy King at Arms was sent with a Trumpeter to 4000 or 5000, which were at Parkthorpe-Gate, to proclaim Pardon, if they would lay down their Arms. To which one Floteman, a bold Knave, gave as base an Answer as was given by Kett before.

AFTER the Earl of Warwick was come with a Reinforcement to the Army, Norroy was sent to summon the Rebels to surrender the City; which was refused, and some told him, he was a counterfeit Herald, sent to deceive them. This Norroy was employed often in this Rebellion, who was Gilbert Dethick, afterwards Garter, and Knighted, and was Great Grandfather to H. Dethick, not many Years since Richmond Herald. When some had told Norroy (as said before) that he was a Counterfeit, others of Kett's Crew knew him, and averred that they had seen him in Scotland and Bologne, which somewhat pacify'd the rest, and preserved him from Outrage.

THE Scotch Rebels spoiled the King's Herald of his Coat and the Letters, when he was about to proclaim them Traitors.

John Cook, Lancaster Herald, sometime Servant to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, (beheaded primo Mariae) took upon him to beg the Head of his old Master, to be buried in the Tower of LONDON; which was granted with the whole Body, and performed accordingly. In Remembrance whereof the said Cook did bear for his Crest, a Bear's Head, Silver, crowned Gold, in Allusion to the said Duke's Badge, which was the Bear and ragged Staff.

A Pursuivant that brought News to Edward III. at Dover, of a Victory gained by Sir John Chandois against Charles de Blois, who invaded Britain, was made an Herald by the Name of Windsor.

Fox, in his Martyrology, tells us, that Casper Sturme, the Emperor's Herald, was sent to conduct Martin Luther from Wittenbergh to Wormes.

THE

THE Corpse of King Richard III. after he was slain in Bosworth-Field, was stark naked, trussed behind a Pursuivant, called Blanch Sanglier, i. e. White Boar, his Arms hanging on one Side the Horse, and his Legs on the other; and in that Manner carried to Leicester to be buried.

Mr. Gibbon, the diligent Collector of these Historical Passages, concludes with the following Relation:

“ Anno 1674, in the Month of February, at
“ the Countess of Devonshire’s famous Funeral,
“ I served for Elias Ashmole, Esq; Windsor
“ Herald; and lying at Leicester, in our Way
“ to Derby, I had the Curiosity to go to an Inn,
“ and see the Stone Coffin, wherein once lay
“ the Body of the said King Richard; which
“ at the Suppression and Demolition of the Grey “ Fryars in the said Town of Leicester, was “ digged up, and after turned to an Horse-“ Trough. At which Spectacle I could not but
“ be smitten with a melancholy Reflection,
“ and call to Mind the last Part of that known “ Hexameter, mentioned by Wever, with a little “ Variation to his Purpose,

Sic transit Gloria Mundi.

IN Favour of the College, and also to preserve the Honour of the Nobility and Gentry from Persons of meaner Rank, intruding into their Families, and unjustly assuming their Arms, and for preventing false Blazonry, the late Queen Anne issued out her Command and Pleasure in June, Anno Dom. 1707, confirming the following Order of the Deputy Earl Marshal.

“ WHEREAS the ordering, judging, and “ determining all Matters concerning Arms, “ Crests, Supporters, Cognizances, Pedigrees, “ Devices and Ensigns Armorial; the making
“ and prescribing Rules, Ordinances and De“ crees, for the granting, controlling, and Re“ gulation thereof, and the putting in Executi“ on the Laws and Ordinances relating there-“ unto, are, among other Powers and Appro“ bation, invested in me Henry Earl of Bindon, “ Deputy to his Grace Thomas Duke of Nor- “ folk, Earl Marshal, and Hereditary Mar“ shal of England: And whereas divers A-“ buscs, Disorders, and Irregularities, have “ been committed and done by Painters, Fune“ ral-Undertakers, Glaziers, Goldsmiths, En“ gravers, Carvers, Chacers, Stone-cutters, “ Coachmakers, and others, in the Premises:
“ For Remedy whereof, for the Time coming,
“ these are to warn, charge, and require all and “ every the said Artificers, and others concern“ ed, that they forbear to design and appoint,
“ to, or for any Persons, any Arms or Ensigns “ Armorial, by making any Arms, Crests, Sup“ porters, Cognizances, Pedigrees and Devices in “ Coat-Armour, Helm, Banners, Standards, “ Penons and Hatchments, Tents and Pa“ villions: As also in Plate, Metals, Jewels, “ Glass, Paper, Parchment, or otherwise in “ Windows, Grave-Stones, Tombs, and Mo“ numents, or elsewhere, without sufficient “ Directions and Authority so to do: And “ likewise strictly to prohibit and forbid all “ Coachmakers, and others, concerned in ma“ king Mourning Coaches and Chairs for the “ Nobility and Gentry, that they do not use “ varnished Bullion Nails, as they, the said
“ several Artificers, and others herein afore“ mentioned, intended, will answer the Con“ tempt hereof at their Peril.

By her Majesty’s Command.

BINDON, M.

VOL. I.

ON the 3d of March 1732, a Court of Honour, or High Court of Chivalry, was open’d in the Painted-Chamber, Westminster, in the following Manner: About Twelve o’Clock the Right Hon. the Earl of Effingham came into Court, preceded by the Proctors; Doctors of the Civil Law and Officers of the Court in their Gowns, Pursuivants and Heralds of Arms in their Tabarts and Collars; and Garter and Norroy King of Arms, and follow’d by the Lords after-mentioned, who assisted him upon this Occasion, viz. the Dukes of Ancafter and Manchester; the Earls of Strafford, Warwick, and Pontfret; the Lords Herbert, Haversham, Foley, Onslow, Howard, and others. The Court being set, and Proclamation made, the Duke of Norfolk’s Patent, constituting him Hereditary Earl Marshal of England, his Grace’s Nomination of the Earl of Effingham, his Deputy, and his Majesty’s Approbation of him, were severally read by the Register, and then the Oaths of Allegiance, Abjuration, and Oath of Office, were administer’d to his Lordship: The Patents of the several Officers of the Court were then read; and Petitions of Persons to be admitted Proctors, who were sworn accordingly, viz. Dr. Henchman, the King’s Advocate; Mr. Mark Holman, Register; Mr. Sandford Nevill, the Earl Marshal’s Proctor; and Mr. Greenley, Mr. Rawson, Mr. Smith, Mr. Farrant, Mr. Cook, Mr. Shelton, Proctors of the Court of Arches, to be Proctors of the said Court. The King’s Advocate then exhibited a Complaint against one Mrs. Radburne, Relict of one Mr. Radburne, Merchant, for using divers Ensigns of Honour, not belonging to his Condition, at the Funeral of her said Husband; and likewise certain Arms both at the said Funeral, and likewise since upon her Coach, not being entitled thereto in her own or her Husband’s Right, contrary to the Law of Arms; whereupon his Lordship was pleased to grant a Process, and then adjourned the Court to the Hall in the College of Arms, on the 30th of the same Month.

PURSUANT to which Adjournment a Court was held at the College, by the Right Honourable the Earl of Effingham, assisted by the Worshipful Dr. Isbam, attended by the Kings and Pursuivants at Arms, dress’d in their respective Coats and Collars; when one Mr. John Phillips, was admitted a Proctor of the said Court, and sworn in accordingly.

AFTER which the Court was pleased to admit the exhibited Articles against Mr. Baynton, Executor of Mr. Ladbroke deceas’d, for using Arms, and other Distinctions of Honour, not belonging to his Family; when the Articles were admitted; two Witnesses were produced, who were sworn, and a Time appointed for their Examination.

THEN the Court proceeded against Sir John Blunt, Bart. and an Attachment was order’d against him for not appearing; but Dr. Andrews speaking for him, and saying he had his Proxy, produced it; when Mr. Phillips appear’d as Proctor for him, and the Attachment did not go out, but he order’d to appear next Court. Dr. Andrews spoke mighty well on this Occasion, saying, that Mr. Ladbroke’s Executors could not be to blame; for they only gave the same Arms at the Funeral as they found in Mr. Ladbroke’s Custody, and which he always bore in his Lifetime unmolested; and that, as Visitations had been discontinued so long, there was no Certainty in Arms; and that several Persons who had a Right, might in Length of Time have lost their Grants, or not regarded them; but yet if they were so lost, that Loss might be repair’d for Money, &c. and took Notice, that Arms were grant- ed not long since to a Coffeeman on his paying for them;

them: Then one of the Office answer'd, That seem'd to be levell'd at him for granting them; but he did it not alone, but with the Consent and Approbation of his Brethren: He said, That it was every where talk'd that the Court was held only to get Money; and he hoped that such Persons that should be degraded might be debarr'd from ever having Arms granted them: Upon which Dr. Andrews replied, That was the Way to bring more Money in; for People fearing a Degradation might purchase Arms. Then were also Witnesses produced to prove the Articles lately exhibited against Mrs. Radburne, Widow, who were sworn, and a Time appointed for their Examination, and then the Court, which was the last that has been held on these Affairs, adjourned.

The COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS.

THIS College is a beautiful and magnificent Structure, situated on the West Side, and near the North End of Warwick-Lane: It is built of Brick and Stone; of the latter whereof is a spacious Frontispiece towards Warwick-Lane, with a handsome Door-case, adorned with four Demy Columns, their Entablature and pitch'd Pediment of the Ionick Order, and here are Enrichments of Festoons; above this Portal it is adorned with Pilasters and Entablament of the Corinthian Order, and upon the Entrance, before you come to the Quadrangular Court, is a lofty Cupulo erected on strong Pillars (and covered with Slate) on the Top whereof is a large Pyramid, and on its Vertex a Crown and gilded Ball.

ON the West Side of the Court, the Front is very ornamental, built of Stone, adorned with eight Pilasters below, and eight above them, with their proper Entablature, the former of the Ionick, the latter of the Corinthian Order, with a Triangular Pediment; and over the Door-case is the Figure of King Charles II. placed in a curious Nich, and between the Aperture and the lower Architrave these Words are done in Capital Gold Characters.

UTRIUSQUE FORTUNÆ EXEMPLAR
INGENS ADVERSIS REBUS DEUM
PROBAVIT PROSPERIS SEIPSUM
COLLEGII HUIUSCE, M,DC,LXXXII.

THE lower Intercolumns are 12 Windows enriched with Festoons, the Superior are six spacious arched Sash'd Windows.

ON the East Side of the Court, upon the West Side of the Theatre, appears finely done, the Statue, or Figure, of Sir John Cutler, under which are these Words done in Gold Characters.

OMNIS CUTLERI CEDAT LABOR
AMPHITHEATRO.

THE Inside of this College, is as follows: First, The Ground-Floor, at the Entrance of which is the Hall, where they used to give Advice to the Poor gratis; Northward from this is the Committee Room, where (on the South Side) are about 112 Folio Books, that were saved from the Fire in 1666; and Northward from this Room is the Library with neat Galleries, the Ascent to it by a Stair-case finely wainscotted: Here are a great Number of Books kept in good Order, with a Folio Catalogue thereof. Under the Gallery are five Classes, Ranges or Shelves, of large Folio's, one above another, extending round the Room, and seven such Classes above the Gallery of Quarto's, Octavo's, &c. This Library was built at the College Charge, and stored with these Books by Sir Theodore Mayerne, the Marquis of Dorchester, who was admitted a Fellow, and other Benefactors since their Time.

ASCENDING up a Pair of spacious Halfpace-Stairs, at the South End of the Hall, you arrive at the Floor of the great Hall, where the Doctors meet on the first Friday of every Month, and dine once a Quarter. This Room is extremely ornamental, being wainscotted with Oak up to the Coving of the Cieling, which is adorned with Fret-work. The Wainscot with the Pilasters and Entablament are of the Corinthian Order, enriched with Arms, Cupids, Festoons, &c. finely carved; at the upper End of the Room are the Pictures of Dr. Harvey, who first discover'd the Circulation of the Blood, and Sir Theodore Mayerne, one on each Side the Door, over which is the Bust of Dr. Hamey. At the other End of the Room, on one Side the Door, is the Picture of Dr. Goodall, the late President, and on the other, that of Sir Hans Sloane, the present worthy President, both at full Length, the last painted by Murray in the Year 1724. Along the East Side of the Room between the Windows are the Pictures of Edmund Boulter, Esq; King Henry VIII. Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Thomas Brown, and Dr. Walter Charlton.

NORTHWARD of this great Hall, and over the Library in the Censor's Room, where is Wainscot and Fretwork as in the Hall, over the Chimney, is the Picture of Sir Thomas Millington, finely done at full Length, in his Habit of Scarlet: On each Side of him the Heads of Dr. Thomas Wharton and Dr. Henry Clark. In other Parts of the Room are the Pictures of Dr. Whistler; Sir John Micklethwaite, Dr. Gliffon, Sir Edmund King, Dr. Josias Clarke; and again, that of Dr. Hamey, with a Plan of some Lands in Essex, which he gave to the College.

THE second Pair of Stairs are Geometrical Winding-Stairs, artfully contrived; these lead up to the Garret, where they used to dry their Herbs for the Dispensary, whilst it was kept in the College; but that has been some Years laid aside.

THE Theatre, under the Cupulo over the Entrance next the Street, is furnished with six Degrees of Circular Wainscot Seats, one above another, where the Anatomy Lectures are performed; here being in the Pit a Table; also three Seats for the President, one for the Operator, and the third for the Lecturer.

ALSO in the Preparing-Room are 13 Tables of the Muscles in a human Body, as Fore-Side, Back-side, &c. each Muscle in its proper Position.

THIS learned Society had, in antient Time, their College in Knight-Riders-Street, being the Gift of Dr. Linacre, Physician to King Hen. VIII. From which in succeeding Times they removed to Amen-Corner, where they had purchased an House and Ground. Here Dr. Harvey, Anno 1652, built a Library and Publick Hall, which he granted for ever to the College, with his Library, and endowed it with his Estate, which he resigned to them in his Life; Part of which he assigned for an Anniversary Oration to commemorate all their Benefactors, and to exhort others to follow their good Examples; and for the providing a good Dinner for the Society.

THE Conflagration of LONDON, Anno 1666, consuming this House, and the Ground, being but a Lease, the Fellows of this College purchased, with their own Money, a large Piece of Ground in Warwick-Lane, whereon they erected the Building before described. At their first Institution, there were but thirty Fellows of their Society; but King Charles II. upon their Request augmented augmented the Number to Forty; and King James II. considering the large Increase of this City in Buildings and Inhabitants, was pleased, in their new Charter, to increase the Number to Eighty, and not to exceed. Before this Charter none could be admitted a Fellow of the College, if he had not taken his Degree of Doctor in one of the Universities; but now all those that have taken their Degree in any Foreign University are qualified to become Fellows.

But although, their Power is great to obstruct the Practice in any one that is not of the College; yet, whether by Connivance or Favour, others practise Physick, viz. Empiricks, Mountebanks, pretended Chymists, Apothecaries, Surgeons, and even Women, which oft proves the Ruin of many Persons: And yet by the Law of the Land, if any one that is not so qualified shall undertake a Cure, and his Patient die under his Hand, it is deemed Felony in him.

To this College belongs a President, four Censors, and twelve Electors.

THE President is the principal Member, and is annually chosen out of the Society.

THE four Censors have, by their Charter, Authority to survey, correct, and govern all Physicians, or others, that shall practise within their Jurisdiction, viz. this City, and seven Miles round, and to Fine, and Imprison, for Offences, as they shall see Cause. The following is

A LIST of the FELLOWS, CANDIDATES, HONORARY-FELLOWS, and LICENTIATES.

THE College, or Corporation of Physicians, is established by as great Authority as any Corporation whatsoever, and has certain Privileges granted to it; by which no Man, tho' a Graduate in Physick in either of the Universities, can, without a Licence under the Seal of the College, practise Physick within the City, or seven Miles about it; neither in any Part of the Kingdom, if he has not taken some Degree in one of the Universities.

By their Charter, likewise, they can administer any Oath, impose a Fine or Imprisonment on the Offender, in that and some other Respects. They have Authority to search and examine the Drugs and Compositions in any Apothecary's Shop, to see if they are good, and well made up. They can make Bye-Laws for their Government. They can purchase Lands or Houses for the Society. They may use a Common Seal, &c. and by their Charter may practise Surgery, if they please. They are exempt from serving on Juries, or bearing any Parish-Office, or providing Arms or Ammunition.

NOTWITHSTANDING the Lives of Men, sometimes the greatest, even our Princes, are intrusted in the Hands of Physicians, yet was there no College of such, directed by, and circumscribed within Laws, till the Time of Henry VIII. before which, when Princes lay ill, their Privy Council made Choice of some to attend, out of the many Pretenders to the Science of Physick.

THUS when Henry VI. lay sick, the Council assigned him three Physicians, namely John Arundel, John Saleby, and William Hatcliffe, and two Surgeons, named Marshal and Warren, to administer freely about his Person; and there is a Roll of that Tenor, mentioned by the Lord Coke in his Institutes, Part iv. Page 251.

BUT in the 10th of Henry VIII. that King granted a Charter, dated the 23d of September at Westminster, Physicians first incorporated by Henry VIII.

Westminster, to incorporate certain Physicians in one Body, and perpetual Commonalty or Fellowship of the Faculty of Physick; and to have a perpetual Succession, and a Common Seal, and to choose yearly a President, to oversee, rule and govern the said Fellowship in all Men of the same Faculty. By Virtue whereof, they were enabled to purchase and possess in Fee, and Perpetuity, Lands, Tenements, and Rents, and any other Possession; that they might implead and be impleaded; that they might make Statutes and Ordinances for the wholesome Government and Correction of the College, and of all Persons practising Physick within seven Miles of the City. And within that Compass, none to practise, as well as in the City, unless first allowed by the President and Fellowship, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 100 s. for every Month; That four be chosen yearly by the President and College, who should have the Supervising, Search, Examination, and Government of all the Physicians of the City, and Suburbs within seven Miles; and to punish them for their Offences, in not performing, making, and neglecting their Medicines and Receipts, and that by Fines, Amerciaments, and Imprisonments: That neither the President, nor any of the Members of this College be summoned, or put in any Assizes, Juries, Inquests, &c.

AND that the first Movers and Procurers of so good a Fellowship, for the Safety of the Lives of Men, may be preserved, and the Causes that moved the King to grant it may be known, they are both signified to us in the said King's Letters Patent, where it appeareth, that the Suit was made by John Chambre, Thomas Linacre, and Fernandes de Victoria, all the King's Physicians, and three other Physicians, namely, Nic. Halliwell, John Francis, and Robert Yarly, and chiefly by the Intercession of Cardinal Wolsey, Lord Chancellor; and the Causes that inclined the King appeared in the Preamble to the said Letters Patent; beginning thus,

Cum Regii Officii nostri munus arbitremur, Ditionis nostrae Hominum felicitati omni ratione consulere, id autem vel imprimis fore, si improborum Conatibus tempestive occurramus, &c. That is, "Since we esteem it a Part of our " Royal Office, by all Means to consult the " Happiness of such as are under our Jurisdiction, " and that the Way to do it will especially be, " if we seasonably put a Stop to the Endeavours " of evil Men; We have thought it highly necessary to restrain the Boldness of some wicked " People, who shall profess Physick more for " their own Covetousness, than out of any good " Conscience; whence many Inconveniences " may arise to the Ignorant, Credulous, and common Sort: Therefore partly imitating the Example of well instituted Cities in Italy, and " in many other Nations; partly moved by " the Request of certain grave Men, &c.

THIS Charter, they, who were the chief Procurers of it, got confirmed and ratified by Act of Parliament, Anno 14. Henry VIII. upon this Consideration, as the Act ran; " For the making " the said Corporation meritorious, and very " good for the Commonwealth of this Realm, it " was necessary to provide, that no Person of the " said Politick Body and Commonalty, be suffered " to exercise Physick, but only those Persons that " be profound, sad, and discreet, groundly learned, and deeply studied in Physick; and for the " enlarging of further Articles for the said Commonwealth to be had and made.

IN the 32d of Henry VIII. by another Act of Parliament, they were exempted from keeping Watch and Ward, and from being chosen Constables, or into other Offices within the City and Suburbs, as they had many Times before been compelled to their own Disquiet, and to the Peril of their Patients. By the same Act four Physicians were to be chosen Yearly to search the Apothecaries Wares, Drugs, and Stuff.

QUEEN Mary, Anno I. confirmed the College's Charter.

QUEEN Elizabeth gave them a Charter, dated at Westminster, February 4, Anno Regni 7. to take Yearly for ever, one, two, three, or four Human Bodies, to dissect or anatomize, having been condemned and dead.

THIS College of Physicians, in the Year 1575, that is, 158 Years ago, consisted of the following Members, a very few in Comparison of the present Number.

The NAMES of the PHYSICIANS of the COLLEGE of LONDON, Anno 1575.

Dr. Sinnings, President.	Dr. Huicke.
Cawdwell.	Masters.
Good.	Forster, Candidat.
Atflow.	Walker.
Smith, Oxon.	Smith, Cantab.
Gyfford.	Baronsdale.
Fryer.	Spiringe, a Stranger, Candid.
Wooton.
Travers of Westchester.

STRANGERS of the COLLEGE.

Dr. Julio.	Mr. Hector.
Dr. Martyn Corymbanck.	Dr. Lopes.

The ELECTORS (which are perpetual Officers of the COLLEGE) were these,

Dr. Huicke.	Dr. Cawdwell.
Masters.	Atflow.
Sinnings.	Walker.
Good.	Smith, Oxon.

THE College consisted, for the most Part about this Time, and before, of such as were Favourers of Popery, and were guilty of divers Disorders. This Account whereof was set up, viz.

THAT the Presidents, Censors, Electors, and other their Officers, were not sworn to the Queen's Majesty, at their Admission, as in other Corporations they were, whereby it came to pass, that Papists continually had occupied the chief Rooms.

THAT Men, expelled their Universities for Religion, by this Means had from Time to Time been received into the College, and thereby advanced in their Credit.

THAT either they did wholly repel, or not without much Importunity, admit any whom they thought to be well affected towards the true Religion now received.

THAT such as had gone beyond the Seas to take the Degree of a Doctor, because they would avoid the Oath of the Supremacy (minitred according to the Statute of our Universities) had shortly upon their Return been admitted without any Oath minitred unto them.

THAT such as had been imprisoned for Religion, or other great Matters, had kept themselves in Office at their own Pleasures, contrary to the College Statutes and their Oaths, and detained in their Hands the College Goods, disdaining to make any Account of the same.

THAT some of the Electors, who had fled for Religion out of the Realm, had been kept in their their Offices, and stoutly defended, as chief Members of the College (being at Louvain) until they died; that other honest and true Subjects might be kept out of the same Rooms.

THAT they made private Conventicles of a few, to bring to pass their Purposes and Elections, which ought, by the College Statutes, to be done on Quarter Days only, and the whole Company being thereunto called.

THAT the College Statutes were generally imperfect, and partly Popish.

THESE Things being declared, and complained of to the Council, by some well affected, in the Year 1575, Reformation of them was earnestly desired.

THE City would now and then (not taking Notice of their Customs and Privileges) lay common Burthens and Duties upon them, as upon other Inhabitants of the City. This made the College once Petition the Queen's Council, That according to their antient Customs and Privileges, they might be relieved from what was laid upon them. And upon their humble Petition, it was then signified to the Lord Mayor, and his Company, That the College should be no more molested in the Premises; yet in the Year 1596, the like Molestation towards them was attempted again: And now they applied to the Privy Council again, That by their honourable Favours they might be protected; and that it might stand with their good Pleasures, that it might be signified to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, that as ever heretofore they had been discharged, so now at this present likewise, they, and the Society of the College of Physicians might be forborn: This was dated February 4, 1596. The President and Society of the College of Physicians of LONDON.

KING James I. granted the College his Charter, dated October 8, Anno Regni 15.

AND King Charles II. granted them a Royal Charter, March 6, Anno Regni 15.

THIS College, according to the Power granted them by these and other Charters, have called before them, that is, the President, or in his Absence, the Vice-President, and the Censor, the Surgeons, Apothecaries, and other Persons, who have practiced Physick without their Allowance; and have sometimes warned them to forbear, and sometimes imposed pecuniary Penalties, or Imprisonment upon them: For they may convene any Physician, or Practicer before them, and examine them concerning their Skill in the Faculty of Physick; and if they shall not appear to their Summons, or appearing, refuse to answer, or to be examined, the College may assess a Penalty or Fine on them, for every Default of Appearance, or Refusal to answer; The Time for one Default not exceeding 40 s. or if any administer unwholsome, or noisome Medicines, he may be fined according to their Discretions, not exceeding 10 l. or Imprisoned, not exceeding fourteen Days, unless for Non-payment of Fine, when it shall be lawful to detain them in Prison till it be paid.

THERE have been several remarkable Suits commenced between the College, and other unlicensed Practisers of Physick; as by Edmund Gardiner, Dr. Bonham, one Butler, one Huybert, and others. The Pleadings whereof are to be found in a Book intitled, The Royal College of Physicians; and an Historical Account of the College's Proceedings, &c. published by Dr. Charles Goodall, Fellow of the said College, Anno 1684.

UPON a Complaint made about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, by Jenkins and Read against the College, which had used some Punishment towards them for evil Practice of Physick, and exercising that Art without their Licence, after a long and careful Hearing on both Parts, Popham, Lord Chief Justice, in the Year 1602, gave his Judgment; the Sum of which was in these Particulars, 1. That there was no sufficient License without the College Seal. 2. That no Surgeon, as such, might Practice Physick; no, not for any Disease, tho' it were the Great Pox. 3. That the Authority of the College was strong and sufficient to commit to Prison. 4. That the Censure of the College, rising from less Mulcts to greater, was equal and reasonable. 5. That it were fit to set to Physician's Bills the Day of the Month, and the Patient's Name. 6. That the Lord Chief Justice could not bail, or deliver, the College's Prisoner, but was obliged by Law to deliver him up to the College's Censure. 7. That a Freeman of LONDON might lawfully be imprisoned by the College. 8. That no Man, tho' never so learned a Physician, or Doctor, might practice in LONDON, or within seven Miles, without the College's Licence.

ALTHO' the College Dispensaries have for some Years been given over, yet it will not be amiss in this Place to give some short Account of them. This Charitable Undertaking was set on foot by some Members of the College, for the Benefit of the Sick Poor, after the Apothecaries had been solicited, in vain, to do the same Thing. And this they were moved unto, not only from a Principle of Charity, but by the Intreaty of a Committee of the Common-Council of LONDON; and to justify themselves from a Slander cast upon them by the Apothecaries, that they took no Care of the Poor. For when the Apothecaries were found Fault with for Practising, they used to alledge in their Justification, That the Poor having no more to give to a Physician, they would perish for Want of being taken Care of, if they (the Apothecaries) did not look after them. This gave Occasion to the Physicians to set their Care of the Poor in the View of the World, not only by giving their Advice Gratis, but also by helping them to Physick at very low Rates, which they did at the Dispensaries, set up, one in the College, where two Physicians sat constantly every Wednesday and Saturday; another in St. Martin's-Lane, near Charing-Cross, where two also sat to give their Advice on Mondays and Thursdays; and a third in St. Peter's-Alley, Cornhill, where the like Attendance was given on Tuesdays and Fridays.

AT these Dispensaries, not a Dram of Physick was given out but by Bill from one or other of the Subscribers to the Undertaking. These Bills were always kept upon a File, and also transcribed into a Book; so that all the rest of the Subscribers, the Patient, or whosoever else that was concerned, might at any Time be fully satisfied what was given. And here the Physician, having no other Interest or Design but to cure and oblige his Patient, prescribed but few Things; and those the most effectual he could think of: For, seeing he had no Profit by the Medicines, he had no Temptation to multiply them, nor to disguise ordinary cheap Things, to obtain great Prices for them. Nor did the Apothecaries, who were employed herein, ever take the Liberty to put one Thing for another, a Cheap for a Dear; because they would have got nothing by it, having a certain Salary, which was not affected by Profit or Loss.

IN these Repositories there was the greatest Assurance possible, that all the Drugs and Preparations were good; the Subscribers by two and two taking their Turns to buy in the choicest Drugs they could meet withal. As to Simple and Compound Preparations, the Head Apothecary at the College perfectly understood them all, as well Chymical as Galenical: And he with his Assistants prepared all the Store of Medicines, not only for the Dispensary there, but for the two others. They were constantly every Day from Morning till Night in this Business, and were always at Hand to make up the Subscribers Bills as they came in. They neither fetch'd in the Bills nor carried out the Medicines, so that all the prescribed Physick was dispensed with the utmost Dispatch and Exactness. The Apothecaries being always on the Spot, no Patient ran the Risk of a Boy's Carelessness or Ignorance; and lastly, Medicines were dispensed at a cheaper Rate, than even a Physician, who should make and give out his own Physick apart, could possibly afford them; for every one must then keep one Servant at least, and employ two Rooms for preparing and dispensing his Medicines; whereas four Apothecaries, and three Dispensaries served all the Subscribers, which did considerably contract the Charge: And this good Husbandry was wholly for the Benefit of the Patients; for the Subscribers had not a Farthing Profit, the Price of the Physick being calculated, merely to defray the Servants Salaries and House-Rent.

NOTWITHSTANDING the charitable Intention of this Undertaking, there were many of the College that did not subscribe to the Dispensary: The following is a List of the Names, and the Copy of an Instrument drawn up by those who did;

The COPY of an Instrument subscribed by the President, Censor, most of the Elects, Senior Fellows, Candidates, &c. of the College of Physicians, in Relation to the Sick Poor.

“ WHEREAS the several Orders of the “ College of Physicians, LONDON, for prescribing Medicines gratis to the Poor Sick of the Cities of LONDON and Westminster, and Parts adjacent, as also the Proposals made by the said College to the Lord Mayor, Court of Aldermen, and Common Council of LONDON; in Pursuance thereof, have hitherto been ineffectual, for that no Method hath been taken to furnish the Poor with Medicines for their Cure, at low and reasonable Rates; we therefore, whose Names are here underwritten, Fellows or Members of the said College, being willing effectually to promote so great a Charity by the Counsel and good-Liking of the President and College, declared in their Comitia, hereby (to wit, each of us severally and apart, and not the one for the other of us) do oblige ourselves to pay to Dr. Thomas Burwell, Fellow and Elect of the said College, the Sum of ten Pounds a-piece of lawful Money of England, by such Proportions, and at such Times as to the major Part of the Subscribers hereto shall seem most convenient, which Money when received by the said Dr. Thomas Burwell, is to be by him expended in preparing and delivering Medicines to the Poor at their intrinsic Value, in such Manner, and at such Times, and by such Orders and Directions, as by the major Part of the Subscribers hereto, shall in Writing be hereafter appointed and directed for that Purpose. In Witness whereof we have hereunto set our Hands and Seals this Twenty-second Day of December 1696.

THIS List shews that the Undertaking had the Sanction of a College Act, and was not a Project carried on by five or six Members, as some who at first opposed it unjustly insinuated.

So much for the Dispensary; and to conclude with the College, or Corporation in general, the Lord Chancellor (or Keeper) the Chief Justices of the King's-Bench and Common-Pleas, and the Chief Baron of the Exchequer, were constituted Visitors of the said Corporation to determine, alter, mitigate, reverse, or confirm any Matter, Cause, &c. which may be brought before them.

THE Armorial Ensigns of this Corporation are, Sable, a Hand in Chief, feeling the Pulse of an Arm in Fess; and a Pomgranet in Base, all Or, the two first garnished Argent.

Of GRAMMAR and CHARITY-SCHOOLS.

ALTHOUGH there had been three great Schools, belonging to the chief Churches in LONDON, in the Reign of King Stephen, as is before-mentioned in Chap. XI. yet gross Ignorance and Want of Learning had so far prevailed, in the Time of King Henry VI. that they were quite neglected and gone to Decay: Wherefore, for the Restoring of Learning, four Clergymen, the Parsons of Parishes in the City, petitioned the Parliament sitting in the 25th Year of that King's Reign, that they and their Successors might be allowed to set up Schools in their four respective Churches, and appoint School-Masters in them, viz, in Great Albhallows, St. Andrew's Holborn, St. Peter's in Cornhill, and St. Mary Colechurch.

THE Petition is now among the Records in the Tower, and ran in these Words:

Petition to the Parliament,
for setting up
Schools, Ann.
25 Henry VI.

Archbishops of Canterbury for the Time being.

NINE Years after, viz. 34 Henry VI. Five other Schools were set up in other Churches in LONDON, by the Care of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Bishop of LONDON, confirmed by the King's Letters Patents; to wit, one within the Church-yard of St. Paul's, a Second at the Collegiate Church of St. Martin's Le Grand, another at St. Mary de Arcubus, that is, Bow-Church in Cheapside, another at St. Dunstan's in the East, and the fifth at the Hospital of St. Anthony's.

THIS was done to check and suppress other smaller Schools set up by illiterate Men, who did the Youth more Harm than Good, as is hinted in the King's Letters Patent following:

T. R.

Apud Weſtm. 6 Die Maii.

THERE was alſo an Act of Parliament to confirm this.

OF theſe old Schools, St. Anthony's ſtood the longeſt; but they have been all many Years diſſolved, not but that there are others and better in their Rooms. The Difference between theſe and the latter Schools is, that though theſe were Publick and Common Schools, yet they were not Free; only ſuch Boys as were hopeful, and their Parents poor, had their Schooling paid for by the voluntary Charity of Noblemen, Merchants, and Others: But the Schools which, of later Times, are called Free-Schools, do much exceed them, in that they are Houſes founded by pious Men, and a yearly competent Maintenance ſettled upon the Teachers, on Condition, that they teach freely a certain Number of the Children of the Pariſh where they are built, without taking any Salary or Reward from their Parents or Friends. But firſt of the old Schools.

St. ANTHONY'S SCHOOL.

St. Anthony's School.

THAT of St. Anthony's, though it be now extinct, yet for the Antiquity and Fame of it, when it ſtood, we are bound to go and viſit even in the Ruins. It was ſituated in Broad-ſtreet-Ward, in the Pariſh of St. Bennet Fink, and near the Place where the French Church now ſtands in Treadneedle-ſtreet. This School was large, and (before St. Paul's School was founded) of the chief Account in LONDON; and many eminent Scholars were bred up in it, of which Sir Thomas More was one, whoſe Maſter was named Nicholas Holt, a Man of Fame and Learning in thoſe Days. The School was Part of an Hoſpital well endowed, dedicated to St. Anthony of Vienna, which at length Edward IV. annexed and appropriated to the Collegiate Church of Windſor, to enjoy the ſame with all the Eſtate thereunto belonging, to their proper Uſe, when it ſhould become void by Death, Reſignation, or otherwiſe. The Revenues of the School being at length embezzled, it is now come to nothing: Yet it was in Being in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Time, when one Hilton, a grave and good Man, was Maſter. But more of the Antiquities of this School may be read when we come to Broad-ſtreet-Ward.

St. PAUL'S SCHOOL.

THE next Foundation appointed for the Education of Youth, both for Antiquity and Repute, is St. Paul's School, built, and well endowed, by an excellent, pious, and learned Clergyman, Dr. John Colet; Dean of St. Paul's, the only ſurviving Son of Sir Henry Colet, Knt. Citizen, and Mercer of LONDON, and twice Lord Mayor of the ſaid City. This School was founded, and a Maſter for it provided in the Year 1509, for One hundred and fifty three Children to be taught freely: The Dean, perhaps, in that pre- ciſe Number, having his Mind upon the like Number of great Fiſhes caught by St. Peter in that miraculous Draught, upon the Direction that Chriſt gave to caſt down the Net on the Right Side of the Ship, John xxi. 11. And ſuch was his generous and liberal Mind, that he ſet- tled his whole Patrimony upon it in his Life-time. The School-houſe is large and ſpacious, fronting the Street on the Eaſt of St. Paul's Cathedral. It conſiſteth of eight Classes, or Forms; in the firſt whereof Children learn their Rudiments; and ſo according to their Proficiency are advanced unto the other Forms till they riſe to the Eighth. Whence, being commonly made perfect Grammarians, good Orators and Poets, well in- ſtructed in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and ſometimes in other Oriental Languages, they are removed to the Universities; and many of them enjoy Exhibitions, ſome of Ten Pounds a Year for Seven Years (if they tarry ſo long) towards their Maintenance there. The School is governed and taught by two Maſters, viz. an High Ma- ſter and a Surmaſter, and a Chaplain: Whoſe cuſtomary Office was to read the Latin Prayers in the School (framed for the peculiar Uſe thereof) and to inſtruct the Children of the two firſt Forms of the Elements of the Latin Tongue, and alſo in the Catechiſm and Chriſtian Manners; for which there is a Room called the Vestibulum, being the Anti-Room to the School, where the Youth are to be initiated into the Grounds and Principles of Chriſtian Knowledge, as a good and proper Introduction into other Human Learning. The pious Founder dedicated this School to the Child JESUS, (who ſat among the Doctors at twelve Years old) as the great and compaſſionate Patron of the Children here to be educated. This Part of the Found- er's Epitaph ſhews:

Quique Scholam ſtruxit celebrem cognomine JESU.

So that the true Name of this School is Jesus's School, rather than Paul's School; but the Saint hath robbed his Maſter of his Title.

THE Founder delighted in Inſcriptions and Mottos, which he appointed to be ſet up in ſeveral Parts and Places of the School, as ſhort and pithy Intimations of his Mind and Inten- tions, which were all there remaining before the great Fire. Over the Windows on the Out- ſide, toward the Street, were theſe Words en- graven in great Capital Letters: SCHOLA CATECHIZATIONIS PUERORUM, IN CHRISTI OPT. MAX. FIDE ET BONIS LITERIS. Over the School-Door, INGRE- DERE UT PROFICIAS. Upon each Win- dow on the Inſide were to be read theſe Words painted on the Glaſs: AUT DOCE, AUT DISCE, DISCE, AUT DISCEDE; suggesting both to Scholar and Teacher their Duty or Doom.

IN the Vestibulum; which was the Anti-chamber to the School Room, was his Inscription in Capitals upon the Walls, shewing for what End and Purpose this Apartment was intended. HOC VESTIBULO CATECHIZENTUR PUERI IN FIDE, MORIBUSQUE CHRISTIANIS, NEQUE NON PRIMIS GRAMMATICES RUDIMENTIS INSTITUANTUR, PRIUSQUAM AD PROXIMAM HUIUS SCHOLÆ CLASSEM ADMITTANTUR. In another Place of this Vestibulum was engraven, PUERITIE CHRISTIANÆ JOH. COLET. DEC. SÆC. PAULI HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT: Denoting how qualified, (viz. with Christian Knowledge and Manners) it was the Founder's Will those should be, who were to be Scholars here. Over the Door going into the School Room, out of the Vestibule, is this Verse.

Mente { Velis }
          { Possis } hac Lege recludor.
          { Adfis }

IN the School Room over the Door was this Inscription: PUERI IN HAC SCHOLA GRATIS ERUDIENDI, C. L. III. TANTUM AD NUMERUM SEDIUM. Underneath which, since the re-building the School by the Mercers, for an ever-grateful Remembrance, these Lines were added:

Quod Faustum sit & Felix.

“ Ad feræ Posteritatis Imitationem, Aternitatem Famæ suæ: Post luctuosam Urbis Londinensis deflagrationem clō lōc LXVI, amplissima MERCERORUM Societas Fidem Fundatori MAKAPITHTON, datam sanctissimè per solvens, Scholam hanc de integro extruendam instaurandamque, curavit: Perfecitq; Dno. RICHARDO FORD, Equite, Urbis Præfecto, Custode vero, totiusq; Negotii assiduo diligentissimoq; Procuratore, Dno. ROBERTO WARE.

Dignos laude Viros Musa vetat mori.

AT the upper End of the School, facing the Door, was a decent Cathedra, or Chair, placed, somewhat advanced, for the High Master to sit in, when he pleased to teach and dictate there: And over it was a lively Effigies (and of exquisite Art) of the Head of Dr. Colet, cut (as it seemed) either in Stone or Wood, and over Head in Capitals: DEO OPT. MAX. TRINO ET UNI JOHANNES COLETUS DEC. SÆC. PAULI LONDIN. HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT. On which Figure an excellent Poet, and once a Scholar of this School, made these Verses.

Eloquio juvenes ubi Lillius ille polivit,

In Statua Spiras, magne Coletæ tua,

Quam si Praxiteles, fecisset magnus, & ille

Forsitan aquasset, non superasset opus,

Hæc Salva Statua, divina Forma Coleti

Temporibus longis non peritura, manet.

BUT this Figure was destroyed with the School in the great Fire, yet was afterwards found in the Rubbish by a curious Man, and Searcher into the City Antiquities, who observed, that it was cast and hollow, by a curious Art now lost.

As soon as Colet had built his School, he provided a Book for his young Scholars; which he called, An Introduction of the Parts of Speaking for Children and young Beginners, into Latin Speech: Which is the Ground and first Draught of the Book now called the Accidence. By this Introduction he put the first Rudiments into an easier and apter Method for Learning than any was before: And this he recommended in a Prefatory Epistle to William Lilly the Master, to teach it the Children; Dated the Calends of August 1509.

VOL. I.

ABOUT this Time he procured from his Friend Erasmus Roterodamus, another Book for his School, namely, that entitled, De Copia Verborum; for which he promised the said Erasmus (while he was once walking with him in his Garden) fifteen Angels, as a Gratuity: And no question Erasmus was well pleased to contribute something to such a Foundation, which he himself took Occasion sometimes to commend and extol, as he did in a Letter to Colet, Anno 1512, in these Words: Ludum literarium longe pulcherrimum ac magnificentissimum instituisti, ubi sub electissimis ac probatissimis præceptoribus Britannica Pubes rudibus statim annis simul & Christum & optimas imbiberet literas; i. e. “ You have erected a most beautiful and noble School, where, under the choicest and most approved Masters, the English Youth, might soon after their Childhood, imbibe both Christ and the best Learning.

IN the Year 1513, Colet sent Lilly another Book for the School, of the Construction of the Eight Parts of Speech, which was done by Erasmus also, upon the earnest Suggestion of Colet, being nothing but the Emendations of, and Additions to, such a Work, first done by Lilly. This was the Grounds of our Latin Syntaxis.

THIS Book De Constructione went for some Time under Erasmus's Name; yet Erasmus declined to have it reckoned his, as being Lilly's Ground-work: And Lilly, on the other Hand, modestly refused to have himself made the Author, after such considerable Changes and Improvements, made by Erasmus; who in the Year 1515, wrote a Preface before this Book, now commonly called the Syntaxis, wherein he publicly disowned it to be his, out of respect to Lilly; concluding with these Words, Verum hæc mihi præfari visum est, ne post hæc quisquam, ut meum amplectatur; i. e. “ But this I thought good to preface, that none hereafter might take the Book as mine.

Colet also framed a short Catechism in English, for the Youth of his School, which he obliged all to learn, and was used in the Times of Popery to be bound up at the Beginning of the Accidence. It consisted of the Articles of the Christian Faith; the Doctrine of the Seven Sacraments; and Explanation of the Love of God, of our own selves, and of our Neighbours; and lastly, divers short Precepts for a good Life. To which he joined in the Latin, the Apostle's Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ave Maria, and two short Prayers; one to the Virgin MARY, and the other to JESUS, the Guardian of the School. And if the superstitious Parts of this Catechism had been laid aside, and the rest, which is very pious, had been retained for the Use of the School, it would have been well done, and the Founder's Will more complied with.

THE primary Institution, Ordinances, Appointments, and Documents of this School, may be gathered from an old Statute Book, wrote by the Founder's own Hand, and by him delivered to Lilly; which is thus inscribed, Hunc libellum ego Joannes Colet tradidi manibus, magistri Lillii, xviii die Junii, Anno Dom. Mccccxviii. It begins, Johannis Coleti Fundatoris Scholæ manu sua Propria prologus. “ John Colet, Son of Henry Colet, Dean of St. Paul's, desiring nothing

BUT now the Rents and Incomes of this School, by the good Husbandry and Faithfulness of the Company of Mercers, are greatly advanced: So that the Salaries of the Masters are more than doubled, and many Exhibitions; some of Ten Pounds, and some of Six Pounds odd Money, are granted towards the Maintenance of the Scholars who go away from the School to the Universities, payable for seven Years, if they tarry so long there.

This School was burnt down in the Fire of London 1666; but built up much after the same Manner and Proportion that it was before; together with the Library, and an House added at the South End for the Second Master, whose Dwelling before, from the first Foundation of the School, was in the Old Change: This House hath a very handsome Front, answerable to the High Master's House at the North End, on which is engraven,

Aedes Præceptoris Grammatices.

Here follows a Catalogue of the Masters of this School, from the first Foundation to the present Time.

Their NAMES:

A. D.
1512.

William Lilly, High Master, placed by the Founder, of whom Erasmus, in his Epistle before the Syntaxis, gave this Character, viz. Utriusque Literaturæ haud vulgariter peritus & recte instituendæ pubis Artifex. i. e. That he was a Man singularly skilled in both Kinds of Literature, [Latin and Greek] and an Artist in the right bringing up of Youth. Being a good Poet, he made the Latin Rules in our Grammar for the Genders of Nouns, and the Preterperfect Tenses and Supines of Verbs, putting them into Hexameter Verse, for Youth's easier learning and remembring. He composed also those excellent Rules in Latin Verse, called Qui mihi, for the Instruction of the Children, his Scholars, in good Manners. He bred up many great Scholars, and such as afterward proved famous in their Times; as Lupset, Sir Anthony Denny, Sir Edward North, Sir William Paget, Leland the Antiquary, who acknowledges it in one of his Epigrams: Instructor Lillius ille fuit. After ten Years, or more, he was succeeded by

John Rightwise, or Ritwis (in Latin Justus) who had been Second Master before, and was Lilly's Son-in-Law, having married his Daughter Dionysia. He was born in Norfolk, bred at Eaton School and King's College in Cambridge, where he was admitted in 1508; reputed an excellent Poet, and wrote these Verses upon Lilly his Father-in-Law, and Predecessor:

*Vivere perpetuis se possunt nomina Chartis,
Ac cineri quæquam est fas superesse suo;*

Crede Tuo hoc, LILLI; Doctrinæ munere claro,

Dignus es æterna posteritate frui.

Leland hath an Epigram to this Master intitled, Ad Justum Paulinæ Scholæ Moderatorem: Beginning,

Qui Linguas teneras Nova refingis

Quadam Dexteritate nec Ruinam

Musarum Pateris Nitentium ullam;

Tu nunc, Juste, meum Manu benigna

Carmen suscipe

THIS Rightwise, made the Tragedy of Dido out of Virgil, and acted a Part in it with his Scholars before Cardinal Wolsey, with great Applause.

HE revised and augmented Lilly's Propia quæ Maribus, and As in præsentis; and published them with an Interpretation of the Words in them. After ten Years Labour here, he also gave Place to

Richard Jones: Next him succeeded

Thomas Freeman, who also spent ten Years in the laborious Employment of the Education of Youth, and then came into his Province,

John Cook, M. A. admitted into King's College Cambridge, Anno 1533. He seems to have been a Native of Lincolnshire, and School-Fellow to the Lord Treasurer Burleigh; as may be conjectured from a Letter of the said Cook's to the said Lord, thankfully acknowledging the obliging Reception that great Minister of State once gave him, after a long Absence and Intermision of Acquaintance. Cum Usus aliquis (as the Letter ran) a primo pene Studiorum nostrorum Curriculo, vix interesset; i. e. When there had scarce been any Conversation between them from the first Course of their Studies to that Time.

THIS Letter he began with a good Sentence, and a good Principle; which, to leave some Remembrance of the Man, is here set down. Equidem in communi Vita ac Societate Hominum interipsos, nihil prius neq; libero Homine dignius esse reor, quam Animo ut propenso sinus ad eos juvandos, qui Opæ altera indigent; eo & enim Ortum omne, editiq; in Lucem sumus, bene, ut mereamur alter de altero, præsertim in Amicorum Inopia ac Necessitudine.

HE went from the School to a good Living in Somersetshire, called North Cadbury; which he obtained from the Patron, the Earl of Huntingdon, by the Intercession of his said noble Friend the Lord Treasurer.

THERE is a Copy of handsome Latin Verses of this Cook's Composing, set before Dr. Thomas Wilson's Book of Usury. He that succeeded him was,

William Malim, of King's College in Cambridge, who afterwards lived at the Court; Son, perhaps, to John Malim, Physician, buried in St. Peter's Cornhill, LONDON, and that gave 40 l. to the Poor of that Parish. A good Scholar, writ writ a fine Hand, and Master of a very good Latin Stile; and had been a great Traveller, had seen Constantinople, Antioch, Jerusalem, and many other famous Cities in Asia; upon his Return he was presented to Secretary Cecyl, by Sir Ambrose Cave. The Secretary retained him at his Table; and he, with the great Earl of Leicester, recommended him to the Queen. Sir William Cecyl afterwards employed him to retrieve what he could of the Writings of Sir Thomas Chaloner, and he prepared and published his ingenious Work, De Repub. Anglerum, wrote in Latin Verse. He had two great Patrons, viz. the aforesaid Cecyl, afterwards Lord Treasurer, and the great Earl of Leicester. After he had been near seven Years Master of this School, he grew quite weary of his Work in Rolling of Sisyphus's Stone, as he called it, and applied himself to his great Patron, the Lord Treasurer, acquainting him with his Resolution of Resigning and Praying his Favour to provide him some other more agreeable, and more easy, and more profitable Employment. (For in those Times the Salary was not so weighty and encouraging, as since it hath been.) He complained to his aforesaid Patron, Me nimium Paupertate gravari, Libertate privari, conculcari Doctrinam, Spes meas Exinaniri. He desired not, he said, a Freedom from all Labours, but with Ovid;

Mitius Exilium, pauloque quietius opto.

He wished for a milder and a little more quiet Banishment; concluding his Letter with these Verses;

Adsis tu Cynosura mihi, ter Nobilis Heros,

Ne tenui in mensa desit mediocre salinum;

Ne nimium fractum me rodant tristis Egestas,

Neve ego perpetuo curis involvar acerbis,

Hec mea vota precor supplex ne segnius hauri,

Candide Mæcenas, unus qui singula possis.

Sic tibi multiplices currant feliciter anni,

Prospera magnanimi numeros & lustra Metelli.

HE stayed about two Years after this Application to the Lord Treasurer, and then departed, and seems to have had a Prebend of Lincoln, and to have been afterwards one of the Masters of Eaton School.

John Harrison, M. A. was also of King's College, Cambridge; a great Antiquary for Coins, and English History. He had some Contest with the Company of Mercers, about the Augmentation of his Salary, which, by an Order, was considerably increased to him and his Successors. He continued Master of St. Paul's School, fifteen Years.

Richard Mulcaster, M. A. of a good Family in Carlisle in Cumberland, was also bred in Eaton School, and chosen thence to King's College in Cambridge; thence elected Student of Christ's Church, Oxon, Anno 1555. He seems to have been the first Master of Merchant Taylor's School, in the Parish of St. Lawrence Pountney, LONDON. For he was chosen thither, Anno 1561, where, after he had spent 35 Years, he became Master of St. Paul's School. For the Use of this School he wrote a Catechism in Latin, in Hexameter and Pentameter Verses. He published two Books in English, while he was Master of Merchant Taylor's School, about the Instruction of Children, in 4to. The former he presumed to dedicate to the Queen, because it portended a common Good: For in it he laid down Positions for the training up of Children in Learning and Health. The latter, which he called, The Elementarie, teaching the right Writing of English, he dedicated to the Earl of Leicester.

HE was a Man of great Account for his Learning in those Times; And for his Knowledge in the Oriental Languages, was valued by that great English Rabbi, Hugh Broughton. He had the Honour to be Master to Bishop Andrews, while he governed Merchant Taylor's School. He died Parson of Stanford Rivers in Essex, whither he retired two or three Years before his Death. Next him came,

Alexander Gill, born in Lincolnshire, M. A. of Corpus Christi College, Oxon. He wrote a Book intitled, Logonomia, for amending and rectifying the Writing of the English Language; and being a Divine, as well as a Critic, he wrote a Tract concerning the Trinity in Unity, against a certain Anabaptist: And another Book entitled, Sacred Philosophy of Holy Scripture. He was buried in Mercers Chapel.

Alexander Gill, D. D. Son of the said Alexander. He had been Second Master before, under his Father; he was esteemed one of the best Latin Poets in his Time; many Pieces of his Poetry are extant. He remained Master of this School the shortest Time of any Master before or since, being removed in the Year 1640, perhaps for his Severity, yet he had an Annuity of 25 l. allowed him.

John Langley, born near Banbury in Oxfordshire, of Magdalen Hall, Oxon, first Master of the College School in Glocester, from thence chosen to St. Paul's. A general Scholar, and especially a great Antiquary in Matters of our own Country: Of the Stories and Curiosities whereof, he made a considerable Collection in his Travels. He was known and beloved by the learned Selden; he composed a short Rhetorick, and a compendious Prosodia, for the Use of his School, besides divers Amendments, Additions, and Explanations of the Latin and Greek Grammars used by his Scholars. He had a very awful Presence and Speech, that struck a mighty Respect and Fear into his Scholars, which however wore off after they were a little used to him; and his Management of himself towards them was such, that they both loved and feared him. He was a single Man, and died in the Year 1657, and was buried in Mercers Chapel, all the Scholars attending at his Funeral, walking before the Corpse (hung with Verses instead of Escutcheons) from the School through Cheapside, with White Gloves on. His Funeral Sermon was preached by one of his learned Friends, Dr. Edward Reynolds (afterwards Bishop of Norwich) upon this Text, Acts vii. And Moses was learned in all the Learning of the Egyptians; wherein both Learning and the learned Man deceased were much commended: And the Sermon was printed.

Samuel Cromleholme, or Cromlum, of Corpus Christi College, Oxon, who was also removed from the Government of Glocester School thither, where he had once been Second Master. And such an Opinion had Mr. Langley of him, that on his Death-bed, he recommended him to the Mercers Company, as the fittest Man to succeed him. He was Πολύλατος one that understood a great many Languages, and exceeded his Predecessor in that Sort of Learning. In his Time St. Paul's School was burnt by the great Fire; and he lost an incomparable Library, for he was very curious in Books; but he lived to teach School there again, after the beautiful Rebuilding of it. He died a married Man, but without Issue.

Thomas Gale, D. D. a Yorkshire man, bred at Westminster School, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, an excellent Grecian and Antiquarian, especially for the History of this Kingdom. A married married Man, and had Children: He resigned, being made Dean of York. His eldest Son, Roger Gale, Esq; is at this Time one of the Commissioners of Excise, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and Treasurer thereof; a Gentleman of great Learning and Merit.

1697.

John Postlethwait, born in Cumberland, bred in Merton College, Oxon; he was chosen from the Free-School, in St. Martin's in the Fields, founded by Dr. Thomas Tenison, while he was Rector of the said Parish, but afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, who upon the Experience and thorough Knowledge he had of him, recommended him in the most ample Manner to the Mercers Company, by the following Testimonial.

The Character of a good School-
Master.

“ I HAVE known Mr. Postlethwait nigh
“ twenty Years. He hath been long
“ the Upper School-Master at St. Martin's; I “ have never known him wilfully absent for two “ Hours on any Day in School-time. He is a “ Man of great Abilities in Learning, and par“ ticularly in that which relates to Grammar, “ in the Knowledge of the Hebrew, Greek, and “ Latin Tongues. He is of a very even Tem“ per, and one who studieth the Temper and “ Genius of Youth. His Scholars are in Awe
“ of him, by Reason of his grave Deportment
“ and good Discipline, but he doth not terrify
“ them with Severity. He hath sent forth di“ vers eminent Scholars; and I do believe, for “ Instance Sake, that there are few in the Na“ tion equal (for their Time) to Wallis of Mag- “ dalen College, Oxford, and Mr. Fawcet of “ Bennet College in Cambridge, late his Scho“ lars. He is very careful of the Religion and “ Manners of those under his Care, and taketh “ Pains with divers of them every Lord's-Day “ before Church-time. His Conversation is se“ rious and discreet, and hath nothing of Pe-“ dantry in it. I have said very much of him,
“ and yet I cannot do him Justice in saying “ less.

THO. CANTUAR.

UPON his Death, succeeded Philip Ayscough, M. A.

AND to him Mr. Benjamin Moreland, the present High Master.

MR. James Greenwood is at this Time Sur-master; and

MR. Timothy Crump, Chaplain, or Under Master.

FROM this School, by the Care and Diligence of these learned Men, have gone forth, from Time to Time, many who have proved able Statesmen, Prelates, Divines, Physicians,
Civilians; and others raised to great Honours.
Among which Number were Sir Anthony Denny,
Sir Edward North, Sir William Paget, Lupset
Leland, in antient Times; and in later Days,
Whitaker, the learned Professor of Divinity in Cambridge, and Disputant against the Papists;
Dr. Cumberland, Bishop of Peterborough, that great Philosopher and Mathematician, as well as Divine; Dr. Meggot, late Dean of Winchester;
Samuel Pepys, Esq; sometime Secretary to the Admiralty; Dr. Benjamin Calamy; Sir Charles
Scarborough, one of the most learned Physicians of his Time; the present Lord Wilmington;
and, to conclude, the most victorious John,
Duke of Marlborough, one of the greatest Generals of any Age or any Country.

THE Reverend Founder of this School saw something of the Success of it in his own Time
Sir Thomas More, who had a great Friendship for him, in a Letter he wrote to him, compared his School to the Trojan Horse, out of which the Grecians issued to surprize the City. In the N<sup>o</sup> 12. VOL. I.

like Manner, said he, Out of this, your School, many have come that have subverted and overthrown all Ignorance and Rudeness.

BESIDES the Founder, the School hath had other Benefactors.

THE Lady Camden, Wife to Sir Baptist
Hickes, Lord Camden, sometime a Mercer in Cheapside, gave certain Exhibitions of 10*l.* per Ann. to such of the Scholars as went thence to Trinity College in Cambridge, besides other Exhibitions.

The SCHOOL at MERCERS CHAPEL.

THE School at Mercers Chapel is the next to be mentioned, having the same Patrons and Governors with St. Paul's School, viz. the Company of Mercers, who pay the Master forty Pounds a Year, and allow him an House, for which he is bound to teach twenty five Scholars.
This School is of great Antiquity, and hath been under the Patronage of the Mercers so long, that the Founder is forgot; unless it was the same that founded St. Thomas of Acons, Thomas Fitz- thebald, who married Thomas à Becket's Sister; who, in the Reign of King Henry II. founded, in this Place, an Hospital for a Master and Brethren, Knights Hospitalers: Which upon the Surrender of it to King Henry VIII. Anno 1538, was purchased by the Mercers, who continued the School, whether by Contract, or voluntary good Will, is not certainly known; only, thus much appears, that when, by Act of Parliament, 25 Henry VI. four Grammar Schools were appointed to be opened in LONDON for the Education of the City Youth; one of these was to be kept in the Hospital of St. Thomas of Acons, or Colechurch adjoining to it; and the Master of the said House, or Parson of the said
Parish, from Time to Time, to place a fit School-Master there.

MR. William Baxter, well known by his Edition of Horace, was many Years Master of this School: At his Death he was succeeded by the Reverend Mr. Swinburn; as he was by the present Master, the Reverend Mr. Morrison.

THOUGH this School joins to Mercers Chapel, which is in Cheapside, yet the Entrance into it is in the Old-Fury.

MERCHANT TAYLORS SCHOOL.

ANOTHER School of great Fame and Reputation is, that situated in the Parish of St. Laurence Pountney, near Caning-street, and erected Anno 1561, 3 Elizabeth, by the Worshipful Company of Merchant Taylors of LONDON; Emanuel Lucar being then Master of the said Company. Mr. Richard Hills, sometime Master of the Company, gave 500*l.*
toward the Purchase of the Place where the said School stands, which was called, The Manor of the Rose; an House belonging to a Duke of Buckingham.

THIS School consisteth of six Forms, where near three hundred Boys have their Education;
whereof by the Statutes of the School an hundred are taught Gratis, fifty at 2*s.* 6*d.* a Quarter, and an hundred at 5*s.* a Quarter. And for the due instructing of these, the School maintains a Master (whose Salary is 10*l.* a Year, but his Benefits otherwise very considerable) and three Ushers. And for the better Inquiry into the Proficiency of all the Scholars, there is an Order appointed

Merchant Taylors School.

T t

appointed for the Probation of the School, to be made only by the Master and the three Ushers. The first Probation to be on the eleventh Day of March; the Second on the eleventh of September; the Third on the eleventh of December; not being Sundays, and then upon the next Day following. And there are excellent Orders set down in the Registry, (kept in the School-Library) to the Number of Thirteen, Directory of the Master in this Business, as to his Probation and Trial of the Abilities of all the Boys that learn there.

IN the Year 1645, the Company of Merchant Taylors appointed a fourth Probation, upon the Motion of Mr. Dugard, then Chief Master of this Grammar School, viz. that there shall be another private Probation of the Scholars, besides these three which are already settled by the Orders of the School: And this is on the 15th Day of June Yearly. The precise Manner of this Examination is set down in the School Register; and all the Orders thereof allowed and approved, under the Hands of some of the greatest Scholars and Divines in those Times viz. John Overal, D. D. Dean of St. Paul's; John Dove, D. D. John Spencer, D. D. Nic. Fenton, D. D. John Childerly, D. D.

It was further thought fit afterwards, for the Satisfaction of the Master and Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Merchant Taylors, as well for the true and faithful Performance of the Probation of the Master and the three Ushers, as likewise to know what Boys profit most, and be the best and likeliest Scholars, that the Probators themselves should have their Examination and Trial, to be done at two several Times every Year; and this Examination to be made by two judicious Men, well learned both in Greek and Latin, being by the Master and Wardens thereunto requested, two or three Days before. The Place of Examination to be in the South Part of the School, commonly called the Chapel: The Time to be between the 11th and 12th Days of the Months of March and September: And the whole Business to be so ordered, that the Examination be fully done between the Hours of six and eleven: The Master and Wardens, or two of them, to be at the School with two learned Men, at six o' the Clock in the Morning.

THE Masters of this famous School, from the first Foundation of it to the present Time, are as follow:

A. D.
1561.

Richard Mulcaster, first Master. He was bred at Eaton School, and removed to King's College in Cambridge; afterwards became a Student of Christ Church, Oxon; noted for his excellent Skill in Grammar and Philological Learning; unanimously chosen the first Master of this School: Many Years after removed to St. Paul's. He became Parson of Stamford Rivers in Essex, where he died Anno 1611.

1586.

Henry Wilkinson.

1592.

Edmund Smith.

1599.

William Hayne. This Gentleman gave several Books to Sion College Library, when it was first erected, viz. Stevens's Thesaurus; an Hebrew Bible of Platin's Edition, &c.

1624.

Nicholas Gray.

1631.

John Edwards.

1634.

William Staple.

1644.

William Dugard.

1649.

John Stevens: Who left in the School Registry this single Memorial of himself, in regard of his short Continuance here.

Res Deus nostras celeri citatas Turbine versat.

1650.

William Dugard.

THE Succeedings of these two last named were thus expressed in a Distick:

Dugardum sequitur Stephanus, Stephanumque vicissim

Dugardus: Sortes versat utrinque Deus.

THIS Dugard was a very diligent, exact, and excellently learned Man in all Grammatical Learning, and under his Care and Influence the School greatly flourished. He printed several Books for the Use of his School, and had a good Strain in Oratory and Poetry. A Stroke or two of his Poetry in Greek, we have of his own Hand extant in the School Registry, where, by the way, we may see how he stood affected to the Mutations in the Age wherein he lived; first upon the Beheading of King Charles I.

Μάρτυς ὑπὲρ θεῶν πατριῶν τε νόμων ὅχ' ἄριστος

Σκηπτεῖ χων ΚΑΡΟΛΟΣ μὲν ἀλειτέων χερσὶν ἐπιπλεῖν.

Ἰλερμῶς ὁ Δεγδάρις.

Martyr pro divinis patriisque Legibus

Gulielmus Dugard.

For which Verses perhaps, or for his Affection to that King, (for I find no other Cause) he might be discharged the School at that Time.

ANOTHER Greek Distick remaining in the said Registry under his Hand, is upon the Usurper Oliver Cromwell's Mother, buried in Westminster; which perhaps is the only Epitaph extant upon her:

Ἐπὶ τῆς μητρός τῆς Ὀλιβέρος Κρομγουέλλου ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τῆς Ὁσιμοναστείας κειμένης.

Μήτηρ τῆς τέκνης καταράται ἐνθάδε κείται.

Ὅς δύο μὲν βασιλεῖς τέ καὶ ἄλλοι τρεῖς βασιλείας.

i. e.

In Matrem OLIVERI CROMWELLI in Ecclesia Westmonasteriensis sepultam.

Mater nati execrabilis hic jacet:

Qui duos Reges, triaque regna perdidit.

THIS Dugard, after he had been Master seven Years, was dismiss'd the School in the Year 1661, for breaking some Orders of the Company, having been publickly warned and admonished of it before: And departing, he left this Verse to his Successor concerning the School Registry, which hitherto he diligently had kept himself;

Munere cedens

Hanc Successori scribendi Lampada trado.

Gul. Dugard, haud ita pridem Mercatorum Scissorum, jam vero privatae Scholae in vico de Coleman-street, Moderator, Nov. 21, 1661.

HE had such a Reputation, that when he opened his private School in Coleman-street, he had gathered One hundred and ninety three Scholars, within eight Months.

John Goad, D. D. a Person of good Learning; but put out by the Company for too just Suspicions of being Popishly affected: He was succeeded by Hatcliff.

Ambrose Bonwick, a Nonjuror.

Matthew Shorting, D. D. formerly of Jesus College.

Thomas Parcel, B. D.

Matthew

1661.

Matthew Smith, B. D. died in the Year 1730, and was succeeded by Mr. Creech, the present Master.

The three Ushers, or Under Masters, at present are,

Mr. Fayting.

Mr. Brooker.

Mr. Burn.

THE Library belonging to this School, was built at the Charge of the Company of Merchant Taylors, who have supported this School with a Master and three Ushers above an hundred and seventy Years, at their own Cost and Charges: And after the Fire, rebuilt it, with Houses for the Master and Ushers. It is a Brick Building; but has in the Front eight large Stone Pilasters of the Ionick Order; the Place in which it is situated is called Suffolk-lane. There was before this, a new Court added to it by Archbishop Laud.

THERE are several Scholars elected out of this School, annually, to St. John's College in Oxford, where there are also forty six Fellowships belonging to them.

SIR Thomas White, who had been Lord-Mayor of LONDON, founded St. John's College, Anno 1557, and appointed this School as a Seminary or Nursery for it.

THERE was a Feast began in the Year 1698, by the Gentlemen brought up in this School, which, it were to be wished, had had a longer Continuance, the Design being so good; for the Collections then made were to be laid out upon Exhibitions, and to be allowed to such of the Scholars as were superannuated, and had lost the Election.

RATCLIFF SCHOOL.

Ratcliff School.

IN Ratcliff, in the Parish of Stepney, is another Free-School, convenient for the Inhabitants of those Parts of the City, founded in the Reign of King Henry VIII. by Nicholas Gibson, Grocer, (and, in the Year 1538, one of the Sheriffs,) for Sixty poor Mens Children, to be there taught by a School-master, who was to have a Salary of 10*l.* a Year; and an Usher, who was to have 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* This School is under the Care of the Company of Coopers, LONDON. Here the famous Bishop Andrews was some Time a Scholar. Out of this School, of later Times, some of the Scholars yearly entertain the Natives of Stepney Parish with Speeches and Verses in Latin and Greek, as they pass by it, on the Day of their Anniversary Feast. To this School is an Alms-house annexed for twenty poor People, by the same Founder.

THIS charitable Foundation in Ratcliff, (as to the State of it at present) consists of an Hospital as well as of a School: To which belongs a Chapel, where Prayers are read to those that belong to it. Thirty Boys are here taught free, besides other Children that resort thither for good Learning. The School-master's Salary is 36*l.* per Annum. To which belongeth also an Usher, who teacheth Arithmetick and the Mathematicks: They want Exhibitions for the Encouragement of the Scholars, to fit themselves to be sent thence to the Universities. To this Foundation belong also twenty Pensioners, fourteen Women and six Men; the Former have 20*s.* a Quarter, the Latter twenty five Shillings. Each have a Room, a Cellar, and a Garden Plat. The Founder, Mr. Gibson's Picture, is there remaining. This House was once burnt down, but rebuilt by the Company of Coopers of LONDON, the present Patrons.

THE School-Master at this Time is Mr. Vere.

CHRIST-CHURCH SCHOOL.

ANOTHER of these famous Schools in Christ-Church LONDON, is that of Christ-Church School. Hospital; which, as well as the Hospital, is under the Patronage and Government of the City. Here are commonly very learned and able School-Masters appointed from Time to Time, who formerly did not only instruct the poor Children of the Foundation, but many other Children of Citizens, sent thither by their Parents, who paid for their Schooling. And here they arrived oftentimes to very good Skill in the Grounds of Latin and Greek Learning, as well as at the other Schools before-mentioned; but none now are allowed to be taught there but such as are of the Foundation.

A laudable Custom the Scholars of this School had, that begun in the Year 1554, which was, that on St. Bartholomew's Day publick Disputations were held among them upon Points of Grammar, and what they had learned. And for the rendring it the more solemn, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and the learned Council of the City would be present, as Judges of the Disputation; who, after all was over, rewarded those that acquitted themselves best, with Pens of Gold and Silver, and gratified and encouraged the School-Masters with Money. This was set on Foot by Sir William Chester in his Sherivalty. And Sir Martin Bows, a very wealthy, and as worthy a Citizen and Alderman, for the further Encouragement of this ingenious Emulation among the Youth, added, for another Reward to be bestowed at these Disputations, Bows (in Allusion to his Name, and for a Remembrance of the Donor) and Arrows of Silver (in Memory of his Trade, being a Goldsmith) and a certain Sum of Money to the Masters; and likewise to the Mayor and his Brethren (to encourage them to be present) a Banquet of Wine and Pears. It was continued throughout Queen Mary's Reign, but was laid aside in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's. This, Cooper, in his Chronicle (who was once a School-Master himself in Magdalen College, Oxon) took Notice of as a very good Practice, that was serviceable to the Children and the City.

THERE are at this Time One thousand and sixty seven Boys and Girls, belonging to this School, all maintained with Victuals, Drink, Lodging, decent Cloathing of Blue, and other Necessaries. They are instructed in Reading, Writing, Drawing, Arithmetick, Navigation, and those whose Genius tend much to Classick Learning, are sometimes sent to the University; so that some of these Boys have attained to be eminent Divines, Lawyers, Physicians, Commanders of Ships, Merchants, &c.

THE Master of the Grammar School is now Mr. Selby.

Mr. Hetherly is Under Grammar Master.

THERE is also one at Ware, another at Hartford; who teach the Children out at Nurse.

HERE is also a Royal Mathematical School, founded by King Charles II. Anno 1673. The Master whereof is Mr. Hodgson, who is paid out of the Hospital. His said Majesty gave 7000*l.* to build and finish the School; and also 370*l.* 10*s.* per Annum for ever, paid out of the Exchequer:

Exchequer: The said 7000*l.* was paid by 1000*l.* per Annum.

A new Mathematical School was built, the Charge of which was defrayed out of the Revenues of the Hospital.

This Inscription was here in Gold Characters.

This School was prepared and furnished for a Mathematical School, at the sole Cost and Charges of William Nicholson, Esq; one of the Governors.

OF this School Mr. Humphry Ditton was Master. It was set up in the Year 1706, about Christmas; but is now joined to the other Royal School.

HERE is also a Writing School founded by Sir John Moore, Alderman of this City: It is said to have cost him about 4000*l.* Finished Anno 1694. Mr. Dunford is the present Master, who is paid out of the Hospital Revenues. It is that stately Building elevated on Pillars fronting Town-Ditch, where, over an Archade, is the Effigies of the Founder.

In the Year 1705, was set up a Drawing School, an Art very useful to be learnt by all; but especially those who were afterwards to be instructed in the Mathematicks, or are to be put out to Mechanick Trades. The Charge of this is defrayed out of the Revenues of the Hospital. The present Master is Mr. Lens.

THE Musick School is here kept for the Instruction of the Children in the harmonious Method of singing Psalms, Hymns, Anthems, &c. which they often perform in Publick on solemn Occasions. The Master of this School is Mr. Horwood.

MRS. Browne is School-Mistress of the Girls.

IN the last Year, viz. 1732, there were put out Apprentices, and discharged from this School, One hundred and sixty two Children; ten whereof being instructed in the Mathematicks and Navigation, were placed forth Apprentices to Commanders of Ships, out of the Mathematical School, founded, as before said, by King Charles II.

The Method of Admission of Children into this Hospital.

THE Day of Admission being appointed (about ten Days, or a Fortnight before Easter) there are Lists of those qualified of the Governors, by their Turns, to choose that Year, printed and set up at the Compting-House, and a Letter is sent to each of those Governors some Days before the Admission, reminding him of the Day of choosing, and how those he presents should be qualified: Wherein is enclosed a Blank Certificate from the Minister and Church Wardens, a Blank Petition to the President and Governors, and a Paper of the Rules and Qualifications of the Child to be presented. Upon this the Governor having made Choice of a Child to present, the Friends of the said Child come to the said Compting-House on the Admission Day, bringing the said Petition and Certificate, Rules, and Letter along with him, and on the Backside of the said Petition, the Governor, who presents, endorseth Words to this Effect:

I Present the Child mentioned in the Certificate on the other Side, and believe the same to be a true Certificate. Witness my Hand the Day of

173

Which the said Governor signeth; upon which the Child is admitted, being thus qualified:

Rules and Qualifications to be observed in the Admission of Children into Christ Hospital.

1. THAT no Children be taken in but such as are the Children of Freemen of LONDON.

2. THAT none be taken in under seven Years old.

3. THAT none be taken in but Orphans, wanting either Father or Mother, or both.

4. THAT no Foundlings, or that are maintained at the Parish Charge, be taken in.

5. THAT none who are lame, crooked, or deformed, or that have the Evil, Rupture, or any infectious Disease be taken in.

6. THAT none be admitted but such as are without any probable Means of being provided for otherways, nor without a due Certificate from the Minister, Churchwardens, and three or four of the principal Inhabitants of the Parish, whence any Children come, certifying the Poverty and Inability of the Parent to maintain such Children, and the true Age of the said Child, and engaging to discharge the Hospital of them, before or after the Age of 15 Years if a Boy, or 14 Years if a Girl, which shall be left to the Governors Pleasure so to do; so that it shall be wholly in the Power of the Hospital to dispose of such Child, or return them to the Parent or Parish, as to the Hospital shall seem good.

7. THAT no Child be admitted that hath a Brother or Sister in the Hospital already.

8. To the end that no Children be admitted contrary to the Rules abovesaid; when the General Court shall direct the taking in of any Children, they shall, before taken in, be presented to a Committee, consisting of the President, Treasurer, or the Almoners, Rentors, Scrutenors, and Auditors, and all other Governors to be summoned at the first Time: And that they, or any 13, or more of them, whereof the President or Treasurer, for the Time being, to be one, who shall strictly examine touching the Age, Birth, and Quality of such Children, and of the Truth of the said Certificates, and when such Committee shall find Cause, they shall forbid or suspend the taking in of any Child, until they receive full Satisfaction that such Child or Children, is or are duly qualified, according to the Rules abovesaid.

AND that such Children as may be presented to be admitted, in Pursuance of the Will of any Benefactor, shall be examined by the said Committee, who are to take Care that such Children be qualified according to the Wills of the Donors or Benefactors, (as near as may consist with such Wills) agreeing to the Qualifications above.

Note, That the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen present each their Child yearly; but the rest of the Governors only in their Turns, which may happen once in three or four Years.

No Child is continued in after 15 Years of Age, except the Mathematical Scholars, who are sometimes in till they are 18: And at the Beginning of the 7th Year of their Service, as Mariners, they are at his Majesty's Disposal. And of these Children there is an Account printed Yearly, and presented to the King the 1st of January, setting forth each Boy's Name; 2. The Month and Year when they were bound out; 3. Their Age; 4. The Names of their Masters; 5. The Names of the Ships whereof these are Commanders; 6. What Country Trade they are in; 7. The Month and Year when they will be at his Majesty's Disposal: Also an Account of the Children annually enjoying the Benefit of this Mathematical Foundation, &c. setting forth their Names and Ages. The Number of these Boys is 40.

CHARTER-

CHARTER-HOUSE.

School.

THERE is another famous School at the Hospital of the Charter-House near Smithfield, where 40 Boys are received, and have Allowance of Chamber, Lodging, Table, and Gowns, as well as Instruction: But to be admitted only such as the School-Master shall find and approve to be well entered in Learning, nor under the Age of ten Years, and not above fourteen or fifteen. The School-Master must be of a competent Age, that is, of 27 Years at least, and a Master of Arts, of good Reputation both for Life and Learning in the Latin and Greek Tongues. To the School also belongs an Usher, who must have taken the Degree of Bachelor of Arts two Years, at least, before his Election hither, and of the Age of four and twenty. To be read none but approved Authors Greek and Latin, as are read in the best Free-Schools. The Upper Form to be furnished with Greek Testaments, for their Use in the Chapel: Besides the Scholars Weekly Exercise, the Highest Form must every Sunday set up, in the Great Hall, four Greek and four Latin Verses a-piece, to be made upon any Part of the second Lesson appointed for that Day, for the Master of the Hospital, or any Stranger, to view and examine: As also two of them are appointed Weekly to read the Chapter, and say Grace at every Meal in both the Halls. The Master and Usher are to take Care to teach the Scholars to Cypher and Cast Accompts, especially those that are less capable of Learning, and fittest to be put to Trades. Not to take into their Tuition above 60 other Scholars, unless they entertain another Usher. To receive for Teaching those of the Foundation, no Fee or Wages from their Friends. To be careful to observe the Nature and Genius of their Scholars, and to instruct and correct them: In Correction to be moderate. These are the Statutes for the Teachers of the School.

Now as for the Scholars, tho' their Number at first was but forty, yet now four and forty are chosen and admitted; they are to continue in the House but eight Years at most; hence they are elected to either of the Universities, and to any College in either, according to their Friends Choice and Determination. Their Allowance there is 20 l. per Annum, paid Quarterly, without any Charge or Trouble: And they are not to be absent above two Months in the Year. Twenty-nine of these Scholars are sometimes maintained in the Universities together, by the said Exhibition, for eight Years. Others, who are superannuated, being unwilling or incapable of Learning, are designed for Apprentices; and these are set apart for Writing and Cyphering, to qualify them for Trades, and have the Sum of 40 l. given with them. The Scholars all dine in the Hall in a Collegiate Manner, and wear Gowns with Sleeves: And (which is an other good Benefit of this School) as the House hath a great many Livings of Value in their Patronage, so they commonly bestow them on their own Scholars.

BESIDES these Schools of greater Fame, in and about LONDON, are divers other such Places for Education of Youth more lately founded. As that in Bunhillfields in St. Giles's Cripplegate Parish. Over the Door entering in, is signified in Writing whose Gift it was, viz. Mr. Throgmorton Trotman's Free-School. Upon the School-House is a Latin Inscription, importing, that it was finished at the Charge of the Haberdashers Company, Anno Dom. 1673, Richard Wynn, Esq; Master, Hugh Ratcliff, Philip Smith, Nicholas Smith, and John Freestons,

VOL. I.

Wardens: Richardo Houghton, A.M. Primario & primo Magistro; with the Arms of Trotman set there and painted. The Salary is 50 l. per Annum, for which thirty Boys of the said Parish of St. Giles's are to be taught free. Mr. Thomas Wright, M. A. is the present Master, who also hath a Dwelling-house there, appropriate to the School-Master.

THERE is another Free-School in Plough-Yard in Sydon or Seething-Lane, in the Parish of Albhallows Barking, lately founded by one Hickson a Brewer, endowed with twenty Pounds a Year for one Master, to teach twenty poor Children, whereof fourteen to be of the said Parish of Barking, and six of an Hamlet in Wapping. This Master hath an House for himself where the said School is kept, and two Chaldron of Coals yearly allowed him. It is moreover endowed with eight Pounds a Year for a Writing-Master, to teach the Children Writing and Casting Accompts. The present Master is Mr. Graffie.

IN Whitechapel is another Free-School, founded by Mr. Davenant, late Rector of Whitechapel: The Salary is 20 l. per Annum, and is, or lately was, in the Hands of three Trustees. This School hath been considerably endowed, and the Number of Children to be taught enlarged, by the Gift of a Thousand Pounds, sent by some noble minded, but unknown, Lady; which hath been laid out by the Parishioners for the Purchase of Lands in Tilbury; the Rent whereof is for the yearly Maintenance of the School and Children.

ANOTHER Free-School is situated in St. James's Clerkenwell, in the Road going to Islington, founded by Mrs. Alice Owen, Widow first of Alderman Elkin, and afterwards of Judge Owen; endowed with 22 l. per Annum. To which is a Chapel and an Alms-house adjoined, given by the same charitable Hand.

THERE are other Free-Schools in the Suburbs and Neighbourhood of LONDON: As that at Hackney, in the Church-yard, founded by Christopher Urswyke, some Time Rector there; with an House for the Master; on which is engraven toward the Street, these Words:

EXTRUCTA FUIT HÆC DOMUS
ANNO DOM. 1519. CHRISTOPHO-RO URSWYKE, RECTORE.

And in another Place:

MEMORARE NOVISSIMA.

MRS. Margaret Awdley, some Time an Inhabitant of Hackney, (whose House was in Clapton) for the Encouragement of the School-Master, gave a Salary of 20 l. per Annum.

THAT belonging to Aske's Hospital at Hoxton, in which twenty Boys are educated, the Sons of decayed Freemen of the Haberdashers Company. Hoxton School.

ANOTHER at Rotherhith, founded by Bell and Rich, two Mariners, for eight Sons of Seamen, to which they gave three Pounds per Ann. and the School-House. Rotherhith School.

ON the other Side the Water; besides the last mentioned, are to be found two large Free-Schools in Southwark:

ONE in the Parish of St. Mary Overy's: It is a good Building of Brick, situated on the South Side of the Church, founded in the Fourth Year of Queen Elizabeth, Anno Dom. 1562, in the Place, as some say, where the Prior of the Priory of St. Mary Overy's House stood, which the Parishioners bought, and built the School there. This School, with the House for the Master, was burnt down in the Year 1676, but rebuilt rebuilt again very gracefully and conveniently. Over the Back-door is an old Stone preserved from the Fire, with this Inscription in Capitals:

LIBERA SCHOLA GRAMMATICIS PAROCHIANORUM PAROCHIAE SANCTI SALVATORIS IN SOUTHEWARKE IN COM. SURRIE, ANNO IV<sup>to</sup>. REGINÆ ELIZABETHÆ.

It is governed by a Master, whose Salary is 30*l.* per Annum, and an Usher, whose Salary is 20*l.* per Annum. It is free for such poor Children as are born in the Parish. It hath at present, or lately had, about sixty Scholars. It is taken Care of by six Governors, whose Qualifications must be, That they have been Upper Churchwardens, and have served all the other Offices in the Parish. The Vacancies are filled by Election among themselves, of some duly qualified Person or Persons. There is also a Writing-School hard by, for the Conveniency of this School, for thirty Boys to learn to Write and Read; the Salary is 20*l.* per Ann. which was given by one Mrs. Appleby.

St. Olave's School.

THE other Free-School in Southwark, is that situated in the Parish of St. Olave's. This School was first set on Foot by some of the Parishioners, who afterwards were made a Corporation, by Letters Patents from Queen Elizabeth: By Virtue whereof there are appointed over it sixteen Governors, whereof the Rector is always one. They are to be Men of the best Quality and Reputation in the Parish; and when one dies, another is chosen by the Survivors to supply his room: In this Foundation are three Schools, namely, for Latin, Writing, and Reading: And for this Purpose it maintains a Master, and three Ushers under him. The Latin Master, who is the Chief Master, his Salary is 60*l.* per Annum, and hath an Usher under him, who is called the Latin Usher; his Salary is 30*l.* per Annum. The Writing Master, or Usher, hath 40*l.* per Annum: And the Reading Master, or Usher, hath 20*l.* per Annum. There is an House for the Chief Master, and another for the Reading Usher. In this School are taught 300 Boys. It is well endowed with Rents from several Houses and Lands in Horslydown, in Southwark, Little Britain, &c.

Schools in Westminster.

IN Westminster also are several Free-Schools, besides the King's School, which will be taken Notice of in the Description of that City.

THERE are also many private Schools kept in and about LONDON, where the School-Masters hire the School Rooms themselves, and receive Salaries or Quarteridges for Teaching: Some for Teaching the learned Languages, Latin and Greek; some for Writing and Arithmetick, and Merchants Accompts; and some for Mathematicks, Geography, and Navigation; that so the Youth of the City may be brought up to be hereafter useful to the Publick; some in the Church, some in the State, some for the Sea and Travel abroad, some for Trade and Business at Home; and finally, that all the Members of this Metropolis might be able to get an honest Maintenance and be serviceable to the Crown, or otherwise, whensoever there be Occasion.

IN and about LONDON and Westminster, and within 10 Miles of the same, are 131 Charity Schools; of which the following is an Alphabetical List, and of the Children therein taught.

Of the HOSPITALS in and about LONDON.

MOST of the Hospitals in and about LONDON have been founded since the Reformation; and it was not till the Year 1557, that wholesome and good Orders were made and agreed upon for the four Hospitals, by the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, Governors of the Possessions, Revenues, and Goods of the said Hospitals; and were to be read in every the said Hospitals at a full Court once every Quarter, either 14 Days before, or after the Quarter-Day; beginning with a Preface, giving Account therein of the Royal Founder, and unto whom they had committed the perpetual Care of them, and who by that Authority had made the said Ordinances: Which Preface ran in this Tenor, viz.

“ WHEREAS the most excellent and worthy “ Princes, our late Sovereign Lords, King “ Henry VIII. and King Edward VI. of their “ bountiful Benignity, and charitable Devotion, “ towards the Succour and Sustainment of the “ Poor in this City, have given and granted by “ their Letters Patents, with Indentures of Co“ venants and Bonds, to the said Princes and “ their Successors, by the City made for Per“ formation thereof, to the Mayor and Com“ monalty, Citizens of this said City; as well
 “ four several Hospitals (that is to say) by King
 “ Henry VIII. one Hospital, called St. Bartho“ lomew the Little; and by King Edward VI.
 “ three other Hospitals called Christ’s Hospital, “ Bridewell Place, and St. Thomas’s Hospital;
 “ as also certain Lands and Tenements, towards “ the Relief and Maintenance of such Poor as “ there are relieved; and have also by their “ Kingly Prerogative, granted unto the Mayor
 “ and Commonalty, for the better Government
 “ of the same, amongst other Things in the same “ Letters Patents, Authority, and Power, to “ elect and choose Governors and Officers, and “ also to make and constitute good and whol-
 “ some Ordinances for godly Maintenance there-
 “ of: By Virtue of the which Letters Patents,
 “ We, the said Mayor and Commonalty have “ made and ordained these Rules and Ordina“ nances in Manner and Form following.

THEN follow Orders, how many Governors shall be elected; the Manner of their Election; and how they shall be divided, and of their Continuance; the Charge of every Governor in general; of General Courts, touching the Government of all the four Houses, and what in them is to be done; of a full Court in Christ’s Hospital for weighty Causes, and what is thereat to be done; what is to be done at Ordinary Courts, when two or more of the Governors are assembled, the Treasurer being one; touching the Admitting of Children, and Granting of Pensions, to be either paid in this House, or in Parishes; for the Putting out of Children to Service; for the Examination of single Women, being got with Child, and the Persons with whom they committed their Offence; Governors, viz. a Comptroller, and a Surveyor-General, a President, a Treasurer, three Almoners, two Scrutiners, a Renter, two Surveyors, with an Account of the respective Duties; the Officers, viz. the Clerk, the Matron, the Nurses, and Keepers of Wards, the Steward, the Officer appointed to warn the Collectors and Church-Wardens, the Cook, the Butler, the Porter, the Shoemaker, the Chirurgion, the Barber, the Beadles, with the Charges of each of these Officers.

THESE Orders were confirmed at a Court held on Wednesday, 28 Sept. Ann. Ph. and Mar. 4 and 5.

BUT to take a View of these Hospitals distinctly.

CHRIST’S HOSPITAL.

IS situated between Newgate-street, and St. Christ’s-Hospital Bartholomew’s Hospital in Smithfield. Here was first, Anno 1325, founded a House of Grey Fryars, which being surrender’d to Henry VIII. Anno 1538, he, in the last Year of his Reign, gave the Church, with the Edifices and Ground, to the City of LONDON; and in the Year 1553, the pious young King Edward VI. affected by a Sermon preached upon Charity, by the learned Dr. Ridley, Bishop of LONDON, founded here an Hospital; to be called Christ’s Hospital, endowing the same with Revenues, which he gave to the City of LONDON as Trustees; and likewise Bridewell, and St. Thomas’s Hospital, were all incorporated by the Name of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, Governors of the Possessions, Revenues, and Goods of the Hospitals of Edward King of England, the VIth. of Christ, Bridewell, and St. Thomas the Apostle, to whom the King gave 3266l. 13 s. 4 d. per Annum.

Founded by Edward VI.

Who gave large Revenues to it.

HE granted also to this Hospital all the Church Linnen, formerly used in the publick Religious Worship in the Churches of LONDON: For the King having appointed Commissioners to take a View of all the Goods belonging to the Churches in and about LONDON, great Quantities of Linnen Vestures, and Cloth were found in the same, and more a great deal than there was then Need of in the Celebration of the Reformed Divine Worship. Wherefore the King wrote to Ridley, Bishop of LONDON, one of the said Commissioners, “ That towards the Relief of those poor Orphanes and others, charitably brought and gathered together by his loving Subjects, the Citizens, to his new Hospital of Christ Church, the same Linnen should be delivered to the Governors for their Use, thinking, as he added, that any Thing therein bestowed, to be to the Relief and Sustainment of the Temple of God, who inhabited in those poor People. Yet leaving to every Church necessary Linnen Vestures, as should serve to the publick Use and Ministry within the said Churches, according to the present Usage.

And all the Linnen used in Churches before the Reformation.

TO this Foundation many Additions were made by well-disposed Persons.

THE Honourable City of LONDON gave all the Duty paid for Lodging and Pitching the Cloth at Blackwell-Hall to this pious Use; which which is very considerable, every Piece of Cloth paying 1 d. Pitching, and a Half-penny per Week Resting, Stockings and Blankets pay by the Pack. This Duty sometimes amounts to 1100 l. a Year clear Money. There are several Statutes relating to the Regulation of this Market, which is under the Management and Inspection of the Governors of Christ's Church Hospital.

Mr. Giles Russel, of Clerkenwell, Brewer, gave 140 l. per Annum, and above 2000 l. in Money, for maintaining Children in this Hospital, by his Will, dated the 10th of October 1669.

Richard Castell, a Shoemaker, called the Cock of Westminster, who by his Industry and Frugality had got 44 l. per Annum, left the same to these poor Orphans in Perpetuity; and there have been many other large Benefactions, as will hereafter be shewn. But to go back a little to the Time of the first Foundation:

AFTER the King's Grant, it lay upon the City to establish a standing Provision here for the Poor; and accordingly some Part of the Site of the Grey Friars they proposed for a large Hospital for poor Fatherless Children, to be decently maintained and piously brought up, and fitted for Trades and Callings: But it was not till five or six Years after, viz. Anno 1552, that the Lord Mayor and Citizens began the Reparation and Fitting up the Friars, for the Reception of the Children, which they effected the same Year, and called it Christ's Church Hospital; so that in the Month of September they took in near 400 Orphans, and on the Christmas Day following, in the Afternoon, while the Lord Mayor and Aldermen rode to St. Paul's, the Children of Christ's Hospital stood from St. Laurence-Lane in Cheapside towards St. Paul's, all in one Livery of Russet Cotton, 240 in Number, and at Easter following they were at the Spittle, cloathed in Blue Coats, as they have continued ever since; whence the Hospital is commonly called, The Blue-Coat-Hospital. Their Habit is now a long Coat of blue warm Cloth, close to the Arms and Body, hanging loose to their Heels, girt about their Waist with a red Leather Girdle buckled, a loose Petticoat underneath of yellow Cloth, a round Thrum Cap tied with a red Band, yellow Stockings, and low heel'd Shoes, their Hair cut close at Top, and their Locks short.

THIS Hospital of Christ's Church, as also those others founded for the Relief of poor Children, and other sick and diseased People of the City, gave Occasion, not long after the Founding thereof, to Numbers of Poor, Lame, and Sick, and many of them, idle Persons, Rogues, and Vagabonds, to flock into the City from all Parts, expecting present Relief and Entertainment here; which caused the Lord Mayor, Anno 1569, to issue out a strict Order to forbid all such Resort, and such Persons to be taken up and brought to Ward; and Warning to be given, that none should give them Harbour: The Order was as followeth:

An O.R.D.E.R by the Lord Mayor, against Rogues, Vagabonds, and Masterless Men, resorting now, in great Numbers, to the City, upon Pretence to be relieved by the Alms of Christ's Church and Bridewell.

“ FOrasmuch as Experience of late hath shewed, That the charitable Relief, given as well by the Queen's Majesty's Noble Progenitors, as also the charitable Alms from Time to Time collected within this City, and bestowed by the Citizens, as well upon the poor and needy Citizens, being Sick, Impotent, and Lame, as the poor Orphans and Fatherless Children, born, or being, within this City, not having wherewith to relieve themselves, as

VOL. I.

“ well in Christ's Church and Bridewell, as in others, the Hospitals founded for the Relief of the Poor within the City of LONDON, hath drawn unto the said City great Numbers of Vagabonds, Rogues, Masterless Men, and idle Persons, and also poor, lame, and sick Persons, dwelling in the outmost Parts of the Realm, so as the City is thereby oppress'd, to the great Prejudice of the said City, and of the needy Poor, inhabiting in the same; and that these needy Beggars, and impotent Persons coming out of Foreign Parts of the Realm, and also the Rogues and Vagabonds greatly disliked the Queen, &c. the Mayor and his Brethren, the Aldermen, in her Majesty's Behalf, straitly charge and command all and every Person, and Persons whatsoever; dwelling or inhabiting within the said City, and Liberties, and Suburbs thereof, that they do not at any Time hereafter give any Relief, Lodging, Alms, or Maintenance to any Vagabonds, Rogues, &c. or to any common or valiant Beggar; but contrarywise to cause such Beggars, Rogues, Vagabonds, and Masterless Men, to be apprehended and brought to Ward; to the End, that they might be examined and punished by such as have Authority in that Behalf, according to the Queen's Law, &c.

“ AND further the said Mayor and Aldermen straitly charge and command, for the better avoiding the said common Beggars, &c. That no manner of Person whatsoever shall let any Tenement, Cottage, Chamber, or Room to Farm, either by the Day, by the Week, by the Month, by the Quarter, or by the Year, or any other Time, to any common Beggar, or Vagabond; &c.

THE Mathematical Master at Christ's Hospital, by the Constitution of the House, must be thus qualified; he must be a sober, discreet and diligent Person, of good Life, a good Scholar, very well understanding the Latin and Greek Languages, a very good Mathematician, well knowing and ready in the Theory and Practice of all its Parts; to the End Boys may be furthered in the Latin Tongue, and the Master able to answer Strangers, if need be; and that they and others may find his Abilities to Satisfaction:

The Mathematical Master.

AND by the Constitution, ten are to be put forth yearly Apprentices to Masters of Ships, to the End they may be fit, in Time, to do Service in the Navy Royal, and ten more to be received into their Rooms: These Youths, who are chosen out of the rest of the Blue-Coat-Boys, are to be the most acute and of the readiest Wits, that they may be fit for Mathematical Studies: These, as a Badge of Distinction, wear on their Breasts fastened to their Coats, a Plate of Silver, with some Figures engraven, the Dye whereof is kept in the Tower where they are all stamped. The Chief Figures are three of the liberal Sciences; viz. Arithmetick, with a Scroll of Accounts in one Hand; and laying her other Hand upon a Blue-Coat-Boy's Head, having his Cap under his Arm: The next Figure representeth Geometry with a Triangle in her Hand. The Third; Astronomy, with a Quadrant in one Hand; and a Sphere in the other. There are also the Figure of a Ship or two under Sail, with a Wind from Heaven, blowing as it were upon it a prosperous Gale. There are also in the Clouds two Angels, one of them with Wings, and these Words wrote round, declaring the Royal Founder; and the Year when this School cominenced, viz. Auspicio Caroli Secundi Regis, 1673. This Badge they wear constantly, not only in the Hospital, and about the Town, but when they are put forth, which when seen secureth them from being pressed: But they will sometimes put it into their Pockets; not

not caring to own the Place of their Education, for which, when it is discovered, they are reprimanded.

The Occasion of first setting up the Mathematical School.

AND here it must not be omitted for perpetual Memory, to remark the first Occasion of instituting this most useful Mathematical School founded in this Hospital. It was accidental, and owing, in a great Measure, to Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. and Alderman, and some Time Lord Mayor of the City, who, as the setting up of such a Discipline in this Hospital first came into his Mind, so he was very instrumental and active in bringing it to that Success it afterwards came to, by his moving it so seasonably to the Lord Clifford, then Lord High Treasurer, who as effectually propounded it to the King. The following Relation of it Mr. Strype saith, he had from his own Mouth.

HE had been occasionally reading (according to his Custom at leisure Times to divert himself with Books) of the French King's Government, and particularly how he had appointed, That Children in all his Maritime Towns should be taught the Art of Navigation gratis, and had erected Schools for that Purpose, for the greater Increase of Seamen, and Benefit of Trade, and Service of his Fleets: Which good Policy rais'd some Thoughts in the said Alderman's Mind; concluding how such Education, at least of some Part of that great Number of Boys, would tend more to the publick Good, if it were set up in Christ's Hospital, than the ordinary Course of Learning then taken with them. This grew warm upon him, and he began to frame a Project for the Setting up such a School, which he communicated first to Sir Patience Ward, another Alderman, and they resolved to take in a third Person, and with 1000*l.* a-piece Charge, to make a Provision, and Encouragement for a Mathematical Master, and to build him a Dwelling-House near the Hospital, and to set up a School Room there for the teaching a competent Number of the Children.

WHILE this was in Consultation, a favourable Opportunity offered itself, which was this: The said Sir Robert Clayton, calling once at the Treasury, (this Business requiring him often to have Recourse thither) to speak with Sir Robert Howard, then Secretary to the Treasury; at his coming out, Mr. Parry, then Clerk of Christ's Hospital, met him, intreating him to speak to Sir Robert Howard in Behalf of the said Hospital, shewing him a Petition drawn up to the Lord Treasurer Clifford, and desiring him to procure the said Howard to deliver it. The Occasion of which Petition was this:

BEFORE the Revolution in the Year 1660, a private Citizen, who had a Debt of 7000*l.* charged upon Weavers Hall, (which according to some Methods in those Times was secured to be paid out of a Fund in the King's Lands) gave by Will this 7000*l.* to Christ's Hospital, for the Maintaining 40 Children, who were to wear a particular Badge, or be cloathed as he particularly directed. These Children were by this Request maintained 'till the Restoration; at which Time the Crown Lands reverting to the King, the Hospital petition'd his Majesty, That he would be pleased to pay them this 7000*l.* to continue the Maintenance of these 40 Children, according to the Request of the Donor; whereupon the King granted them the said Sum, to be paid out of the Arrears of the Excise, due at his Restoration: But there being many great Sums of Money charged to the Queen-Mother, and other Persons of Quality, out of the said Arrears, prior to this 7000*l.* it was not hitherto paid.

BUT after many Years the said Clerk of the Hospital thought fit, by a new Petition, to put the Lord Treasurer in Mind of the said Grant of the King. This Petition, being brought as before-said, Sir Robert Clayton took and went in with it to the Secretary of the Treasury, who presently, in Company with Sir Robert, carried it to the Lord Treasurer, to whom it was read; but after reading it his Lordship acquainted Sir Robert Clayton what great Sums of Money were charged upon the said Fund, prior to this, and that it was impossible for him to help the Hospital. Sir Robert, (like a good Advocate for the City's Poor) told him, That the Citizens of LONDON, he hoped, were as careful in managing their publick Charities, as their private Concerns, and that if his Lordship would place 7000*l.* upon a certain Fund to be paid by 500*l.* a Year, they would endeavour to maintain the Children with it, which the Lord Treasurer evaded also: But the diligent Alderman finding him in a good Humour, proceeded further with him, telling him, That a poor Friend of his was upon such an important Project in that Hospital, that would deserve a better Founder, and so discoursed to him the Design he and Sir Patience Ward were contriving. It took with the Treasurer, and it pleased him so well, that he charged Sir Robert to go and frame him a Petition upon that Subject he had discoursed to him of, and added, That he would deliver it that very Night to the King before he slept.

Sir Robert departed, and took the Clerk of the Hospital along with him in his Coach, and setting him down at the Hospital, order'd him immediately to bring him a List of the Governors of that House to Sir John Frederick's, then President, which List being brought and perused, they pitched upon Six to assist in this Matter, whereof Sir Patience Ward; and Sir Richard Ford, Aldermen, were two. While these were summoning, Sir Robert prepared a Petition. These Governors now being assembled, he signified to them the present Advantage of the Hospital, and shewing them the Petition, required them to go up with him to deliver it; but they declined it, and left it upon Sir Robert, telling him, That he having begun it, was the fittest Person to carry it on.

HE was not discouraged in so good a Work, but that Night carried up the Petition himself, and delivered it into the Hands of the Lord Treasurer, who appointed him to come to him the next Day, which he accordingly did, and found that the Treasurer had shewn the King the Petition, and had a Reference made back to himself for the Payment of 1000*l.* a Year, until the 7000*l.* were paid, and the Hospital was to covenant to maintain so many Boys, and to teach them the Mathematicks.

THE Treasurer then also gave an Order to Sir Heneage Finch, Attorney-General (afterwards Earl of Nottingham,) to prepare a Patent with all advantageous Clauses accordingly, and commanded Sir Robert Clayton to attend Mr. Attorney with it. He was well known to him, and having acquainted him with this Affair, the Attorney was extremely well pleased with it, and desired Sir Robert himself to give such advantageous Clauses as he could think of, to be inserted in the Patent. He thereupon called together the Committee, to have their Assistance, and so they prepared the Heads of such Clauses as they could think of, which he gave to Mr. Attorney, who appointed Sir Robert to call upon him again at a set Time, and he would draw the Patent with his own Hand. He came according to the Time, and had a rough Draught given him to take what further Advice he should think fit; which he shewed to the Committee or the Governors, vernors, and then returned it to the Attorney, by whom it was soon finished, and had the Great Seal affixed to it; and Sir Robert paid the first 500 l. (it being to be paid half Yearly) to the Hospital, on Account of Rent which was due from him to the Crown.

THUS was this publick good Work, tending so much to the Honour both of the King and City of LONDON, brought to pass from the Beginning to the End, by the prudent Contrivance and preserving Industry of this Alderman. Sir Robert was then made a Governor of the said House, and Sir Jonas Moore, Samuel Pepys, Esq; and several other Persons, known to be Friends and Favourers of the Mathematicks, were called into the Government, for the better Managing and Settling this new Royal School.

King Charles II. the Royal Founder, was pleased to grant a further Sum, to place out 10 of the Mathematical Boys Apprentices to Masters of Ships, reserving the last Year of their Time to his Service, as has been said before.

NEXT, as to the Building, and Apartments in this Hospital:

LEADING out of Newgate-street, and contiguous to Christ-Church, is an Entrance, at the South-East Angle of the Cloisters, being a Brick Portal, adorned with four Pilasters and a Triangular Pediment of the Ionick Order; over the Door is the Effigies of King Edward VI. with this Inscription under it.

EDWARD the VIth. of famous Memory, King of ENGLAND, was the Founder of CHRIST'S HOSPITAL; and Sir ROBERT CLAYTON, Knt. and Alderman, sometime Lord Mayor of this City of LONDON, erected this Statue of King EDWARD, and built most Part of this Fabrick, An. Dom. 1682.

IN a Place still called the Grey Fryars, leading also out of Newgatestreet, is another Entrance into the Cloisters, at the South-West Angle, by an Archade; over which is the Effigies of King Charles II.

AT the North-East Angle of the Cloisters, is a Piazza, or Colonnade, which serves for a Place of Recreation for the Boys, and is a Thorough-fare to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and Smithfield. This was a Part of the old Priory; but being very much decayed, was repaired under the Direction of that great Architect, Sir Christopher Wren.

ON the back of the East Cloister is another Effigy of King Edward the VIth, set up in a Nich, with this Inscription:

King Edward the VIth of famous Memory, in the 16th Year of his Age, founded this Hospital.

OVER the West Cloister is a spacious Hall, well wainscotted, fitted with Tables for the Children to dine and sup at. It was built after the Fire of LONDON by Sir John Frederick, Alderman, at the Expence of 5000 l. Near it is this Inscription: This Hall being destroyed by the Fire, was rebuilt, as it now appears, at the sole Cost of Sir John Frederick, President of this Hospital, in the Year 1672, having been many other Ways a bountiful Benefactor to the poor Children of this House. In this Hall is a very magnificent Picture, representing King James II. (but intended for King Charles II. had he lived but a little longer) with his Court, containing a vast Number of Figures, painted at full Length, extending from one End of the Hall to the other: There are likewise in it, some of the Governors, the Treasurer, and Children, Boys and Girls, kneeling: At each End there are the Pictures of King Edward VI. and King Charles II. as Founders, drawn half Way, and painted as hanging up in the same Table, and also a Representation of the Mathematical School: It was painted by Vario, and is reckoned very valuable.

IN this Hall is likewise a large Picture, more antient, of King Edward VI. delivering his Royal Charter for this Hospital to the Mayor, who kneeleth, with the Aldermen behind him, a Bishop (supposed to be Ridley) with many other Figures standing about; an antient and fine Piece.

THERE are the Pictures also of Sir John Moor, of William Garway, of the Rape of Arun-del, in Suffex, Esq; of Sir Francis Child, and others, Benefactors to this Hospital.

IN this Hall is a good Organ, which oftentimes plays, when the Boys sing their Psalms, or Anthems, on Sundays, and other special Days.

THERE are nine Wards, where the Childrens Beds are, in each of which are harboured 50 odd Boys.

THE Girls have a Ward by themselves, which is indeed the best and handsomest of them all. It was built at the Cost of Mr. John Morice, and Sir Robert Clayton; the former giving 1000 l. the other much more. Mr. Thomas Firmin, Girdler, that charitable Citizen in his Time, took upon him the Care of the Building, and was supplied with Money from them; yet concealed their Names, according to their Desire, mentioning no more concerning them in this good Work, but only that two charitable Citizens were at the Charge of it.

THE Occasion of its being built was this: Sir Robert Clayton had had a very great Fit of Sickness, and being restored to his Health, thought within himself to make an Acknowledgement to GOD for his Mercy by some publick good Work; and consulting with the said Mr. Firmin upon that Subject, he proposed something should be done for Christ's Hospital, which, since the great Fire, had been but little restored hitherto from its Ruins, and excited him particularly to build the Girls Ward there; the Doing of which was computed at 2000 l. Cost. Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was contented to give one half thereof; and Mr. Firmin was employed in the Care and Management of it, with a strict Injunction given him, that their Names should not be discovered. This was not all that was intended: For Sir Robert then designed, that the Children of the House should be better fitted for common and ordinary Trades, than, by the Methods then taken, they were, and did project several Rooms under the Wards for several Trades; where the Children, not engaged in Mathematicks, should spend some of their Time in honest Callings, that might be useful to the House and the Publick too, according to some Models he had procured of Hospitals from abroad. While this Work was carrying on, it was found convenient to make this a double Ward, however at first designed only for a single one; and the Stair-Case to be set within the Cloisters to serve both. This augmented the Charge at first proposed to near double the Sum; and Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was now dead, so that the whole Burthen lay on him. While this Work was in hand, having privately viewed it, he intended something further, which would have cost 500 l. more:

BUT it most unseasonably happened at this Time, that Feuds and Factions grew high among the Citizens, which ended at last in the depriving them of their Charter; and then was this most liberal and publick-spirited Citizen and Magistrate put out both of the Government of the City, and of this Hospital, with many other worthy Citizens, and so the good Work unhappily stopt: But Mr. Firmin soon took the Opportunity to let the remaining Governors understand what a Piece of Ingratitude this was, shewing them with some Warmth that he who was thus discharged, was the

the very Man that had highly deserved of the House in this expensive Building, by whose sole Charges it had, for divers Years, been carried on, whereby the Founder of this Ward came to be at length known, which otherwise might have been concealed to this Day.

ANOTHER Ward there is, being a convenient Ward apart by itself, for the Sick, where they that fall into any Distempers are removed, and due Care taken of them.

OVER the East Cloister, the Ward of Lodging for the Children was rebuilt, at the Expence of the worthy President, Sir Francis Child, Father of Sir Francis, the present President.

FARTHER Eastward, is a handsome Counting-House, where the Charge is given to the Governors at their Admission.

OVER the Counting House is the Court-Room, curiously adorned with Pictures: Here you have that of King Edward the VIth (an Original) between those of King Charles and James II. That of Sir Richard Dobbs, Lord Mayor, when this Hospital was founded, which has these bad Lines under it.

Christ Hospital erected was,
A passing Deed of Pity;
What Time Sir Richard Dobbs was Mayor
Of this most famous City,
Who careful was in Government,
And further'd much the same,
Also a Benefactor good,
And joyed to see it frame;
Whose Picture here his Friends have set,
To put each Wight in Mind,
To imitate his Virtuous Deeds,
As God hath us assign'd.

Also here are the Pictures of Mr. Thomas Strechly, Henry Stone, Erasmus Smith, Thomas Barnes, Esqrs; Sir John Leman, Sir Tho. Viner, Sir Chr. Cletherew, Sir John Moor, Sir John Frederick, Sir Wolstan Dixey, Richard Young, Daniel Collwell, and of John Morice, Esqrs; all bountiful Benefactors. Mr. Smith gave the Counting-House Court-Room and Pile of Buildings, right against it, being several Wards, his Arms are over the Door, Gules on a Chevron between three Bezants, as many Crosses Crests Fitchee, Sable.

IN the South Cloister, within these few Years, has been set up a handsome Marble Monument to the Memory of Sir George Mertins, and his Lady, with this Inscription:

In Hope of a Blessed Resurrection,
Near this Place are deposited
The venerable Remains
Of
Sir GEORGE MERTINS, Knt.
And
Dame PHILADELPHIA his Wife,
Worthy Examples of conjugal Affection and paternal Tenderness,
Who were lovely and pleasing in their Lives,
And in Death they are not divided.
He was Alderman, and sometime Lord Mayor of LONDON,
For many Years Treasurer, and before his Death, President
Of this Hospital, which great Offices of Trust and Power,
He discharg'd with Impartiality, Integrity, and Honour.
In Trade, he was without Extortion,
In the Exercise of Power without Oppression,
In Offices of Friendship without Ostentation,
In Acts of Piety without Dissimulation,
And by his disinterested and diffusive Merit in Publick
And Private Life, receiv'd universal and unenvied Applause.

She was a Lady of excellent Accomplishments and distinguish'd Worth.

Beautiful in her Person,
Virtuous in her Mind,
Obliging in her Temper;
Pious in Life,
Resign'd in Death.

She died April the 24th, 1722, aged 49.

He died November the 3d, 1727, aged 63.

Their Bodies are buried in Peace,

And

Their Names will be remember'd with Honour.

IN the East Cloister is this remarkable Funeral Inscription.

Near this Place lieth interred the Body of Mrs. Johanna Parry, who was born in the Year of our Lord God 1577. She lived twenty-five Years under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth; the Reign of King James I. the Reign of King Charles I. the Reign of King Charles II. and in the second Year of the Reign of our present gracious Sovereign Lord King James II. On the 20th Day of February 1685, she died in the one hundred and eighth Year of her Age.

NEXT for the Governors and Officers of this great Hospital.

THE Governors are many, and commonly Persons who have been Masters, or Wardens, of their Companies, or Men of Estates, or from whom there are Expectations of Charity. Out of these one is President, and he commonly is some antient Alderman, that hath passed the Chair; and another is Treasurer, who takes Care of the Affairs of the whole House, and of the Revenues; and therefore is commonly Resident, and hath a good House to dwell in, but without any Salary: And such an one is chosen by the Governors for this great Trust, who is of Note for his Abilities, Integrity, and Charity; and according to the Repute he hath, so the Hospital usually flourisheth, and the Benefactions come in plentifully.

THE present Treasurer is Richard Cheek, Esq.

EVERY Governor when he is admitted into this Society, hath this Charge solemnly given him in the Presence of the President or Treasurer, and other Governors assembled in Court.

Worshipful!

THE Cause of your Repair hither at this present is, to give you Knowledge, that you are elected and appointed, by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, to the Office, Charge, and Governance of Christ's Hospital. AND therefore this is to require you, and every of you, That you endeavour yourselves, with all your Wisdom and Power, faithfully and diligently to serve in this Vocation and Calling; which is an Office of high Trust and Worship: For ye are called to be faithful, Distributors and Disposers of the Goods of Almighty God to his poor and needy Members. In which Office and Calling, if you shall be found negligent and unfaithful, ye shall not only declare yourselves to be the most unthankful and unworthy Servants of Almighty God, being put in Trust to see the Relief and Succour of his poor and needy Flock, but also ye shall shew yourselves to be very notable, and great Enemies to that Work, which most highly doth advance and beautify the Commonwealth of this Realm, and chiefly of this City of LONDON.

THESE

“ These are therefore to require you and every
 “ of you, That ye here promise before God and
 “ this Assembly of your Fellow Governors, faith“ fully to travel in this your Office and Calling, “ that this Work may have its Perfection, and “ that the needy Number committed to your “ Charge be diligently and wholsomely provided “ for, as you will answer before God at the “ Hour and Time when you and we shall stand “ before him, to render an Account of our Doings.
 “ And promising this to do, you shall be now “ admitted into this Company and Fellowship.

THERE are several hundred Governors, in which Number are always the Lord Mayor, and Court of Aldermen: Besides which are the following Officers, the President and Treasurer, already mentioned,

THE Physician, Dr. Fullerton.

THE Surgeon, Mr. Green.

THE Apothecary, Mr. Massey.

THE Steward, Mr. Henckman.

A Register, a Matron, a Nurse and her Maid to every two Wards, a Cook, a Porter, and four Beadles.

THERE are also Clerks for Blackwell-Hall, and three Servants called Streetmen, who are to see to the well governing the Carts of LON-DON.

FOR the Provision for this great Family, there are three Brewers, and three Bakers to supply
 it with Beer and Bread.

Two of the Governors, who are called Al-moners, for a Month or more, take Care to buy and lay in Butchers Meat, viz. Beef and Mutton; the Steward attends them.

THE Butcher receives about 40*l.* every Month.

AND after this Manner the Children fare daily:
 They have every Morning for their Breakfast Bread and Beer, at half an Hour past Six in the Morning, in the Summer Time; and at half an Hour past Seven in the Winter. On Sundays, they have Boiled Beef and Portage for their Dinners; and for their Suppers, Legs and Shoulders of Mutton.

ON Tuesdays and Thursdays, the same Dinners as on Sundays; that is, Boiled Beef and Pottage. On the other Days, no Flesh Meat: But on Mondays, Milk Portage: On Wednesdays, Furmity: On Fridays, old Pease and Portage:
Saturdays, Watergruel.

THEY have Roast Beef about twelve Days in the Year, by the Kindness of several Benefactors, who have left, some 3*l.* some 50*s.* per Ann.
 for that End and Purpose.

THEIR Supper is Bread and Cheese, or Butter for those that cannot eat Cheese. Only Wednesdays and Fridays, they have Pudding Pies for Supper.

THEIR Bread formerly was very coarse and brown; but by the Care and Order of Mr. Breerwood, a late Treasurer, it was changed, and is very good Wheaten Bread.

THE good Orders of this House are highly commendable, and their Custom on the Lord's Day bringeth Multitudes to see them.

As soon as the Boys come from Church, in the Afternoon, they all repair to the Writing School:
 There all their Names are called over. Then the Chief-Master catechiseth them, that is, two Wards at a Time, and the Ward of the Girls.
 [Note, He catechiseth three Times a Week, whereof Sunday is one.] Then he expoundeth upon the Catechism; and that holds till about half an Hour past five. After a little Respite, the Boys go into the Hall to Supper. All being come in, one Boy appointed goes up into a Pulpit there placed, and reads a Chapter, being the second Lesson for the Day. After that he reads likewise several good Collects, or short Prayers, composed (or ordered to be composed) by the Right Reverend the Bishop of LON-DON; being all suitable to the Occasion; as, for all States of Men, and Thanks to their Benefactors, and Prayers for their Foundation. At the End of every Prayer, all the Boys cry,

 AMEN.

THE Boy that reads is one of the Uppermost, and designed for the University. The Prayers being done, a Psalm is named by the same Boy, and all Sing, with an Organ that is placed in the said great Hall. That done, the said Boy in the Pulpit craves a Blessing upon their Supper; and then all the Boys and Girls that were standing round in their Order before, go quietly each to their Tables and take their Places, (which they know) without any Noise. Then certain of the Boys in their Turns; some bring Bread in their Baskets, ready cut in Pieces, others Trenchers, and others Small Beer; of which they have as much as they please. Then are brought in several Wooden Platters, Legs of Mutton, usually cut out into reasonable Pieces, and the Nurses distribute them to each Boy.
 Supper being done (which is not long) the former Boy goes up into the Pulpit again, and gives Thanks; and then sets a Psalm, and all the Boys sing with the Organ. This done, they all, in very quiet and good Order, retire from the Hall to their several Wards, the Nurses of each Ward going before their respective Ward; and one of the Boys in each Ward carrying the Bread-Basket upon his Shoulder, another the Table-Cloth, and so the Hall is presently clear'd:
 And the Nurses and Boys as they pass along by the Treasurer, make their Obeisance. When they are thus retired to their several Wards, the Nurses hear them all read Chapters out of the Bible; and then they sing some Psalm again;
 and soon after they all go to Bed.

AND that these poor Children may be taken The Sick Ward.
 Care of as well in Sicknefs as in Health, there is a convenient Apartment by itself for such to be kept in, which contains a Room for the Lodging of the Sick; a Kitchen for dressing their Diet, and preparing such Physick as is needful for them; and a Consultation Chamber, where the Physician, Apothecary, or Surgeon meet, to confer upon the Patients Distempers and Cures.
 These commonly come two or three Times a Week, or oftner, if there be Occasion. The Physician is appointed by the College of Physicians. There is also a Nurse proper to this Ward.

BESIDES the Children that are maintained within the Walls of this Hospital, there are considerable Numbers belonging to it, which are sent out and provided for in the Country, viz. at Ware and Hertford in Hertfordshire, and they are of the least and youngest Sort, and afterwards brought home to LONDON. At each Place is a School-Master to teach the Children to read, with a Salary of 50*l.* each.

AT Ware is a fine Building, like a College, making a large Quadrangle, for Boys, containing a School-House and a Master's House, and twenty Houses for Nurses to keep the Children. Sir
Jonathan Raymond, Knt. sometime Alderman of LONDON, bought and gave them a Field near adjoining, to recreate themselves, and to play in.

AT Hertford is also a School-House and a Master's House, and thirteen Houses more, each with two Rooms on a Floor, and Gardens belonging.

THIS Hospital expends twelve or thirteen hundred Pounds a Year in Salaries to Officers, Clerks, and Servants. And the Foundation had such

such a Reputation, and the Estate belonging to it so well employed, and so justly managed and used to the real Intents of it, and the Government of it so good and regular, that many have been encouraged to be frank Benefactors to it; and seldom Men of Estate in the City die but they leave it very good Legacies, either in Sums of Money, in Houses, or Lands: But some have been extraordinary in their Bounty, as Mr. Stone of Skillington in Lincolnshire, left an Estate there of about 500*l.* a Year for the proper Use of this Place; yet leaving many Charities for the Hospital first to pay out.

Mr. Garraway left an Estate to it, near Arun- del in Sussex, of above 700*l.* a Year.

ONE Mr. Bacon gave a considerable Sum in Reversion, in case of the Death of two Relations.

So that their yearly Revenue in Houses and Lands, as it ought to be, to satisfy such vast Charges, is considerably great; and by the Bounty of the City, to encrease the wealthy Estate thereof, it hath allowed this House the Benefit of looking after and licensing the Carts of LONDON, the whole Care and Ordering whereof belongs to it: There are 420 Carts allowed in the City, each of which pays a certain small Sum for Sealing.

St. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

THIS Hospital is incorporated by the Name of the Hospital of the Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of LONDON, Governors for the Poor, called Little St. Bartholomew's near to West-Smithfield. It was erected for sick and maimed People, where great Care is taken of them, and all Necessaries for Food, Lodging, Attendance, Physick, and Medicaments, proper for their Cure administered; for they have good able Physicians and Surgeons provided, belonging to the Hospital, who give their constant Attendance as Occasion requires; and they have Matrons and Nurses to look to them, and to see that they have what is convenient.

THERE belongs also to the Hospital an Apothecary to provide and prepare what the Physicians direct. And the Diseased are duly visited by them, in their Wards, where they are lodged, every Morning and Evening, as there is Need; every one having a Bed to himself, and by the Care of the Matrons, the Wards are always kept clean and neat.

It formerly belonged to the Priory of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, founded by one Rabere, an ingenious Gentleman, belonging to King Henry I. founding it about the Year 1102, and he was himself the first Prior.

It was governed by a Master and eight Brethren, and four Sisters, to take Care of the Poor of the said Hospital.

BOTH Priory and Hospital were dissolved under King Henry VIII. who in the last Year of his Reign, founded the Hospital a-new, and gave 500 Marks per Annum towards its Maintenance.

KING Edward VI. was a chief Benefactor to it, as was shewn before.

BUT to give some more particular Account of the first State of this charitable Foundation, and afterwards of the more modern and present Condition of it: It was founded for the Relief of an hundred Poor and Sick of the City of LONDON, by the aforesaid King Henry VIII. endowing it with the yearly Revenue of 500 Marks, conditionally, that the City also for their Part should add other 500 Marks by the Year; which Thing with all due Thankfulness they received at his Majesty's Hands, and embraced the Condition: But when the City took a Survey of what was given by the King for this yearly Sum, they found the Raising of this 500 Marks Rent, to lie only in certain Houses, some in great Decay, and some rotten and ruinous, and some to whom better Tenants had happened, already leased out at Terms and Rent, scarce reasonable for the behoof of the Poor; so that to make them again worth the wonted Revenue, and then to continue in the same, was no small Charge. Pensions also were issuing out of the 500 Marks, and granted by Letters Patents of that King to the Hospitaler there, and to other Ministers of the same.

IN this Hospital itself, was found only so much Furniture towards the Succouring of these hundred Poor, as served three or four Harlots, then lying in Childbed and no more: So much had the Godly Meaning of that King been abused in those Days. The Citizens, nevertheless, were not discouraged with the evil Doings of others, and the great Fall of their Hopes, but provided with what Speed they could to the Redress of the Decays, Disorders, and Defaults, and bestowed thereabout not much less than a thousand Pounds, whereby in King Edward's Time it came to such a Point that it was fit to receive the Number, and to succour them with all Necessaries requisite, and accordingly received them and maintained them: But, within five Years after, the Citizens had the Care of this Hospital. They were, and even in Pulpits, exclaimed against, as if they had wrong'd this Charity, by this mistaken Supposition, that this Hospital should have made a general Sweep of all Poor and Afflicted, and so for their Care were rewarded with nothing but open Detraction.

IN this Season notwithstanding, were healed of the Pox, Fistula's, filthy Blains, and Sores, to the Number of 800, and thence safe delivered, that others having Need might enter in their Rooms, besides eight Score and twelve that died there in their intolerable Miseries, which might have died and stunk in the Noses of the City.

UPON this Slander, so widely spread, it was thought good by the Lord Mayor, as chief Patron and Governor of this Hospital, in the Name of the City, to publish at that Time who were the Overseers, and with the Orders by him appointed, and from Time to Time practised and used, by twelve of the Citizens most antient in their Courses, for the Redress and Stay of such Slanders, and that it might be an open Witness unto all Men, how well Things were administered there, and by whom, and likewise to excite all well-disposed Persons more and more to bestow their Charity here.

AND because these Men that thus spoke against the Management of this Hospital, endeavoured to stop any further Charities and Gifts towards it; suggesting, that there was enough already for this Hundred of diseased People, to be looked after, it was declared that the City, of their endless Good-Will towards this most necessary Succour of their poor Brethren in Christ, although at the first they seemed bound to the precise Number of an hundred and no more, wished all Men to be most assuredly persuaded, that if

by

by any Means possible they might, they desired to enlarge the Benefit to a thousand.

At the first Erection, the Hospital was taken Care of by two Ranks of Persons, viz. Governors and Officers, which latter were hired for Wages, to have the necessary Doings in the Service of the House.

I. THE GOVERNORS. Among them the Lord Mayor was Chief Patron; the others were so changed, that the one half remained two Years in their Governance, and they were in Number twelve, who were placed there by the Lord Mayor, whereof four were Aldermen, the Residue, Commoners thus named,

THE PRESIDENT, always a Senior Alderman

SURVEYORS four, two Aldermen and two Commoners.

ALMONERS four, one Alderman, and three Commoners.

THE TREASURER, a Commoner.

SCRUTINERS two, both Commoners.

II. OFFICERS continuable or removeable as the Governors shall find Cause, and were

I. The Hospitaler.

II. The Renter Clerk.

III. The Butler.

IV. The Porter.

V. The Matron.

VI. The Sisters, twelve.

VII. The Beadles, eight.

THERE were also three Surgeons in Wages of the Hospital, giving daily Attendance upon the Cures, and a Minister, who was the Visitor of Newgate, according to his Office and Charge.

THE Governors were always elected by the Lord Mayor and his Brethren, the other Governors; who yearly elected six, that is to say, two Aldermen and four Commoners, who were admitted into the Hospital after this Manner. The whole Company of the twelve old Governors sitting in Assembly together, cause their Clerk to read unto the six, newly elected, their Charge. That done, and the new Elected consenting and yielding themselves to the Charge, the half of the Governors, that had fulfilled their two Years Governance stood apart, and the other half that remained, with the new Elected, took them by the Hands after their Degrees, and so admitted them, and before they parted all dined together, as well those that came a-new, as those that had governed their Time, and those that remained, every Man at his own Cost and Charge.

NOW for the Charges of St. Bartholomew's, as it was in the Reign of King Edward VI. There were Certain Charges, and Uncertain. Under the Uncertain came the Monies laid out for Shirts, Smocks, and other Apparel for the Poor, for Sugar and Spices, for Caudles for the Sick, Flax for Shirts, and Weaving of the same Cloth for Winding-Sheets, Bowls, Brooms, Baskets, Incense, Juniper Ashes to buck their Cloaths. Also Money given to them at their Departure, which is measured according to their Journey and Need: Which uncertain Charges amounted one Year to the Sum of sixty Pounds.

THE certain Charges rose from the yearly Wages and Fees of Officers and Servants, and the Charges of Household Reparations, &c.

Wages of OFFICERS and SERVANTS.

 “ tron hereof, in the Name of the City, and the “ Consent of the Governors, for the Time be“ ing, all your other Business set a-part, as much “ as you possibly may, ye shall endeavour your“ selves to attend only upon the needful Doings
 “ of this House, with such a loving and careful “ Diligence, as shall become the faithful Mini“ sters of God, whom ye chiefly, in this Vo“ cation, are appointed to serve, and to whom,
 “ for your Negligencies, or Defaults herein, ye “ shall render an Account: For truly ye cannot “ be Blameless before God, if, after you have “ set your Hand to this good Plough, and pro“ mised your Diligence to the Poor, ye shall con“ trarywise turn your Head backward, and not “ perform the Succour that CHRIST looketh
 “ for at your Hands, and hath witnessed to be “ done to himself, with these Words; What- “ soever ye do to one of these needy Persons for my “ Name's Sake, the same ye do unto me: And “ otherwise if ye neglect and despise them, ye de- “ spise me.

“ WE therefore require and desire every of “ you, on God's Behalf, and in his most Holy “ Name, that ye endeavour yourselves, to the “ best of your Wit and Powers, so to Comfort, “ Order, and Govern this House, and the Poor “ thereof, that at the last Day ye may appear be“ fore the Face of God, as true and faithful “ Stewards and Disposers of all such Things, as “ shall for the Comfort and Succour of them,
 “ (during the Time of your Office) be commit“ ted to your Credit and Charge: And this we “ do require you faithfully to promise in the “ Sight of God, and Hearing of your Brethren;
 “ and in so doing, we here admit you into our “ Fellowship.

AND so likewise had all the Officers, Superior and Inferior, their respective Charges, in a certain Form of Words given them, but too long to be here set down.

THERE was also a pious Form of Thankf-giving, which the Diseased, being cured, and to be discharged the Hospital, were to repeat upon their Knees, in the Hall, before the Hospitaler, and two Masters of the House, at the least; having learned it without Book, according to the Hospitaler's Charge, which was as follows:

“ WE magnify and praise thee, O Lord,
 “ that so mercifully and favourably “ hast looked upon us, miserable and wretched “ Sinners, which have so highly offended thy “ Divine Majesty, that we are not worthy to be “ numbered among thy Elect and chosen People.
 “ Our Sins being great and grievous, are daily “ before our Eyes. We lament and are sorry for “ them, and with sorrowful Heart and la“ mentable Tears, we call and cry unto thee for “ Mercy. Have Mercy upon us, O Lord, have “ Mercy upon us, and according to thy great “ Mercy wipe away the Multitude of our Sins:
 “ And grant us now, O Lord, thy most holy
 “ and working Spirit, that setting aside all Vice “ and Idleness, we may in thy Fear walk, and “ go forward in all Virtue and Godliness.

“ AND for that thou hast moved, O Lord,
 “ the Hearts of godly Men, and the Governors
 “ of this House, to shew their exceeding Chari“ ty towards us, in curing our Maladies and “ Diseases, we yield most humble and hearty “ Thanks to thy Majesty, and shall incessantly “ laud and praise thy most holy and glorious

“ Name, beseeching thee, most gracious and “ merciful Lord, according to thy holy Word
 “ and Promise, so to bless thine own Dwelling-“ House, and the faithful Ministers thereof, “ that there be here found no Lack, but that
 “ their Riches and Substance may increase:
 “ That thy holy Name may thereby be the more “ praised and glorified: To whom be all “ Laud, Honour, and Glory, World without “ End. Amen.

ABOVE an Hundred Years ago this Hospital maintained about Three hundred poor diseased
 People, at the yearly Charge of 2000*l.*

ALTHOUGH the old Hospital then standing wholly escaped the dreadful Fire in 1666, yet a great Part of its Revenues being in Houses in LONDON, suffered much thereby. Notwithstanding, such hath been the Care of the Governors, the Diligence and Industry of the Physicians and Surgeons, and the Supplies of several good Benefactors, that there hath been yearly received in here many maimed and sick Seamen and Soldiers, with other diseased Persons, from divers Parts of the King's Dominions, and some from Foreign Parts, and many cured, and relieved with Money, and other Necessaries, at their Departure; besides their Diet and Lodging during their Cure.

THIS Hospital contains two spacious Courts for the Harbour of these poor sick and maimed Persons.

ON the West Side of the first Court is this Inscription:

These Brick Buildings were erected at the Charges of St. BARTHOLOMEW's HOS- PITAL, Sir ROBERT DUCIE, Knt. being
President, and MARTINE BOND, Esq; Trea- surer. Anno Domini 1634.

And on the East Side the following:

This Building was erected Ann. Domini 1664.
the Right Worshipful Sir RICHARD CHI-
VERTON, Knt. President, and RICHARD MILES, Esq; Treasurer.

THE grand Part of the Hospital, where are the Apartments for the Governors, the President, the Physicians, &c. to meet in, is now rebuilding, and almost finished, in a strong and beautiful Manner of Stone, with a Ballustrade all round the Top of it, adorn'd with Urns and Vases. In this new Building is an Hall of an Hundred Feet long, and Thirty four Feet broad; the Fret-work on the Ceiling is exceeding curious, done in Stucco, of three different Colours.

THERE are two other Houses, one at Kings- land, the other called the Lock in Southwark, both under the Charge of St. Bartholomew's Hospital: There are about Six hundred Patients,
 Men and Women, daily relieved with Lodging, Diet, Physick, Chirurgery, and all other Ministrations useful and necessary for restoring sick and wounded Seamen, and others, to their Healths and Limbs. The said Hospital is governed by a President, Treasurer, and several hundred Governors, out of which, annually, Committees are elected, for the good Ordering the Affairs of the House, viz.

Auditors of the General Accompt.

Auditors of the Renter's Accompt.

Viewers of the Revenues belonging to the said Hospital.

Overseers

OVERSEERS of the Goods and Utenfils of the said Hospital.

ALMONERS to buy Provisions and Necessaries for the Patients.

THE Treasurer, Almoners, and divers Governors, meet twice a Week, within the said Hospital, to see that good Rule and Government be kept in that House, and to discharge such poor diseased Persons as are cured, and admit others in their Room.

THE immediate President is Sir Richard Brocas, Alderman.

THE Treasurer, Richard Bowater, Esq;
THERE are two able Physicians belonging to the said Hospital, Dr. Richard Tyson, Dr. Pierce Dadd.

Thomas Northey, Apothecary.

MASTER SURGEONS.
MR. William Green,
MR. John Freke, and
MR. James Phillips.

ASSISTANT-SURGEONS.
MR. Thomas Bigg,
MR. Joseph Webb, and
MR. Edward Nourse.

ANY of the above cut for the Stone by a late Order of the Governors.

SURGEON to the Lock in Southwark, Mr. Peter St. Hill.

SURGEON to the Lock at Kingsland, Mr. James Dansie.

VICAR and Hospitaler, the Reverend Mr. John Banfon.

MR. William Tims, Register.
MR. Matthew Woolfreys, Steward.
MR. John Lloyd, Renter.
A Matron, and TWENTY Sisters.

BY comparing the Cures here done in several Years past, one with another, and the constant Number that are harbour'd here, a new Estimate may be made of the annual Charges of this Hospital. In the last Year, viz. 1732, there were cured and discharged, of wounded, maimed, sick, and diseased Persons, out of this great City, and other Parts of his Majesty's Dominions and Foreign Parts, 4334.

MANY of them relieved with Money, and other Necessaries, at their Discharge, to accommodate them in their Return to their several Habitations.

BURIED, 349.
REMAINING under Cure, 609.

So that there have been under the Care of the Hospital last Year, of poor, sick, and lame Persons, destitute of other Relief; in all, 5292.

To this Hospital divers honourable and worthy charitable People have contributed their Benevolence; and to signalize the same, and to put others in Mind to follow so good an Example, the Governors thought fit to have their Names fairly wrote, with a Pencil, in Oil, on both Sides the publick Passages, from Smithfield to Christ Church Hospital, at a convenient Height from N<sup>o</sup>. 13. VOL. I.

St. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL.

St. Thomas's Hospital.

THIS Hospital is seated on the East Side of the Borough of Southwark, but in the City's Jurisdiction, and is properly subjoined to that of St. Bartholomew's, being also appropriated for the Cure of sick and maimed poor People, which are sent thither from the several Parts of the Kingdom, by Certificates from the Church Wardens, and other substantial Inhabitants of the Parishes where they dwell; and are accordingly received and Care taken of them, as at St. Bartholomew's until cured, or restored to Health, if enable.

It is under the same Government with the former, and was incorporated with Christ Church, by King Edward VI. It was reckoned above 100 Years ago, to maintain 300 poor Diseased, with the Charge of about 2000 l. per Annum.

THIS Hospital escaped the furious Flames in the Year 1666, and most providentially those about 10 Years afterward, when on the 26th of May 1676, a Fire happened in the Borough, which consumed 300 Houses; yet, as by the particular Will of Heaven, was extinguished at this Place. The Structure being old, the Church was rebuilt, and most of the Hospital, in the Years 1701, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, in a very spacious and ornamental Manner.

THERE are three Quadrangular Courts, formed by several Piles of Building. The Fronts of that round the first Court are elevated on Columns of the Tuscan Order. At the Entrance are three handsome Pair of Iron Gates. In the Middle of the East Side is a Door Case of Stone, adorned with Columns, Entablature, and Pediment of the same Order, enriched with the King's Arms in the Pediment, and higher with four Cripples in as many Niches, a fine Clock at Top, and under it the Figure of the Founder, with this Inscription:

EDWARD the sixth of most famous Memory, King of England, of his most Christian Zeale, and gracious Bounty, in the Yeare of our Lord 1532, in the 16 Yeare of his Age, and 7th of his Reign, was Founder of this Hospital of St. Thomas, that of Christ Church, Bridewell, and was to them a most worthy and bountifull Benefactor.

THERE are likewise the two following Inscriptions cut in Stone, on the North and South Sides.

THIS Building on the North Side of this Court, containing three Wards, was erected at the Charge of Thomas Guy, Esq; Citizen and Stationer of LONDON, a worthy Governour, and bountifull Benefactor to this Hospital, An<sup>o</sup> 1707.

THIS Building on the South Side of this Court, containing three Wards, was erected at the Charge of Thomas Frederick, of LONDON, Esq; a worthy Governour, and liberrall Benefactor to this Hospital, An<sup>o</sup> 1708.

THE second Court has, on the South Side, the Parish Church, adorned on the Front with Pillasters of the Ionick Order. On the North Side is the Chapel of the House, with ornamental Pillasters of the Corinthian Order. The East Side is the Hall, elevated on Columns of the Tuscan Order; and in this Court are the Minister's, Treasurer's, Steward's, Cook's, and Butler's Houses, with the Counting-House.

THE third Court is called the Great Square, the Fronts of which are also built on Columns of the Tuscan Order, and adorned above with Pillasters of the Ionick.

IN the Center of this Court is the Figure of Sir Robert Clayton, carved in full Proportion, in the Habit of Lord Mayor, with a Charter in his Hand, and standing on a Pedestal, about six Feet high, all neatly cut in Marble; the Pedestal is enriched with Sir Robert's Arms, supported with two Cupids, &c. and on the North Side of the Pedestal is this Inscription.

ROBERTO CLAITONO, Equiti, in Agro Northamptoniensi nato, Civi Londinensi, & Urbis Pratori, hujus Nosocomii Præsidi, novi Pauperum Ergastuli Vicepræsidi, & Fautori benefico. Quod in Magistratu semper æquus, Patriæ, Libertatis, & Fidei reformatæ Vindex fuit acerrimus: Quod præter alia Liberalitatis suæ erga egenos Monumenta Puellarum in Christi Orphanotrophio Cubiculum suis sumptibus extrui curavit: Quod ad hanc Domum reficiendam, Libras primum DC. erogavit vivus. Et insuper MM CCC. Testamento legavit: Ob tanta viri Merita, hanc Statuam, quam Honoris Causa viventi posuerant Nosocomii Curatores, Ann. Dom. M DCC I. in Memoriam Mortui decoraverunt, Ann. Dom. MDCCXIV.

ON the South Side of the Pedestal, is the same in English, viz.

"To Sir Robert Clayton, Knight, born in "Northamptonshire, Citizen and Lord Mayor of "LONDON, President of this Hospital,
"Vice-President of the new Workhouse, and a "bountiful Benefactor to it, a just Magistrate,
"and brave Defender of the Liberty and Religion of his Country. Who (besides many other Instances of his Charity to the Poor)
"built the Girls Ward in Christ's Hospital,
"gave first towards the rebuilding of this House
"600 l. and left by his last Will 2300 l. to the "Poor of it. This Statue was erected in his "Life-time by the Governors, Ann. Dom.
"MDCC I. as a Monument of their Esteem of "so much Worth, and to preserve his Memory
"after Death, was by them beautified, Anno
"Dom. MDCCXIV.

IN a little Court farther Eastward, are the Salivating Wards, viz. Lazarus's Ward, and Susannah's Ward.

ALSO Cutting Ward, with seven Beds; and the Cutting Room is close by it, where they cut for the Stone. In this Court also is the Surgery and Bagnio, the Theatre, and Dead-House, where the Dead are put till such Time as they are buried in a Church-yard near this Court.

IN the aforesaid Hall are the Pictures of King Edward VI. Charles II. William and Mary, and that of Sir Robert Clayton, all curiously done at full Length. Here the President's Seat is finely enrich'd with carved Fruit, Leaves, &c. done in Relievo: And in this Hall are put up the Arms of Sir Robert Clayton, Argent, a Crois Sable, between tween four Augresses; and several large Tables of Benefactors.

THE Governors of this Hospital are the Lord Mayor, and sixty other Gentlemen and substantial Citizens of LONDON.

SIR Gerard Conyers, Knight and Alderman, President.

Charles Foy, Esq; Treasurer, who hath the executive Government of the House, with a Committee of thirty Governors, (seven whereof are a Quorum) changed every three Years, ten going out Yearly, and as many elected in their Room, at the annual General Court, and with twelve Almoners chosen Quarterly, who Weekly take in the Sick and Wounded, and discharge such as are Cured, or the Incurables.

Two Chaplains.

Mr. Drew, Hospitaler.

Mr. Casberd, Curate of the Parish.

Dr. Plumtre, Dr. Wilmot, and Dr. Hall, Physicians.

Mr. Fern, Mr. Cheselden, and Mr. Symonds, Surgeons.

Mr. Pierce, Apothecary.

Mr. Gale, Steward.

Mr. Mathews, Clerk and Register.

ONE Cook; one Butler, who hath also the Care of the Brewhouse; two Porters; four Beadles.

Mrs. Pierce, Matron, under whom are nineteen Sisters, who take Care of so many several Wards; with Nurses, Watchers, &c. attending the Poor.

THE Governors set every Thursday at the Hospital, to take in and discharge Patients.

AT this Hospital, the last Year, viz. 1732, were cured and discharged, of wounded, maimed, sick, and diseased Persons, 4173.

MANY of whom have been relieved with Money and Necessaries at their Departure, to accommodate them in their Journies to their several Countries and Habitations.

BURIED from thence the same Year, after much Charge in their Sickness, 307.

REMAINING under Cure at the Charge of the said Hospital; 593.

So that there were, or had been, that Year, of poor miserable Objects, under the Care of the said Hospital, and destitute of other proper Cure, in all, 5073.

BRIDEWELL HOSPITAL.

Bridewell Hospital.

AFTER the three afore-mentioned great Hospitals had been founded, there being many other poor distressed Persons in the City, who had neither House nor Harbour, but were forced to lye abroad in the open Streets, many worthy Citizens were thereby much affected, and especially Ridley, the good Bishop of LONDON; who, considering that Bridewell, an old decayed House of the King's, situated in the City, being very large and capacious, might be extreamly serviceable to this charitable Purpose, he endeavoured to find a way to beg it of the King, and had the better Opportunity at this Time, one being about buying it of the King to convert to his own Use. And to compass this Design, in the Month of May, in this charitable Year 1552, he wrote a very pathetic Letter to Sir William Cecyl, Knt. the King's Secretary, whom he knew to be of a pious Disposition, and much about the King's Person. His Letter was as follows:

Bishop Ridley's Letter to Cecyl to beg Bridewell.

GOOD Mr. Cecyl, I must be a Suitor unto you in our Master Christ's Cause. I beseech you be good unto him. The Matter is, Sir: Alas! he hath lien too too long abroad (as you do know) without Lodging, in the Streets of LONDON, both Hungry, Naked, and Cold. Now Thanks be unto Almighty God, the Citizens are willing to refresh him, and to give him both Meat, Drink, Cloathing, and Firing; but alas! Sir, they lack Lodging for him. For in some one House, I dare say, they are faine to lodge three Families under one Roof. Sir, there is a wide, large, empty House of the King's Majesty, called Bridewell, that would wonderfully well serve to lodge Christ in, if he might find such good Friends in the Court to procure in his Cause. Surely I have such a good Opinion in the King's Majesty, that if Christ had such faithful and hearty Friends, that would heartily speak for him, he should, undoubtedly, speed at the King's Majesty's Hands. Sir, I have promised my Brethren, the Citizens, to move you, because I do take you for one that feareth God, and would that Christ should lye no more abroad in the Street.

HE prayed him also for God's Sake, that he would stop the Sale of this House, in case any were about buying of it, as he heard there was; and that he would speak in our Master's Cause. The said Bishop wrote also to Sir John Gates, another great Man at Court, about this Business more at large: And he joyned, he said, Cecyl with him, and all other that loved and looked for Christ's final Benediction on the latter Day; meaning that in the Gospel, Come ye Blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the Beginning of the World. For I was an hungry, &c. He also sent Instructions by the Bearer of this Letter, to confer further with Cecyl in this Affair. So that that holy Martyr Ridley's Name must not be forgotten, as a great Instrument in the Procurement of Bridewell to the City.

AFTERWARD this House being obtained to the City, it was employed for the Correction and Punishment of idle, vagrant People, and Strumpets, and for setting them to Work, that they might in an honest Way take Pains to get their own Livelihood.

AND here must not be omitted the Names of two good Mayors of LONDON, Dobbs and Barnes; the Former a main Instrument in procuring the Foundation of this and other Hospitals: The Latter in furthering the good Estate of them, whom the good Bishop of LONDON accosted in this Manner, in one of the Letters he wrote out of Prison, a little before his Death:

O Dobbs, Dobbs, Alderman, and Knight, thou in thy Year didst win my Heart for evermore, for that honourable Act, that most blessed Work of God, of the Erection and Setting up of Christ's holy Hospitals, and truly religious Houses, which by thee, and through thee, were begun. For thou, like a Man of God, when the Matter was moved, [perhaps by himself, the Bishop] for Christ's poor silly Members, to be holpen from extream Misery, Hunger, and Famine, thy Heart, I say, was moved with Pity; and as Christ's high honourable Officer in that Cause, thou calledst together thy Brethren, the Aldermen of the City, before whom thou brakest the Matter for the Poor: Thou didst plead their Cause: Yea, and not only in thine own Person thou didst set forth Christ's Cause; but to further the Matter, thou broughtest me into the Council Chamber of the City before the Aldermen alone, whom thou hadst assembled there together to hear me speak what I could say, as an Advocate, by Office and Duty in the poor Man's “ Man’s Cause. The Lord wrought with thee,

 “ and gave thee the Consent of thy Brethren,
 “ whereby the Matter was brought to the Com“ mon Council, and so to the whole Body of “ the City; by whom, with an uniform Con“ sent, it was committed to be drawn, ordered
 “ and devised, by a certain Number of the most “ witty Citizens and politick; endued also with “ Godliness, and with ready Hearts, to set for“ ward such a noble Act, as could be chosen “ in all the whole City. And they, like true and “ faithful Ministers, both to the City, and their “ Master Christ, so ordered, devised, and brought “ forth the Matter, that Thousands of poor silly
 “ Members of Christ, that else, for extream “ Hunger and Misery, should have famished and “ perished, shall be relieved, holpen, and “ brought up; and shall have Cause to bless the “ Aldermen of that Time, the Common Coun“ cil, and the whole Body of the City; but es“ pecially thee, O Dobbs, and those chosen “ Men by whom this honourable Work of God “ was begun and wrought.

“ AND thou, O Sir George Barnes, thou “ wast in thy Year, not only a Furtherer and “ Continuer of that which before thee, by thy “ Predecessor, was well begun, but also thou “ didst labour so to have perfected the Work,
 “ that it should have been an absolute Thing,
 “ and a perfect Spectacle of true Charity and “ Godliness unto all Christendom. Thine En“ deavour was to have set up an House of Oc“ cupations, both that all kind of Poverty “ being able to work, should not have lacked, “ whereupon profitably they might have been “ occupied to their own Relief, and to the Pro“ fit and Commodity of the Commonwealth of “ the City; and also to have retired thither the “ poor Babes brought up in the Hospitals, when “ they had come to a certain Age and Strength;
 “ and also all those which in the Hospitals afore“ said have been cured of their Diseases. And “ to have brought this to pass, thou obtainedst
 “ (not without great Diligence and Labour,
 “ both of thee and thy Brethren) of that Godly “ King Edward, that Christian and Peerless “ Prince, the Princely Place of Bridewell, and “ what other Things to the Performance of the “ same, and under what Condition, it is not “ unknown. That this thine Endeavour hath “ not had like Success, the Fault is not in thee,
 “ but in the Condition and State of the Time.

At the same Time that the Citizens were moved to these Charities, the King was excited to the same, by good Sermons preached before him: Such was that of Mr. Lever, a learned and pious Preacher in those Days, and Master of St. John’s College, Cambridge, who, in a Lent Sermon before the King, had these Words:
 “ O merciful Lord, what a Number of poor, free-
 “ ble, halt, blind, lame, sickly, yea, with idle “ Vagabonds and dessembling Caitiffs mixt among “ them, lye, and creep, begging in the Miry “ Streets of LONDON and Westminster? It “ is too great Pity afore the World, and to “ utter Damnation before God, to see these “ Beggings as they use to do in the Streets.
 “ For there is never a one of these, but he lack“ eth either thy charitable Alms to relieve his “ Need, or else thy due Correction to punish “ his Fault, &c. These silly Souls have been “ neglected throughout all England, and especial“ ly in LONDON and Westminster. But now
 “ I trust, that a good Overseer, a godly Bishop,
 “ I mean, will see that they in these two Cities “ shall have their Needs relieved, and their “ Faults corrected, to the good Example of all “ other Towns and Cities. Take heed that there “ be such Grass to sit down there, as ye [speaking to the King] command the People to sit down: That there be sufficient Housing, and other Provision for the People there, as ye command them to be quiet. The Men sat down about Five thousand in Number: Which was Part of the Gospel for the Day, out of which he took his Text.

AND Ridley, that zealous and charitable Prelate, and true Father of his Flock in LON- DON, was seasonably called also to preach before the King at Westminster, where he so closely and affectionately press’d Persons in high Place and Calling, to be Instruments in helping and succouring the Poor, that the King was exceedingly moved with his Discourse; and presently sent for him, taking Notice to him of his Sermon; and that he supposed he chiefly had him in his Eye, as being the highest of those in great Place and Calling, that he the Bishop spake to.
 Then the King assured him of his own Readiness to promote such good Purposes, desiring him to direct him therein, and what he would advise him to do on that Part.

THE Bishop hereupon referred the King to the City, and the King presently caused a Letter to be wrote, and sent to the Mayor and his Brethren, to enter into Consultation about it:
 The Conclusion of which was, that as the City had appointed the Grey Fryars, now called Christ Church, for poor Children; St. Bartho- lomew’s, and likewise St. Thomas’s in Southwark, for the Maimed and Diseased; and Bridewell for the Correction of Vagabonds, Strumpets, and idle Persons, and for finding them Work; so they obtained of the King to grant the Governors of these Places to be a Corporation, and to have Authority convenient for the Governing thereof: And he constituted himself Founder, and Patron.

IN June an Indenture bore Date, and was made between the King, and the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, and their Successors for ever, towards the Maintenance of poor and impotent People; granting all the Manor House, and Place of Bridewell, with the Appurtenances, lying and being in the Parish of St. King Edward’s Bridget in Fleet-street, with other Lands, and with Grants.
 a License to purchase 4000 Mark Lands for the Use abovesaid; besides the Lands given them by his Majesty in LONDON, and elsewhere; and to purchase so much Land, besides Fees and Pensions granted to the Officers; and that the Lands given them by the King should be quit and discharged of all Tenths and First Fruits.
 That they might make godly and wholesome Ordinances, Statutes and Rules, for the Government of the Poor. And that within the City of LONDON, and County of Middlesex, they might search and examine all Manner of suspicious Houses, Taverns, Ale-houses, &c. and other suspected Places for Ruffians, Vagabonds, and idle Persons. This Gift of the King was computed to the Yearly Value of Four hundred and fifty Pounds.

AND moreover, out of his meer Grace and Christian Charity, he gave out of the Hospital of the Savoy, now suppress’d for the aforesaid Charitable Use, a great Part of the Revenue thereof, which was 700 Mark Lands, together with the Bedding and Furniture; though dying soon after, the Grant seemed not to be fully finished: But for fear it should not take Place, (so much it ran in the King’s Mind) that in his last Will he caused this Clause to be inserted;
The Grant made to the Mayor and City of LONDON, touching the Savoy and Lands thereof, to be performed.

THO’ this House was granted in the Year 1553, yet it seems it was not till two Years after, that the City entered and took Possession of it by Gerard

Gerard their Mayor, having obtained Queen Mary's Confirmation.

IN the Time of Queen Elizabeth, about the Year 1570 and odd, one John Pain, a Citizen, invented a Mill to grind Corn, which he got recommended to the Lord Mayor, for the Use of Bridewell. This Mill had two Conveniences; one was, that it would grind a greater Quantity considerably, than other Mills of that Sort could do; and the other (which would render it so useful to Bridewell) was, that the Lame, either in Arms or Legs, might work at it, if they had but Use of either: And accordingly these Mills were termed Hand Mills, or Foot Mills.

THIS Mill he shewed to the Lord Mayor, who saw it grind as much Corn with the Labour of two Men, as they did then at Bridewell, with ten: That is to say, two Men with Hands, two Bushels the Hour; or two Men with Feet, two Bushels the Hour. If they were lame in their Arms, then they might earn their Livings with their Legs: If lame in their Legs, then they might earn their Livings with their Arms.

ONE Mill would grind twenty Bushels of Wheat in a Day: So that by Computation it was reckoned, that one of these would supply a thousand Persons.

LONG after this House of Bridewell was given to the City, there remained many old Records there, which had probably been there repositied ever since the Kings of England made it their Residence. This, in the Days of Queen Elizabeth, was, by Somebody belonging to the Lord Treasurer, discovered to him; informing him, That certain old Fines were kept there, in the Custody of the Chirographer, i. e. The Officer in the Common-Pleas, that engrosseth Fines, and that the said Fines ought to be in the Keeping of the Lord Treasurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer; and moved him to call the said Chirographer before him, to know by what Right he kept the same, and thereupon to give Order for their removing.

ONE who lived in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, speaking of the Hospitals, and particularly of this, applying himself to the Romanists, who boasted of their Hospitality: "Look into LONDON, said he, What Hospitals are there founded in the Gospel Time! "The Poor indeed relieved, Youth godly brought up, and the Idle set to Work. Popery would sometime feed the Hungry, and seldom correct the unprofitable Drones, that sucked the Honey from the labouring Bees, nor bring up Children in the Fear of God: But to fill the Belly, and not to teach Virtue, is to increase Vice. Well worth Bridewell therefore; for it is a good School.

THIS a Right Reverend Bishop of Durham spoke, to oppose his Popish Adversary, before those of the Gospel, because of the Hospitality of their Religious Houses.

ANOTHER who wrote above an hundred Years after, giveth this Account of Bridewell: "That in it were an hundred poor Children trained up, besides many other Persons kept at Work.

THIS, and the three other Hospitals, were thought to spend, by charitable Gifts, upon the Poor, about 10,000 l. yearly.

IN Bridewell, at the City's Charge, were built in those Times, twelve new Granaries, sufficient to contain six thousand Quarters of Corn, and two Storehouses, which would hold four thousand Chaldron of Coals, for the Provision of the City, at the Charge of 3000 l. or thereabouts.

THE Use of this Hospital, now, is for a House of Correction, and to be a Place where all Strumpets, Night-walkers, Pick-pockets, vagrant and idle Persons, that are taken up for their ill Lives, as also incorrigible and disobedient Servants, are committed by the Mayor and Aldermen, who are Justices of the Peace in this City. And being so committed, are forced to beat Hemp in publick View, with due Correction of Whipping, according to their Offence, for such a Time as the President and Court shall see Cause. The Court Day being, generally, every Friday in the Forenoon.

AND to this Hospital are sent several Youths, as Apprentices to Glovers, Flaxdressers, Weavers, &c. who there reside. And these are clad in blue Doublets and Breeches, with white Hats: Having faithfully served their Time of seven Years, they have not only their Freedom, but also 10 l. each, toward carrying on their respective Trades, and many of them have, from Nothing, arrived to be Governors themselves.

IN the Year 1666, this House was burnt, and all the Apartments belonging to it; as also all the Dwelling-Houses in the Precinct of Bridewell, which was about two Thirds of the Revenue of the House; but the Governors, till the Hospital could be rebuilt, made Provision for the several Arts-Masters and their Apprentices, in Places remote from the City: And now the Chapel, Court-House, Work-Houses, and Dwelling Houses, within the said Hospital, by the Care and Pains of the worthy Governors at the Time of building them, are more convenient than ever. The Reparations, Rebuilding, and other incident Charges, occasioned by the Fire, amounted to above 6000 l. Besides the great Loss that this House sustained by the Fire in 1666, their Revenue was much impaired by two other Fires that happened at Wapping; where a great many Tenements belonging to it were burnt; the one in June 1673; and the other in November 1682.

IN the Court Room is a Chair for the President, and convenient Seats for the Governors: It is adorned with Columns of the Composite Order, a Gallery, &c. but the most valuable Embellishments are the several handsome Tables, wherein the Names of the Benefactors are depencilled in Gold Letters.

OVER the Door, at the Entrance is this Inscription:

THIS Chapel, Court-Room, and Parlour, were repaired and beautified in the Year 1706. Sir Thomas Rawlinson, Lord Mayor, then President; Thomas Gardiner, Esq; Treasurer.

AND over the Gates going into the Chapel:

THESE Iron Gates, and the Marble Pavement, were the Gift of the Right Worshipful Sir William Withers, Knight and Alderman, President of this Hospital, Anno Dom. 1713.

THE whole Management of the Affairs in this Hospital is by the Governors, who are above 300, besides the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen; all Gentlemen of the greatest Reputation and Substance in the City and elsewhere, and who are likewise Governors of the Hospital of Bethlem.

THE President is Humphrey Parsons, Esq; Alderman.

THE Treasurer, Robert Alsop, Esq; Alderman.

COURT-Clerk, John Taylour, Esq; THERE are besides, the following Officers; a Steward, a Porter, a Matron, and four Beadles; the youngest of whom is to give Correction to the Criminals.

IN the last Year (1732) there were received into the Hospital of Bridewell, Vagrants, and other other indigent and miserable People, all which had Physick, and such other Relief, at the Charge of the said House, as their Necessities required, 612.

MAINTAINED in the said Hospital, and brought up in divers Arts and Trades, at the only Charge of the House, as Apprentices; 102.

BETHLEM HOSPITAL; Or, B E D L A M.

Old Bethlem.

THE Hospital of St. Mary of Bethlem, situated in Bishopsgate Ward, without the City Wall, betwixt Bishopsgate-street and Moorfields, was first founded by Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of London, A. D. 1246. to be a Priory of Canons with Brethren and Sisters, and to wear a Star upon their Copes and Mantles, and to receive the Bishop of Bethlehem, and the Canons or Messengers of the Church of Bethlehem, whensoever they should have Occasion to travel hither.

KING Henry VIII. gave this House to the City of LONDON. They converted it to a House or Hospital, for the Cure of Lunaticks; but not without Charges, at so much per Week, for those brought in, if they or their Relations were able; and if not, then at the Parish Charge, in which they were Inhabitants.

New Bethlem.

THIS Hospital stood in an obscure and close Place, near many Common-Sewers, and also was too little to receive and entertain the great Number of distracted Persons, both Men and Women: Therefore upon a charitable Consideration of the same, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of LONDON, did grant unto the Governors a sufficient Piece of Ground against London-Wall, on the South Side of the lower Quarters of Moorfields: And in Pursuance thereof they did proceed to build a new Hospital, which is now a stately and magnificent Structure, containing in Length from East to West 540 Feet, and in Breadth 40 Feet, besides the Wall which incloseth the Gardens before it, which is neatly ordered with Walks round about, and Grasse Plats, or Parterres, in the Middle; and besides this Garden, there is, at each End, another for the Lunatick People, when they are a little well of their Distemper, to walk in for their Refreshment; this Wall is in Length 680 Feet, being very high.

THIS large Fabrick is built of Brick and Free-stone: In the Front is a fine Stone Door-Case, adorned with four Pilasters, a circular Pediment, and Entablature of the Corinthian Order, the King's Arms in the Pediment, and those of Sir William Turner under it, who was President when the Hospital was built, which was begun in April 1675, and finished in July 1676.

At the Entrance are handsome Iron Gates, where, on two Piers, each adorned with two Demy Columns of the Ionick Order, and Festoons, are placed the Figures of two Lunaticks, one raving, the other melancholy mad; they are esteemed to be Pieces of exquisite Sculpture, and were the Workmanship of Mr. Cibber, of Holstein, who did the Basso Relievo on the Pedestal of the Monument on Fish-street Hill; and was Father to the present Poet-Laureat.

THE Charge of this Building was computed to amount to near 17000 l. where now, with some Additions lately made, there is an Accommodation for 170 Patients, whereas in the old Hospital there were commonly not above 50 or 60 at most.

THE Inside consists chiefly of two Galleries, one over the other, each 193 Yards long, 13 Feet high, and 16 Feet broad, not including the Cells for the Patients, which are 12 Feet deep. The said Galleries are divided, in the Middle, by two Iron Grates: So that now all the Men are placed in one End of the House, and all the Women at another, each having their proper Conveniences, as likewise a Stove-Room, where, in the Winter, they have a Fire to warm them: And in each Gallery Servants lie, to be ready at Hand on all Occasions.

BESIDES, below Stairs there is made, of late, a Bathing-Place for the Patients, so contrived, as to be an Hot, or Cold Bath, as Occasion requires.

IN the Middle of the Upper Gallery is a large spacious Room, where the Governors, and in the Lower, a lesser, where the Weekly Committee meet, and the Physician prescribes for Patients.

BESIDES, convenient Apartments for the Steward of the House, for the Porter, Matron, Nurse, and Servants; and below Stairs, all necessary Offices for keeping and dressing the Provisions, for washing, and other Necessaries belonging to so large a Family.

OUT of the Committee appointed for Bethlem, there are six to meet Weekly, who on Saturday examine the Steward's Account of Expences, for the Week preceding, and after it is approved they sign it. They are likewise to view the Provisions, the Patients that are to be received, or discharged, and direct other Matters belonging to the said Hospital.

IN the Governor's Room the following Orders are hung up in a Frame.

An Abstract of ORDERS of Court made the 30th of March, 1677, for the good Government of the Hospital of BETHLEM.

I. THAT the Bell be rung at Sun-setting every Evening, Summer and Winter; and that then all Persons do depart, and that afterwards no Persons be admitted in, but Quality, or Governors.

II. THAT no Servant go out of the Hospital, till half an Hour after ringing the Bell, nor stay out after Eight from Michaelmas to Lady-Day, nor after Ten from Lady-Day to Michaelmas; and that but one half of them be out at one Time.

III. THAT the Back Gate at London-Wall shall always be shut, except on extraordinary Occasions of bringing in Beer, &c. And that no Persons shall come in to see the Lunaticks that Way.

IV. THAT no Person, except Governors, shall be permitted to see the Lunaticks on Sundays.

V. THAT no Person do give the Lunaticks Strong Drink, Wine, Tobacco, or Spirits, nor be permitted to sell any such Thing in the Hospital.

VI. THAT such of the Lunaticks as are fit, be permitted to walk in the Yard till Dinner-time, and then be locked up in their Cells; and that no Lunatick that lies naked, or is in a Course of Physick, be seen by any Body, without Order of the Physician.

VII. THAT no Servant, or other Person whatsoever, shall take any Money given to the Lunaticks, to convert the same to their own Use, but the same to be kept for the Lunaticks till recovered, or laid out for them in the mean Time as the Committee shall think fit.

VIII. That no Officer or Servant shall beat or abuse any Lunatick, nor offer any Force to them, but upon absolute Necessity for the better Governing of them.

IX. THAT

BETHLIAM HOSPITAL.

IX. THAT no Person do presume to ask any Person for Money, till such Person's Charity be first put into the Poors Box; and that whatever afterwards shall be given to such Servant, be put by him into the Servants Box, to be distributed among them, pursuant to an Order of Court for that Purpose.

X. THAT some of the Committee go weekly to the said Hospital, to see the Provisions weighed, and that the same be good and rightly expended. That the Men-Servants shall attend the Delivery of the Diet to the Lunatick Men, and the Women-Servants to the Lunatick Women.

AND on the 11th of August 1699, it was ordered, That the Porter, Basket-Men, and all other Servants of the said Hospital, take effectual Care, that no Person whatsoever, that they in the least suspect to be lewd or disorderly Persons, nor any Boys or Girls, that they think are Apprentices, and come there to idle away their Time, be, upon any Account, permitted to come into the said Hospital; That the Steward of the said Hospital for the Time being, be Supervisor over all the Servants thereto belonging, and if any of them be remiss in their Duties, he to acquaint the Weekly Committee therewith.

THE following Order is likewise for their Diet:

Sunday, Boil'd Beef and Broth, and Bread for Dinner; and a Mess of hot Broth and Bread, for Supper.

Monday, Bread, Cheese and Butter for Dinner; Milk-Pottage, and other Pottage, with Bread, for Supper.

Tuesday, Boil'd Mutton, or Veal and Broth for Dinner; and hot Broth for Supper.

Wednesday, Bread and Cheese, or Butter for Dinner; and a Mess of Milk-Pottage for Supper.

Thursday, Boil'd Beef, Broth and Bread for Dinner; and a Mess of hot Broth and Bread for Supper.

Friday, Bread and Cheese, and Butter for Dinner; Milk-Pottage, or other Pottage for Supper.

Saturday, Pease-Pottage, Rice-Milk, and Fumity, or other Pottage for Dinner; and Bread and Cheese, and Butter for Supper; and such Fruit is given them as is most seasonable.

THE Hospitals of Bridewell and Bethlem, being made one Corporation, they have the same President, Treasurer, Governors, Clerk, Physician, Surgeon, and Apothecary: But each Hospital has its proper Steward, and inferior Officers, and out of the Governors, a particular Committee is appointed for each.

The OFFICERS at present are,

Physician,	Dr. Munroe.
Surgeon,	Mr. Wheeler.
Apothecary,	Mr. Elderton.
Porter,	John Wood.
Matron,	Mrs. Wood.
Three Keepers,	and one Nurse.

THE Governors of this Hospital, as also that of Bridewell, are chiefly Citizens, but yet some are Noblemen, and others Men of Fashion.

The President.

THE President, who is Chief Governor, is usually chosen out of such Aldermen of the City as have pass'd the Chair. He presides over all, and is President of Bridewell, as well as this Hospital. His Business is, on Court Days, at Bridewell to examine and judge the Prisoners sent thither, and according to their Crimes, with Consent of the Court, directs their Punishments, and there transacts other Business, relating to both Hospitals; he also signs Warrants for such Patients as are to be sent to this Hospital.

THE Treasurer is chosen out of the Governors; his Business is, particularly to take Care of the Revenues, to receive the Monies, and order the necessary Payments; and, in the Absence of the President, he takes the Chair at the Courts held at Bridewell, and likewise signs the Warrants for the Lunatics to be sent to Bethlem.

AND, for the greater Ease and Dispatch in transacting the Affairs of Hospitals, there is Yearly appointed out of the Governors, a Committee for each Hospital. The Committee for Bethlem consists usually of 36 Persons, of whom six are obliged to attend the Service of the Hospital for two Months, viz. six for January and July, the other six for February and August, and so on. The usual Time of the Meeting of the six is on Saturdays, when they examine the Steward's Accounts for the Week preceding, which being approved, is transcribed into a Book, and signed by them. They likewise take Notice of the Provisions, give Directions about Repairs, view the Patients to be admitted or discharged, and do other Matters that may come before them, as was hinted before: But if any Thing of greater Import happen, it is referred to a General Court: For, if they do not presently determine the Matter, they appoint the same Committee, or a larger, to examine into it, and so make their Report to that Court.

THE Office of Clerk is to enter the Names of the Lunatics, to take the Securities of such as are admitted for Cure, and to gather all the Rents.

THEY have a Minister also, to whom they allow 20*l.* a Year, whose Office is to visit the Lunatics, and to instruct, and pray with such of them as are capable of it, and to do other Spiritual Offices among them.

THE Method of admitting Patients into the Hospital, is thus: The Patient being brought upon a Saturday, when the Committee meets, to be view'd by them and the Physician; if he be judged a fit Object for that Hospital, then a Warrant is drawn up by the Clerk of the Hospital, to be signed by the President, or, in his Absence, by the Treasurer, for his Admittance. Those who put the Patient in are obliged to give Bond to be signed by two Persons, to take him away when discharged the House; or if he dies to be at the Charge of burying him.

AS to the Care and Cure of Patients, here is the greatest Provision made for them of any public Charity in the World; each having a convenient Room, where they are lock'd up at Nights; and in it a Place for a Bed; or if they are so senseless as not fit to make Use of one, they are every Day provided with fresh and clean Straw. Those who are fit for it, at convenient Hours, have Liberty to walk in the long Galleries, which are large and spacious. In the Heat of the Weather, the Bathing-Place, to cool and wash them in, is of great Service in curing their Lunacy, and is easily made an Hot Bath for restoring their Limbs when numb'd, or cleaning and preserving them from Scurvy, or other cutaneous Distempers.

SEVERAL who have come into the Hospital with Loss of Limbs, and not able to go, have been recovered, and sent out perfectly well; as others have, who have been, to the greatest Degree, over-run with the Scurvy, with Ulcers in their Mouths, with Hydropical Swellings in their Limbs, with Mortifications in their Toes, large Blotches over their Bodies, and Variety of other Distempers, and such as have been taken with the Small-Pox.

So that in 20 Years, from 1684, to 1703, during which Time the late learned Dr. Tyson had been Physician there, as he informed Mr. Strype himself, there had been 1294 Patients, of which Number 893 had been cured and discharged, which is about Two Patients in Three; and after calling up the Number of Men and Women Patients, some Years, he found them pretty equal.

WHEN a Patient is cured, and to be discharged, he is called before the Committee of the Governors and Physician, who examine him, and being found fit to be discharged, the Physician gives a Certificate of the same, and then the Steward of the House takes Care to see him delivered to his Friends.

IN the last Year [1732] there were admitted into the Hospital of Bethlem, distracted Men and Women, 123.

CURED of their Lunacy, and discharged thence in the same Year, several of which were relieved with Cloathing and Money at their Departure, 100.

BURIED, 13.

REMAINING in the said Hospital under Cure, and provided for with Physick, Diet, and other Relief, at the Charge of the House, 168.

THE following Names of Benefactors are pencilled in several Tables, which hang up in divers Parts of the Hospital.

BESIDES these, in single Tables, are the following Inscriptions.
Mr. John Fowke , of Claybury , near Woodford , in Essex , Son of John Fowke , Esq; some Time Lord Mayor of LONDON, out of his pious and generous Disposition to Charity, did, by his Will, give the yearly Rent of one hundred ninety-five Pounds: And also one thousand six hundred and eighteen Pounds, nineteen Shillings and two Pence in Money. To the Intent, that one third Part of the said Rents, and one half of the said Money should be for ever employed in Setting up such				1691 such as shall serve their Apprenticeship in Bridewell Hospital, and the other two Thirds of the Rents, and Moiety of the said Sum of Money to the Relief of the poor Lunaticks in Bethlem Hospital.

1691. Mr. William Pott, Citizen and Apothecary of LONDON, a worthy and charitable Member and Governor of this Hospital, did, by his last Will, give the Manor of Barfreaston, alias Barston, and divers Lands in the County of Kent, of the yearly Value of 111*l.* to Christ's Hospital, (whereof he was also a Governor) and afterwards in Trust for this Hospital of Bethlem, for Relief of the poor Lunaticks therein.

1699. Mr. John Edmonson, late of St. Catharine's near the Tower of LONDON, Sailmaker, deceas'd, did, by his Will, give to Susanna, his Wife (since also deceas'd) for the Term of her Life, all his Messuages, Lands and Tenements in the Isle of Thanet, or elsewhere in Kent, of the yearly Value of 80*l.* or thereabouts; and after her Decease, unto the Governors of Bethlem and Bridewell, LONDON, for ever, for the Use of the Poor of the said Hospital.

AND that Care is taken of these poor Lunatick Patients, not only in the House, but likewise when discharged thence, appears by these following Inscriptions.

A Person unknown, gave by the Hands of Dr. Edward Tyson, 50*l.* for providing Medicines, for such poor Patients as have been cured in this Hospital for preventing their Relapse.

1701. THE same Person, by the Hands of Dr. Edward Tyson, gave 100*l.* more, to be distributed by him to such Patients as shall be cured in the said Hospital, towards their present Subsistence or Cloathing, when discharged thence.

By the Constitution and Custom of the House, the Persons that put in the Patiens were obliged to provide them Cloaths while they continued there, but it being observed, that for want of them they suffered in their Health, not being timely provided, the weekly Committee, and Governors, and other charitable Persons have contributed towards erecting and furnishing a Wardrobe. The Names of which Benefactors are likewise set up in the said Wardrobe, as follows:

John Parsons, of the Post-Office, LONDON, did, by his Will, give a Farm in the Isle of Thanet, in the County of Kent, of the yearly Value of 100*l.* unto the President and Governors of the Hospital of Bethlem, for the Use of the poor Lunatick Persons, and did, by his Will, over and besides 500*l.* to Bridewell, gave the Remainder of his Estate, not before in his Will bequeathed, unto the aforesaid Hospital of Bethlem.

Sir Robert Jeffery, Knt. and Alderman, late President of this Hospital, gave to it by Will 200*l.* and to Bridewell, 200*l.* more. 1705.

AND several considerable Benefactions have been bestow'd upon it since.

GUY'S HOSPITAL.

THIS Hospital is situated on the East Side of the Borough of Southwark, on a Spot of Ground very near St. Thomas's Hospital. Guy's Hospi- tal.

It is perhaps one of the greatest private Charities that ever was heard of; its Founder, Thomas Guy, Esq; was originally a Bookseller in Lombard-Street, which Profession, after having acquired an immense Fortune, he left off, and was chosen Member of Parliament for Tamworth in Staffordshire. He began the Foundation of this Hospital, and saw it in great Forwardness in his own Life-time; and at his Death, which was in the Year 1724, he left about 200,000*l.* to finish the same, and for the Endowment of it; but the Founder's Intention will best appear by the following Extract from his Will, wherein, after bequeathing many thousand Pounds in Money, and Annuities to divers Relations and others; and likewise (which should have been mentioned before) 400 Pounds a Year to Christ Church Hospital, on Condition that his Executors should have the Power of putting four Children into the said Hospital yearly; and to St. Thomas's Hospital, the annual Sum of 125*l.* he goes on:

"ALL the rest and Residue of my Estate, whatsoever, and wheresoever, both Real and Personal, after the Payment of my Debts, Legacies, and Funeral Charges, to be subject to the Payment of the said several Annuities and yearly Sums herein before bequeathed. I give, bequeath, and devise unto Sir Gregory Page, Baronet; Charles Foy, Esq; Treasurer of the present Hospital of St. Thomas, William Clayton of Marden in the County of Surrey, Esq; Mr. Thomas Hollis, Senior, John Kenrick, and John Lade, Esqrs; and Governors of the present Hospital of St. Thomas; Dr. Richard Mead, Moses Raper, Esquire, and Mr. John Sprint, Governors, like-likewise of the said present Hospital, their Heirs, Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, respectively upon the Trust, and for such Uses, Intents, and Purposes, as are herein after by this my last Will directed and appointed.

AND I do hereby likewise ordain, constitute, and appoint the said Sir Gregory Page, Baronet, Charles Joy, and William Clayton, Esquires, Mr. Thomas Hollis, Senior, John Kenrick, and John Lade, Esquires, Doctor Richard Mead, Moses Raper, Esquire, and Mr. John Sprint, Executors of this my said last Will, on Trust as aforesaid.

AND my Mind and Will is, That until such Incorporation by Letters Patent, or Act of Parliament, as is herein after directed, can be obtained and take Effect, they, my said Executors, and last mentioned Trustees, their Heirs, Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, and afterwards such Corporation shall, and do out of the Residue of my Estate, or the Rents, Interest, or other Profits thereof, carry on, erect, finish, and fit up, the two new Squares of Building in Southwark, by me some Time since began, and intended for an Hospital, for Reception of such sick Persons as are herein after-mentioned, and such other Erections, Offices, and Buildings, as shall, in the Opinion of my said Executors and Trustees, be for that Purpose further necessary; and also furnish the same with Beds, and all other Conveniences for the Reception of, and receive and entertain therein, 400 poor Persons, or upwards, labouring under any Distempers, Infirmities, or Disorders, thought capable of Relief by Physick, or Surgery; but who, by Reason of the small Hopes there may be of their Cure, or the Length of Time, which, for that Purpose, may be required or thought necessary, are, or may be adjudged, or called Incurable, and as such not proper Objects to be received into, or continued in the present Hospital of St. Thomas, or other Hospitals, in, and by which, no Provision has been made for Distempers deemed, or called Incurable, of whom my Mind is, That they receive and entertain Lunatics, adjudged, or called, as aforesaid, Incurable, not exceeding 20 in Number, at one Time; such poor Persons to be chosen and appointed by my said Executors and Trustees, out of such Patients and Persons who shall be discharged out of the Hospitals of St. Thomas, or Bethlem, or other Hospitals, on Account of the small Hopes of their Cure, or the great Length of Time for that Purpose required, or thought necessary; and on such or any other Account adjudged and called Incurable, and not fit to be continued in the said Hospitals of St. Thomas, or Bethlem, or other Hospitals; or such other poor sick Persons, or Lunatics, as are under such or the like Circumstances, shall apply to my said Executors and Trustees, for Relief, at the Discretion and Pleasure of my said Executors and Trustees, to whom I submit the several Species, or Kinds of sick Persons, deemed or called Incurables, who shall be admitted into the said intended Hospital, and that my said Executors and Trustees, shall, and do provide suitable and proper Diet, Physick, and all other Necessaries for the Maintenance, Relief, or Cure, of such sick Persons during their Lives, or for so long Time, as my said Executors and Trustees shall think fit to continue them under their Care, in the said intended Hospital.

AND my Will is, That such poor sick Persons received into, and entertained in the said intended Hospital, shall be subject at all Times to my said Executors and Trustees, and to such Rules and Orders as they shall think fit to make for their Behaviour, in the said intended Hospital, and liable to be expelled from thence, and removed at the Pleasure of my said Executors and Trustees, and other like sick Persons admitted and entertained in their Room.

And my Mind and Will further is, That if my said Executors and Trustees shall not find Cause, or on any Account whatsoever, not think fit to keep all or great Part of the Beds or Wards in the said intended Hospital, filled and supplied with sick Persons, deemed or called Incurable, as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for them, to cause any Number of the said Beds or Wards to be filled and made Use of in like Manner, and with like Patients, as the Beds in the Hospital of St. Thomas are ordinarily used, for all which Patients so to be received and taken in, from Time to Time, into the said intended Hospital, Incurable or otherwise.

My Mind and Will is, That my said Executors and Trustees should provide, in all Things, as near as may be, according to the Course, Customs, and Usage of late Years prevailing, and practised in the said present Hospital of St. Thomas.

And my Mind and Will further is, and for the better and more regular Disposition and Management of the Affairs and Business of the said intended Hospital, and for perpetuating the Charity hereby intended, and the Provision for the same, I do hereby order and appoint, and earnestly desire and intreat, my said Executors and Trustees, forthwith, after my Decease, by humble Application to his Majesty, or to the Legislature, to endeavour to obtain Letters Patent under the Great Seal, or an Act of Parliament, incorporating them, my said Executors and last named Trustees, together with Mr. Benjamin Braine, Senior, Mr. Thomas Clarke, William Cole, Esq; Doctor Thomas Crow, Doctor Francis Fauquier, Mr. Joshua Gee, Mr. Matthew Howard, Doctor Edward Hulse, Mr. Samuel Lessingham, Mr. Henry Lovell, Mr. Samuel Monck, Mr. Joseph Paice, Senior, Mr. Daniel Powle, Mr. Tho. THIS Hospital, tho' it is said to be for Incu-rables, is not for such as are altogether so, the true Meaning of the Word Incurable, having been explained away, but not contrary to the Intention of the Founder, who was himself used to say, That he would not have his Hospital made an Almshouse.

THE Building is compleated according to Mr.
 Guy's Plan, and consists of two large Squares, quite round each of which is a Piazza, with handsome Arches of Stone. At the Entrance, which is, on the North Side, by Iron Gates, afcending up seven Steps, is a fine Door-Case, embellished with two Demy Pillars and Pediment of the Ionick Order.

THERE are in it eleven Wards, viz. four clean Wards for Men, and five for Women, with two foul Wards, one for Men and one for Women;
 and at this Time upwards of 400 sick Poor.

THE Officers at present are, besides above
 50 Governors, who are all Gentlemen of Figure and Substance;

The London
Workhouse.

THIS House is situated in Bishopsgate-Street, and was founded upon an Act of Parliament, being passed in the 13th and 14th Years of King Charles II. which gave Power to raise a sufficient Sum of Money upon the Inhabitants of the City to defray the Charges. It is governed by Fifty-two Citizens; and the Lord Mayor, for the Time being, is always President, and the Aldermen his Assistants. It is a Brick Edifice, 400 Feet in Length, consisting of several Work-Rooms, and Lodging-Rooms for the Vagrants and Parish-Children brought into it, who are employed in Spinning Wool and Flax, in Sewing, Knitting, or Winding Silk, and the like Employments, to inure them betimes to Labour. They are also taught to Read, and, such as are capable, to Write and Cast Accompts; and also the Catechism, to ground them in the Principles of Religion. The Vagrants, Men and Women, are employed in Sewing, beating Hemp, picking Okum, and rasping Logwood.

BUT nothing can give a more perfect Representation of this House than the following Paper, published some Years ago, by Order of the Governors, to promote the Charitable Gifts and Legacies of well-disposed Persons thereto.

A True Account of the Foundation, State, and Design of the WORKHOUSE for the POOR of the City of LONDON,
Christmas 1704.

“WHEREAS by an Act of Parliament “ made in the 13th and 14th Years of “ the Reign of our late Sovereign Lord “ King Charles II. intituled, An Act for the “ better Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom; It “ is thereby enacted (amongst other Things)
“ That from thenceforth there be, and shall be,
“ one or more Corporation, or Corporations, “ Workhouse, or Workhouses, within the City “ of LONDON, consisting of a President, a “ Deputy to the President, and a Treasurer;
“ and that the Lord Mayor of the City, for the “ Time being, be President of the said Corpora“ tion, Workhouse, or Workhouses, within the “ said City, and the Assistants to be the Alder“ men of the said City of LONDON, for the “ Time being, and Fifty-two other Citizens to “ be chosen of the Common-Council of the said “ City: Which President, Deputy-President, and “ Treasurer for the Time being, respectively “ shall for ever hereafter, in Name and Fact, Be “ Bodies Politick and Corporate in Law, by the “ Name of the President and Governors of the “ Poor for the said City; and by that Name every
“ of the said Corporations shall and may without “ Licence in Mortmain, purchase, or receive any “ Lands, Tenements or Hereditaments, not exceed“ ing the yearly Value of 3000*l.* of the Gift, “ Alienation, or Devise of any Person or Persons,
“ who are thereby, without farther Licence, ena“ bled to give the same and any Goods, Chattels, “ or Sums of Money whatsoever, to the Uses, In“ tents, and Purposes, in the said Act mentioned, “ (which by the Way is an evident Demonstration
“ that the Parliament did expect that People “ would be very liberal in their Charity to so good “ a Work) and that the poor Inhabitants might

“ THAT at a Common-Council held at the “ Guildhall of the City of LONDON, the “ fourth Day of April, Anno Domini 1698; the “ said Common-Council did, by Virtue of the “ said Act, elect Fifty-two Citizens of the said “ City of LONDON, to be in Conjunction “ with the said Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the “ said City, for the Time being, a Corporation
“ for the Intents and Purposes in the said recited “ Act mentioned, who have ever since put the “ said Act in Execution, and taken a large House
“ in Bishopsgate-Street, and several other Houses “ contiguous thereto, and have laid out several “ Sums of Money in purchasing Ground, and

“ And the said President and Governors, and “ several other Worthy and Charitable Persons,
“ have largely contributed out of their own Estates “ for the carrying on the said Work, and for the “ Ease of the meaner Sort of the Inhabitants “ of the said City; and the said President,
“ Treasurer and Governors have made a good “ Progress in the said Work, and hope by the “ Charity of such Worthy Persons as may be “ Contributors thereto, to be enabled to purchase
“ some Estate for the Uses aforesaid (for there is “ not as yet one Farthing of yearly Revenue set“ tled on the Workhouse) that so the Inhabitants “ of this City, may, in some measure, be eased of “ the annual Charge and Expence: And, there“ fore, the said President, Treasurer, and Gover“ nors think it a Duty incumbent on them, and as “ Part of the Trust reposed in them, to make a “ Representation of the Usefulness and Benefit of “ the said Workhouse, and how far it is for the “ Honour and Advantage of this renowned City,
“ and her Majesty's Subjects, and others of this “ Nation, which is as follows, viz.

“ THAT the Design and Intention of the Go“ vernors of the said Workhouse, is to employ all
“ the poor Children, Beggars, Vagrants, and “ other idle and disorderly Persons, that are, or “ can be found within the said City of LON-“ DON, and the Liberties thereof.

I. The poor Children are,

“ 1. SUCH for whom no Settlement can by “ Law be provided.

“ 2. Such whose poor Friends being much op“ pressed by a great Charge of Children, or are “ reduced by Misfortunes to such Circumstances, “ that they cannot provide for them themselves.

“ 3. SUCH who are the Children of Seamen
“ and Soldiers in the Queen's Service, many of “ whom lose their Lives therein, or are other“ wise rendered incapable of providing for their “ Wives, Children, and Families.

“ 4. SUCH, who are commonly known by the “ Name of the Black-Guard, who too commonly “ lived upon pilfering Sugar and Tobacco upon
“ the Keys, and afterwards become Pickpockets,
“ and Housebreakers, many of whom, at last,
“ have received their due Rewards, and made
“ their Exits at the Gallows, which are now “ kept to Work, and get their Livings honestly
“ in the said Workhouse.

“ 5. MANY Parish-Children.

“ ALL

" ALL these being taken into the said Work-house, are here taught to Read and Write, and kept to Work until they are qualified to be put out to be Apprentices, and for the Sea Services, or otherwise disposed of.

" II. The Beggars and Vagrants. They are those sturdy and insolent Men and Women, who live in the Skirts and Out-Parts of this City, and Places contiguous thereto, and other Stragglers and Wanderers, who too frequently resort to this City: Which when apprehended and taken, are in the said Workhouse kept to hard Work and Labour, until they are by Law discharged therefrom.

" III. The idle and disorderly Persons, are those Rogues and vagrant Men, which are there kept until they are put into the Queen's Service by Sea or Land; and those ill Women which are taken up in the Streets, debauching the Youth, and others of this City, many of which, rather than be continued to Work and Labour, voluntarily transport themselves to the Western Plantations, whereby this City and Nation is rid of them.

" IN Building for these convenient Houses, Work-Rooms, paying Officers and Servants, and in providing Meat, Drink, Washing, Lodging, Cloaths, and all other Necessaries, and to put them out Apprentices, great Sums of Money are yearly expended, besides what they severally earn by their own Labour, and besides what hath been already raised by the Common-Council of this City.

" THE Consideration whereof is earnestly recommended to all charitable Persons, who are Well-wishers to Honour, Virtue, and Morality, that they will vouchsafe by their Wills, or otherwise, to give their Aid and Assistance for the Propagating and continuing this Great Work of Charity, which the Governors of the said Corporation have, by their Care and Diligence, already made so good a Proficiency in, and which may prevent the Ruin of many idle and disorderly Persons for the future.

" Note, There are in this Workhouse seldom less than 150 Children at Work, besides the grown Beggars, Vagrants, and other idle and disorderly Persons, who are there kept to hard Labour.

IN this House they Brew their own Drink, having a large convenient Brewhouse erected for that Purpose; and over it a Malthouse. They used also to kill their own Beef and Mutton; but find it better Husbandry to buy their Meat from the Butchers.

THEIR daily Food is plain, but wholesome and sufficient: They have Breakfasts, Dinners, and Suppers, every Day in the Week, and a constant set Allowance each Day. Their Stint each Meal for Bread is four Ounces; for Cheese an Ounce and an half; for Butter an Ounce; for Small Beer what is sufficient, not exceeding a Pint at a Time.

THEIR Breakfast on Sundays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, is Bread and Cheese, and Bread and Butter, and Beer: On Mondays a Pint of Pease Pottage, with Bread and Beer: On Tuesdays a Plum-Pudding-Pye of nine Ounces, and Beer: On Wednesdays a Pint of Fumity: On Fridays a Pint of Barley-Broth, and Bread: On Saturdays a plain Flower Sewet Dumpling, with Beer.

THEIR Supper is always the same; to wit, each four Ounces of Bread, an Ounce and a half of Cheese, or an Ounce of Butter, and Beer sufficient.

THE Habit of the Children is all the same, being made of Russet Cloth, and a round Badge worn upon their Breasts, representing a poor Boy and a Sheep; the Motto, God's Providence is our Inheritance.

THEY have a handsome Chapel built at the upper End of the Yard belonging to the House, where they go to Prayers twice a Day, viz. at six in the Morning, and at six at Night. On Sundays they all go to St. Helen's, where are convenient Seats for them.

THERE are also other Benefactors, not to be passed over without honourable Mention, as Mr. Abraham Chitty, who gave a Tun of Logwood, and Ralph Hartley, half a Tun. The Company of Apothecaries undertook to pay the whole Charge of the Physick for the Children and Servants of this Workhouse for three Years, from the 29th of September, Anno 1701: And Dr. Frederick Slare, Dr. Richard Moreton, Dr. Joshua Palmer, and Dr. Francis Upton, undertook, alternately, to visit all the sick Children and Servants, and prescribe such Medicines for them as they from Time to Time should judge most proper; and this gratis: And Thomas Stanton, Surgeon, to serve the said Children and Servants in Surgery for three Years gratis: And add to the rest, that Anno 1703, Sir Edward Northey, Her Majesty's Attorney-General, and Duncan Dee, Esq; offered themselves their standing Council, and Nicholas Baker, their Attorney, without Fee or Reward.

OF this Charitable Undertaking the Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, in a Sermon preached before the Governors of the Hospitals, on Easter-Monday, Anno 1702, hath these Words:

" I must not forget another publick Charity of " admirable Use; and which for that Reason de-
 " serveth the utmost Encouragement; I mean,
 " the Workhouse, erected for employing poor
 " Children, and such distressed Vagrant Children
 " as are found within the City and the Liberties
 " thereof. This by the Industry of the Presidents " and Governors of the Poor of the City, hath " been carried so far, that 261 Children, of several " Parishes, remained in the Workhouse this Year;
 " and 71 have since been received. Of Vagrants
 " there remained 71, and 89 have since been " taken in. All these, according to their Ages " and Conditions are cloathed, and fed and in" structed in the Principles of Religion, and in " honest Arts and Trades. They are inured to " Labour, kept cleanly, and disposed to Honesty,
 " by Encouragement and Discipline. I have not " Time to say of what wonderful Benefit these " Places are, and may be to the Publick, if they " can happily fall into the right Management of " them; where the Refuse of Mankind, they
 " that would otherwise be the Bane and Scandal
 " of the Commonwealth, are rescued from Per" dition, and made useful Members of it. But " it is hardly possible for Men to be better em" ployed than in this Work, or to be more cha" ritable than in their Contributions towards it.

" And may it please Almighty God to enable " those that undertake it, to surmount all the " Difficulties that cross their Designs. They " will then have (what one would wish to every " good and publick-spirited Man) the Comforts
 " of their Labours in this Life; and when that " is at an End, those Labours will conduct them " to the Joys of that above; and that will for " ever remain.

ONE of these Boys was already so well disciplined and improved in this House, in the Year 1702, that the Governors ventured to let him make a Speech to Queen Anne, when she came into the City, which we think may not be amiss to be here inserted.

The SPEECH of JOHN TRUSTY, aged eleven Years, a poor Boy, belonging to the Workhouse of the Corporation for the Poor of the City of LONDON, to her late Majesty Queen ANNE, upon her coming into the City, to dine at Guildhall, on Thursday, October the 29th 1702, being the Lord
 Mayor's Day.

" MAY it please your excellent Majesty,
 " To Pardon this great Presumption
 " in Us, poor Children, who throw ourselves
 " at your Royal Feet, among the rest of your " glad Subjects, that here in Crowds appear to " behold your Sacred Majesty.

" WE, Madam, have no Fathers, no Mo" thers, no Friends; or (which is next to none)
 " those, who, through their extreme Poverty, can" not help us: God's Providence is our Inheri" tance. All the Support we have is from the " unexhausted Charities of your loyal Citizens of " LONDON, and other your good Subjects,
 " and the pious Care of our Governors, who are " now teaching our little Hands to work, and
 " our Fingers to spin.

" THESE Threads, Madam, are some of " the early Fruits of our Industry. We are all " daily employed on the Staple Manufacture of " England, learning betimes to be useful to the " World: And there seemed nothing wanting to " compleat our Happiness, but the Opportunity
 " which this Day affords us, of being the Objects
 " of your tender Pity and Compassion; one gra" cious Smile from your Majesty, on this new " Foundation, will make us live----- and live
 " to call you Blessed.

" AND may God Almighty long pre" serve your Majesty, for the Good of these " your Kingdoms, and your Royal Consort the " Prince; so pray we, your little Children,
 " and let all your People say, Amen.

THERE were discharged and put forth Apprentices, or to Service in good Families, in the last Year, 45 Children.

BURIED, 3.

REMAINING in the House at Lady-Day
 1733, 135.

OF Vagabonds, Beggars, &c. there were discharged the last Year, 367.

BURIED, 1.

REMAINING at Lady-Day 1733, 35.

OF the Children here educated since the Year 1701, there have been discharged and placed forth Apprentice to Officers of Ships, Trades, and to Service in several good Families, (besides those mentioned in the above Account) 2324;
 and within that Time 16088 Vagabonds, Beggars,
 &c. (among which were several notorious Impostors, pretending to be lame, dumb and blind) have been committed, and punished with Confinement and hard Labour.

OF

OF the Children there have died 290, and of the Vagabonds 185.

THE Children and all others in this Workhouse, are required to attend Divine Service, Morning and Evening, which (in a convenient Place) is there regularly and duly performed.

THE present Treasurer of this House, who has been in that Office upwards of 30 Years, is

Samuel Webb, of Hackney, Esq;

Mr. Shrimpton, Steward.

Mr. Henman, Schoolmaster; and

Mrs. Angel, Matron.

BESIDES whom, there are three Nurses for the Children, and a Keeper for the Vagrants.

St. CATHARINE'S HOSPITAL.

THERE is another Hospital, within the Liberties of the City of LONDON, stiled St. Catharine upon the Thames, which is seated a little East of the Tower; it had the Honour to be founded first by Queen Matilda, or Maud, Wife to King Stephen.

Dugdale, in his Monast. Angl. says, That Ralph, the Prior, with the Canons of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, did grant to Maud, Queen of England, Wife to King Stephen, a certain Parcel of Land, in the Soken, called Knightenguild, (now Portsofen Ward) whereon the said Hospital of St. Catharine was founded, together with all the Mill there in the Shambles, in Lieu of six Yard Land in the Manor of Bracching in the County of Hertford.

QUEEN Eleanor, Widow to King Henry III. by her Charter, bearing Date, July 5, 1273, gave to this Hospital, and to Thomas de Lechlade, Quem (as are the Words of the said Charter) in eodem Hospitali Magistrum & Custodem, de Concessu venerabilis Patris Henrici LONDON. Episcopi prefecimus, &c. and to the Brethren, serving God there, and to their Successors for ever, certain Lands in the Villages of Renham and Herclope in Kent, others in the Village of Roed (now Reed) in Hertfordshire, and some in East-Smithfield, for the sustaining of three Brother Priests, together with the Master of the said Hospital, to celebrate Masses for the Soul of King Henry her Lord, for her own Soul, and the Souls of the Kings and Queens, her Predecessors and Successors, as therein is directed; and, That every Day in the Year to the 16th of November, viz. the Day of St. Edmund the Archbishop and Confessor, there be given to 24 poor People (whereof six of them to be Scholars, who might assist the Chaplains in the Church in Divine Offices) the Sum of 12 d. and on the said Day of St. Edmund the Confessor, viz. the Day of the Death of her said Lord King Henry, there be given to a thousand poor People, to every one of them, one Half-penny; by which Charter, she reserves Power to herself and the Queens of England, her Successors, to constitute a Master, or Custos of the said Hospital, when, and as often as it should happen to be void; and ordains, That the Queens of England, should have the Right of Patronage of the said Hospital from Time to Time for ever.

BUT tho' this Queen reserved to herself and Successors Queens of England, the Power to constitute a Master or Custos, and the Right of Patronage of the said Hospital, yet it appears by the Charter of King Henry III. whereby he confirms to the Prior and Canons of the Holy Trinity aforesaid, all their Lands and Donations; that he grants and confirms to the said Prior and Convent, the Guardianship, or Custody, of this Hospital, as they had it by the Grant of King Stephen and Queen Maud his Wife.

VOL. I.

QUEEN Eleanor, Wife to King Edward I. (a second Foundress) appointed to be in this Hospital, one Master, three Brethren, Chaplains; and three Sisters, ten poor Women, called Bede's Women, (Speed says 18) and six poor Clerks. She gave to them the Manor of Clarton in Wiltshire, and Upchurch in Kent.

QUEEN Philippa, Wife to King Edward III. Anno 1351, founded a Chantry here, and gave to this Hospital 10 l. in Land by the Year. It was of late Time called a Free Chapel, a College, and an Hospital for poor Sisters.

Thomas Beckington, Bishop of Bath and Wells, in the Reign of King Henry VI. (once Master of this Hospital) gave many Vestments to it, and 50 s. in Money.

John Holland, Duke of Exeter, by his last Will and Testament, dated July 16, 1447, ordered his Body to be buried in this Chapel of St. Catharine's Hospital, at the North End of the High Altar, in a Tomb ordained for him, with Anne his Wife, his Sister Constance, and Anne his second Wife, and founded there a Chantry for four Priests, each of which was to have twelve Marks per Ann. payable out of his Manor of Much-Gaddesden in the County of Hertford, to pray for the Souls of himself, his two Wives, and his Sister, who were all there buried according to his Will, and the Monuments, (tho' foully defaced) with the Figures of himself, and his said Wives lying on it, still remain on the North Side of the upper End of the Choir.

KING Edward III. gave Licence to Robert de Denton, to found an Hospital in the Parish of Alballows Barking, for the Cure of mad People and an Oratory, and to endow the said Hospital; but the said Robert's Mind afterwards altering, King Richard II. at his Request, gave him Leave to bestow the said Endowment upon this Hospital of St. Catharine's.

THE Choir, which of late Years, saith Stow, was not much inferior to that of St. Paul's, was dissolved by Dr. Wilson, a late Master there, the Brethren and Sisters remaining. This House was valued, at the late general Suppression, at 315 l. 14 s. 2 d.

BESIDES Tho. de Lechlade, Thomas Beckington, and Dr. Wilson, Masters of this Hospital abovenamed, it may not be improper to give an Account of such Masters of the same, as by the Help of Dr. Hutton's Collections, are since to be met with, which are as followeth:

Walter de Redings had the Custody of this Hospital committed to him, void by the Resignation of Tho. de Lechlade, to hold during his Life.

Joh. de Sandale was Master of this Hospital in 1315, and had granted to him and his Brethren, the Convent thereof, by John Cromwell and Idonea his Wife, the Advowson of the Church of Winterflow, by Virtue of the King's Licence, dated September 1, the same Year.

Adam de Egelsfeld, the King's Chaplain, had the Custody and Government of this Hospital given him by the King, December 14, 1317.

Will. de Killesby, or Kildesby, was Master of this Hospital Anno 1345.

Joh. de Hermesthorp was Master of this Hospital, Dec. 26, 1368; but before this, Anno 1363, May 13, the King gave him (being then his Chaplain) the Prebendary which John de Blebury bury had in the Free Chapel of St. Stephen, Westminster. On the 22d of January following, the King gave his Prebendary of St. Stephen, which he resigned, to Richard de Ravensore; for six Days before, viz. January 16, the King gave the said John his Presentation to the Church of St. Vedast, LONDON; and on the 7th of March following, the Archdeaconry of the East-Riding in the Diocese of York. In 1364, January 24, he gave him his Letters of Presentation to the Church of Greystock in the Diocese of Carlisle: And in December 24, 1366, the King gave him again the Prebendary of St. Stephen, which the said Ravensore had. He was Master of this Hospital when it was visited by the Lord Chancellor, and others, in the 3d of Richard II. Anno 1380, and perhaps he is the same Job. de Hermesthorp, who was Prebend of West Thurrock in Essex, in the Collegiate Church of Hastings, and presented to that Vicarage in 1409. John Preston was made Master in the Year 1511.

D d d

THE Masters of this Hospital have, in old Times, been of the Clergy, and so the Foundation seems to require; but the considerable Benefit accruing to the Masters, hath made it desired and sought for by Persons of Quality of the Laity, and such have of late Times enjoyed it.

SIR James Butler, who was Master in the Reign of King William III. made an Addition to the Building, which has this Inscription on it.

These new Houses for a Sister, and six Bedes Women were builded by Sir James Butler, Master of St. Katherines, at his own Cost and Charges in the Yeare of our Lord 1695.

THE present Master is the Honourable George Berkeley, Esq;

SUTTON'S HOSPITAL,

COMMONLY CALLED

The CHARTER-HOUSE.

THIS Hospital is situated near St. John's-Street, a little without Smithfield-Bars: It is corruptly called Charter-House, from Chartreuse, having been a Monastery of Carthusian Monks; and it may not be improper, in this Place, to say something of that Order, concerning the Original of which it is related, That one Bruno, born at Cologne, of an antient and worthy Family, by his studious Life and successful Endeavours obtained so great Reputation among learned Men, that he was prevailed upon to visit France, where he was chosen Philosophy Professor, and converted to his Religion, by a dreadful Prodigy, which happened in the Church of Notre-Dame at Paris. Whilst he was present at the Funeral Solemnities of one of his dear Friends, whose Name was Diocre, a Man, as far as mortal Eye could discern, of a fair and untainted Reputation, when they came to repeat those Words of the Office for the Dead, Responde mihi, the Corpse began to move, and raise itself upon the Bier, and was heard at several Distances of Time to utter these lamentable Words:

I am arraigned at the Bar of GOD's Justice: My final Sentence is already past; and I am condemned to eternal Torments.

THIS did (among others) so terrify Bruno, who was there present, that prevailing with six of his familiar Friends (whereof two were Laicks) to bid the World adieu; they set forward, and came to Hugh Bishop of Grenoble, in France, who bestowed on them a Place in the steep Mountains, called Chartreuse; or Carthusia in Dauphine, which gave Name to this famous Order, which S. Bruno founded there, where, tho' it be a most dismal solitary Place, yet they began to inhabit about the Nativity of St. John Baptist, Anno 1084, or 1086.

BUT it is a Subject of Debate among the learned Roman Catholicks, whether the aforesaid Prodigy was the Occasion of Bruno's Retreat, as you may see in the Historical Dictionary, published by Mr. Collier, where we are likewise told, that Bruno was canoniz'd for a Saint, by Pope Leo X. Ann. 1514.

HOWEVER, This is certain, That Bruno founded this Order about the Time, and at the Place above-mentioned, to which Family the said Bishop Hugh, not long after, join'd himself.

THEN they built themselves a Church, or rather a Monastery, upon the steepest Part of the Hill, which is now called B. Maria de Casalibus, and also little Cells at a Fountain, which to this Day is called Bruno's Fountain, not far distant from the Church, but one separated from the other, that the one might not disquiet the Peace of the other: And in every one of these Cells two Brethren dwelt together, and like, the old Egyptian Monks, gave themselves to Silence, Prayers, and Reading, and at certain Hours, they laboured with their Hands, especially in Writing Books, as well as to provide for their Wants, as also that they might not give any Occasion of flandering their Order, to such as sought for such an Occasion, as if they did bestow no Pains for the Church of GOD, but laboured only for their own Ends.

AMONGST all the Monks, these observe the strictest Rule; for first their Inward Garment, is of Hair Cloth, their Outward is Black, and under it a white Robe; and a Cowl is the Cover of their Head. They never eat Flesh all their Life long, not in their greatest Weakness or Sickness; so that if any one will feed on Flesh, he must not remain in their Cloister with the rest any longer. They never buy any Fish, but if they be given they receive them: They use Bread made of Bran, and Wine allayed with Water. Many other Rules they have, which may be seen in Hospinian, ut supra. They proposed to follow the Rule of St. Bennet, adding thereto several other great Austerities.

Alexander III. confirmed their Order about the Year 1178 (some say 1174). At first they vow'd Poverty, but afterwards, and at this Day, they are equal to the greatest Princes for Riches.

THEY came first into England about the Year 1180, and were then seated at Witham near Bath in Somersetshire.

THE dissolved Monastery was founded by Sir Walter de Manny, Knight, a Stranger born, Lord of the Town of Manny, in the Diocese of Cambray, who for Service done to King Edward III. was made Knight of the Garter. The old Carthusian Monastery.

THIS House he founded upon Occasion of a great Pestilence, which spread over all England, so wasting the People, that scarce a tenth Person was left alive, and Church-Yards were not sufficient to receive the Dead, but Men were forced to chuse certain Fields for Burials; whereupon Ralph Stratford, Bishop of LONDON, Anno 1348, bought a Piece of Ground, called No Man's Land, which he inclosed with a Brick Wall, and dedicated it for the Burial of the Dead, and built thereupon a Chapel, which Stow tells us, was in his Time made a Dwelling-House, and the Burial Plat was a Garden, called by the Name of Pardon Church-Yard.

ABOUT this Time the said Sir Walter de Manny purchased a Piece of Ground adjoining to the said No Man's Land, near St. John's-Street, called called Spittle-Croft, without the Bars in West-Smithfield, of the Master and Brethren of St. Bartholomew's-Spittle, containing 13 Acres and a Rod, caused the same to be inclosed for Burials, and consecrated by the said Ralph Stratford, Bishop of LONDON, in which Place, in that Year, were more than 50,000 Persons buried, as is affirmed by the King's Charter, and this following Inscription, which Stow says he read upon a Stone Cross, some Time standing in the same Church-Yard, Anno Dom. MCCCXLIX.

Regnante magna Pestilentia Consecratum fuit hoc Cœmeterium, in quo, et infra Septa præsentis Monasterii, sepulta fuerunt Mortuorum Corpora plus quam Quinquaginta Millia; præter alia multa abhinc usque ad præsens, Quorum Animabus propitiatur Deus. Amen.

In Consideration of the Number of Christian People here buried, Sir Walter caused first a Chapel to be here built, where, for the Space of 23 Years, Offerings were made, and Masses said for the Souls of so many Christians departed; and it is to be noted, that above 100,000 Bodies of Christian People, had, in that Church-Yard, been buried; for the said Knight purchased that Place for the Burial of People, Travellers, and others that should chance to die thereabouts.

BUT in the Year 1371, the said Sir Walter de Manny, founded here a House of Cartusian Monks, which he built in Honour of the Salutation of the Mother of GOD, as may be seen at large in King Edward III. Letters Patent, and in the Bull of Pope Urban V. by which Bull it appears, that Sir Walter de Manny first intended here only a College of 12 Chaplains, whereof one was to preside, but afterwards, as it is therein expressed, "Bonæ Memoræ Michael, Episcopus Londinensis, & idem Miles, prædicto Collegio nondum instituto conventum duplicem Monachorum Ordinis Cartusienfis in loco prædicto (mutato Proposito dicti Militis) fundaverunt." Here it is to be noted, that this Bull, which was obtained of the Pope, at the Petition of the Prior and Convent of this House, for the uniting some Ecclesiastical Benefices to it, to the Value of 200 l. per Ann. bore Date at Rome on the Day before the Ides of December, in the first Year of his Pontificate, which was in the Year 1362: So that tho' it be generally said by Stow, and others, that have written of this House, that it was founded by Sir Walter de Manny, in the Year 1371, it appears plainly by the said Bull, that this House of Cartusians, was founded by Sir Walter de Manny, and Michael (de Northburg) Bishop of LONDON, and not by the said Walter alone; and that it was founded, and a Prior and Convent there settled before the Date of the said Bull, which must be in, or before, the Year 1362, tho' the Letters Patent above-mention'd of Edward III. whereby he granted Licence to the said Sir Walter de Manny, to found this House of Cartusian Monks, and to give and assign to the Prior and Monks there, 20 Acres of Land, &c. together with the Chapel and other Houses built upon the same, bear Date in the 45th Year of his Reign on the 6th of February, which was in the Year 1371, from whence they have dated the Foundation of this House.

Sir Walter de Manny, (who had Summons to Parliament, among the Barons of this Realm, from the 21st of Edward III. till the 44th of that King's Reign inclusive) by his Testament, bearing Date at LONDON, upon St. Andrew's Day, Anno. 1371. bequeathed his Body to be buried in the Midst of the Choir of the Cartusians, near West-Smithfield, and ordained, That a Tomb of Alabaster, with his Image, as a Knight, and his Arms thereon, should be made for him like that of Sir John Beauchamp, in the Cathedral of St. Paul's, LONDON, as a Remembrance of him, and that Men might pray for his Soul; and (among other Legacies in his said Will) he appointed an old Debt, which the King owed him, by Bills of his Wardrobe, to be given to the Prior and Monks of this House, if it could be had: And whereas there was due to him from the Prince, from the Time he had been Prince of Wales, the Sum of 100 Marks per Ann. for his Salary, as Governor of Hardeburgh-Castle, he bequeathed the one Half thereof to the said Prior and Monks of the Charter-House, and departing this Life upon the Thursday following the Feast of St. Hillary, in the 46th of Edward III. 1371, was buried here in his own Church, much lamented, (saith Weaver) by the King, the Nobility and Commons of England, and his Obsequies were performed with great Solemnity (notwithstanding by his Will he had ordered his Burial to be without Pomp) King Edward III. himself and all his Children, with the greatest Prelates, and Lord Barons of England, being present.

THIS Religious House was suppressed in the Reign of King Henry VIII. at which Time it was valued at 642 l. 4 d. Half-penny per Ann. Dugd. 736 l. 2 s. 7 d. (Speed.)

THUS much for the old Foundation: Next to the present Hospital. After the Dissolution of Abbies, &c. in the Reign of Henry VIII. this Monastery, and Duke's-Place, being given by the King to Sir Thomas Audley, the then Speaker of Parliament, he gave this House, &c. in Marriage with his Daughter Margaret, unto Thomas Duke of Norfolk, from whom it descended to Thomas Earl of Suffolk, and was afterwards called Howard-House, by which Name it was purchased of the Earl of Suffolk, by Thomas Sutton, Esq; where he founded this Hospital. It consisted of four or five Courts, a Wilderness, Gardens, Orchards, and Walks, &c. This Hospital was first founded by Act of Parliament, for erecting and endowing an Hospital at Hallingbury Bouchers in the County of Essex, March 10, 1609, by the Name of The Hospital of King James, founded at Hallingbury in the County of Essex; at the humble Petition, and at the only Cost and Charge of Thomas Sutton, Esq;

BUT Mr. Sutton altering his Mind, as to the Situation, he founded the same at Howard-House, as is aforesaid, for which Alteration he had the King's Letters Patent, dated June 1611, and for which House, &c. he paid down 13000 l. May the 9th 1611; and this Charter of King James was confirmed by an Act of Parliament in the 3d of King Charles I.

THE principal Heads of the said Patent for erecting Sutton's Hospital, were as follow:

GOVERNORS were incorporated with full Authority to Purchase, Receive, &c. There were 16 Governors in all, appointed by Name, and upon the Death of any, the said Mr. Sutton to name others for his Life, to keep up the Number, and afterward the new Governors to be (as any Vacancy happens) nominated by the Majority of the Governors then living.

THE Master of the Charter-House to be one of the Governors, who were to have a Common Seal.

THEY were not to let longer Leases than for 21 Years, nor to transfer the Land settled for this Purpose, to any other Use.

THE Election of a new Governor is to be within two Months after a Vacancy; or, in Default, the King to appoint a Governor.

Purchased by
Thomas Sutton, Esq;

THE Number of the old Gentlemen and Boys to increase, according to the Increase of the Revenues.

THE Governors are empowered to make Statutes under the Common Seal, and to visit or displace the Master, or any Officer of the House; but the Ministers are freed from the Visitation of the Ordinary of the Diocese.

THERE are these Ecclesiastical Preferments in the Gift of the Governors of this Hospital :

Charter-House,	Dunsby,
Balsbam,	South-Minster,
Castle Camp,	Cold Norton, and
Horsheath,	Little Wigborow.
Hallingbury,

BUT by the Letters Patent, the Governors are charged to bestow the same upon those Scholars only who have been bred in this House.

THIS Noble Founder lived not long to see the Hospital in all Things settled, but in 1614, October 3, (being 3 Years after Mr. Sutton's Death) it was opened by the Executors, when the Gentlemen, Scholars, and others enter'd this House : And Anno 1627, these Orders were made at an Assembly June 21, signed by King Charles the First's own Hand.

THE Hospital of King James, founded in the Charter-House in the County of Middlesex, at the humble Petition and only Cost and Charges of Thomas Sutton, Esq; shall be the Stile to be inviolably observed and expressed, in the same formal Words, upon all Evidences, Conveyances, Leases, and Writings of Records.

THERE shall be an Anniversary Commemoration of the Founder, kept every 12th of December, with solemn Service, a Sermon, and such Increase of Commons, as we allow upon other Festival Days by our Establishment.

THE Governors jointly taken, make the Head of this Body Corporate; the poor Brothers and Scholars, and such others as are mentioned only in the King's Letters Patent, shall be stiled Members of the Foundation, and shall be chosen within two Months after a Vacancy, according to the express Words of the Letters Patent.

ALL other Officers of the Revenue, or Household, not particularly mentioned in the Letters Patent, shall be reputed and taken as Members of arbitrary Election; and it shall be in the Governors Power to make their Number more or less, and to choose sooner or later, as to their Wisdom shall seem best for the good of the Hospital.

No Member of the Foundation, or of arbitrary Election, shall be a married Man, either at the Time of his Admission, or after, upon Penalty of being deprived of his Place; but there is an Exception for the then present Physician, Receiver, and Auditor.

THE improper Titles for an Hospital, of Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, Steward of the Household, shall be abolished.

ALL possible Diligence shall be used to obtain, the next Sessions, an Act of Parliament for Confirmation of the Foundation.

THE Common Seal shall be kept in the Evidence-house, under four Keys; the Master of the House always to keep one.

THE Statutes and Ordinances of the Hospital, under the Common Seal, shall be twice engrossed; the Originals to be kept in the Evidence-house, the other in the Custody of the Master, to be brought to the Table at every Assembly.

THE Master shall always keep one of the Keys of the Evidence-house, and no Writing to be delivered to the Solicitor, but with a Note of Particulars, register'd in a Book under the Master's Hand, and a Note taken under his Hand, that he receives them, for the Re-delivery.

A true Copy of the Deeds, Evidences, Survey, Leases, Orders, and other Writings, touching the Hospital Lands, shall be fairly written in a Parchment Ledger.

AN Iron Chest shall be in the Receiver's Custody, for the keeping of the Hospital Revenues, whereby he shall give an Account, Quarterly, to the Master, and another, with three several Locks and Keys, (two to be kept by the Master and Receiver, and the third by whom the Governors please) to be in the Evidence-house, for keeping the Surplus remaining at the Year's End, whereof the Receiver shall be Accountant, by a fair Declaration engrossed in Parchment by the Auditor, and signed with their three Hands, and then safely laid up in the Evidence-house.

Two other Copies of the said Declaration, signed by the Master, Receiver, and Auditor, whereof the Auditor shall keep one, to justify the Account, the Receiver another, for his full Discharge.

IN Case of Plague, the Master, with Consent of four or more Governors, shall dissolve the House, the Officers, Servants, and poor Brothers shall be dismissed for a Time not exceeding half a Year, with their full Allowance for Diet and Wages, paid in Hand, and the Impotent shall be left under Care of the Manciple, with two elder Grooms, and three old Women: And such Scholars as have able Friends, shall be sent to them, and those that have none, shall be sent out, and all at the Charge of the Hospital: For all which Disbursements, the Receiver shall impress Money to the Manciple, by Warrant from the Master under his Hand.

THE Hospital shall be sufficiently furnish'd with Buckets, Fire-hooks, Ladders, Ropes, and other Necessaries against Fire.

WHAT other Order soever the major Part of the Governors shall make at an Assembly for the Good of the Hospital, and sign them with their own Hands in the Assembly Book, shall stand in as full Force and Power, as if they had been inserted with these, and ratified with the Common Seal.

ALL other Things ordered and enacted by the King's Letters Patent, for the Confirmation of this Hospital, as also all other Orders and Decrees of this Instrument, ratified by their Common Seal, shall be inevitably kept and observed.

As to their Assemblies and Committees there are several Orders; as,

THAT there shall be two Assemblies certain in the Year; one in December, to take the Year's Accompt, view the State of the Hospital, and determine other Business occurring: The other in June, or July, to dispose of the Scholars to the University, or Trades, make Elections of them, &c.

THOSE Orders, &c. shall only be in Force, which are made by the major Part of the Governors, and all Elections of such as this Hospital consists of, be in the Power of such Governors only; but they shall not elect above 18 poor Men, or 18 poor Scholars, at one Assembly.

ALL Officers are there only Durante bene placito.

THE poor Men and Scholars must be admitted in due Order, and not come over one another's Head.

THE Orders and Constitutions of every Assembly shall be engrossed in the Assembly Book by the Register, and signed by the Governors present, within 40 Days.

THERE

THERE may be occasional Assemblies, as, upon the Death of a Governor, Vacancy of a Living, &c.

A Committee of five, at the least, shall be chosen at the Assembly in December, for the whole Year, and they visit the School between Easter and Midsummer, &c.

The MASTER

Is to be a grave, discreet Person, unmarried, aged about 40 Years; one that shall neither have nor accept any Preferment, either in Church or State, whereby he may be drawn from his Residence and Care of the Hospital.

HE has the Oeconomical Government of the House, during the Governor's Pleasure; and Power to set a Fine or Mulct on any Officer, not exceeding a Fortnight's Commons, and the poor Brothers at 4 s. 4 d. or 8 s. 8 d. he may fine as they deserve. He has been usually a Layman.

ALL other inferior Servants the Master has Power to put in or out.

HE shall not increase or lessen the Diets, Stipends, Fees, or Wages in the House or School.

IT is required, that the Preacher be Master of Arts seven Years, aged about 30, and to have been four Years a Preaching Minister.

HE is to take Care that the poor Brothers, Boys and Servants, frequent the Prayers, Sermon, and Holy Sacrament: And the Master and Preacher have Superintendency over the Chapel Clerk, Organist and Sexton, to see that each perform the Duties of his Place.

THE Physician to have 20 l. per Ann. To choose his own Apothecary, and his Bills for Physick not to exceed 20 l. but 'tis at the Governors Choice, whether there shall be a Physician certain or occasional.

THE Register shall be of a good Conversation, well practised in Law Causes, a good Penman, ready to do what the Governors or Master shall put him upon.

HIS Business is to sit on all Assemblies, to Register their Orders and Decrees in the Assembly Book. To draw and make ready for the Common Seal all Patents and Leases, and Enroll them in the Book of Entries. To wait on the Governors for their Signing any Instrument. To attend the Hospital-Counsel, and take their Directions.

THE Receiver's Business is first to give good Security by ten several Bonds of 200 l. each, himself, and two sufficient Sureties, to stand in every Bond to the Governors, for the faithful Execution of his Office; and shall deliver out no Money, unless to the Manciple for Diet, without Order and Warrant from the Master.

HE shall, by Virtue of proper Letters of Attorney, make publick Demand of Rents due to the Hospital, that such farther Course may be taken as shall seem good to the Governors.

AT Michaelmas Yearly, when his Accompts are given up, he shall have 200 l. impressed to him by the Master, out of the Surplus Money remaining that Year, or out of the House-Stock, which shall be for Expence for Diet, and other Charges, till Michaelmas Rents come in; repaying the said Money into the Iron Chest of the Hospital Stock, at, or before, the End of November then next ensuing.

THE Manciple is the last Officer observable of the House: He gives 100 l. Security for the due Discharge of all Money impressed unto him by the Receiver, upon the Master's Warrant, for the Affairs of the Hospital.

HE is to attend his Service in the Kitchen, till all the Tables be served and taken away; and then to take his Meals with the Inferior Officers and Grooms.

VOL. I.

HE must keep a Book of the weekly Expence in Diet, carry it to the Auditor to be examined; and within four Days after the Expiration of the Week, he shall bring it to the Master, to have it perused and signed.

HE must disburse no Money, except for Diet, without the Master's Warrant, nor buy any Provisions but with ready Money.

HE must take an Inventory twice every Year, of all the Goods, Moveables, and Utensils, throughout the Hospital, and give Account thereof to the Master, that he may lay the Loss to every Person to whom it was intrusted; satisfying the House out of their Wages, at his Discretion.

BESIDES the abovesaid Officers of the House, there are these following:

OFFICERS of the Revenue.

STEWARDS of the Courts shall bring, or send into the Hospital, within three Months after the Court holden, the Roll thereof fair written in Parchment, with the Fine set down in the Margin, and signed with his own Hand; and shall deliver the Tenant his Copy within forty Days after the Court holden. The Steward shall take no more than 5 s. for his Copy, and entering it into the Roll; unless it express Uses made over by Will, in which Cases his Fee shall be 10 s.

AUDITORS shall Quarterly examine the Receiver's Book of Receipts, and Disbursements, and see if the one agree with the Rental, and the other with the Master's Warrants, upon Proof whereof, under his Hand, the Book shall be signed by the Master.

HE must Weekly examine the Manciple's Books of Disbursements, for Diet, &c. to see if the one agree with the Establishment, and the other be done by Warrant, and to approve them under his Hand, before they be signed by the Master.

UPON balancing all Accompts of Receipts and Disbursements at the Year's End, he shall draw the Declaration enjoined by the Governors, that so in the Assembly in December, a yearly View may be taken of the State of the Hospital.

NO Bailiff shall be chosen of any Manor, unless he dwell within five Miles distant, at farthest.

THEY shall put in Bond of 200 l. a-piece, with two Sureties for paying in the Money, by them levied, for Free-Rents, or Profits of the Courts, and shall not meddle with the Receipt of any Farm Rents, upon Forfeiture of their Bond.

ALL Bailiffs shall bring in all Free and Customary Rents, within 40 Days after the Quarter-Day; and all Profits and Perquisites of Courts, within 40 Days after the Day assigned by the Steward for the Payment thereof.

POOR BROTHERS.

THIS extraordinary Charity was given for the Maintenance of such old Men (not to exceed 80 in Number) as are qualified within the Intention of the King's Letters Patents of the Foundation, i. e. Gentlemen, by Descent, and in Poverty, Soldiers that have borne Arms by Sea or Land, Merchants decayed by Piracy, or Shipwreck, or Servants in Household to the King's or Queen's Majesty, and to be 50 Years of Age, or upward at their Admission, except those maimed in the Wars, by Sea or Land, who shall be capable of being admitted at 40 Years old, but none shall be admitted whose Body is tainted by any leprous, unclean, or infectious Disease; nor shall any be in as a poor Brother, who at, or after his Admittance shall have an Estate in Value, worth 200 l. or coming in, Viz & Modis, to the Value of 24 l. per Ann. during his Life.

ORDERS have been made by the Governors Orders for this Hospital, at several Times since the said Hospital's first Foundation, and yet continuing in Force; to be observed by the poor Men, Pensioners and Brothers. As namely,

No Man to be admitted, unless he shall appear to be clean and sound of Body.

Not to wear long Hair, or any Weapon within the said House.

If any fall Sick, and cannot come into the Hall, to have his Part in Diet in his Chamber, or his weekly Allowance in Money.

THE Master of the Hospital, and every Officer, poor Man and Member, to take their Diet in the Dining-Halls, appointed for that Purpose, unless in Time of Sicknefs.

No Officer, Pensioner, or Member to send or carry away Bread, Beer, or Meat from their Tables; but what remains to be bestowed upon poor Men and Women that do Service in the Hospital.

ONE of the poor Men in their several Turns, and the Master-Cook, to go weekly to the Market with the Steward or his Man, to buy Provision of Flesh and Fish for the Diet of the Hospital: To see it be good and sweet; and ready Money paid for it.

THE

THE Master and all the Members to take their Dinner and Supper in the common Hall, and not in their Chambers. None to sit down before Grace be said, and the Master and Chief Officers set; nor to arise before Grace be said.

ALL the poor Brethren and other Inferior Officers to give dutiful Reverence to the Master of the Hospital, whensoever they shall happen to be in his Presence; and when he shall speak to any of them, or they to him, to be uncovered.

NONE to give or receive any evil, reviling or railing Speeches of him before his Face, or behind his Back; and to be obedient to him in his lawful Commands and Injunctions.

To be diligent in frequenting the Chapel twice a Day, and there to behave themselves reverently; and to receive the Holy Communion thrice every Year, viz. at Christmas, Easter and Whitsuntide.

NONE to draw any Weapon in the said Hospital, to the Intent to hurt any Member, or to strike in Anger any of the House; or be convicted of any Crime punishable by the Laws of the Realm, upon Pain to be removed out of the House.

NONE to intermeddle with any Business touching the Affairs of the Hospital, but to attend only to the Service of GOD, and take thankfully what is provided for them, without muttering, murmuring or grudging. None to wear any Weapon, long Hair, colour'd Boots, Spurs or coloured Shoes, Feathers in their Hats, or any Ruffian-like or unseemly Apparel, but such as becomes Hospital-Men to wear.

NONE to lodge abroad out of his ordinary Lodging, or suffer any Stranger to lodge in any of their Lodgings.

NOR to haunt Houses suspected of Incontinency, Gaming-Houses, common bowling Allies, Taverns, Alehouses, by Day or Night, &c. neither to use Swearing, or taking GOD's holy Name in vain, nor railing at his Fellow Brethren, nor to be given to Drunkenness, or other notorious Vice.

NONE to go to any Tavern or Alehouse with his Livery-Gown on his Back; nor to have Leave to pass the Seas upon what Pretence soever, but by Petition to the Governors; nor to go into the Country to visit their Friends, or on other Business, without the Master's Leave, and that but for two Months at farthest.

NONE to pass the Out-Gate of the Hospital in their Livery-Gowns, upon Pain of a Month's Commons out of his Quarter's Wages.

NOR to undertake the following of other Mens Causes and Suits; nor to procure Molestation or Troubles to the King's Subjects.

WHENSOEVER any Pensioner, or poor Man shall, with, or without Leave, go into the Country, or be absent, or shall lie in or about LONDON, Westminster, or elsewhere, he shall have no Allowance at all in Money or otherwise, for his Commons during any such Time.

NOR be suffered to be out of Commons; but to take and eat his Commons in the common Dining-Hall, according to the Orders of the House.

THERE are other Orders, which the poor Brothers may at any Time peruse in a Book in the Vestry.

Eighty poor Men in the Charter-House

THE antient poor Men which this House doth maintain, are 80 in Number; and they are chosen by each particular Governor, every one, in their Order, taking his Turn to put in his poor Man: The Sovereign only putteth in two, the rest one a-piece in their respective Turns, as Places happen to be vacant: And this they do by a Warrant, sent to the Master and Register of the House, under a Form thus superscribed: To my Loving Friends, the Master and Register of Sutton's Hospital.

FROM 1614, to 1676, there had been admitted 554 poor Men, and there also ended their Days. By which it was computed, that out of 80 aged Men, there died but nine in a Year. Whence an Observation was made of the Healthfulness and Sweetness of the Place. To which another Observation may be made, of the Advantage of a regular, temperate Course for Length of Days.

FOR the Use of the Members of this Hospital, there are prepared very pious and well composed Prayers upon several Occasions, suited for the private Devotion of the antient Gentlemen in this House; as, upon their Admission; on the Founder's Day; upon the Decease of a Pensioner; in the Morning before he stirs abroad; in the Evening; a Prayer before the Sacrament; another after receiving; in Time of Sickness; and a Prayer to be said by a young Scholar of the House.

OF the School, we have treated in the last Chapter, but shall here add the Manner of getting the Children into it, which is thus; The Governors at an Assembly make a List, and nominate a Lad, each of them, who being approved of, is certain to come into the Place, though it should not fall till after the Death of the Governor who names him: And until the former Nomination and Warrant is served, no other can have any Claim.

THE House lost near 8000 l. in the Time of Beaumont, Master, and Heyward, Register, in the Years 1623 and 1624: And in the Year 1649, the House was robbed of 1600 l. Set behind Hand again in the Time of Gerard, another Master; and yet, by GOD's Blessing, considerable Additions have been made to the Estate and Revenues of the charitable Foundation, since the Year 1614, when it was first filled: And soon after the Death of Mr. Sutton, received a dangerous Shock by the Means of a private Person, who endeavoured to swallow it up; for his only Sister's Son, named Simon Baxter, attempted, as next Heir, to take Possession of it, and the whole Estate annexed to it. This Man entered an Action of Trespass against the Executors of Mr. Sutton, and the Governors, the last Day of Trinity Term, 10 Jac. in the King's Bench, for a violent Entry made by the said Executors and Governors, May the 30th, the same Year. The Cause had in it divers Points of Law started to overthrow the Settlement, viz. Ten Points. On the Plaintiff's Side, was Sir Francis Bacon, Solicitor-General, Mr. Gualter of the Temple, and Mr. Yelverton of Gray's-Inn. On the Defendants, Hubbart Attorney-General, Hutton, Serjeant at Law, and Coventry of the Inner-Temple. An Adjournment was made of the Cause, from the King's-Bench to the Exchequer Chamber, and there solemnly argued by the Judges. And at length it was here adjudged, with great Applause of all that heard it, for the Defendants, the Governors of the Hospital. The Plaintiff being but a Man of ordinary Quality, was judged to have Reason to be contented with a tolerable Provision that had been made for him, and suitable to his Degree; for he had allotted to him by Will, the Manor of Turback in Lancashire, consisting of a good antient House, two Parks, and large Demesnes, plentifully stored with Timber, valued at 350 l. per Ann.

The following is an Account of the Lands and Revenues belonging to this Hospital, taken from the Rental at the Charter-House.

BESIDES the Indefinite Sums before-mentioned.

THIS Will was dated the second Day of November, A. D. 1611.

THIS worthy Founder is said to have acquired this prodigious Estate very justly, but with much Care, Diligence and Frugality; yet was it strongly reported, that he was the Subject of Ben. Johnson's Mirth, and the Person he aimed at in the Character of Volpone, or the Fox; but this seems to be very unlikely, not only because several others were pointed at, in those Times as the Person intended by it, but as it would have been an Act of the highest Ingratitude in the Poet, who was allowed a constant Pension by this very Gentleman, and he indeed wrote a Letter to our Founder to vindicate himself in this Matter.

THE Employments which Mr. Sutton had, were sufficient to raise a great Fortune: He was Steward and Secretary to the Earls of Warwick and Leicester, then he farmed the Northern Coal-Mines, giving only his Word for a Security; then by Queen Elizabeth he was made Master of the Ordnance at Berwick, which he held 14 Years, in Token whereof are two Pieces of Ordnance, carved in Stone, placed over the Chimney in the great Hall at the Charter-House; then he was made Pay-Master of the Northern Army; then a Commissioner for Sequestration of the Lands of the Northern Rebels; then Victualler to the Navy and some Garrisons in the Low Countries; then a Commissioner for Prizes under the Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral of England, who gave him Letters of Mart against the Spaniards, from whom he took a Ship worth 20,000 l. and returning, settled at LONDON; he had Offices at Court, and in the Custom-House; he was made free of the Girdlers Company, and was reckoned a Money'd Man. His Wealth was greatly increased by good Bargains, Mortgages, and Merchandizing to Muscovy, Hamburg, &c. insomuch that he had thirty Agents abroad.

WHEN he died, he was buried in the Chapel of his own Hospital, where is a Tomb with this Inscription:

Sacred to the Glory of God, in grateful Memory of Thomas Sutton, Esq;

HERE lieth buried the Body of Thomas Sutton, late of Castle Camps in the County of Cam-

Cambridge, Esq; At whose only Costs and Charges this Hospital was founded, and endued with large Possessions, for the Relief of poor Men and Children. He was a Gentleman, born at Knaith, in the County of Lincoln, of worthy and honest Parentage. He lived to the Age of 79 Years, and deceased the 12th Day of December, Ann. Dom. 1611.

The SAVOY.

IN the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaster, situated in the Strand, stood another famous House of Charity, called the Savoy. It was antiently a very noble House, built and inhabited by Peter Duke of Savoy, Uncle to Queen Eleanor, King Henry the third's Queen. After him it came to the Duke of Lancaster, and was his Dwelling, being one of the most magnificent Buildings in the Nation. Afterwards being burnt down in Wat Tylar's Rebellion, Anno 1381, it lay long in Ashes and Rubbish, till King Henry VII. in the latter End of his Reign, rebuilt it, not for a Palace, but a charitable House to harbour an hundred poor People, sick or lame, or Travellers; to be furnished with Lodging, Food, Firing and Attendance, for a certain Time; dedicating it to St. John Baptist, and royally endowing it.

OVER the Gate were the King's Arms, and these two Lines engraven in old Characters:

*King Henry VII. to his Merit and Honour,
This Hospital founded, poor People to succour.*

To this Hospital was afterwards added by the last Will of King Henry VII. a Master and four Chaplains, to pray for his and his Royal Consort's Souls.

FROM an Extract of that King's Will, there was,

“ Item, Land assured for the Hospital of the “ Savoy, and Provision of two hundred Beds,
“ and other Things for the Chapel there, 500 “ Mark Land.
“ Item, For Building and Finishing the said “ Chapel and Hospital, Money delivered to the “ Dean and Chapter of Paul's, 10,000 Marks
“ in Money.

IN Compliance wherewith, his Son, King Henry VIII. in the second Year of his Reign, granted this Place, or Piece of Ground, called the Savoy, to Richard Bishop of Winchester, Richard Bishop of LONDON, and divers others, Executors of King Henry the Seventh's Will, for founding an Hospital. And by another Deed, Anno Quarto, granted Licence to the said Executors to found such Hospital for five Secular Chaplains, one of which to be Master, to pray for the good Estate of him, and Catharine his Consort, and for the Soul of King Henry VII. and of Elizabeth his Consort, and Arthur Prince of Wales, and to be called, The Hospital of Henry VII. late King of England, at the Savoy; and to be a Body Corporate; and to have a Common Seal, and yearly Revenues to the Value of 500 Marks by the Year, for the Maintenance of the said Chaplains, and such other Works of Mercy and Piety, as by the said Executors should be appointed.

IN the 5th of Edward VI. a Commission was issued out by the King to Sir Roger Cholmley, Knight, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and certain others, to visit this Hospital; who were to make particular Enquiry into these Articles:

I. How, and in what Sort the Foundation Statutes and Ordinances of the said Hospital were observed.

II. Wherein the same did agree with the common Orders and Proceedings of the Realm, in Causes of Religion.

III. How the Ministers, both Men and Women, gave Attendance, and did their Duties in their several Offices and Vocations.

IV. Of the State of the House, and Order of the Lands.

OF which last, this was the Sum of the Report given to the King and Council.

	l.	s.	d.
THE Value and Issues of the Lordships, Manors, Lands, &c. the last Year amounted to	541	05	5½
REPRISALS, Fees, Payments, Expences, Reparations, &c.	746	07	7
So that the Expences exceeded the Revenue by	205	02	1½

Numerus Pauperum Ægrotantium.

THE Number of the Poor refreshed within the said Hospital, from Michaelmas, Anno 4 Edward VI. to the 24th of September, Anno 5 Edward VI. of sick and impotent People, besides others Nightly lodged there, 8339.

THE yearly Fees and Salaries briefly stood thus:

	l.	s.	d.
To the Master of the Hospital	30	00	0
To the four Chaplains	16	00	0
Two Conducts	06	13	4
Thirteen Sisters	52	06	8
Ten Servants	22	06	8
Other Officers, as Physician, Surgeon, Auditor, and Steward	28	00	0

Expences upon the poor People 133 06 4½

So that besides the Damage this House received by the first Master, who totally consumed the Treasure appointed by Foundation and Statutes, the Savoy was now become ruinous, and in a very mean Condition, which inclined the King, upon a Motion made to him by the City of LONDON, to dissolve it; and accordingly this Hospital, (valued at 529 l. 5 s. 7 d. per Annum, saith Speed) was suppressed June 10, in the 7th of King Edward VI. A little before his Death, the Beds, Bedding, and other Furniture belonging thereunto, with 700 Marks of the said Lands, by the Year, he gave to the Citizens of LONDON, with his House of Bridewell, to the furnishing thereof, to be a Work-House for the poor and idle Persons, and towards the furnishing of the Hospital of St. Thomas in Southwark.

BUT this Hospital was again new founded, erected, and incorporated, by Queen Mary, November 3, in the 4th of her Reign, and one Jackson took Possession, and was made Master thereof in the same Month. The Ladies of the Court, and the Maids of Honour (a Thing not to be forgotten, saith Stow) stored the same anew with Beds, Bedding, and other Furniture, in very ample Manner; and it was by Patent confirmed at Westminster, May 9, in the 4th and 5th of Phil. and Mary.

IN the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, the Chapel became a Church, for the Inhabitants in and about the Parts of the Strand next the Savoy, to resort to, to hear Divine Service and Sermons, and for the Administration of the Sacraments: And was so allowed by Grindal Bishop of LONDON, with the Consent of the Master, and the Parish of St. Clement's: And so the Savoy, which formerly stood within the Parishes of St. Clement's Danes, and St. Mary the Strand, was now become a Parish itself.

THE Savoy had the bad Fortune to meet with another ill Master, Thomas Thurland by Name; who came in about Queen Elizabeth's Access to the Crown. He, besides that he was a Papist, and of a scandalous Life, embezzelled the Goods and Revenues, and the Poor wanted Necessaries, and ran the House above 2000*l.* in Debt: So that in the Year 1570, it was visited by Archbishop Grindal, with others, and the Master was deprived; but upon Promise and Oath of better Behaviour, was afterwards restored again about the Year 1575.

THIS House, tho' founded for charitable Purposes, was much abused; so that in Queen Elizabeth's Time, a great many Rogues and Beggars sheltered themselves here, upon Pretence of being Needy, or Lame, or Sick, and to want Relief, according to the Order of the Foundation; which was, That the Master was sworn to receive Claudicantes, Aegrotantes, & Peregrinantes: For Anno 1581, in the Month of January, a Search being made by the Recorder in LONDON, and the Suburbs, for Rogues, he sent the Constables of the Duchy to the Hospital of the Savoy, and they brought to him to Bridewell, six tall Fellows that were Draymen, belonging to Brewers, who were neither lame, sick, nor travelling Persons. The Constables, if they might have had their Wills, would have brought as many more: But the Master wrote a very courteous Letter to the Recorder, and the other Justices, to pardon them: But though he wrote thus charitably for them, they were all soundly whipped, and so sent home to their Masters: And it was observed, that the Savoy was a great Nursery of these evil Persons, and a Place, as it was then used, not converted to any good Use or Purpose.

THE more modern State of this House is, That in the Reign of King Charles II. it was made Use of in good Part as a Garrison; and there are at this Time constantly a Battalion of the Foot-Guards lodged here in Barracks. Part of it is also used as a Prison for Soldiers, or for new raised, or impressed Men.

THE other Parts of the Hospital are now turned into divers Dwelling-Houses, and granted away to private Persons: Here is a French Church, which uses the Liturgy, and conforms in all things to the Church of England; there are likewise two Chapels, one for German Lutherans, and the other for Dutch Calvinists.

DULWICH COLLEGE.

AT Dulwich, in the County of Surrey, about four Miles from the Borough of Southwark, in the Year 1619, was erected a College, called God's-Gift, consisting of a Master, a Warden, and four Fellows; of which three are to be Ecclesiastical Persons, and the fourth a skilful Organist; and of twelve poor aged People, and twelve poor Children. The Founder was Edward Alleyn, Esq; a celebrated Actor in the Play-House.

THE College is a strong Gothick Building, the Front of Stone, and the Side Wings of Brick, which are the Houses of the twelve poor People, six on one Side for the Men, and the same Number on the other Side for the Women. Over the Door of the Front, which stands to the North, is this Inscription in Golden Letters:

REGNANTE JACOBO,
Primo totius Britanniae Monarcha,
Edwardus Alleyn, Armiger,
Theromachiae Regiae Praefectus,

VII. Kal. Decembris A.D. MDCXXVI.

Beatus ille qui misertus est Pauperum!
ABI TU ET FAC SIMILITER.

Mr. Alleyn himself did publicly and audibly, in the Chapel of the said College, read and publish a Writing Quadripartite, bearing Date the 13th of September 1619; whereby he did make, create, erect, found and establish the said College, according to the Power and Liberty given him by his Majesty's Letters Patent under the Great Seal, dated at Westminster the 21st of June, in the Year abovesaid. And when he had read and published the said Writing, in the Hearing, he subscribed it with his Name, and then fixed his Seal to every Part thereof, in the Presence, of these Witnesses, viz.

Francis Lord Verulam, Lord Chancellor of England, and one of his Majesty's Privy Council.

Thomas Earl of Arundel, Knight of the Garter, Earl Marshal of England, and a Privy Counsellor.

Sir Edward Cecil, Knight, alias General Cecil, second Son to Thomas Earl of Exeter.

Sir John Howland, Knight, and High Sheriff of the Counties of Suffex and Surrey.

Sir Edmund Bowyer, of Camberwell, Knt.

Sir John Grymes, of Peckham, Knt.

Sir John Bodley, of Strettham, Knt.

Sir John Tonstal, of Cashalton, Knt. and several other Persons of great Worth.

THE four Parts of the Writing afore-named, were ordered to four several Parishes, viz. St. Botolph's without Bishopsgate, in which Parish the Fortune Play-House stood; St. Giles's without Cripplegate, where his Wife was born; St. Saviour's Southwark, where he was born himself; and the Parish of Camberwell, in which the Hospital stands.

THE Estate settled upon this Hospital is very much increased since its first Endowment, being at present near 1800 l. per Annum.

THE Church-Wardens of the four Parishes above-mentioned, meet twice a Year, viz. on the 4th of March, and 4th of September, to look into the Affairs of the College, and have a Dinner provided for them. In the Room where they dine are several antient Pictures, particularly of the Founder, his Father, his Brother, his Wife, and his Mistress, who by this Picture was a most beautiful Woman; there is likewise a Picture of Prince Henry, eldest Son of King James I. and several old Heads of the Kings of England from William the Conqueror to Henry VIII.; of the Apostles; and of the antient Sybills.

JOYNING to this Room is a Gallery, 80 Feet long and 15 broad, in which there are likewise some good Pictures, especially one of St. Jerome. This long Gallery, which is the whole Length of the West Wing of the House, over the Apartments of the six poor Women, is seldom made any Use of; but upon the Election of a Warden; and then there is commonly a Ball in it.

THE Master and Warden are both to be of the Founder's Name [Alleyn]. The Warden is elected, and whenever the Master dies, succeeds him.

THE Fellows are also elected, which is done by drawing Lots in this Manner; if there are more than two Candidates, the Master, Warden, and other Fellows, name the two who are to draw; and then two Papers, roll'd up alike, are put into a Bag, one of which has written in it, God's Gift, the other is Blank, and he who draws God's Gift is elected.

THE Place of one of the Fellows, viz. that of the Chaplain, is at this Time vacant, two or three Probation Sermons have been already preached for it, and they will proceed to an Election in a few Days. The other three Fellows, are

THE Reverend Mr. Hillary, Schoolmaster.

THE Reverend Mr. Hart, Usher.

Mr. Hawks, Organist.

FOR the Master, Warden, and Fellows, is kept a regular and decent Table: The twelve Boys have also Provision as well as Lodging in the House; but the poor Men and Women have an Allowance in Money for their Diet, and each of them has a Number of Faggots allowed yearly for Firing.

THE six Men, six Women, and twelve Boys, are all Cloathed with a dark grey Cloth, almost black.

THE Servants of the House, are a Caterer, a Gardener, a Butler, a Cook, and the Master's Man.

ONE of the six old Women is always Matron, to look to the Boys, and keep them clean.

ASKE'S HOSPITAL.

THIS Hospital is situated at Hoxton, not far from the upper Part of Moorfields, and is so named from Mr. Robert Aske, an Haberdasher of LONDON, who dying in the Year 1681, was buried in Aldermanbury Church, in which Parish he lived, and was a Dealer in Raw Silk. By his last Will, he left 20,000 l. to the Company of Haberdashers, in Trust, to build and endow an Hospital for the Harbour and Relief of twenty poor decayed single Men of the Company: And then, after divers other Legacies and charitable Bequests, the whole Remainder of his Estate he left to the said Company, which, as it held out, he gave them in Trust, for twenty poor Boys, Sons of Haberdashers, to be likewise maintained, and have Learning in the aforesaid Foundation.

IN Consequence of this, some of the chief Members of the Company enter'd upon the Estate, which amounted to upwards of 30,000 l. and upon this Bottom, they resolved to erect a very handsome Structure, both for the Founder's Honour and their own. The Model of the Building was drawn by Dr. Hook, the learned Mathematician of Gresham College, and is a stately Edifice, built of Brick and Stone, with a Piazza in the Front, 340 Feet in Length, adorned with Stone Columns of the Tuscan Order, but the Middle Part with Columns, Entablature, and Pediment of the Ionick Order; under the Pediment is a Nich, wherein stands the Effigies of the Founder carved in full Proportion; his Gown on, and a Roll of Parchment in his Hand; underneath him is thus written:

ROBERTO ASKE, Armigero, hujus
Hospitii Fundatori, Socie. Haberd. B. M. P. C.

AND on one Side of him this Inscription :

Anno Christi MDC LXXX II.

Societas Haberdasherorum de LONDON hoc Hospitium condiderunt, ex Legato & Testamento ROBERTI ASKE Armigeri, ejusdem Societatis; ad viginti senum Alimenta, & totidem Puerorum Educationem.

ON the other Side this Inscription :

The Worshipful Company of Haberdashers built this Hospital, pursuant to the Gift and Trust of R. ASKE, Esq; a late worthy Member of it; for the Relief of twenty poor Members, and for the Education of twenty Boys, Sons of decayed Freemen of that Company.

HERE is also the Coat of Arms of Aske, viz.
Or, three Bars Azure, and they are also impaled with the Haberdashers: And at the North End is an erect direct South Dial, with this Motto :

Cito pede præterit, 1695.

THE whole Building is 400 Feet in Length, and is said to have cost 13, or 14,000 l.

THE Master and Wardens of the said Company, for the Time being, are Governors of this Hospital. Here is also one Master for the twenty Boys, who likewise reads Prayers in the Chapel of this Hospital, at eleven and three o' Clock daily, for which he has 40 l. per Annum, and a House. Here are also a Clerk, a Butler, and a Porter. The said twenty poor Men are all to be single; they have each an Apartment of three Rooms, Food, a Gown once in two Years, and 3 l. per Annum in Money: The Boys have also a Ward to themselves, and a Bed to each two, and they have all other Necessaries.

TRINITY COLLEGE, or HOSPITAL.

THIS is a handsome Structure of Brick and Stone near Mile-End, North of the High Road, with a graceful Entrance, consisting of two Rows of Building one Story high, fronting each other, the Length whereof on both Sides is paved with Free-stone; in the Middle a Grass Plat, enclosed with Pallisadoes, and set with young Fir Trees; and at the further End Northward, stands a very comely Chapel, with a Clock, ascending with divers Steps, where Prayers are read on Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, which Chapel on each End, is contiguous to the two other Apartments.

IT was founded in the Year 1695, for such decayed or ancient Seamen as had been Masters of Ships, or Pilots, or their Widows, and none other.

THERE are Pumps belonging to every two Houses.

IT was built by the Trinity House, upon a Piece of Ground given for that Use by a Sea Officer of note, named Captain Mudd of Ratcliff, sometime an Elder Brother of the Company; his Widow contributing thereto.

THE Expences of this Building arose from the Money of the Ballast Office, belonging to the Trinity House by Act of Parliament, with which that House continually performs great Charities, and gives monthly Reliefs to poor needy Mariners, or their Widows, to the Number of two thousand and more.

THIS Hospital contains twenty-eight Apartments, each consisting of two Rooms, one above
another.

EVERY Person belonging to this Foundation, at first received in Money weekly, after this

Proportion; some a Crown, some four Shillings, some three Shillings and Six-pence, according to the Need or Quality of the Person: But the Pension is now settled at twelve Shillings, payable every first Monday in the Month.

CHELSEA COLLEGE, CALLED The ROYAL HOSPITAL.

OF this House we have spoken before, as a House founded for Divines; but we are now come to treat of it as an Hospital, which it is at the present, for the Entertainment of disabled, or superannuated Officers and Soldiers.
For this Purpose it was founded by K. Charles II.
carry'd on by his Brother King James II. and perfected by King William III. being a large and stately Edifice on the River Side. The Middle Building, facing the River, consists of a very fine Hall on one Side, and a Chapel on the other, with a fine Pavillion between them:
The Front is very lofty, being four Columns, Entablature, and Triangular Pediment of the Dorick Order, on each Side of which is a Piazza, adorned with Tuscan Pillars, and a Ballustrade on the Top. In the Cornice of this Piazza, is the following Inscription in Capitals:

IN SUBSIDIUM ET LEVAMEN EME-RITORUM SENIO BELLOQUE FRAC-TORUM CONDIDIT CAROLUS SECUN-DUS.

AUXIT JACOBUS SECUNDUS; PER-FECERE GULIELMUS ET MARIA REX
ET REGINA, ANNO DOMINI, MDCXCII.

IN the Chapel in this Building are Prayers twice a Day, and preaching every Sunday, there being two Chaplains for this Duty, at 100 l.
per Ann. Salary each: The Furniture and Plate of the Chapel was given by King James II. In the Hall, over-against the Chapel, the Pensioners dine, and the principal Officers of the House, by themselves, at a separate Table, at the upper End of it, where is a fine Piece of Painting of King Charles II. on Horseback; with several others, as big as the Life, designed by Signior Vario, and finished by Mr. Cook, the Gift of the Earl of Ranelagh. The Pavement of the Chapel and Hall is black and white Marble.

THERE are two Wings, which, with the Building we have described, make three Sides of a Quadrangle, the fourth toward the Thames being all open, where is a delightful Prospect, and fine Walks quite down to the River.

THE East Side of this Quadrangle consists of the Apartments for the Governor at that End next to the River, the rest contains eight Wards, and 26 Beds in a Ward, which Wards are made of Wainscot, with a Gallery, or Walk, between each Ward.

THE West Side consisteth of the Lieutenant Governor's Apartments, next the Thames, the rest being eight Wards, with Beds as before.

EACH of these Wings hath a Stone Front, adorned with Pilasters Entablature, and Triangular Pediment of the Dorick Order.

IN the Center of this Quadrangle is a curious Brass Statue of King Charles II. somewhat bigger than the Life, in the Habit of a Roman Cesar, with a Battoon in his Hand, and standing on a Cylindrical Pedestal of white and veined Marble, given by Tobias Bustat, and is said to have cost 500 l.

BESIDES

BESIDES the main Building, there are four large and uniform Wings, or Out-Buildings; one called the Infirmary for the Sick, another for the Use of maimed Officers, the third for several Officers of the House, and the fourth for the Servants.

BEHIND the main Building is a large Piece of Ground inclosed, called Sutton's Court, planted with Trees, and thrown into Walks, with Grass Plats, open all the Day for the Pensioners, or any who please to walk therein. There are besides, fine Gardens, with Canals in them. The whole, including the Building, contains forty Acres of Ground, and was designed by Sir Christopher Wren: The Expence of the Building and Gardens has been computed at 150,000 l.

THE Number of Pensioners, or private Soldiers, maintained in this Hospital, are above 400, besides Out-Pensioners. They are all clothed in red Coats, lined with blue, which they have every two Years; besides which they have blue Coats, once in three Years, which was the Gift of a private Person. They are likewise provided with all other Cloaths, both Linen and Woollen, besides their Lodging, Diet, Washing, and Firing.

EVERY Man is allowed eighteen Ounces of Beef, every Monday, Thursday, and Saturday; and eighteen Ounces of Mutton, every Tuesday and Sunday; for both which 3 d. Half-penny per Pound is paid by Contract; on Wednesdays and Fridays they have Pease-Pottage, a Quarter of a Pound of Cheese, and one Ounce of Butter for Dinner. Every Night for Supper, a Quarter of a Pound of Cheese; and every Day have each two Quarts of Small Beer, for which 8 s. per Barrel is paid likewise by Contract.

THE Allowance in Money, to the Officers and private Men, is as follows; and the Number here specified, is what are at present, or have very lately been in the College.

	l .	s .	d .
26 Officers for 52 Weeks and one Day, at 3 s . 6 d . per Week each	237	05	0
34 Light Horse-men, at 2 s . per Week	177	05	7
32 Serjeants, Ditto	166	17	0
48 Corporals and Drums, at 10 d . per Week	104	04	5
336 Private Men, at 8 d . per Week	583	19	6
476	1269	11	6

EACH of the 16 Wards contains 2 Serjeants, 2 Corporals, 1 Drum, and 21 private Men; so that two Wards make a Company.

THE House is called a Garrison, and every Soldier, in his Turn, is obliged to do Duty. It is required, that every Pensioner admitted into this House, be maimed, or disabled in the Service, or that he hath served the Crown, at least, twenty Years.

THE vast Expence of this Hospital is defrayed out of the Poundage of the Army, and one Day's Pay in a Year from every Officer and private Soldier.

The LORDS COMMISSIONERS of this Hospital, are

THE Right Honourable Spencer Earl of Wilmington, Lord President of the Council.

THE Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, first Lord of the Treasury.

THE most Noble Thomas Holles, Duke of Newcastle;

AND the Right Honourable William Lord Harrington, the two Principal Secretaries of State.

THE Right Honourable Henry Pelham, Esq; Pay-Master General of his Majesty's Guards and Garrisons.

SIR William Strickland, Secretary at War.

SIR Philip Meadows, Knight, and the Lord Viscount Middleton Comptrollers of the Accompts of the Army.

GREENWICH HOSPITAL.

AS the last mentioned Hospital is for the Relief and Support of decayed, aged, and maimed Soldiers, who have served their King and Country in the Land Service, this we are now to speak of, is for such as have been reduced to the like Difficulties in the Sea Service in the Royal Navy. It is situated in Greenwich, on the Banks of the Thames, on the South East Side of LONDON, where formerly stood a House of Pleasure for our Kings, and where the ever-memorable and prosperous Queen Elizabeth was born.

THIS Hospital was founded by King William and Queen Mary, who, in the Year 1694, October the 25th, issued out their Letters Patent, wherein they gave and granted to Sir John Somers, Lord Keeper; Thomas, Duke of Leeds, President of the Council; Thomas, Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Privy Seal; Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, one of the Principal Secretaries of State; Sidney Lord Godolphin, first Commissioner of the Treasury, and divers others, their Heirs and Assigns, that Piece or Parcel of Ground, situated within the Parish of East Greenwich, being Part of their Majesties Manor of East Greenwich, containing in the whole, eight Acres, two Roods, and thirty two Square Perches; and all that Capital Messuage, lately built, or in building, by King Charles II. and still remaining unfinished, commonly called the Palace at Greenwich, and several other Edifices and Buildings: To the Intent that every Part thereof should be converted and employed unto, and for the Use of an Hospital, for the Relief of Seamen, their Widows and Children, and Encouragement of Navigation.

THE Year after, the King again (the Queen being dead) issued out his Letters Patent, dated the 12th of March 1695, and in the 7th Year of his Reign, for a Commission for this Hospital. Wherein first, was set forth the Reason of his founding this Hospital; namely, that nothing would more effectually contribute to the Trade, Navigation, and Naval Strength of this Realm, than the endeavouring to increase the Number of English Seamen. And that the Seafaring Men of this Kingdom, had for a long Time distinguished themselves throughout the World, for their Industry and Skilfulness in their proper Employments, and by their Courage and Constancy, manifested in Engagements and Hazards for the Defence and Honour of their Native Country. And that nothing was more likely to continue their antient Reputation, and to have greater Numbers betake themselves to the Sea, than by making some competent Provision, that Seamen, who, by Age, Wounds, or other Accidents, should become disabled for farther Service at Sea, and should not be in a Condition to maintain themselves comfortably, might not fall under Hardships and Miseries, but might be supported at the publick Charge: And that the Children of such disabled Seamen, and the Widows and Children of such Seamen as should happen to be slain in the King's Service, might in some reasonable Manner be provided for and educated. And that therefore, both he himself, and the Queen deceased, having frequently reflected upon the Premises, since their Accession to the Crown, Crown, had determined to erect and establish an Hospital for the Purposes aforesaid.

IN these Letters Patent he commissioned Prince George of Denmark, the Archbishop of Canterbury for the Time being, the Lord Chancellor, or Lord-keeper, for the Time being, also the Lord President of the Council, the Lord-keeper of the Privy Seal, the Secretary of State for the Time being, and a great Number more of the Nobility, the Bishops, Aldermen of the City, Commissioners of the Navy, Sea Captains, Trinity House, and other Gentlemen, or some of them, to meet together, from Time to Time, for the executing this Commission, and to consider of proper Methods to be observed in executing the same, by empowering seven, or more, of them (whereof one, or more, to be of the Privy Council, of the Commissioners of the Treasury, &c.) to call others to their Aid and Assistance, and to appoint and constitute Sub-Committees, and to call to them the King's Surveyor-General of the Works, and other Artists, to consider what Part of the Structures and Buildings now standing would be unfit, or not serviceable for the Hospital; and in what Manner such of the present Structure, as shall be thought fit to stand, may be fitted and prepared for Use and Service: Likewise to prepare Models of the Building, with such Schemes and Draughts as might best explain the same, and to present such Models and Schemes to the King, for his Royal Approbation. Likewise to prepare a Charter, or Charters of Foundation; and also such Statutes, Constitutions, and Orders, as may be proper for it, and to receive the King's Allowance towards this Building; and also all Gifts and Subscriptions, Sums of Money, Goods, or Chattels, Manors, Lands, Rents, or other Matters, or Things whatsoever, that any other well-disposed Persons should contribute towards it.

AND that the King's Intentions in the Premises might be better known, the Commissioners were moreover to cause publick Notification of them to be made in their Places, or by such Ways and Means as they should think fit; and to certify to the Commissioners of the Treasury, the Names of Persons that shall subscribe, or contribute, with the Sums of Money, Goods, Chattels, &c. so given.

John Evelyn, Senior, Esq; was nominated and appointed in these Letters Patent, to be Treasurer and Receiver-General, of all the Money, or other Profits subscribed, or contributed for the Building, Furnishing, or Endowing the said Hospital; for which he was to have 200 l. yearly: And upon his Death, or Removal, the Commissioners to appoint one, or more, fit Person, or Persons, for Treasurer. And divers other particular Orders and Directions were given to the Commissioners, for the speedier and more honest and effectual Execution and Establishment of this charitable Work: For carrying on, and perfecting which, the King gave 2000 l. yearly, payable out of the Exchequer.

AFTER this Commission, the Parliament made an Act for the more effectual forwarding this Excellent and Royal Design, and bringing it to Perfection, and providing a sufficient Endowment of it. The Sum of which Act was, "That every " able Mariner, Seaman, Waterman, Fisherman,
" Lighterman, Bargeman, Keelman, or Seafaring " Man, being above the Age of Eighteen, and " under the Age of Fifty, that should be willing " to enter and register himself, for the Service of " his Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors in the " Fleet, giving his Christian and Sir-Name, Age,
" and Place of Abode, unto an Officer appointed " by the King for the Registering of Seamen at
" the Navy Office in LONDON: And these,
" so registered, to be ready upon Orders, issuing

" from the Lord High Admiral, from Time to " Time in each Year, for the Service of the Fleet:
" That these thus entered, not being above the " Number of 30000, should receive the Bounty
" of 40 s. yearly, over and above their Pay; and
" besides many other Privileges and Benefits
" there mentioned, granted to these registered " Seamen, above others not registered, should " be admitted and placed in the said Hospital,
" and be provided each, during his Life, with " convenient Lodging, Meat, Drink, Cloathing,
" and other Necessaries, upon a Certificate of
" the Captain, Master, and Surgeon of the Ship,
" under their Hands, of their being disabled
" for future Service, unto the Governor of the " Hospital: And the Widows of such as should " be slain or drowned in the Sea-Service, and " their Children, being not of Ability to provide " comfortably for themselves, should be received
" into the Hospital, and there be provided for,
" and the Children have Education, according as
" the Hospital should be capable to receive them,
" and as the Revenues thereof would extend:

" AND for the providing a sufficient Revenue
" for this Hospital, it was enacted in the same " Act, That every Seaman that should serve his " Majesty, his Heirs, and Successors, in any of " his Ships, should allow out of his Wages 6 d.
" per Menssem, for the better Support of the said
" Hospital, and to augment the Revenues thereof.

AGAIN, by an Act the Year after, viz. 1697, it was declared and enacted, "That each Person
" registered should enjoy the Benefit of Green-
" wich Hospital, and be received into it in Suc" cession one after another, as the Person regi" stered shall be and appear in Course and Order
" of Time to be upon the Register-Book; and " the Widows and Children of the Persons longest " registered, always to be preferred: And that " such Seamen, who are 50 Years of Age, if " they have served in any of his Majesty's
" Ships for seven Years before, might register
" themselves.

THAT Part of the Building next the River; which is almost finished, and is chiefly of Free Stone, is adorned with magnificent Pillars, Pilasters, Entablatures and Pediments of the Composite Order. Of the main Building there is yet but one Side finished, in which is a spacious Hall finely painted by Sir James Thornhill; in an Alcove at the upper End of it is represented the present Royal Family, viz. the late Princess Sophia, his late Majesty King George I. their present Majesties, the Queen of Prussia, the Prince of Wales, the Duke, and the five Princesses. On the Cieling, her late Majesty Queen Anne, and Prince George of Denmark. On the Cieling of the Hall itself, King William and Queen Mary, with several Emblematical Figures; and, in one Corner, the late learned Mr. Flamsted, and his Disciple Mr. Weston, making their Astronomical Observations, with the Draught before them of the great Eclipse that happened in the Year 1715; an Account of which was published long before, by the said Mr. Flamsted.

10 Annæ. An Act made for the better collecting and receiving the Duties granted for the Support of the Royal Hospital at Greenwich, and for the farther Benefit thereof: Some of the Contents whereof are,

That every Seaman serving the Crown, or any Subject, and every Person employed on Boats upon the Coast of Great-Britain, or Ireland, in taking Fish, which are brought fresh to Shore, and in Boats which trade from Place to Place, shall pay 6 d. per Month; and so proportionably during the Time they shall be employed, for the better Support of this Hospital.

That the Master of every Ship or Vessel, not in the Service of the Crown, may detain out of the Wages of the Seamen 6 d. per Month, and shall pay the same to the Person that shall be appointed by the Admiralty to receive it.

THAT the Admiralty may appoint a fit Person to be Receiver of the said Duty; and to authorize him to appoint the Collector of the Customs of the several Out-Ports, or any other Person to collect the same.

THAT the Receiver may summon any Master or Owner of a Ship or Vessel, not in the Service of the Crown, to appear at his Office, &c. who may examine him, as to the Number and Time of Service of the Persons employed in his Ship or Vessel: And if he shall neglect or refuse to pay the Money due to the Hospital, within 14 Days after they be cleared Inwards, by the Officer of the Customs, the Offender to forfeit 20 l. for every such Neglect or Refusal.

MORDEN COLLEGE.

THIS College is situated not far from Greenwich, upon Blackheath, and is named after its generous, and truly Christian Founder, Sir John Morden, of Wricklesmarsh, in the Parish of Charlton, in the County of Kent, Baronet; a Citizen born, and a Turkey Merchant, in which Profession he acquired a considerable Estate. Several Years before his Death, he erected this spacious Structure, in Form of a College, at his sole Charge, in a Field called Great-Stone-Field, not far from his own Habitation, for the Reception and Harbour of poor, decayed, honest Merchants.

HE endowed it most amply and liberally, with his whole Real, Copyhold, and Personal Estate, after his Lady's Decease, which may amount to about 1300 l. per Annum; and in his Life-time, placed twelve such poor Merchants there: But by Reason of great Losses, they were reduced to four, in the Life-time of the Lady Morden, who was forced to retrench the Expences of the House, on Account of the Share allotted to her by the last Will of her Husband. When she died, and the whole Estate came to the College, the Number was increased again; and there are, at this Time, five and thirty poor Gentlemen in the House. There is no settled Number of such as are to be admitted; but it is to be augmented according as the Estate will bear, and the necessary sary Expences allow of : There is Room for the Harbour of 40.

SIR John Morden, by his Will, appointed his said Lady his Executrix, and three others of good Rank and Integrity, all Turkey Merchants, to be both Trustees of his Estate so settled, and likewise Visitors of his College yearly or oftner, as they should see Need or Occasion; and due Provisions to be made for them there when they come to visit: And they to have the sole Management of the Affairs thereof. These first Trustees upon the Decease of any of them, to choose and nominate others, to the Number of seven, all to be Turkey Merchants; the Survivors of them to choose others of the said Company, from Time to Time, to fill up the said Number upon the Death of any of the former; or if at any Time hereafter, there should chance to be a Failure in the Turkey Company, then the Election of the seven Trustees to be made out of the East-India Company, of which Sir John Morden was also a Member; and in Case of a Failure in that Company, Provision was made, by the Will, for others.

To this College belongs also a Treasurer, whose Salary is 40 l. a Year; whose Office is to receive the Rent and Revenues, and to keep the Books of the Accompts and Disbursements of the College, and to be accountable to the Visitors.

AND also a Chaplain, who is to be in Holy Orders, and to read Prayers in the Chapel twice every Day, and to preach twice on the Lord's Day. His Salary at first was 30 l. a Year, but the Lady Morden, at her Death, doubled it. She was in other Things a Benefactor to the College, particularly, by making an Addition to the 10 l. appointed yearly for the Repairs, which was not sufficient for the Purpose; for which Reason she has her Statue in a Nich, joining to that of her Husband in another Nich, set over the Gate of the College.

THE Treasurer, and Chaplain, with the poor Merchants, are to have a common Table in the Hall, to eat and drink together at Meals; and each their convenient Chambers and Apartments, with Cellars.

THE Pension allowed to each Person admitted into this House is 20 l. per Ann. for their Commons, Firing, and other Necessaries. They were, at first, to wear Gowns in the College, with the Founder's Badge; but that is left off. They ought, at their Admission, to be 50 Years of Age at least.

THE Chapel within the College, which is wainscotted, and hath a costly Altar-Piece, was consecrated by Dr. Sprat, Bishop of Rockester, in whose Diocese the College stands; there were also present Dr. Tenison, late Archbishop of Canterbury, the Founder, and many others; when Dr. Freind preached the Dedication Sermon, an Anthem was sung by the Singing Boys of the Collegiate Church of Westminster, brought by the said Bishop, Dean also of that Church.

WHEN the Founder died, which was in the Year 1708, he was buried, according to his own Desire, in a Vault under the Communion-Table of this Chapel.

There is likewise a Burying-Place adjoining to the College, consecrated also by Bishop Sprat, for such of the College as die there.

An ABSTRACT of the LAST WILL and TESTAMENT of Sir John Morden, Baronet, who departed this Life the 6th of September, Anno Domini 1708, so much as concerns the liberal Gifts he left to charitable Uses, and particularly to his College on Blackheath.

I. "TO be interred in his Chapel, in his College, at the Discretion of Dame

" Susan, his Wife, and his Trustees, without Pomp, or Singing-Boys; but decently.

" GIVES and devises unto his said Wife, Dame Susan Morden, 600 l. per Ann. clear of all Charges, Repairs, Parliament Taxes, and all other Taxes, Deductions and Abatements whatsoever, during her Natural Life, to be retained by her, or paid to her by his Trustees, out of all his Real, Copyhold, or Personal Estate, whatsoever, Quarterly, at Christmas, Lady-Day, Midsummer, and Michaelmas. The first Payment to begin and be retained, or paid to her at such of the said Feasts, or Days of Payment, which shall first happen after his Decease: And, for the true Payment thereof doth charge all his Estate, Real, Copyhold and Personal, during her Natural Life, to be taken in Lieu and Discharge of all Contracts of Marriage, Thirds, Claims and Demands whatsoever, except what is hereby further devised to her.

Item, GIVES and bequeaths to her for Life, his Mansion-House, called Wricklesmarsh, with all the Orchards, Gardens, Vineyards, Fishponds, Yards, Stables, Barns, Outhouses, and the Avenue or Close leading to the same from the Road, and the Close adjoining, wherein the Horsepond is, and the Close and Walk, called Mount-Eccho-Walk, and all Appurtenances, together with so many Acres of Land, Meadow, and Pasture, next adjoining to the said House, as will amount to the yearly Value of 100 l. at the least, to be set out and allotted to her by Sir Edmund Harrison, Daniel Morse, and Pelatiab Barnardiston, or the Survivors or Survivor of them, according to their Discretions.

" Item, GIVES and bequeaths to his Wife 100 l. for Mourning.

" Item, GIVES and bequeaths to her his best Coach and Chariot, and four of his best Horses, and the Furniture thereof, and all his Cows and Dairy; and also one Moiety or half Part (the same into two equal Parts to be divided) of all his Household Stuffs, Furniture, Utensils, Plate, Jewels, China Ware, Cabinets, Linen, Woollen, Hangings, Bedding, Pewter, Copper, and Brasses, and all other his Ornaments and Household Stuff whatsoever, as well in the Country, as in LONDON, to dispose of at her Will and Pleasure; and also gives unto her, during Life, the Use and Wearing of the other Moiety of the said Household Stuff, &c. And his Will is, That an Inventory and Valuation of all the said Household Goods, Plate, Jewels, be made and delivered to the said Trustees, Sir Edmund Harrison, Daniel Morse, and Pelatiab Barnardiston, some or one of them, to preserve the same for the Uses hereafter mentioned.

" AND then, after divers Legacies to his Relations and other Persons, and to the Poor of St. Martin Outwich, and of the Parish of Charlton, he gives to Christ-Church Hospital 200 l. formerly lent, and discharges them thereof. To St. Thomas's Hospital 100 l. which he subscribed and paid, and discharges the same; gives 200 l. to be laid out by his Executrix, to discharge Prisoners out of the King's-Bench Prison, Marshalsea, Fleet, and Ludgate, and both the Compters, not paying above 3 l. to any one; and also 100 l. to be distributed to Blind Persons, to such as were born Blind, 40 s. a-piece, and to other Blind Persons, 20 s. a-piece, &c. To Sir Edmund Harrison, Daniel Morse, and Pelatiab Barnardiston, 20 Guineas a-piece for Mourning.

[These were Trustees for his College.]

MAKES his Wife, Dame Susan Morden, sole Executrix.

" GIVES

“ GIVES and devises unto Sir Edmund Harrison, Daniel Morfe, and Pelatiah Barnardiston, and the Survivor of them, his Heirs and Assigns for ever, all his Real and Copyhold Estate, of which he was, or should be seized, during his Life, and not before otherwise disposed of, subject to the Payment of the said Annuity of 600*l.* per Annum, to his Wife for Life, to hold the same unto the said Sir Edmund Harrison, Daniel Morfe, and Pelatiah Barnardiston, their Heirs and Assigns, in Trust for the Uses following, viz.

“ WILLS and orders, That there be placed in his College in Charlton, as many poor, honest, sober and discreet Merchants, as the clear yearly Rent and Revenue of his said Real or Copyhold Estate of Inheritance will maintain, according to the Allotments and Proviso's following. Which Merchants he directs to be of the Age of fifty Years a-piece at least, and have lost their Estates by Accidents, Dangers, and Perils of the Seas, or by any other Accidents, Ways, and Means, in their honest Endeavours to get their Living by Merchandizing.

“ GIVES and allows each (such) Merchant a Pension of 20*l.* a Year, to be paid and laid out in Manner after appointed.

“ WILLS, That out of the said Pensions of 20*l.* a-piece, a constant Table and Commons be kept in the Hall of the College for the Sustenance of the poor Merchants, to dine and sup together, such as are able to come out of their Chambers, every Day in the Year; and for such as are not able to come out of their Chambers, such Provision shall be made and sent to them, as is necessary for them in their Conditions.

“ WILLS, That the said Merchants shall always in the said College wear Gowns all alike; and that out of their said 20*l.* per Ann. a-piece, shall yearly be allowed 40*s.* a-piece to buy their new Gowns, and also 20*s.* a-piece to buy each of them a Chaldron of Coals for Firing in their Chambers, and the remaining 17*l.* a-piece to be applied to the Maintenance of their Table and Commons, and for Buying and Dressing their Provisions, and for Bread and Beer, and Coals for their Kitchen and Hall, and all other Necessaries, and if any Overplus of their Pensions be left, after all Commons and Necessaries paid for, the same to be equally divided amongst them for Cloathes and other Necessaries.

“ WILLS, That each of them have a Lodging appointed, and be constantly resident in the said College.

“ WILLS, That a Person be appointed to be Treasurer to receive, for the Use of the College, all the Rents, Revenues, Sum and Sums of Money belonging to the College, for Provisions, Repairs, Wages, and other Expences whatsoever, in such Manner as hereby is directed, and shall repair and keep Books fairly written of all his Receipts and Disbursements, to be perused and allowed of, and signed by the Visitors afternamed, once a Year at least, and oftner, whenever the Visitors afternamed shall call for the same; and for his Pains and Trouble therein, shall have an Allowance, either out of the said Real, or Copyhold Estate, or such other Estate, as is hereby granted for the Endowment of the College, the Pension or Sum of 40*l.* per Annum, to be paid by the Visitors upon Perusal of his Accompts.

“ WILLS, That the Chapel in the said College be consecrated, and that there be a sober, devout and discreet Person, in Holy Orders, appointed to be Chaplain to the College, to read

VOL. I.

“ Divine Service, according to the Liturgy of the Church of England, as now by Law established, twice every Day, Morning and Evening; and also to preach Sermons twice a Day, every Sunday in the Year, and duly to administer the Holy Sacraments, and visit the Sick, and bury the Dead: And to do all Things according to his Duty and Place; and for his so doing, shall have also, out of such Estate given for endowing the College, 30*l.* a Year: And the Chaplain and Treasurer shall have their Diet with the Merchants, in the Hall of the College, and also their Lodging in the College; and the same shall be answered out of the Estate allotted for endowing the College.

“ WILLS, That the Chaplain be always resident, to do his Duty in the College; and that all the Merchants do constantly go to Chapel and Divine Service twice every Day, without fail, if they are able: And that the Merchants, by Majority of Votes, shall choose one or more at a Time, and as often as they please out of their own Number, to buy in all the Provisions and other Necessaries for the College, and take Care thereof, and deliver out the same to the Cook, and others of the College, as Occasion shall require, without any Fee, or Advantage for his or their Pains, believing, since he gives the Money, they will not think it a Burthen to buy their own Provisions and Necessaries.

“ DISCHARGES his Executrix from being subject to any Miscarriage, in case what should be done by her was well intended; and further directs his Executrix to make Sale of any Ships, or Parts of Ships, in which he is interested, if she thinks fit. Desires her speedily to sell his Personal Estate, that the Produce thereof may come in Aid of his Real Estate for endowing the College.

“ WILLS, That the sole Government and Management of the College be in the Visitors, after-mentioned, and their Successors for ever, and first appoints his Wife, Sir Edmund Harrison, Daniel Morfe, and Pelatiah Barnardiston, to be sole Visitors thereof; and they and the Survivors of them, or the major Part of them, or the Survivors of them, to have the sole Management thereof. To place and displace the Merchants, Chaplain, Treasurer, and all Officers and Persons within the College. And to make Orders and Rules for the well-governing thereof, as they, or the major Part of them, shall think fit; and that they, or the major Part of them, visit the College once a Year at the least, and oftner, if they think fit: And that they, or the major Part of them, shall then state and take the Treasurer's Accompts, and peruse and sign the same, if they approve thereof; and if not, to call the said Treasurer to account for all such Money as shall come to his Hands, and not be disposed of, according to this his Will, and then examine into the well-governing of the College, and into the Behaviour of every one within the said College; and if they find that the Treasurer, Chaplain, or any other of the Officers of the College, do not behave themselves according to their Duty, then to displace them, and appoint others in their Rooms, by Writings under their respective Hands and Seals, or the Hands and Seals of the major Part of them; and also examine into the Manners of all the Merchants, whether they keep constant to Chapel, and are resident in the College; and if they find them guilty of any Sort of ill Behaviour, not keeping strictly to the Rules and Orders of the College, or guilty of Swearing, Drunkenness, or any other Debauchery, that “ their

“ then by Writing, under the Hands and Seals of “ them, or the major Part of them, to displace
 “ and turn them out, and put in other Merchants
 “ at their Discretions ; and then view all Repairs “ done, or to be done in the College, or Uten“ sils of Household Stuff, and give such Orders “ therein, as to them shall seem meet.

“ GIVES 10 l. per Annum, for ever, to be “ expended in a Dinner for the Visitors, in the “ said Hall, on the Day of their Visitation, and “ for Hay and Corn for their Horses : And, af“ ter they have dined, all the Provisions remain“ ing, to be given to the Merchants within the “ College.

“ WILLS, That Rooms be prepared for their “ Reception ; and that immediately after the “ Decease of any two of the Visitors, that Sir “ John Buckworth, Sir Humphrey Edwin, John “ Morice, Esq; Mr. William Faulconer, and “ Mr. Justus Otgher, Turkey Merchants, shall “ be Trustees and Visitors of the College, du“ ring their Lives, together with the then sur“ viving Visitor, or Visitors ; and that then all
 “ the Trustees, or Visitors, do visit the Col“ lege, and execute all the Powers, above given “ to the first Trustees ; and that then, when any “ one of the said Visitors dies, all the surviving “ Visitors, or major Part of them, shall meet,
 “ and under their Hands and Seals, constitute,
 “ and appoint, some one of the Turkey Compa“ ny to supply the Place of the deceased Visi“ tor, to be Visitor with them, during his Life :
 “ Or if more than one happen to be dead, then “ to constitute and appoint so many of the “ Turkey Company to be Visitors for their Lives, “ in the Place of those deceased, as will keep “ up the Number of seven Visitors, to have al“ ways the sole Management of the College
 “ according to his Will.

“ WILLS, That if all the Visitors of the “ College should die, without choosing others
 “ to succeed them, then the Turkey Compa“ ny to choose seven discreet Persons, Mem“ bers of their Company, to be Visitors of the “ College for their Lives ; and they to choose “ them Successors accordingly, in Manner afore“ said, for ever. And if the Turkey Company “ fail, that there cannot be Visitors chosen out
 “ of them, then the surviving Visitors, or the ma“ jor Part of them, shall constitute and appoint so “ many of the East-India Company as will fill “ up the Number seven ; and if that Company fail, “ then out of the Court of Aldermen of the “ City of LONDON, be (as many) Visitors
 “ for their Lives, as will make up their Num“ ber seven Visitors for ever : And so the sur“ viving Visitors, as often as any shall die, shall “ choose fit and discreet Persons out of the Court
 “ of Aldermen : And if the Court of Aldermen “ fail, then the surviving Visitors, when any “ one, or more, shall die, to constitute one, or “ more, to fill up their Number seven, of dis“ creet and grave Persons, Gentlemen of the “ County of Kent, as the surviving Visitors, or “ major Part of them shall think fit, to be Vi“ sitors for their Lives ; and so to choose Visitors “ successively out of the Gentlemen of Kent, to “ make up their Number seven for ever : But so “ long as there shall be a Turkey Company, or “ when they shall be restored, the Visitors to be “ chosen out of them.

“ DIRECTS, That the Trustees and Visitors,
 “ when they shall be reduced to two in Number,
 “ in whom the Inheritance of the Estate devised,
 “ or to be purchased, shall be vested, shall con“ vey and assure the Inheritance and Fee-simple
 “ of the said Estates to the Use of themselves, “ and all other the then present Visitors, and of “ their Heirs and Assigns, for the Purposes afore“ said ; and that the Charges of so conveying

“ and transferring the said Estates, and all other “ Charges and Expences, in, or about, making “ Purchases, and ordering and managing the “ Estate, or Revenues, wherewith the College “ is endowed, (other than the Expences of Vi“ sitations, which are already provided for) shall “ be allowed and deducted out of the Estate
 “ and Revenues aforesaid.

“ WILLS, That so often as any of his Name,
 “ or his own or Wife's Relations, shall be qua“ lified to be Chaplain, or otherwise qualified to “ perform any of the Offices in the College, or “ be within the Intention of this Will, to re“ ceive the Charity of the College ; that they “ be, upon an Election, preferred before others,
 “ and be put into the said Offices of the Col“ lege for which they are qualified, and put in “ to receive the Charity thereof, before any Per“ son whatsoever.

ABSTRACT of the CODICIL annexed.

“ WHEREAS by his Will of the 15th of “ October 1702, he mentions a College erected
 “ for poor Merchants, and thereby gave a “ yearly Pension of 20 l. to every Merchant ;
 “ and attended the House of Commons for an “ Exemption for the College from paying Taxes,
 “ but could not prevail ; does therefore declare,
 “ That the Pension of 20 l. yearly to each Mer“ chant, be reduced to the yearly Pension of “ 15 l. to issue out of the yearly Allowance of “ 20 l. by Will allowed. In all other Things, “ confirms his said Will.

IN the Hall is hung up a Table, containing, in Writing, the Orders of the College ; which are as follow ;

The ORDERS to be observed in MORDEN COLLEGE.

I. It is Ordered, That no Person, or Persons, be elected; or admitted into this College, but such poor Merchants as are fallen into Decay by Accidents of the Seas, or otherwise, in their way of Merchandizing, being honest, sober, and discreet Members of the Church of England, as now by Law established ; and being single Persons, of the Age of fifty Years at the Time of their Admission into the said College. And if by Misinformation, Mistake, or otherwise, any Person, or Persons whatsoever, or any common Swearers, Drunkards, quarrelsome, loose, lewd, unruly, debauched, or disorderly Persons ; or any Person, or Persons, infected with any infectious Disease, shall be placed, or put into the said College, that then all, and every such Person, shall be immediately expelled, and put out of the said College for ever.

II. Ordered, That no Friends, Relations, or Acquaintance, of any of the said Merchants, or Servants, (unless in Case of Sicknes, or the like, to take Care of them) shall reside, live or lodge in the said College : And every Person, or Persons, offending against this Order, shall forfeit

feit, for his first Offence, all his and their Commons, during the Time any such Person shall reside, live, or lodge with them in the said College, and for one Month longer: And for the second Offence, six Months longer; and for the third Offence, such Merchants and Servants shall be expelled, and turned out of the said College for ever.

III. Ordered, That every Member of the said College shall be constantly residing and dwelling within the said College; and shall not be wandering, and mispending their Time in publick and disorderly Houses, but shall employ themselves in Acts of Piety and Devotion: Nor shall absent themselves, without Leave, for twenty-four Hours, from the said College, unless by unavoidable Accident, or Necessity, under Pain of being expelled the College.

IV. Ordered, That all the Gentlemen of the said College be daily in Commons, in the Hall of the said College, unless prevented by Sicknes, or other such like Indisposition: And that their daily Allowance be, to each of them, a Pound of Meat, two Quarts of Beer, a Three-half-penny Loaf, besides Cheese and Butter: That the Time of Dining be twelve o'Clock; and of Supper, be six o'Clock. And in Case of Sicknes, (instead of such their Allowance) there shall be provided for them, and sent to their Chambers, such other Provisions and Necessaries as shall be convenient and necessary for them in their Condition: And that no Gentleman of the said College shall send, or carry away any Bread, Beer, or Victuals from Table at Dinner-Time; nor shall sit down to, or rise from Table, before Grace be said.

V. Ordered, Upon the several and respective Deaths, Departure or Expulsions of every one of the Merchants of the said College, that their and every of their Places shall remain and continue vacant, and undisposed of twelve Months, next after the Quarter-Day then next ensuing; and their and every of their yearly Allowances, during such Vacancies, shall be applied and disposed of, for and toward the Repair and Support of the said College.

VI. Ordered, that the College-Gates be kept locked at Dinner and Supper Times; and that the Gates of the said College be locked at nine o'Clock every Night in the Summer, and at eight in the Winter; and that the Key be carried and delivered to the Chaplain, to be kept by him in his Lodging; and if any Member of the said College be out after the Gates are locked up, he shall forfeit his next three Days Commons for every such his Offence.

VII. Ordered, That the Chaplain of the said College be a devout, pious, sober, modest, good Man, in Holy Orders; and that he do read Divine Service according to the now Usage of the Church of England, twice every Week-Day in the Year, in the Chapel of the said College, at the Hours of eleven in the Morning, and at three in the Afternoon; and do read Prayers, and preach twice every Sunday in the Summer-Time, and so likewise in the Winter, unless he shall be dispensed with by the Founder, or Foundress, or Visitors for the Time being, or the major Part of them, to preach but once a Day, during any Part of the two Winter Quarters: And during such Dispensation, the said Chaplain shall expound the Scriptures, and instruct the Congregation in Matters of Faith, and the Doctrine of the Church.

AND it is farther ordered, That the Chaplain shall be always resident and abiding in the said College, and not absent himself above one single Day at one Time, and that but very seldom, without Leave of the Founder, or Foundress, or Visitors, or the major Part of them, for the Time being, and then the Chaplain to find one to do his Duty in every Thing there, according to his Place and Function in the said College, during his Absence; and also that the Chaplain do administer the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at least four Times in the Year; that is to say, at Christmas, Easter, Whitsuntide, and some Sunday or Lord's-Day, after Trinity, at the Discretion of the Chaplain; and that he do visit and pray with the Sick within the said College, and likewise exhort and prepare all the Members of the said College to be worthy Partakers of the Holy Communion.

VIII. Ordered, That the Clerk of the Chapel do every Day ring the Bell, to call the Members to Prayers, some convenient Time before the Chaplain do begin, and do attend in the Chapel in his Gown, and duly make his Responses, and do his Duty there, and keep the Pews and Chapel clean and neat, upon Pain of the Forfeiture of 9 s. and 4 d. for every such Omission, or Offence, to be deducted out of his yearly Salary and Wages.

IX. Ordered, That all the Merchants belonging to the said College, do attend and come to Prayers, Morning and Afternoon, in the Chapel of the said College, in their Gowns, with their Common-Prayer Books; and do behave themselves there reverently, with great Piety and Devotion, and duly make their Responses, upon Pain of forfeiting their next three Days Commons, for every Breach of this Order. And do likewise receive the Holy Sacrament in the said Chapel, at least four Times every Year, upon Pain of forfeiting 10 Days Commons, for every such their Default and Neglect, without a reasonable Cause to the contrary, to be allowed by the Founder, or Foundress, or Visitors for the Time being, or the major Part of them: And also, That they be constant, attending upon such Evening Lectures or Expositions, as the Chaplain shall use in the publick Hall, for their Benefit and Instruction.

X. Ordered, That all Disputes and Differences arising between the Members of the said College, or any of them, shall be referred to the Determination of the Chaplain of the said College, if he can compose and end the same, if not to the absolute Determination of the Founder, or Foundress, or the Visitors for the Time being, or the major Part of them, or of such other Person or Persons as they shall appoint to determine the same.

XI. Ordered, That every Monday Noon, immediately after Dinner, one of the Merchants belonging to the said College, shall be chosen, by the Majority of Voices then present, to be Caterer that Week, who being so chosen shall go to Market, and see the Meat weighed, and brought into the College, and that their due Proportion of Meat be delivered by the Butcher to the Cook, and that all other Provisions and Necessaries be provided, and sent in for the Use of the said College. And if any one, so chosen, shall refuse or neglect to do his Duty therein, without reasonable Cause shewn to the contrary, during that Week he shall be so chosen, he shall forfeit his Commons that Week, for such his Default, or Neglect.

XII. Ordered, That no Servant shall cut, take, or carry away, any Commons from Table, before the Merchants have dined, or supp'd, or cut off any Meat before it be brought to Table, upon Forfeiture of a Week's Commons for every such Offence.

XIII. Ordered, That all the Members of the said College do demean and behave themselves civilly and orderly in the said College, and do not give any ill Language, or cause any Strife or Disturbance between any of their Fellows, nor intermeddle with any Business of the College, contrary, contrary to the Intent of these Orders: And if any of them shall accidentally swear an Oath, or be drunk, or commit any other immoral Act, for which, he, or they, shall not be expelled then, they and every of them, so offending, shall forfeit his and their next Day's Commons, for such their Offence.

XIV. Ordered, That if any of the Members of the said College shall lie out of the said College without Leave from the Founder, Foundress, or Visitors of the said College, for the Time being, or the major Part of them, that every such Member of the said College shall forfeit one Week's Commons for every Night he shall so lie out, without Leave, or reasonable Cause shewn for his so doing, to be allowed of by the Founder, Foundress, or Visitors, or the major Part of them, for the Time being.

XV. Ordered, That an Account in Writing, every first Monday in every Month, be delivered by the Butler, to the Steward, or Receiver of the said College, of the Commons of all absent Members, with or without Leave, and also of all the forfeited Commons, within that Month then last past; and that the Steward or Receiver, do keep a distinct Account thereof, entered into his Book; and take Care that the same be employed and disposed of, for and towards the Maintenance and Improvement of the Garden of the said College.

XVI. Order'd, That the Chaplain do take Notice of, and endeavour to regulate and prevent all Misunderstandings, and Disorders, within the said College by visiting the Hall and Chambers of the Gentlemen, and others of the said College, as oft as Occasion shall require.

XVII. Ordered, That all the Members of the said College do observe, and strictly keep and obey all these Orders, and all such other Orders as from Time to Time shall be made by the Founder, Foundress, or Visitors, or the major Part of them, for the Time being, for the Well-governing, Ordering, and Management of the said College.

The present TRUSTEES, or VISITORS, are

Sir John Locke,
Philip Papillion, Esq;
Richard Chiswell, Esq;
Thomas Cooke, Esq;
——— Foley, Esq;
Richard Faulconer, Esq; and
One Vacancy.

THE Treasurer is Joseph Brand, of the Inner-Temple, Esq;

THE Chaplain, the Rev. Mr. John Plymley.

THERE are Servants in the House, a Clerk, a Cook, a Butler, and four Nurses.

DEPTFORD HOSPITAL.

NEARER to LONDON, at Deptford; is another Foundation, belonging to the Corporation of the Trinity-House; by whom it was built, but at different Times, and in two Places, not quite contiguous. The old Part, which contains 21 Houses, was built in the Year 1671, and the new in 1680, which contains 38 Houses. In these Alms-Houses 59 decayed Masters of Ships, or Pilots, or the Widows of such, are maintained by the said Corporation.

The Allowance to the Men is 20 s. a Month, and to the Women 16 s. In each of these Buildings one is chosen from among the Men to be Governor of the House, and has a small Matter extraordinary; but they are visited every Year, upon Trinity-Monday, by the Masters of the Trinity-House.

IN the new Part is a Square Garden, built on three Sides of it, with the 38 Houses before-mentioned; under the Gate-Way, leading into it, is a Stone with this Inscription:

DOMINO POTIORA.

Sir Richard Browne, of Sayes-Court in Deptford, Knight and Baronet, Elder Brother and Master, in the Year 1672, gave the Inheritance of the Land, on which these Alms-houses are built, after the Expiration of 28 Years, formerly leased.

IN the Garden is a Stone Statue, painted with divers Colours, standing on a Pedestal, on which is written the following Inscription:

To the Memory of Captain Richard Maples, who dying Commander of a Ship in the East-Indies in the Year 1680, left to the Trinity House the Value of 1300 l. with which Part of these Alms-Houses were built. The said Corporation caused this Statue to be erected Anno 1681.

OVER the Gate next the Road, is an Inscription, set up by Order of Sir Thomas Hardy, Master, in the Year 1731, signifying, that the Parish of Deptford, in Consideration of fifty-five Pounds, paid by the Corporation of the Trinity-House, in the Year 1693, indemnify'd the said Corporation for ever, from any farther Expence in Paving the Street before this Hospital.

IRONMONGERS HOSPITAL.

THIS is a handsome Brick Building, situated in Shoreditch Parish, on the East Side of the Road to Newington, said to have cost upwards of 12,000 l. out of a large Sum of Money left by Sir Robert Geffryes, in Trust to the Company of Ironmongers, for that Purpose, and to endow it: It consists of fourteen Houses, and a Chapel in the Middle; which last is adorned with a Triangular Pediment, and Stone Coins. In the Pediment is a large Clock-Dial; and under that, in a Nich, the Effigies of the Founder, at full Length, with this Inscription:

Sir Robert Geffryes, Knight, Alderman, and Lord Mayor of LONDON, in the Year 1686, died in February 1703, Founder of this Hospital, built in the Year 1713.

THE 14 Houses are eight in Front, viz. Four on each Side the Chapel, and three at each End, with Grass Plats, and Gravel Walks before them, and handsome Iron Gates next the Road. Every House is for four Persons, either Men or Women, who have each a Blue Gown, and 30 s. paid Quarterly, with six Sacks of Coals in the Winter.

THE Chaplain has likewise an Apartment in the House, with an annual Salary, who is to read Prayers daily to the poor People.

THE present Chaplain is the Reverend Mr. Sandford.

AND for the better Government of these that are, or shall be admitted to dwell in the said Alms-House, and enjoy the Benefits thereof, it was ordered and appointed, at a General Court, held by the said Company at their Hall, Nov. 17, 1715, That certain Rules and Orders to be put in Print, should be strictly observed by the said Alms-Folks, and divers Penalties annexed for Breach or Neglect of them, (even to Expulsion in some Cases) comprized in xxix Articles; which being so well contrived for the maintaining of Sobriety, Peace, good Order, mutual Help and Society, Religion and Virtue among them, may deserve to be here set down for good Example sake, and for the Direction of any other well-disposed Persons, that are, or shall be minded, to lay out their Christian Devotion and Charity that Way.

Imprimis, It is ordered, That upon the Death of any Person, that is, or shall be chose into the said Alms-House, to partake of the said Charity, there shall be at the next Quarterly Court, or at furthest at the second Quarterly Court, after the Death of the said Person, another Person chose in the Room of the said Person so deceased.

II. That any Relation of the said Benefactor, that is a proper Object, shall be preferred to any other Petitioner: And in Defect of any such Relation petitioning, it is ordered, That any Member, or their Widow, that have been Livery-men, or Freemen of the Company of Ironmongers, who is a proper Object, shall be preferred to any other Petitioner: But in Defect of any such petitioning, the greatest Object that shall petition, shall be chose without Favour or Affection.

III. That such Person be chose in for his, or her Life, he or she obeying and fulfilling all the following Orders, but be liable to be expelled, upon being guilty of such Crimes as are hereafter mentioned, to be punished with Expulsion.

IV. That it be a general Rule to be observed, that no Person shall be chose under 56 Years of Age (not to be dispensed with) unless upon some extraordinary Occasions.

V. That no Person chose, shall have the Use and Benefit of more than one Room, and Partition in the Cellar, which shall be assigned them by either of the Wardens.

VI. That if any Person chose be a married Man, it may be lawful for his Wife to cohabit with him, she observing and obeying all these Orders: But upon her Husband's Decease, his Widow is to relinquish the Alms-House, unless being qualify'd by her Age, she shall be elected herself.

VII. The Honour and Service of Almighty God being above all Things to be respected, it is ordered, That all abiding in the said Alms-House, Men and Women, being in Health, and well able to walk, shall every Lord's Day, and Days of publick Fast, or Thanksgiving, in the Year, go either to their Parish Church, or some other Place where Service to Almighty God is performed, and abide there to hear, attend, and perform Divine Worship; and for Neglect thereof, shall forfeit 4*d.* for every Offence, to be deducted out of the next Payment of their Pen- sions.

VIII. That if any of the said Alms-People shall use any Blasphemous Words, tending to the Dishonour of Almighty God, he or she, for the first Offence shall forfeit 6*d.* for the second Offence, 1*s.* and for the third Offence, shall be expelled the Alms-House for ever.

IX. That if any of the said Alms-People shall commit Adultry, Fornication, or such like Uncleaness, or shall steal within the House, or without, or usually beg in any Place without the House, or shall commonly frequent any House or Houses suspected of Lewdness, or admit or receive commonly to his or her Room, such Person, or Persons, which are, or have been infamous for lewd Lives, he or she so offending, and being duly proved, shall be expelled the Alms-House for ever.

X. That if any of the said Alms-People shall at any Time or Times, either within the House, or without, be drunk, he or she so offending (besides the Penalty of the Law in this Behalf provided) shall, for the first Offence, forfeit 4*d.* for the second 8*d.* for the third 1*s.* 4*d.* and for the fourth shall be expelled the House for ever.

XI. That none of the poor Alms-People shall give any railing, bitter, or uncharitable Speeches, or give any Stripes or Blows, to any of the Fellows, upon Forfeiture of a Month's Pay for the first Offence, and Expulsion for the second.

XII. That none but such as are of good Life and Conversation, certified by Certificates signed by known and reputable Persons, no common Swearers, known Adulterers, or Fornicators, no Thief, common Drunkards, Scolds, or unquiet Person, or Persons, shall be elected or continued in the said Alms-House.

XIII. That if any of the said Alms-People shall lye out of the same by Night, without Licence of the Master, or one of the Wardens, or some lawful Excuse to be approved of by them, for the first Offence shall forfeit out of their Pay, 4*d.* for the second Offence double, or repeating the same Offence above three Times in one Year shall be expelled.

XIV. That none of the said Alms-People shall harbour or lodge any Stranger, young Child, or Children, in his, or her Chamber; nor take any Woman to attend him or her, but in Time of Sickness only, and no other but his or her Sister, Daughter, or some near Relation, or some Woman of good Conversation, not under 50 Years of Age, on Pain to lose or forfeit, for every Night any Person be harboured, or lodged, contrary to this Order, 5*s.* to be stopped out of their Pension.

XV. That none of the Poor of the said Alms-House shall make any Alteration in their Room, under Colour, to amend their Lodging; on any Pretence whatsoever, without Direction of the Master, or Wardens, upon Pain of Expulsion.

XVI. That none of the Alms-People shall spoil or break down any Walls, or Fences, or Trees planted, or to be planted, upon Penalty to forfeit 1*s.* besides to make good the same at their own Charge.

XVII. That none of the said Alms-People shall cast, or lay any Rubbish, Dust, or any noisome Thing whatsoever, within any Part of the said Alms-House, or any Ditch adjoining thereto, or any the Walks or Passages thereof, to the Annoyance of any of their Fellows, but shall keep their Rooms, and the Walks, Ways, and Passages before their Doors, sweet and clean, or for every Offence herein to forfeit 4*d.*

XVIII. That none of the Alms-People shall sell, or vend, any Strong Beer, Ale, Brandy, Spirits, or other Liquors, either publicly, or privately, upon Pain of Expulsion.

XIX. That none of the said Alms-People shall teach School, or exercise any Trade, or Occupation, that may be prejudicial, or dangerous to the Building, or any Annoyance, or Disturbance to their Fellows, or that shall require the Assistance of any other Person, on Forfeiture of 12*d.* per Week, so long as they transgress.

XX. That all Persons belonging to the said Alms-House, shall return, and come to their said several Lodgings (except licensed by the Master, or one of the Wardens, to be absent for some short Time) between the first Day of October, to the first Day of March yearly; at, or before, the Hour of seven o'Clock in the Evening, of those Days; and between the first Day of March, and the first Day of October, yearly, at, or before, the Hour of nine o'Clock, upon Forfeit of 4*d.* for the first Offence; for the second 8*d.*; for the third 12*d.* and for the fourth to be expelled.

XXI. That once every Quarter, all the Offences, that are punishable by Forfeitures, shall be heard and decided, and fined by the Master, or one of the Wardens of the Company of Ironmongers;

gers; assisted by any three, or more, of the Livery, in hearing of as many of the Alms-People, as can be got together for Example sake.

XXII. That all the Offences aforesaid, that are punishable by Expulsion, shall be heard and judged by the Master, Wardens, and Livery, in a General Court assembled at their Hall: And whosoever, by the Majority of the said Court, shall be ordered to be expelled, shall never after be capable to be chose again, or be admitted into the said Alms-House; but a Padlock shall be put upon their Door, and their Goods delivered to them, or placed in the Cellar under the Great Room, till they fetch them away: And any of the said Alms-People that shall lodge them afterwards in their Chamber, shall forfeit 12 d. for every Night they shall entertain them.

XXIII. That if any of the said Alms-People die, their Gowns shall be for the Benefit of such Person as shall be chose in their Room, upon Penalty of losing what Pension shall be due at the Time of their Decease.

XXIV. That if any of the said Alms-People die, the Charge of their Burial shall be defrayed by their Friends and Relations, before they move their Goods.

XXV. That none of the Alms-People shall refuse to be aiding and assisting to one another; and in case of Sickness, 'tis expected they shall, by Turns, attend, assist, and be helpful to each other; and live in Peace and Unity one with another: And which of them shall refuse their good Offices to another in Sickness, shall, upon good Proof, be expelled the House.

XXVI. That a proper Person shall be appointed by the said Company at a Court, to keep the Key of the Gates from Time to Time, at their Pleasure; who shall be required to give a just and impartial Account of all Offences committed against any of the Orders herein contained.

XXVII. That the Forfeitures be divided into three Parts; one to the Informer, the other two Parts to be put into a common Box, and be divided every Christmas amongst the Poor of the said Alms-House, at the Discretion of the Master and Wardens, or any two of them.

XXVIII. That these Orders being fairly printed, shall be hung up in the great Room, and read publickly there, in the Presence of the Alms-People, twice in the Year, viz. on, or near, the 25th of March, and 29th of September; and that another Copy be kept by the Clerk of the Ironmongers Company, to have Recourse to upon Occasion.

XXIX. That such farther Orders as the Company shall make, shall be binding.

THESE are the chief Colleges and Hospitals in and near the City; but there are divers other, of less Note, in the Cities of LONDON and Westminster, the Borough of Southwark, and Parts adjacent, which shall be treated of in the Wards, or Parishes, where they stand.

CHAP. XV.

Of the antient Customs and Manners in Trade, House-keeping, and Recreations of the Citizens of LONDON.

FITZ-STEPHEN, a Writer in the "Reign of Henry II, saith, Men of all Trades, Sellers of all Sorts of Wares, Labourers in every Work, every Morning are in their distinct and several Places.

FURTHERMORE, in LONDON, upon the River Side, between the Wine in Ships, and the Wine to be sold in Taverns, is a common Cookery, or Cooks Row; where daily, for the Season of the Year, Men might have Meat, roast, sod, or fryed: Fish, Flesh, Fowls, fit for Rich and Poor.

IF any come suddenly to any Citizen from afar, weary, and not willing to tarry till the Meat be bought and dressed; while the Servant bringeth Water for his Master's Hands, and fetcheth Bread, he shall have immediately (from the River Side) all Viands whatsoever he desireth.

WHAT Multitude soever, either of Soldiers, or Strangers, do come to the City, whatsoever Hour, Day or Night, according to their Pleasures, may refresh themselves. And they which delight in Delicateness, may be satisfied with as delicate Dishes there, as may be found elsewhere.

AND this Cooks Row is very necessary to the City: And, according to Plato and Giorgio, next to Physick, is the Office of Cooks, as Part of a City.

WITHOUT one of the Gates is a smooth (or Smethe) Field, both in Name and Deed; where every Friday, unless it be a solemn bidden Holiday, is a noble Shew of Horses to be sold. Earls, Barons, Knights and Citizens, repair thither to see, or to buy. There may you of Pleasure see Amblers pacing it delicately: There may you see Trotters, fit for Men of Arms, setting more hardly: There may you have notable young Horses, not yet broken; may you have strong Steeds, well-limbed Geldings, which the Buyers do especially regard for Pace and Swiftmess. The Boys which ride these Horses, sometime two, sometime three, do run Races for Wagers, with a Desire of Praise, or Hope of Victory.

IN another Part of that Field are to be sold all Implements of Husbandry, as also fat Swine, Milch Kine, Sheep and Oxen. There stand also Mares and Horses, fit for Ploughs and Teams, with their young Colts by them.

AT this City, Merchant Strangers of all Nations had their Keys and Wharfs: The Arabians sent Gold; the Sabeans, Spice and Frankincense; the Scythians, Armour; Babylon, Oil; India, Purple Garments; Egypt, Precious Stones; Norway and Russia, Ambergrease and Sables; and the Frenchmen, Wine.

ACCORDING to the Truth of Chronicles, this City is antienter than Rome; built by the antient Trojans, and by Brute, before that was built by Romulus and Remus; and useth the antient Customs of Rome.

THIS City, even as Rome, is divided into Wards: It hath yearly Sheriffs, instead of Consuls: It hath the Dignity of Senators, in Aldermen: It hath Under-Officers, Common-Sewers, and Conduits in Streets: According to the Quality of Causes, it hath General Courts and Assemblies upon appointed Days.

I do not think that there is any City, wherein are better Customs, in frequenting the Churches, in serving God, in keeping Holydays, in giving Alms, in entertaining Strangers, Merchants of all Nations traded at this City, and had their several Keys and Wharfs.

This City divided into Wards, more than 400 Years since; and also had then both Aldermen and Sheriffs. Customs of London.

Smithfield a plain smooth Ground, so called from Smethe, or Smethe-Market for Horses and other Cattle.

“gers, in solemnizing Marriages, in furnishing “Banquets, celebrating Funerals, and burying “dead Bodies.

“THE only Plagues of LONDON, are “immoderate Quaffing among the foolish Sort,
“and often Casualties by Fire.

“MOST Part of the Bishops, Abbots, and “Great Lords of the Land, have Houses there, “whereunto they resort, and bestow much, when “they are called to Parliament by the King, or “to Synods by their Metropolitan, or otherwise
“by their private Business.

THUS far Fitz-Stephen, as to the State of these Things in his Time. Whereunto may be added the present; by comparing whereof, the Alteration will easily appear.

STOW says, in his Time, Men of Trades, and Sellers of Wares in this City have oftentimes since changed their Places as they have found their best Advantage. For whereas Mercers and Haberdashers, saith he, used wholly then to keep their Shops in West-cheap; of later Time, they held them on London-Bridge.

THE Goldsmiths of Gutherson's-Lane, and the Old Exchange, are now (for the most Part) removed into the South Side of West-cheap.

THE Pepperers and Grocers of Soper's-Lane, are now in Bucklersbury, and other Places dispersed.

THE Drapers of Lombard-Street, and of Cornhill, are seated in Candlewick-Street, and Watling-Street.

THE Skinners from St. Mary Pellipers, or at the Axe, into Budge-Row and Walbrook.

THE Stock Fishmongers in Thames-Street, *Wet
Fishmongers* in Knight-Rider's-Street and Bridge-Street.

THE Ironmongers of Ironmonger-Lane and Old-Jury, into Thames-Street.

THE Vintners, from the Vinetree, into divers Places.

BUT the Brewers (for the most Part) remain near to the Friendly Water of Thames.

THE Butchers, in East-cheap, and St. Nicholas Shambles, and the Stocks-Market.

THE Hosiers (of old Time) in Hosier-Lane, near unto Smithfield, are since removed into Cord-wainers-Street, the upper Part thereof by Bow-Church, and last of all into Burchover's-Lane by Cornhill.

THE Shoemakers and Curriers of *Cordwainers-
Street*, removed, the one to St. Martin's-Le-Grand, the other to London-Wall, near to Moorgate.

THE Founders remain by themselves in Lothbury.

THE Cooks, or Pastelers (for the more Part) in Thames-Street, the others dispersed into divers Parts.

THE Poulterers of late, removed out of the Poultry, betwixt the Stocks, and the great Conduit in Cheap, into Grass-Street, and St. Nicholas Shambles.

Bowyers, from Bowyer-Row, by Ludgate, into divers Parts, and almost worn out with the Fletch-ers.

THE Pater-Noster Bead-Makers, and Text-Writers, are gone out of Pater-Noster-Row, and are called Stationers of Paul's Church-Yard.

THE Patten-Makers of *St. Margaret-Pattens-
Lane*, clean worn out.

Labourers, every Work-Day, are to be found in Cheap, about Soper's-Lane End.

Horse-Courfers, and Sellers of Oxen, Sheep, Swine, and such like, remain in their old Market of Smithfield, &c.

THAT Merchants of all Nations had their Keys and Wharfs at this City, whereunto they brought their Merchandizes, before and in the Reign of Henry II, Fitz-Sephen wrote (of his own Knowledge) to be true, though for the Antiquity of the City he took the common Opinion.

ALSO that this City was (in his Time and before) divided into Wards, had yearly, Sheriffs and Aldermen, General Courts, and Assemblies, and such like Notes by him set down, in Commendation of the Citizens (whereof there is no Question) he wrote likewise of his own Experience, as being born and brought up amongst them.

AND to confirm his Opinion, concerning Merchandizes, then hither transported, whereof haply may be some Argument, Thomas Clifford (before Fitz-Stephen's Time) writing of King
Edward the Confessor, saith to this Effect, “King “Edward intending to make his Sepulchre at “Westminster, for that it was near to the famous “City of LONDON, and the River Thames;
“which brought in all Kinds of Merchandizes
“from all Parts of the World, &c.

AND William of Malsbury, that lived in the Reigns of William I, and II, Henry I, and King
Stephen, calleth this a Noble City, full of wealthy Citizens, frequented with the Trade of Merchandizes from all Parts of the World.

IT is said also in divers Records, That (in old Times) no Wood was stowed or harboured in this City, but all was presently sold in the Ships, except by Licence purchased of the Sheriffs, till of more later Time, to wit, in the Year 1236,
Andrew Bokerell, being Mayor, by Assent of the Principal Citizens, the Merchants of Amiens,
Nele, and Corby, purchased Letters, ensealed with the Common Seal of the City, That they;
when they come, might harbour their Woods,
and, therefore, should give the Mayor, every Year, 50 Marks Sterling. And the same Year they gave 100 l. toward conveying of Water from Tyburn to this City.

ALSO the Merchants of Normandy made Fine for Licence to harbour their Woods, till it was otherwise provided; in the Year 1263, Thomas Fitz-Thomas, being Mayor, &c. which proveth, That then, as before, they were here, among other Nations, privileged.

IT followeth, in Fitz-Stephen, That the Plagues of LONDON (in that Time) were immoderate Quaffing among Fools, and often Casualties by Fire.

AS for Prevention of Casualties by Fire, the Houses in this City being then builded all of Timber, and covered with Thatch of Straw or Reed, it was long since thought good Policy in our Fore-Fathers, wisely to provide, namely, in the Year of Christ 1189, the first Year of Richard I, Henry Fitz-Alwin, being then Mayor,
That all Men in this City should build their Houses of Stone, up to a certain Height, and to cover them with Slate; or Brick, or Tile, since which Time there hath not happened the like often consuming Fires in this City, as before.

OF old Time, Coaches were not known in this Island, but Chariots, or Whirlcotes, then so called, and they only used by Princes, or Men of great Estates, such as had their Footmen about them: And it is said, That Richard II, being threatened by the Rebels of Kent, rode from the Tower of LONDON to the Mile's-End, and with him his Mother, because she was sick and weak, in a Whirlcote, the Earls of Buckingham, Kent, Warwick, and Oxford, Sir
Thomas Percie, Sir Robert Knowles, the Mayor of LONDON, Sir Aubery de Vere, that bare the King's Sword; with other Knights and Esquires, attending on Horseback. But in the Year next following, the said Richard took to Wife, Anne, Daughter to the King of Bohemia, who first brought hither the Riding upon Side-Saddles,

Coaches not known in England.

Riding upon Side-Saddles
first used in England.

Saddles, and so was the Riding in those Whirligigues and Chariots forsaken, except at Coronations, and such like Spectacles.

LAST of all, the same Author, in this Chapter, hath these Words, Most Part of the Bishops, Abbots, and great Lords of the Land, as if they were Citizens and Freemen of LONDON, had many fair Houses to resort unto, and many rich and wealthy Gentlemen spent their Money there.

Noblemens Houses in the City of LON-DON.

To mention here a few of these Noblemens Houses, and the Street where they stood. In the Depositions in the great Cause of Arms between Reginald, Lord Grey of Ruthyn, and Sir Edward Hastings, in the Time of Henry IV, it appears that John, the last Earl of Pembroke, who died at Woodstock, had a House, and lived in LONDON, in the Parish of ——— just by the Priory of St. Helens, and John, his Father, Earl of Pembroke, in a House in the Parish of St. Mary Attehill (i. e. St. Mary Hill) and Reginald, Lord Grey of Ruthyn, his Mansion-House was in the Parish of St. Andrew, by East-cheap, in the 10th Year of that King: And William Beauchamp had a House and Chapel by Pater-Noster-Row, LONDON; and in the Time of Richard II. Sir Harry Percy had a House in Woodstreet, of that Spaciousness, that he was able there to entertain the King, two Dukes of Lancaster and York, two Earls, Earl Marshal, and his Father, the Earl of Northumberland, and divers others.

AND in another Place, he hath these Words: “ Every Sunday in Lent, a fresh Company of young Men come into the Fields on Horseback, and the best Horsemen conduct the rest. Then march forth the Citizens Sons, and other young Men, with disarmed Launces and Shields, and practice Feats of War. Many Courtiers likewise, and Attendants upon Noblemen, repair to this Exercise; and whilst the Hope of Victory doth inflame their Minds, they do shew good Proof, how serviceable they would be in Martial Affairs, &c.” Again, he saith, “ This City, in the troublesome Time of King Stephen, shewed at a Muster 20,000 armed Horsemen, and 40,000 Footmen, serviceable for the Wars, &c.”

Ancient House-Keeping in LONDON.

As to the House-Keeping in old Times, Stow gives an Account, made by Henry Leicester, Cofferer to Thomas Earl of Lancaster, of one Year's Expence in the said Earl's House, from the Day next after Michaelmas, in the seventh Year of Edward II. to the Michaelmas-Day, in the Year following; which amounted to 7957*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Half-penny, a very great Sum in those Days, as may be imagined by the low Prices, every Article, in this prodigious Account, is rated at.

THUS much for the Earl of Lancaster.

IN the 14th of the same Edward II, Hugh Spencer the Elder, condemned by the Commons, was banished the Realm. At which Time it was found by Inquisition, that the said Spencer had in sundry Shires 59 Manors: He had 28000 Sheep, 1000 Oxen and Steers, 1200 Kine with their Calves, 40 Mares with their Colts, 160 Drawing Horses, 2000 Hogs, 300 Bullocks, 40 Tons of Wine, 600 Bacons, 80 Carcasses of Martilmas Beef, 600 Muttons in Larder, 10 Tons of Cyder. His Armour, Plate, Jewels, and ready Money, better than 10,000*l.* 36 Sacks of Wool, and a Library of Books. Thus much the Record.

Robert Fabian saith, in a Manuscript Stow had read, that in the 36th of Henry VI. the greater Estates of the Realm being called to LONDON,

THE Earl of Salisbury came up to LONDON with 500 Men on Horseback, and was lodged in the Herber.

Richard Duke of York, with 400 Men, lodged at Baynard's Castle.

THE Dukes of Excester and Somerset with 800 Men.

THE Earl of Northumberland, the Lord Egremont, and the Lord Clifford, with 1500 Men.

Richard Nevell, Earl of Warwick, with 600 Men, all in red Jackets, embroidered with ragged Staves before and behind, were all lodged in Warwick-Lane: In whose House there was oftentimes six Oxen eaten at a Breakfast; and every Tavern was full of his Meat: For he that had any Acquaintance in that House, might have there so much of sodden and roast Meat, as he could prick and carry upon a long Dagger.

Richard Redman, Bishop of Ely, Anno 1500, the 17th of Henry VII. besides his great Family, House-keeping, Alms-dish, and Relief to the Poor wheresoever he was lodged; in his travelling, when at his coming or going to or from any Town, the Bells rung, and all the Poor would come together, to whom he gave every one Sixpence, at the least.

AND now, faith Stow, to note somewhat nearer our own Time, we must not omit in this Place Thomas Woolsey, Archbishop of York, and Cardinal: His Servants daily attending in his House were about 400, omitting his Servants Servants, which were many. He had in his Hall continually three Tables, or Boards, kept with three Principal Officers; to wit, a Steward, who was always a Priest; a Treasurer, a Knight; and a Comptroller, an Esquire: Also a Cofferer, being a Doctor; three Marshals; three Yeomen-Ushers in the Hall; besides two Grooms and Almoners: Then in the Hall-Kitchen, two Clerks of the Kitchen, a Clerk Comptroller, a Surveyor of the Dresser, a Clerk of the Spicery; all which together kept also a continual Mefs in the Hall. Also, in his Hall-Kitchen he had, of Master Cooks two, and of other Cooks, Labourers, and Children of the Kitchen, twelve Persons; four Yeomen of the ordinary Scullery, two Yeomen of the Pastry, with two other Pastelers under the Yeomen.

IN the Privy-Kitchen, he had a Master Cook, who went daily in Velvet and Sattin, with a Chain of Gold about his Neck, and two other Yeomen, and a Groom. In the Scalding-house, a Yeoman and two Grooms. In the Pantry, two Yeomen. In the Buttery, two Yeomen, two Grooms, and two Pages. In the Chandery, two Yeomen. In the Wafery, two Yeomen. In the Wardrobe of Beds, the Master of the Wardrobe, and ten other Persons attending. In the Laundry, a Yeoman, a Groom, thirty Pages, two Yeomen-Purveyors, and one Groom. In the Bake-house, a Yeoman and two Grooms. In the Wood-Yard, a Yeoman and a Groom. In the Barn, one. In the Garden, a Yeoman and two Grooms: A Yeoman of his Stage; a Master of his Horse; a Clerk of the Stable; a Yeoman of the same; the Saddler; the Farrier; a Yeoman of his Chariot; a Sumpterman; a Yeoman of his Stirrup; a Muleter, and sixteen Grooms of his Stable; every one of them keeping four Geldings; Porters at his Gate; two Yeomen, and two Grooms: In the Armoury, a Yeoman and a Groom.

IN his Chapel he had a Dean, a great Divine, and a Man of excellent Learning; a Sub-dean, a Repeater of the Choir, a Gospeller, a Pistler; of singing Priests, ten; a Master of the Children; twelve Seculars, being singing Men of the Chapel; ten singing Children, with a Servant to attend upon the Children. In the Revelry, a Yeoman and two Grooms, over and beside divers Retainers, that came thither at principal Feasts.

FOR the Furniture of his Chapel, it exceedeth my Capacity to declare, or to speak of the Number of costly Ornaments and rich Jewels that were used in the same continually. There hath been seen in Procèssion about the Hall, four and forty very rich Copes worn, all of one Suit, besides the rich Crosses and Candlesticks, and other Ornaments belonging to the Furnishment of the same. He had two Cross-Bearers, and two Pillar-Bearers in his great Chamber; and in his Privy-Chambers these Persons; first, The Chief Chamberlain and Vice Chamberlain: Of Gentlemen Ushers (beside one in his Privy Chamber) he had twelve daily Waiters; and of Gentlemen Waiters, in his Privy Chamber, he had six; of Lords nine or ten, who had (each of them) two Men allowed to attend upon them, except the Earl of Derby, who always was allowed five Men. Then had he of Gentlemen Cup-bearers, Carvers, Sewers, both of the Privy Chamber, and of the great Chamber, with Gentlemen (daily Waiters there) 40 Persons: Of Yeomen-Ushers 6: Of Grooms in his Chamber 8: Of Yeomen in his Chamber 45 daily. He had also Alms-Men, sometime more in Number than at other times.

THERE was attending on his Table, daily, of Doctors and Chaplains (besides them of his Chapel) 16: A Clerk of his Closet, two Secretaries, two Clerks of his Signet, and four Counsellors learned in the Laws. And forasmuch as it was necessary to have divers Officers of Chancery to attend upon him; that is to say, the Clerk of the Crown, a Riding Clerk, a Clerk of the Hamper, and a Clerk of the Wax; then a Clerk of the Check, as well upon the Chaplains, as on the Yeomen of his Chamber; he gave Allowance to them all. He had also four Footmen, who were cloathed in rich running Coats, whensoever he rode on a Journey. Then had he a Herald at Arms, a Serjeant at Arms, a Physician, an Apothecary, four Minstrels, a Keeper of his Tents, an Armourer, an Instructor of his Wards, two Yeomen of his Wardrobe and Robes, and a Keeper of his Chamber, continually in the Court.

HE had also in his House, the Surveyor of York, and a Clerk of the Green Cloth. All these were daily attending, down-lying and up-rising, and at Meals. He kept in his great Chamber, a continual Table for the Chamberers and Gentlemen Officers; having with them a Mefs of young Lords, and another of Gentlemen. And besides all these, there was not an Officer, Gentleman, or other Person of worth, but was allowed in the House, some three, some two, and all other one at least, which amounted to a great Number of Persons; besides Retainers, Suitors, and who most commonly dined in his Hall.

Nicholas West, Bishop of Ely, in the Year 1532, kept continually in his House a hundred Servants, giving to the one half of them 53 s. 4 d. a-piece yearly; to the other half, each 40 s. a-piece; to every one for his Winter Gown, four Yards of Broad Cloth, and for his Summer Coat three Yards and an half. He daily gave at his Gates, besides Bread and Drink, warm Meat to two hundred poor People.

THE House-keeping of Edward Earl of Derby is not to be forgotten, who had 220 Men in Check Rolls; his feeding aged Persons twice every Day, 60 and odd, besides all Comers thrice a Week, appointed for his Dealing Days, and every Good Friday 2700 with Meat, Drink, and Money.

Thomas Audley, Lord Chancellor, his Family of Gentlemen before him, in Coats garded with Velvet, and Chains of Gold; his Yeomen after him, in the same Livery not garded.

William Powlet (or Pawlet) Lord Great Master, Marquis of Winchester, kept the like Number of Gentlemen and Yeomen, in a Livery of Reading Tawny; and great Relief at his Gate.

L 11

Thomas

Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Essex, kept the like, or greater Number, in a Livery of grey Marble, &c. the Gentlemen garded with Velvet, the Yeomen with the same Cloth.

THESE, as all other of those Times, gave great Relief to the Poor: And Stow says, he had seen in that declining Time of Charity, as he calls it, at the Lord Cromwell's Gate at LONDON, more than 200 Persons served twice every Day with Bread, Meat, and Drink sufficient.

Edward, Duke of Somerset, was not inferior in keeping a Number of tall Gentlemen and Yeomen, though his House was then in Building, and most of his Men were lodged Abroad.

THE Earl of Oxford, in those Times, was wont to ride into this City, and so to his House by London-Stone, with fourscore Gentlemen, in a Livery of Reading Tawny, and Chains of Gold about their Necks, before him, and one hundred tall Yeomen, in the like Livery to follow him, without Chains, but all having his Cognizance of the blue Boar embroidered on their Left Shoulder.

THESE, and all other Men of Honour and Worship, then lodging in this City, or within the Liberties thereof, did, without grudging, bear their Part of Charges with the Citizens, according to the Value of their Estates, without which those Masters of old Time could not have been so great.

Of Charitable ALMS in Old Time given.

THESE Noblemen before-mentioned, observed that antient and charitable Custom of liberal Relief of the Poor at their Gates: As all Prelates, Noblemen, or Men of Honour and Worship, their Predecessors, had done before them, whereof venerable Bede writeth, That Prelates of his Time, having, peradventure, but wooden Churches, had (notwithstanding) on their Board at their Meals, one Alms-Dish, into which was carved some good Portion of Meat, out of every other Dish brought to their Table; all which was given to the Poor, besides the Fragments left, insomuch as in a hard Time, a poor Prelate wanting Victuals hath caused his Alms-Dish, being Silver, to be divided amongst the Poor, therewith to shift as they could, till GOD should send him better Store.

SUCH a Prelate was Ethelwald, Bishop of Winchester, in the Reign of King Edgar, about the Year of CHRIST 963: He, in a great Famine, sold away all the sacred Vessels of his Church, to relieve the almost-starved People, saying, That there was no Reason that the senseless Temples of GOD should abound in Riches, and the lively Temples of the HOLY GHOST to lack it.

Walter de Suffilde, Bishop of Norwich, was of the like Mind: About the Year 1245, in a Time of great Dearth, he sold all his Plate, and distributed it to the Poor, every Pennyworth.

Robert Winchelsea, Archbishop of Canterbury, about the Year 1093, besides the daily Fragments of his House, gave every Friday and Sunday, to every Beggar that came to his Gate, a Loaf of Bread sufficient for that Day, and there were usually every such Alms-Day, in Time of Dearth, to the Number of 5000, and otherwise 4000, at the least. Moreover, he used every Festival to give 150 Pence to so many poor People, and sent daily, Meat, Bread, and Drink, to such, as by Age, or Sickness, were not able to fetch his Alms, and did send Meat, Money, and Apparel, to such as he thought needed it.

IN 1171, Henry II. after his Return into England, did Penance for the Slaughtering of Thomas à Becket, by whom (a fore Dearth then increasing) ten Thousand Persons, from the first of April till new Corn was inned, were daily fed and sustained.

MORE is recorded, That in the Year 1236, the 20th of Henry III. William de Haverhill, the King's Treasurer, was commanded, that upon the Day of the Circumcision of our Lord, 6000 poor People should be fed at Westminster, for the State of the King, Queen, and their Children. The like Commandment, the said King Henry gave to Hugh Gyfford, and William Brown, that upon Friday next, after the Epiphany, they should cause to be fed, in the great Hall at Windfor, at a good Fire, all the poor and needy Children that could be found, and the King's Children being weighed and measured, their Weight and Measure, to be distributed for their good Estates: These few Examples, for Charity of Kings, may suffice.

IN the Reign of Edward III. Richard de Berry, Bishop of Durham, did weekly bestow, for Relief of the Poor, eight Quarters of Wheat, made into Bread, besides his Alms-Dish, Fragments of his House, and great Sums of Money, given to the Poor, when he travelled; and that these Alms-Dishes were as well used at the Tables of Noblemen, as of the Prelates, one Note may suffice.

IN the Year 1452, Richard Duke of York, then claiming the Crown, the Lord Rivers should have gone beyond Sea about the King's Business; but staying at Plymouth till his Money was spent, and then sending for more, the Duke of Somerset sent him the Image of St. George, in Silver and Gold, to be sold, with the Alms-Dish of the Duke of Glocester, which was also of great Price, for Coin they had none.

BUT to return to the House-Keeping in the City.

THE Expences of the Mayors and Sheriffs, and other publick Feasting in the City on solemn Days, were so great in former Times, that an Act of Common Council was made, 1 and 2 of Philip and Mary, for retrenching them, and other Charges in Attendants and Liveries; and these Expences continuing to our Times, it was reprinted Anno 1680, and recommended to the present Observation.

THE Preamble sets forth, the Reason that our antient wise Forefathers had many Times attempted the Redress and Amendment of the great Excess in Fare and other Things, in Mayors and Sheriffs Houses, viz. the Dearth of Victuals, and the Charges of these Offices, which were so huge, that almost all good Citizens fled and refused to serve in this Honourable City; only because of the great Excess, and chargeable Fare and Diet in the said Offices. Hence it was enacted, That no Mayor or Sheriff should have, at their Table, at Dinner or Supper, any more Courses than one; and no more sundry Dishes at one Course, upon the Sunday, or other Festival Day, being a Flesh Day, than six, whether the same be hot or cold. Every Holyday, being a Fish Day, seven Dishes of Meat, and not above: And every working Day, being a Flesh Day, five Dishes: And Fish Days, six Dishes of several Meats; provided; that neither Brawn, Collops with Eggs, Sallads, Pottage, Butter, Cheese, Eggs, Herrings, Sprats, Shrimps, or any Shell-fish, nor no Kind of Fruit unhashed, shall be accounted for any of the said Number of Dishes of Meat abovesaid: And that the Mayor may, at his Pleasure, have, at the said one Course, one Dish of Meat, either Fish or Flesh, more than before limited.

THAT neither the Serjeants nor other Officers of the Lord Mayor's House, nor the Serjeants Yeomen, or other Officers of the Sheriffs Houses, shall have more sundry Dishes, either at Dinner or Supper, upon the Flesh Days, than three, and upon Fish Days, than four.

NONE of the Aldermen, or Commoners of this City, to exceed or pass the Number of Dishes of Meat above limited, and appointed for the Sheriffs in their own proper Mansion-Houses, Brawn, Sallads, and other Things, as aforesaid, excepted.

NOR in any of the Halls, or Companies, at any Feast or Time; nor that there be any Swan, Crane, or Bustard, which were wont to be called Head-Pools, to be spent at any Feast, in any of the Halls, or Companies, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 40 s. toties quoties.

AND for the Ease of the aged Persons, and for the avoiding of great Uneasiness, that often happens at Feasts, a certain convenient Number of the Cloathing, (i. e. Livery) as well of the principal Crafts, as of the meaner Companies, which were accustomed to dine at the Mayor's Feast, shall be abated: And such a certain Number of Company, as hath been accustomed to dine at the said Feast, the Number to be yearly appointed by the Lord Mayor and his Brethren, the Aldermen, and they to be served but with one Course, and the same Number of Dishes, viz. of six or seven.

PROVIDED, That when any Ambassador, or any of the Privy Council shall be at the said Feast, then for their Board only to be amended and ordered by the Discretion of the said Mayor and Sheriffs: And no Banquet after Dinner, except Ippocras and Wafers, as in Time past hath been used.

THE Festival Days that were wont to be kept by the Mayor and Sheriffs in their Houses, that is to say, the three Holydays after Whitsunday, and the Dinners kept at Bartholomewtide, from henceforth to be left and laid down: And the Feasts of Christmas and Easter, with the Holydays next after, to be used and kept by the Mayor and Sheriffs, as heretofore hath been accustomed, and to keep the Order, as is aforesaid.

THE Sheriffs of this City from henceforth shall have but fourteen Serjeants, and fourteen Yeomen, a-piece. The Sheriffs to give to every of their Serjeants and Yeomen, two Crowns at the Time accustomed, and no other Liveries, and to every other Clerks of the Compters, and such as have been accustomed to have had Gowns at Christmas, to have only one Livery-Gown, and no more.

THAT from henceforth there shall be no Wyth fetch'd home at the Mayor's or Sheriffs Houses; neither shall they keep any Lord of Mis-rule in any of their Houses.

AND forasmuch as the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, shortly after their Entrance into their several Offices and Rooms, be yearly at great and exceeding Expences, by reason of the sumptuous Feasts, which they, for the Honour and Renown of the same, do keep in Guildhall, called The Mayor and Sheriffs Feasts, as to and for such Noblemen of the King's and Queen's most Honourable Council, Ambassadors of Foreign Realms and Potentates, as are bidden and desired to come unto the same, and also to and for the Aldermen and Worshipful Commons and Citizens; therefore, it was ordained and enacted, That the said Mayor and Sheriffs should yearly thenceforth, at the Time of the making their said Feasts, have, of the free Gift of the City, out of the Chamber of the common Store and Treasure of the City there, towards the Relief of their said Charge and Expence, the Sum of 100 l. This present Act to be a sufficient Warrant and Discharge unto the Chamberlain for the yearly Payment of the said 100 l.

THIS Act of Common-Council was printed again in the Year 1680, with Reasons added, as therein is shewed, that the fifth Part of the Charge of a Shrievalty is in Wine.

THE modern Feasts at this Time, viz. the Exchequer and Spittal Feasts, cost in Wine, the first 80 l. and the latter, above 300 l. to each Sheriff.

SPORTS and PASTIMES of Old Time used in the City

“ LET US come now (saith Fitz-Stephen) to the Sports and Pastimes, seeing it is fit that a City should not only be commodious and serious, but also merry and sportful. Whereupon, in the Seals of the Popes, until the Time of Pope Leo, on the one Side was St. Peter, fishing with a Key over him, reached, as it were, by the Hand of GOD out of Heaven, and about it this Verse:

Tu pro me Navem liquisti, suscipe Clavem.

You left the Ship for me, take you the Key.

“ AND on the other Side was a City, and this Inscription on it, Aurea Roma; likewise to the Praise of Augustus Caesar, and the City; in Respect of the Shews and Sports was written,

Nocte pluit tota redeunt Spectacula mane, &c.

All Night it Rains, and Shows

At Morrow-Tide return again;

And Caesar, with Almighty Jove,

Hath match'd an equal Reign.

“ BUT LONDON, for the Shews upon Theatres, and comical Pastimes, hath holy Plays, Representations of Miracles, which holy Confessors have wrought, or Representations of Torments, wherein the Constancy of Martyrs appeared.

“ EVERY Year also, on Shrove-Tuesday, (that we may begin with Childrens Sport, seeing we all have been Children) the School-Boys do bring Cocks of the Game to their Master, and all the Forenoon, they delight themselves in Cock-Fighting; after Dinner all the Youths go into the Fields to play at the Ball.

“ THE Scholars of every School have their Ball, or Bastion, in their Hands. The antient and wealthy Men of the City come forth on Horseback to see the Sport of the young Men, and to take Part of the Pleasure in beholding their Agility.

“ IN Easter Holydays, they fight Battles on the Water. A Shield is hanged on a Pole, fixed in the Midst of the Stream, a Boat is prepared without Oars, to be carried by Violence of the Water, and in the fore Part thereof standeth a young Man; ready to give Charge upon the Shield with his Lance. If so be he break his Lance against the Shield; and doth not fall, he is thought to have performed a worthy Deed. If so be without breaking his Lance, he runneth strongly against the Shield, down he falleth into the Water, for the Boat is violently forced with the Tide, but on each Side of the Shield ride two Boats, furnished with young Men, which recover him that falleth, as soon as they can. Upon the Bridge, Wharfs, and Houses, by the River-Side, stand great Numbers to see and laugh thereat.

“ IN the Holydays, all the Summer, the Youths are exercised in Leaping; Dancing; Shooting, Wrestling, Casting the Stone, and Practising their Shields. The Maidens trip with their Timbrels, and dance as long as they

“ they can well see. In Winter, every Holy-day before Dinner, the Boars prepared for Brawn, are set to fight, or else Bulls or Bears are baited.

“ WHEN the great Fen, or Moor, which wattereth the Walls of the City on the North Side, is frozen, many young Men play upon the Ice; some striding as wide as they may, do slide swiftly, others make themselves Seats of Ice, as great as Mill-stones: One sits down, many, Hand in Hand, do draw him, and one slipping on a sudden, all fall together. Some tie Bones to their Feet, and under their Heels, and shoving themselves by a little picked Staff, do slide as swiftly as a Bird flieth in the Air, or an Arrow out of a Cross-Bow. Sometimes two run together with Poles, and one hitting the other, either one or both do fall, not without Hurt, some break their Arms, some their Legs; but Youth (desirous of Glory) in this Sort, exerciseth itself against the Time of War. Many of the Citizens do delight themselves in Hawks and Hounds; for they have Liberty of Hunting in Middlesex, Hertfordshire, all Chiltern, and in Kent, to the Water of Cray. Thus far Fitz-Stephen of Sports.

THESE and the like Exercises, saith Stow, have continued till our Time; and of Stage Plays, it is to be read, that Anno 1391, there was one played by the Parish Clerks in LONDON, at the Skinner's-Well beside Smithfield, which continued three Days together, the King, Queen, and Nobles of the Realm being present: And of another played in the Year 1409, which lasted eight Days, and was of Matter from the Creation of the World. Whereat was present most Part of the Nobility and Gentry of England, &c.

OF later Time, instead of those Stage Plays, have been used Comedies, Tragedies, Interludes, and Histories, both true and feigned: For the acting whereof, certain publick Places, as the Theatre, the Curtein, &c. were erected. They played also in Inns, as the Cross-Keys, the Bull, the Globe, &c.

BUT, saith Mr. Strype, this which was once a Recreation, and used therefore now and then occasionally, afterwards, by Abuse, became a Trade and Calling, and so remains to this Day. In those former Days, ingenious Tradesmen and Gentlemens Servants would sometimes gather a Company of themselves, and learn Interludes, to expose Vice, or to represent the noble Actions of our Ancestors in former Times; and there they played at certain Festival Times, and in private Houses at Weddings, or other splendid Entertainments, for their own Profit, acted before such as were minded to divert themselves with them: But in Process of Time it became an Occupation, and many there were that followed it for a Livelihood; and which was worse, it became the Occasion of much Sin and Evil, great Multitudes of People, especially Youth, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, resorting to these Plays, and being commonly acted on Sundays and Festivals, the Churches were forsaken, and the Playhouses thronged; and great Disorders and Inconvenience, were found to ensue to the City thereby: It occasioned Frays and evil Practices of Incontinency. Great Inns were used for this Purpose, which had secret Chambers and Places, as well as open Stages and Galleries. Here Maids, especially Orphans, and good Citizens Children, under Age, were inveigled and allured to privy and unmeet Contracts: Here was published, unchaste, uncomely, and unshamefaced Speeches, and Doings. There was an unthrifty Waste of the Money of the Poor; sundry Robberies, by picking and cutting Purfes; uttering of popular and seditious Matter; many Corruptions of Youth, and other Enormities; besides sundry Slaughters and Maimings of the Queen's Subjects, by falling of Scaffolds, Frames, and Stages, and by Engines, Weapons, and Powder, used in the Plays. And in the Time of God's Visitation by the Plague, such Assemblies of the People in Throngs and Presses, were very dangerous for spreading the Infection.

THE Consideration of these Things occasioned the express Prohibition of Plays by the Queen and the Lord Mayor; and Sir John Hawes, Mayor, in the Year 1574, by an Act of Common Council, regulated these Plays, lest the People, upon God's gracious withdrawing of the Sicknes, should, with sudden forgetting of the Visitation, without Fear of God's Wrath, and without some Respect of those good and politick Means (as the Words of the Act ran) that he had ordained for the Preservation of the Commonwealth and People, in Health and good Order, return to the undue Use of such Enormities. Therefore, for the lawful, honest, comely Use of Plays, Pastimes and Recreations in good Sort permitted, by the Authority of the Common Council, it was enacted, I. That no Play should be openly played within the Liberty of the City, wherein should be uttered any Words, Examples, or Doings of any Unchastity, Sedition, or such like unfit and uncomely Matter, upon Pain of Imprisonment for the Space of 14 Days, and 5 l. for every such Offence. II. That no Innkeeper, Tavernkeeper, or other Person whatsoever, within the Liberties of the City, shall shew or play, or cause to be shewed or played within his House or Yard, any Play, which shall not first be perused and allowed by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen's Order. III. No Person shall suffer any Plays to be played in his House or Yard, whereof he then shall have Rule, but only such Persons, and in such Places, as, upon good Consideration, shall be thereunto permitted and allowed by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen. IV. Nor shall take and use any such Benefit or Advantage of such Permission, until such Person be bound to the Chamberlain of LONDON, in certain Sums, for the Keeping of good Order, and avoiding of Discords and Inconveniences. V. Neither shall use or exercise such Licence or Permission at any Time, in which the same shall be by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen restrained, or commanded to stay and cease, in any usual Time of Divine Service on the Sunday or Holyday, or receive any to that Purpose in Time of Service, to the same, upon Pain to forfeit for every Offence, 5 l. VI. And every Person to be licensed, shall, during the Time of such Continuance of such License, pay to the Use of the Poor in Hospitals of the City, or of the Poor visited with Sicknes, such Sums and Payments, as between the Mayor and Aldermen, and the Person to be licensed, shall be agreed upon; upon Pain that on the Want of every such Payment, such License shall be utterly void. VII. All Sums and Forfeitures to be incurred for any Offence against this Act, and all Forfeitures of Bonds shall be employed to the Relief of the Poor of the Hospitals, or of the Poor infected or diseased in the City: And the Chamberlain, in his own Name, shall have and recover the same, to the Purposes aforesaid, in the Court of the utter Chamber of Guildhall, LONDON, called The Mayor's Court.

PROVIDED, That this Act, shall not extend to Plays shew'd in private Houses, Lodgings of a Nobleman, Citizen, or Gentleman, which shall have the same then played in his Presence for the Festivity of any Marriage, Assembly of Friends, or other-like Cause, without publick, or common Collection of Money of the Auditors or Be-

BUT these good Laws and Orders, concerning Players, were not so well observed as they should have been: For after this, the lewd Matters of Plays increased; and in the Hands of them were found many Dangers, for Religion, the State, Honesty of Manners, Unthriftness of the Poor, for Infection, &c. And the Preachers daily exclaimed against them to the Mayor and Aldermen: Therefore in an Act of Common Council for Relief of the Poor, no Interludes were allowed in LONDON, in open Spectacle, but in private Houses only, at Marriages, or such like. And Suit was made, that they may be likewise banished from all Places adjoining to the City.

SINCE which Time, and upon the Ruin at Paris Garden, Suit was made to the Lords to banish Plays wholly in the Places near LONDON; and Letters were obtained of the Lords, to banish them on the Sabbath Days.

UPON these Orders against the Players, the Queen's Players petitioned the Lords of the Council, that whereas the Time of their Service drew very near, so that of Necessity they must needs have Exercise, to enable them the better for the same, and also for their better Help and Relief in their poor Livings, the Season of the Year being past to Play at any of the Houses without the City; their humble Petition was, That the Lords would vouchsafe to read a few Articles annexed to their Supplication; and in Consideration, the Matters contained the very Stay and State of their Living, to grant unto them the Confirmation of the same, or of as many as should be to their Honours good Liking, and withal their favourable Letters to the Lord Mayor, to permit them to exercise within the City; and that their Letters might contain some Orders to the Justices of Middlesex in their Behalf: But there were some that presently answered both their Supplication and Articles.

IN fine, the Business of the Players at last came to this Issue, and they were permitted on these Conditions; which were so many Remedies of their former Exorbitancies, viz. That they hold them content with playing in private Houses, at Weddings, &c. without publick Assemblies. That if it were thought good they should be tolerated, that then they be restrained to the Order in the Act of Common Council, made in the Time of Hawes, Mayor. That they play not openly till the whole Deaths have been, by twenty Days, under 50 a Week, nor longer than shall so continue. That no Plays be on the Sabbath. That no Plays be on Holydays, but after Evening Prayer; nor any received into the Auditory, till after Evening Prayer. That no Playing be in the Dark, nor continue any such Time, but as any of the Auditors may return to their Dwellings in LONDON before Sun-set, or at least before it be dark. That the Queen's Players only be tolerated; and of them their Number, and certain Names, to be notified in the Lord Treasurer's Letters to the Lord Mayor, and to the Justices of Middlesex and Surrey; and those her Players not to divide themselves into several Companies: And that for Breaking any of these Orders their Toleration cease.

Players often complained of, and restrained.

BUT all these Prescriptions were not sufficient to keep them within due Order; but their Plays, so abusive oftentimes of Virtue, or particular Persons, gave great Offence, and occasioned Disturbances: Whence they were now and then stopt and prohibited. So in the Year 1589, Hart, Mayor, Complaint was made of them to the Lord Treasurer, who signified the same to the Mayor; and he sent for all the Players in Town, (and there were some Companies of them; as one belonging to the Lord Admiral, and another to the Lord Strange) and charged them to forbear till further Order.

VOL. I.

THE Collections concerning the State of Stage-Plays in former Times, may not be amiss to be inserted here.

IN short, the Citizens of later Times seemed mightily to be delighted with Interludes and Plays, acted upon the Stage, representing visibly the Histories of former Times, or the Manners of Men, so that as before Time, Stage-Players used to go about the Country to Noblemens Houses, and at some set Times only, to act their Plays; now Houses were built, or bought, or hired, and set a-part only for that Purpose: And no less than seventeen common Play Houses were built in and about LONDON, within threescore Years, (as an Historian; that was alive about 1629, observed) the last whereof was built the said Year near White-Fryars; five Inns, or common Ofteries, were turned to Play Houses, one Cock-pit, St. Paul's Singing-School, the Globe on the Bank Side, the Fortune near Golden-Lane; one in Black-Fryars, one in White-Fryars, &c. besides the new built Bear-Garden, built as well for Plays as Fencers, Prizes and Bull-baiting. Before the Space of the said threescore Years, scarce any such Theatres were heard of; but in the Reign of King James I. Stage-Plays seem to have been greatly encouraged, for in this King's Reign, we find the following License granted to Players. See Rymer's Fœdera, Tom. xvi. p. 505.

JAMES, by the Grace of GOD, &c. To all Justices, Mayors, Sheriffs, Constables, Headboroughs, and other our Officers and loving Subjects, Greeting: Know ye, that we of our special Grace, certain Knowledge, and mere Motion, have Licensed and Authorised, and by these Presents, do License and Authorise these our Servants,

T H A T

THAT the Citizens of LONDON never greatly approved of these Stage-Plays, seems very probable, not only from their former Act of Common Council, but the following Petition, occasioned by a Play-House set up in their Neighbourhood, in the Year 1729, which was deliver'd to the King by Sir Richard Brocas, Lord Mayor of LONDON, and the Court of Aldermen, who went up to St. James's, for that Purpose, on Tuesday the 28th of April 1730.

To the KING's most Excellent Majesty.

The Humble Petition of the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of LONDON,

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT there having been lately erected, a Play-House in a Place called Goodman's-Fields, near adjoining to the said City, (but not within their Jurisdiction) and amidst great Numbers of Persons concerned in Trade, and particularly in the Silk, Woollen, and other Manufactures.

AND your Petitioners having Reason to be apprehensive of very many ill Consequences from the Continuance of the said Play-House, and the Representations performed in the same, more especially as affecting the Morals, lessening the Industry, and losing the Time of those Persons employ'd in the said Manufactures, which if not prevented, may prove to be of very great Prejudice to the Trade of this City.

AND as the Actors of the said Play-House pretend to act by Authority;

YOUR Petitioners most humbly apply to your Majesty (with a full Assurance of your most gracious Disposition towards the Trade, Welfare, and Prosperity of this City) to give such Orders for the suppressing an Evil of so dangerous a Consequence, as to your Majesty in your great Wisdom shall seem meet.

Signed by Order of the said Court.

JACKSON.

To this Petition, his Majesty was pleased to give a most gracious Answer, viz.

YOUR Care and Concern for the Trade of the City and the Welfare of your Fellow Citizens, is very much to be commended; and you may depend upon my complying with what you, with so much Reason and Justice, desire of me upon this Occasion.

HIS Majesty, or the Lord Chamberlain of his Household, in his Name, sent an Order a few Days after to forbid the Master of the House Playing any more till the King's Pleasure should be known; this Order was complied with for a short Time; but then the Play-House was open'd again, as if nothing of this had happened. In the mean Time he got the following Petition deliver'd to his Majesty, signed by a great Number of Inhabitants, near his Play-House; but I am afraid not of the wiser or graver Sort.

To the KING's most excellent Majesty.

The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of Part of the Parish of Whitechapel, Goodman's-Fields, &c.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT whereas the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of LONDON have presented an humble Petition to your Majesty, against a Play-House erected in Goodman's-Fields (which they allow not to be within their Jurisdiction) setting forth the Apprehensions they have of the ill Consequences of the said Play-House, as affecting the Morals, lessening the Industry, and losing the Time of those Persons who are employed in the Silk, Woollen, and other Manufactures, and the Prejudice it may be to the Trade of the City, we, your Majesty's Petitioners, the Inhabitants of Goodman's-Fields, and Parts adjacent, many of us concerned in the said Manufactures, do most humbly beg your Majesty's Permission for the Continuance of the said Play-House, not apprehending any such Dangers from it as are mentioned in the said Petition, especially while it is managed with that good Order, which has hitherto been observed by the present Governor of it, and all those acting under him; and being moreover of Opinion, that there is no other Diversion which our Children or Servants may give into, for Want of this, but is infinitely more capable of corrupting their Morals, lessening their Industry, and losing more of their Time, than that of Plays performed with good Decorum, which have been thought, by very wise Men in all Ages, and all civilized Nations, to produce Effects quite contrary to those alledged in the Lord Mayor's Petition.

AND that we may not be deprived of the most rational of all Entertainments at this End of the Town, which is not denied to be just and lawful at the other, is the humble Petition of, &c.

I shall not, in this Place, pretend to decide a Question, which has for a long Time employed the Pens of innumerable Writers, Whether Stage-Plays are capable of doing most Good or Hurt to Society? Or whether they ought to be tolerated?

Mr. Prynne, in his Histrionastix, wrote about 1633, positively affirms, they are the very Pumps we renounce in our Baptism. Sir Richard Baker, the Author of the English Chronicle, wrote a Piece called The Theatre vindicated, in which he undertook to answer Prynne; but the Stage never had a more formidable Enemy than Mr. Jeremy Collier, who fell upon it with its own Weapons, Wit and Humour, as well as a great deal of sound Reasoning; however, this Gentleman was answered by a Multitude of Writers, and some of them Men of the first Rank in the World of Letters. It was not long since attack'd again by Mr. Laws, in a Piece called, The absolute Unlawfulness of all Stage Entertainments; but not with the Wit, or Logick, of Mr. Collier. Mr. Dennis, a Veteran in the Service of the Stage, enter'd the Lists against this Champion; and, indeed, seems as great an Enthusiast on one Side the Question, as Mr. Law is on the other.

AFTER all, if these Entertainments are to be allowed of, it is Pity they are not under some better Regulation, and that the Manners of the Players, who, as they pretend, are to teach Morality to others, should not be more inspected into; for it is notorious to all, and grievous to every sober Man, who has the Misfortune of having any Dealings with them, that they are, for the most Part, not only the most profligate of Men, but that they even delight in boasting of their Enormities.

JUSTS and Turnaments was a Court Recreation in former Days, at solemn Times, and lasted to the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. In the Month of April 1560, were great Justs at Westminster, and running at the Tilt. There rode the Trumpeters, blowing their Trumpets, with Scarfs of white and black Sarfenet: Also the two Kings at Arms, and the Heralds, Somer-set, Lancaster, Richmond, York, Rouge-Dragon, and and more of them, having Scarfs of white and black Sarfenet, about their Necks; and the Seven-night after were the like Justings at Court: The Earl of Sussex, Lord Robert Dudley, and three more, against the Earl of Northumberland, the Lord Ambrose Dudley, and the Lord Hunsdon, and Mr. Cornwallis. Many Staves were broken. There stood in the Standing, as Judges, Lord Marquis of Northampton, Lord Rutland, Lord Pembroke, and the French Ambassador: And by the Chance of the breaking of a Staff, a Piece flew up where the Judges sat, and hit the Lord Pembroke.

ALSO Cocks of the Game are yet cherished by divers Men for their Pleasures, much Money being laid on their Heads when they fight in Pits, whereof some be costly made for that Purpose.

THE Ball is used by Noblemen and Gentlemen in Tennis Courts, and by People of meaner Sort in the open Fields and Streets.

THE Youths of this City, and other young Men, Time out of Mind, have left off to Practice the disarmed Launce and Shield on Horseback, in the Fields, Man against Man; but in the City they used on Horseback to run at a dead Mark called a Quinten.

IN the Year of Christ 1253, the 38th of Henry III, the young Citizens, for an Exercise of their Activity, set forth a Time to run at the Quinten, and whosoever did best, should have a Peacock, which they had prepared as a Prize.

SOME of the King's Servants, the Court being then at Westminster, came, as it were, in despite of the Citizens, to that Game, and giving reproachful Names to the Londoners, which for the Dignity of the City, and the antient Privilege which they ought to have enjoyed, were called Barons: The said Londoners being wrongfully abused, fell upon the King's Servants, and beat them shrewdly; so that upon Complaint made to the King, he fined the City to pay a thousand Marks. This Exercise of Running at the Quinten, was practised by the youthful Citizens, as well in Winter as in Summer; namely, in the Feast of Christmas. I have seen, saith Stow, a Quinten set up on Cornhill near the Leaden-Hall, where the Attendants on the Lords of merry Disports have run, and made great Pastime; for he that hit not the broad End of the Quinten, was of all Men laughed to Scorn; and he that hit it full, if he rode not the faster, had a sound Blow in his Neck, with a Bag full of Sand, hanging on the other End.

THIS Sport was called also Quintane, or Quintain, from the Latin, Quintus, because, as Minsheu fancies, it was one of the antient Sports used every fifth Year, among the Olympian Games,

It was also corruptly called Whintane, or Quintal. It is supposed by some to be a Roman Exercise, and left here in this Island ever since their Time. The learned Dr. Kennet (late Lord Bishop of Peterborough) in his Parochial Antiquities from Dr. Plot, describes it thus: "That they set up a Post perpendicularly into the Ground, and then placed a slender Piece of Timber on the Top of it, on a Spindle, with a Board nailed to it on one End, and a Bag of Sand on the other. Against this Board they antiently rode with Spears. Dr. Plot writes, That he saw it at Deddington in Oxfordshire, where only long Staves were used, which violently bringing about the Sand-bag, if they made no good Speed away, it struck them on the Neck and Shoulders, and sometimes, perhaps, knocked them off their Horses.

THE great Design of this Sport was to try the Agility both of Horse and Man, and to break the Board; which whosoever did, was for that Time accounted Princeps Juventutis, i. e. The Prince or Chief of the Youth. This Custom is used to this Day at a Village called Blackthorn, which the said Dr. Kennet concludes they had from the Romans (thro' which Village the Roman Way lay) being usual at their Weddings, on the Common Green, with much Solemnity and Mirth.

Matthew Paris his Words, where he mentions this Exercise, are, Eo tempore juvenes Londinensis, statuto Pavone pro Bravio, ad stadium quod Quintena dicitur, Vires proprias et equorum Cursus sunt experti.

WHEN Queen Elizabeth was at Kenelworth-Castle, in Warwickshire, the Earl of Leicester's Seat, among other Sports for her Entertainment, was shewn a solemn Country Bridal; when in the Castle Yard was pight a comely Quintane, for Feats of Arms; where, in a great Company of young Men and Lasses, the Bridegroom had the first Course at the first Quintane, brake his Spear trespardiment [very boldly;] but his Mare in his Manage did a little stumble, that much adoe had his Manhood to sit in his Saddle: But after the Bridegroom had made his Course, the rest of the Band ran awhile in some Order, but soon after Tag and Rag, Cut and Long-Tail; where the Speciality of the Sport was, to see how some for his Slackness had a good Bob with the Bag, and some for his Haste to topple down right, and come tumbling to the Post. Some put forth with Spurs, would run his Race among the thickest of the Throng, and came down together Hand over Head. Another would run, and miss the Quintane with his Staff, and hit the Board with his Head; as it is merrily related in a little Tract, by Way of Letter, giving a Relation of this Entertainment by the Earl of Leicester.

I have seen also, saith Stow, in the Summer Season, some upon the River Thames, rowed in Wherries with Staves in their Hands, flat at the fore End, running one against another, and for the most Part either one or both overthrown, and well ducked.

On the Holydays in Summer, the Youths of this City have in the Field exercised themselves, in Leaping, Dancing, Shooting, Wrestling, Casting of the Stone or Ball, &c.

THIS Shooting in the Long Bow, as it formerly was an Exercise of War, so afterwards it became an Exercise of Recreation also. And the Citizens used to go out into the Fields bordering upon the City, with their Bows, where divers Butts and Marks stood for the Purpose; and being so useful and healthful an Exercise, it had the Countenance and Encouragement of several Princes, viz. King Henry VIII, King James I, and King Charles I.

King Henry VIII. Anno Regni 29, granted by Patent to Sir Christopher Morris, Master of his Ordnance, Anthony Knevyt and Peter Mewtas, Gentlemen of his Privy Chamber (who were Overseers of the Fraternity or Guild of St. George) that they should be Overseers of the Science of Artillery, that is, for Long Bows, Cross Bows, and Hand Guns; and others were appointed to be Masters and Rulers of the said Science. And for the Continuance of the same, he granted that the said Masters and Rulers, and their Successors, Masters and Rulers, might begin, found, and establish a perpetual Fraternity of St. George, and full Power to admit into the Fraternity all honest Persons, whosoever they were, and to be a Body Corporate. And for the better Increase and Maintenance of this Science, they might for their Disport and Pastime, from Time to Time, use and exercise Shooting at all Manner of Marks and Butts, and at the Game of the Propinjay, and other Games, as at Fowl and Fowls, as well in the City as Suburbs, and in all other Places. And there was one remarkable Passage in this Charter, that in Case any Person were shot and slain in these Sports, by some Arrow shot by any of these Archers, he was not to be sued nor molested, if he had immediately before he shot used that common Word, FAST.

Patent for a Fraternity of Archers.

KING James I. in the eighth of his Reign granted a Commission to a great many Persons of Quality, in Behalf of the Archers; mentioning divers good Statutes, Ordinances, Provisions and Proclamations made by Kings on their Behalf. This Commission was to stop a Practice then began to be used, of enclosing the Ground formerly used for this Exercise, by Making of Banks and Hedges in such Fields and Clofes, as Time out of Mind were allowed to be shot in, and by plucking up the old Marks of antient Standing in the said Clofes, or where the Banks and Hedges, being of indifferent Height, the Ditches were made so broad and deep, that, wanting Bridges, the Archers were much hindered thereby. The Commissioners therefore were empowered to go upon these Places, and to view and survey in such Grounds, next adjoining to the City of LONDON, and the Suburbs, within two Miles Compass: And the same to reduce in such Order and State for the Archers, as they were in the Beginning of the Reign of King Henry VIII. and to cause the Banks, Ditches, and Quickles to be made plain and reformed.

THERE was also another Patent of King Charles I. to certain Commissioners concerning Archery, to the same Import with the former.

IN King Henry VIII's Time, the Citizens used to exercise their Sport of Shooting at Mile-End. The Chief of these Archers was called Prince Arthur, and the rest of them his Knights: The Exercise whereof was so manly and useful, that as that King used it himself, so he disdained not sometimes to come to Mile-End, and see it.

AND another Time, at a Shooting Match at Windsor, the King was present; and the Game being well nigh finished, and the Upshot thought to be given, one Barlo, a Citizen and Inhabitant of Shoreditch, shot and won them all. Whereat the King greatly rejoiced, and told him he should be named The Duke of Shoreditch. On which Account the Captain of the Company of Archers of LONDON, for a long Time after, was stiled by that Name.

The Captain of the LONDON Archers, called The Duke of Shoreditch.

IN the Year 1583, on the 17th of September, the Citizens set forth, at their great Charge, a Shooting Match with much State, the Duke of Shoreditch and all his Nobility and Officers marching through the City of LONDON to the Shooting Place. And first he gave a Summons to all his Marquisses, Earls and Barons, with all their Trains of Archery in and about the City of LONDON, to be in a Readiness to accompany him into the Field, every one with a long Bow and four Shafts, on the aforesaid Day, to meet him in Smithfield: And so they did. The Duke with his Company set forth from Merchant Taylors Hall. There repaired unto him all those that were appointed for conducting of his Person to the Place of Meeting; as his Barons, and a Multitude of good Archers in their Habits, under his own Ensign: Who, with Sound of Trumpet, Drums, and other Instruments, past along Broad-street (where the Duke dwelt) through Moorfields to Finsbury, and from thence to Smithfield. There was also the Marquis Barlo, and the Marquis of Clerkenwell, with Hunters, who wound their Horn; and the Earl of Pancras, and the Marquis of Clerkenwell, with Hunters, who wound their Horn; and the Earl of Pancras, and the Marquis of Islington, and the Marquis of Hogden, and the Marquis of Shakelwel, and other such Nobility, with all their Trains, making a surprizing Shew. For they marched in very great Pomp, odly habited, through several Places and chief Streets of LONDON. The Number of Archers that now shot were 3000. The Number of them that accompanied the Archers, as Whiffers, and those that guarded them with Bills, was 4000, besides Pages and Henchmen. Their Attire was very gorgeous, a great many wearing Chains of Gold: The Number of these Chains were 942. But he that will have the Description of the whole Shew, must read it in an old Book, intituled, The Bowman's Glory, reprinted 1682.

BUT tho' the English were such Masters in Archery, yet it was as much as ever Kings and Laws could do to make that Exercise prevail: For even in the Reign of King Edward III. who got such Victories over France by his Bows, it grew much into Disuse, and in the Room thereof Hurling of Stones, and Wood and Iron, and Hand-Ball, Foot-Ball, Bandy-Ball, Cock-Fighting, and other Sports, came altogether into Request; insomuch that the said King sent a Command to the Sheriff of LONDON, to forbid the Citizens all other Sports but that and the like: Letters were sent to all the Sheriffs of England. The Letter was to this Purpose:

"THE King to the Citizens of LONDON,
"Greeting: Because the People of our Realm,
"as well of good Quality as mean, have commonly in their Sports, before these Times
"exercised the Skill of Shooting Arrows, whence
"it is well known that Honour and Profit
"have accrued to our whole Realm, and to "us, by the Help of God, no small Assistance in our warlike Acts: And, now, the "said Skill being, as it were, wholly laid aside,
"the same People pleasing themselves in Hurling of Stones, and Wood and Iron, and some "Hand-Ball, Foot-Ball, Bandy-Ball, and in "Lambuck and Cock-Fighting, and some also
"apply themselves to other dishonest Games,
"and less profitable, or useful, whereby the said
"Realm is likely, in a short Time, to become
"destitute of Archers.

"WE willing to apply a seasonable Remedy
"to this, command you, That in Places in the "aforesaid City, as well within the Liberties as "without, where you shall see it expedient, you
"cause publick Proclamation to be made, that "every one of the said City, strong in Body, at "leisure Times on Holydays, use in their Recreations, Bows and Arrows, or Pellets or
"Bolts, and learn and exercise the Art of Shooting, forbidding all and singular on our Behalf,
"that they do not after any Manner apply themselves to the Throwing of Stones, Wood, Iron,
"Hand-Ball, Foot-Ball, Bandy-Ball, Lambuck
"or Cock-Fighting, or such vain Plays, which "have no Profit in them, or concern themselves
"therein, under Pain of Imprisonment. Witness the King at Westminster, the 12th Day of "June.

THE like Letters were sent to all the Sheriffs in England.

AND for Defence and Use of the Weapon, there was a special Profession of Men that taught it. You may read in mine Annals, faith Stow, how that in the Year 1222, [and the 6th of King Henry III. on St. James's Day] the Citizens kept Games of Defence and Wrestlings; near to the Hospital of Matilda, near St. Giles's in the Fields, where they challenged, and had the Mastery of the Men in the Suburbs, and other Commoners, &c.

THE Bailiff of Westminster resolving to be revenged, proclaimed a Game to be at Westminster upon Lammas-Day, to which the Citizens willingly repaired.

WHEN

WHEN they had played a-while, the Bailiff, with the Men of the Suburbs harnessed themselves treacherously, and fell to such Fighting that the Citizens (being sorely wounded) were forced to run into the City, where they rung the common Bell, and assembled the Citizens in great Number; when the Matter was declared, every Man wished to revenge the Fact, but the Lord Mayor of the City, being a wise and quiet Man, advised them first to move the Abbot of Westminster in the Matter, and if he would promise to see Amends made, it was sufficient: But a certain Citizen, named Constantine Fitz Arnulit, said, That all the Houses of the Abbot and Bailiff should be pulled down; which desperate Words were no sooner spoken, but the common People (as unadvisedly) issued out of the City, without any Order, and fought a cruel Battle, Constantine pulling down divers Houses, and the People (as praising Constantine) cried, The Joy of the Mountain, the Joy of the Mountain, God help and the Lord Lodowicke.

A few Days after this Tumult, the Abbot of Westminster came to LONDON, to Philip Dawbeny, one of the King's Council, to complain of the Injuries done him. The Londoners perceiving it, beset the House about, and took by Violence twelve of the Abbot's Horses away, cruelly beating his Men, &c.

BUT whilst the said Dawbeny laboured to pacify the Uproar, the Abbot got out at the Back-Door of the House, and so, by a Boat on the Thames, hardly escaped, the Citizens throwing Stones after him in great Abundance.

THESE Things being thus done, Hubert de Burge, Chief Justice of England, with a great Army of Men, came to the Tower of LONDON, and sent for the Mayor and Aldermen, of whom he required the principal Authors of this Faction; Constantine, being constant in the Sedition, affirmed, that he had done it, and that he had done much less than he meant to have done.

THE Justice took him, and two others with him, and that Morning sent him by Water, with a great Number of armed Men to the Gallows.

BUT when he saw the Rope about his Neck, he offered for his Life 15000 Marks, which would not save him, so he was hanged with Constantine his Nephew, and Galfrid, who read his Proclamation the 16th of August.

ALSO in the Year 1452, was a Tumult made against the Mayor, at the Wrestling besides Clerk's-Well, &c. which is sufficient to prove that (of old Time) the Exercise of Wrestling, and such like, was much more used than of later Years.

THE Youths of this City also used on Holy-days, after Evening Prayer, at their Masters Doors, to exercise their Wasters and Bucklers, and the Maidens, one of them playing on a Timbrel, in Sight of their Masters and Dames, to dance for Garlands hanged a-cross the Streets, which open Pastimes, being now suppressed, worse Practices within Doors are to be feared.

OF triumphant Shews made by the Citizens of LONDON, you may read in the Year 1236, the 20th of Henry III. Andrew Bockrel then Mayor, how Eleanor, Daughter to Reymond Earl of Provence, riding through the City toward Westminster, there to be crowned Queen of England; the City was adorned with Silks, and in the Night with Lamps, Cressets, and other Lights, without Number, besides many Pageants and strange Devices there presented. The Citizens also rode to meet the King and Queen, cloathed in long Garments, embroidered about with Gold, and Silks of divers Colours, and their Horses in fine Trappings, to the Number of 360; every Man bearing a Cup of Gold or Silver in his Hand, and the King's Trumpeters before them. These Citizens did serve Wine, as Butlers, which is their Service at the Coronation.

VOL. I.

IN the Year 1298, for Victory obtained by Edward I. against the Scots, every Citizen, according to their several Trades, made their several Shews, but especially the Fishmongers, which in a solemn Procession passed thorough the City; having, amongst other Pageants and Shews, four Sturgeons gilt, carried on four Horses; then four Salmon of Silver on four Horses; and after them, six and forty armed Knights riding on Horses, made like Sluices of the Sea; and then one representing St. Magnus, because it was upon St. Magnus's Day, with 1000 Horsemen, &c.

OF one other Shew you may read in the Year 1377, made by the Citizens for Diversion of the young Prince Richard, Son to the Black Prince, in the Feast of Christmas, and in this Manner:

ON the Sunday before Candlemas, in the Night, 130 Citizens, disguised and well mounted, with the Sound of Trumpets, Sackbuts, Cornets, Shalms, and other Instruments, and innumerable Torch-Lights of Wax, rode, in Mummery, from Newgate, through the City, over the Bridge, through Southwark, and so to Kennington, near Lambeth, where the young Prince then was with his Mother, and the Duke of Lancaster, his Uncle, the Earls of Cambridge, Hertford, Warwick, Suffolk, with divers other Lords.

IN the first Rank rode 48, in the Habits of Esquires, two and two, cloathed in Red Coats and Gowns of Say or Sandal, with Vizors on their Faces.

AFTER them came riding 48 Knights, in a Livery of the same Stuff and Colour.

THEN followed one arrayed richly, like an Emperor; and after him one like a Pope, followed by twenty four Cardinals; and after them eight or ten in black Vizors, as Legates from some foreign Princes.

WHEN these Maskers entered the Manor of Kennington, they alighted from their Horses, and entered the Hall on Foot; which done, the Prince, his Mother, and the Lords, came out of the Chamber into the Hall, and were saluted by the Mummers, who, by a Pair of Dice on the Table, shewed their Desire to play with the Prince; and they so managed it, that the Prince always won whenever he threw. They first set him a Bowl of Gold, then a Cup of Gold, and lastly, a Gold Ring, all which he won at three Casts.

THEN they set the Prince's Mother, the Duke, the Earls, and other Lords, every one a Gold Ring, which they also won. After which, they were feasted, and the Musick playing, the Prince, Lords and Mummers all danced; which being over, they again drank, and departed in good Order as they came.

THE like was in King Henry IV. his Reign, who keeping his Christmas at Eltham, twelve Aldermen of LONDON, and their Sons rode thither a Mumming, and were well received.

THERE were other Sports and Pastimes used yearly.

First, In the Feast of Christmas, there was in the King's House, where-ever he was, a Lord of Mis-rule, or Master of merry Sports; and the like was there in every Nobleman's House, whether Lord Spiritual or Temporal. The Lord Mayor of LONDON, and the Sheriffs, had likewise each of them their Lord of Mis-rule; ever contending, without Quarrel or Offence, who should make the most Diversion for the Beholders. These Lords began their Rule at All-holland's Eve, and continued it till the Day after the Purification, or Candlemas Day.

AGAINST the Feast of Christmas, every Man's House, as also the Parish-Churches, were decked decked with Holm, Ivy, Bays, and whatever the Season afforded that was Green, as is used at this Time: Then also were Conduits and Standards garnished in the same Manner; and in the same Year 1444, a Standard being set up in Cornhill, near Leadenhall, nailed full of Holm and Ivy, it was, upon Candlemas-Day, towards the Morning, torn up, and all the Pavement about it, by a violent Tempest, which much affrighted the Citizens, who thought, as Stow saith, that it was done by the Malignant Spirit.

N n n

IN the Month before Easter, there used to be great Shews made, in fetching in a twisted Tree, or Wyth, as it was termed, from the Woods to the King's House, and also into the Houses of other Persons of Distinction.

King Henry
VIII. goes a Maying.

IN the Month of May, on May-Day, there were used to be May Games; all the Citizens, who were able, going into the Woods and Meadows to divert themselves: A notable Example of this is given by Edward Hall, who saith, That King Henry VIII. in the seventh Year of his Reign, on May-Day in the Morning, with Queen Catharine his Wife, accompanied by many Lords and Ladies, rode a Maying from Greenwich to the high Ground of Shooter's-Hill; where, as they passed along, they saw a Company of tall Yeomen, cloathed all in Green, with Green Hoods, and with Bows and Arrows, to the Number of 200: One, being their Chieftain, was called Robin Hood, who desired the King, and all his Company to stay and see his Men shoot, which the King consented to, and then Robin Hood whistling, all the 200 Archers shot off at once, and when he whistled again, they likewise shot again; their Arrows were so contrived in the Heads of them, that they all whistled when shot off; so that the Noise was strange and loud, and greatly delighted the King, Queen, and their Company:

MOREOVER, this Robin Hood desired the King and Queen, with their Retinue, to enter the Green Wood, where, in Arbors made with Boughs, and decked with Flowers, they were set and served plentifully with Venison and Wine, by Robin Hood and his Men, to their great Satisfaction.

ABOUT two Years after this, an Accident happened, which occasioned the Epithet of Evil to be added to this Day of Rejoicing, and that Day was afterwards noted by the Name of Evil May-Day. In the ninth Year of the Reign of King Henry VIII. a great Heart-burning, and malicious Grudge, grew amongst the Englishmen of the City of LONDON, against Strangers; and namely, the Artificers found themselves much aggrieved, because such Number of Strangers were permitted to resort hither with their Wares, and to exercise Handicrafts, to the great Hindrance and Impoverishing of the King's Liege People: Which Malice grew to such a Point, that one John Lincolne, a Broker, busied himself so far in the Matter, that about Palm-Sunday, or the fifth of April, he came to one Dr. Standish, with these Words; "Sir, I understand that you shall preach at the Spittal on Monday in Easter Week, and so it is, that Englishmen, both Merchants and others, are undone by Strangers, who have more Liberty in this Land, than they, which is against Reason, and also against the Commonweal of this Realm. I beseech you therefore, to declare this in your Sermon, and in so doing, you shall deserve great Thanks of my Lord Mayor, and of all his Brethren". And herewith he offered unto the said Doctor a Bill, containing the Matter more at large: But Doctor Standish, wisely considering, that there might more Inconvenience arise from it, than he would wish, if he should deal in such Sort, both refused the Bill, and told

Lincolne plainly, that he meant not to meddle with any such Matter in his Sermon.

WHEREUPON the said Lincolne, went unto one Dr. Bell, a Canon of the aforesaid Spittal, that was appointed likewise to preach upon Tuesday in Easter Week, at the same Spittal, whom he persuaded to read his said Bill in the Pulpit. Which Bill contained (in effect) the Grievances that many found from Strangers, for taking the Livings away from Artificers and the Intercourse from Merchants, the Redress whereof must come from the Commons united together; for as the Hurt touched all Men, so must all set to their helping Hands: Which Letter he read, or the chief Part thereof, comprehending much seditious Matter, and then he began with this Sentence, Cælum Cæli Domino, Terram autem dedit Filiis Hominum, i.e. The Heavens to the Lord of Heaven; but the Earth he hath given to the Children of Men: And upon this Text, he shewed how this Land was given to Englishmen, and as Birds defend their Nests, so ought Englishmen to cherish and maintain themselves, and to hurt and grieve Aliens for Respect of their Commonwealth: And on this Text, Pugna pro Patria, i.e. Fight for your Country, he brought in, how (by God's Law) it was lawful to fight for their Country, and thus he subtilly moved the People to oppose Strangers. By this Sermon, many a Light-headed Person took Courage, and spoke openly against them: And by chance there had been divers ill Things of late done by Strangers, in and about the City of LONDON, which kindled the People's Rancour the more furiously against them.

THE 28th Day of April, divers young Men of the City picked Quarrels with certain Strangers, as they passed along the Streets; some they smote and buffeted, and some they threw in the Channel, for which the Lord Mayor sent some of the Englishmen to Prison, as Stephen Studley, Skinner, Stevenson, Betts, and others.

THEN suddenly rose a secret Rumour, and no Man could tell how it began, that on May-Day, next following, the City would slay all the Aliens, insomuch that divers Strangers fled out of the City.

THIS Rumour came to the Knowledge of the King's Council, whereupon the Lord Cardinal sent for the Mayor, and other of the Council of the City, giving them to understand what he had heard.

THE Lord Mayor, as one ignorant of the Matter, told the Cardinal, that he doubted not so to govern the City, but that Peace should be obtained.

THE Cardinal willed him so to do, and to take heed, that if any riotous Attempt were intended, he should by good Policy prevent it.

THE Mayor coming from the Cardinal's House, about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon, on May-Eve, sent for his Brethren to the Guildhall, yet was it almost Seven o'Clock before the Assembly was set. Upon Conference had of the Matter, some thought it necessary, that a substantial Watch should be set, of honest Citizens, which might withstand the Evil-Doers, if they went about any Mis-rule: Others were of contrary Opinion, as rather thinking it best, that every Man should be commanded to shut up his Doors, and to keep his Servants within. Before Eight o'Clock, the Recorder was sent to the Cardinal with these Opinions, who, hearing the same, allowed the latter: And then the Recorder, and Sir Thomas More, late Under-Sheriff of LONDON, and of the King's Council, came back again to the Guildhall, half an Hour before Nine o'Clock, and there shewed the Pleasure of the King's Council; whereupon every Alderman sent to his Ward, that no Man, after Nine o'Clock, should stir out of his House, but keep his his Doors shut, and his Servants within, until Nine o'Clock in the Morning.

AFTER this Command was given in the Evening, as Sir John Mundy, Alderman, came from his Ward, he found two young Men in Cheap, playing at the Bucklers, and a great many young Men looking on them, for the Command seemed to be scarcely published, he ordered them to leave off; and because one of them asked why? he would have them sent to the Compter: But the Prentices resisted the Alderman, taking the young Man from him, and cried, Prentices, Prentices, Clubs, Clubs; then out of every Door came Clubs, and other Weapons, so that the Alderman was put to Flight. Then more People arose out of every Quarter, and forth came Serving-men, Watermen, Courtiers, and others, so that by Eleven o'Clock there were in Cheap, 6 or 700; and out of St. Paul's Church-Yard came about 300. From all Places they gathered together, and broke open the Compter, took out the Prisoners, committed thither by the Lord Mayor for hurting the Strangers; they went also to Newgate, and took out Studley and Bets, committed for the like Cause. The Mayor and Sheriffs were present, and made Proclamation in the King's Name, but were not obeyed.

BEING thus gathered in Crowds, they ran thro' St. Nicholas Shambles; and at St. Martin's Gate, Sir Thomas More, and others, met them, desiring them to return to their Homes, which they had almost persuaded them to do, when some within St. Martin's, throwing Sticks and Stones, hurt several who were with Sir Thomas More, particularly one Nicholas Dennis, a Serjeant at Arms, who being much wounded, cried out, Down with them; and then all the unruly Persons ran to the Doors and Windows of the Houses within St. Martin's, and spoiled all they found. After that they ran into Cornhill, and so on to a House East of Leadenhall, called the Green-Gate, where dwelt one Mewtas, a Piccard, or Frenchman, with whom dwelt several other Frenchmen. These they plunder'd, and if they had found Mewtas, they would have struck off his Head.

THEY ran to other Places, and broke open and plunder'd the Houses of Strangers, and continued thus 'till Three o'Clock in the Morning, at which Time they began to withdraw; but by the Way they were taken by the Mayor and others, and sent to the Tower, Newgate, and the Compters, to the Number of 300.

THE Cardinal, being advertised of this by Sir Thomas Parre, sent him immediately to inform the King of it at Richmond; and he forthwith sent to learn what Condition the City was in. Sir Roger Cholmeley, Lieutenant of the Tower, during the Time of this Business, shot off certain Pieces of Ordnance against the City, but did no great Hurt. About Five o'Clock in the Morning, the Earls of Shrewsbury, and Surrey, Thomas Dockery, Lord Prior of St. John's, George Nevill, Lord Arbergavenny, and others, came to LONDON, with what Forces they could get together; so did the Inns of Court: But before they came the Business was all over.

THEN were the Prisoners examined, and the Sermon of Doctor Bell called in Question, and he sent to the Tower. A Commission of Oyer and Terminer was directed to the Duke of Norfolk, and other Lords, for the Punishment of this Insurrection. The second of May, the Commissioners, with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Justices, went to Guildhall, where many of the Offenders were indicted, whereupon they were arraigned, and pleaded Not Guilty, having one Day given them 'till the 4th of May.

ON which Day, the Lord Mayor, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Surrey, and others, came to sit in the Guildhall. The Duke of Norfolk entered the City with 1300 Men, and the Prisoners were brought thro' the Streets tied with Ropes; some Men, some Lads but of 13 or 14 Years old, to the Number of 278 Persons. That Day, John Lincolne, and divers others were indicted, and the next Day 13 were adjudged to be Drawn, Hanged and Quartered; for Execution whereof 10 Pair of Gallows were set up in divers Places of the City, as at Aldgate, Blanchapleton, Grass-street, Leadenhall, before each of the Compters, at Newgate, St. Martin's, at Aldersgate, and Bishopsgate: And these Gallows were set upon Wheels to be removed from Street to Street, and from Door to Door, as the Prisoners were to be executed.

ON the 7th of May, John Lincolne, one Shirwin, and two Brothers, named Betts, with divers others, were adjudged to dye. They were drawn on Hurdles to the Standard in Cheap, and Lincolne, was first executed; and as the others had the Ropes about their Necks there came a Command from the King to respite the Execution; and then the Prisoners were again sent to Prison, and the armed Men out of the City.

ON the 13th of May the King came to Westminster-Hall, and with him the Lord Cardinal, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earls of Shrewsbury, Essex, Wiltshire, and Surrey, with many Lords and others of the King's Council; the Lord Mayor of LONDON, Aldermen, and other chief Citizens, were then in their best Liveries, by Nine o'Clock in the Morning. Then came in the Prisoners bound with Ropes in a Rank, one after another, in their Shirts, and every one had a Halter about his Neck, being in Number 400 Men, and 11 Women.

WHEN they were thus come into the King's Presence, the Cardinal greatly blamed the Mayor and Aldermen, for their Negligence, and declared to the Prisoners how justly they had deserved to dye. Upon which all the Prisoners cried to the King for Mercy; and the Lords who were there besought his Favour to them, at whose Request the King pardoned them all. This general Pardon being pronounced, all the Prisoners shouted at once, and flung their Halters towards the Roof of the Hall. The Prisoners being dismissed, the Gallows were taken down, and the Citizens took more Care of their Servants for the future, keeping for a long Time after a Watch in Armour, of the first of May at Night, in Remembrance of this Evil May-Day.

THESE great Mayings and May-games, with the Triumphant setting up the great Shaft, a principal May-pole in Cornhill, before the Parish Church of St. Andrew, thence called Undershaft; were not so commonly used after this Insurrection on May-Day, 1517, as before.

Of WATCHES in the CITY.

WILLIAM the Conqueror commanded, that in every Town and Village, a Bell should be Nightly rung at Eight o'Clock, and that all People should put out their Fire and Candle, and take their Rest. Which Order was observed thro' this Realm, during his Reign, and the Reign of William Rufus: But Henry I. restoring to his Subjects the Use of Fire or Lights, as before, it followeth (by Reason of Wars within the Realm) that many Men also gave themselves to Robbery and Murders in the Night; whereof Roger Hoveden writeth thus:

"IN the Year 1175, a Council was kept at Nottingham. In Time of which Council, a Brother of the Earl Ferrers, being in the Night privily slain at LONDON, and thrown out

Gurfew Bell.

" of

“ of his Inn into the Street, when the King “ understood thereof, he swore, that he would “ be revenged on the Citizens. For it was then “ a common Practice in this City, that a Hun“ dred or more in a Company, Young and Old,
 “ would make nightly Invasions upon Houses
 “ of the Wealthy, with Intent to rob them, and “ if they found any Man stirring in the City
 “ within the Night, that were not of their Crew,
 “ they would presently murder him: Insomuch
 “ that when Night was come, no Man durst “ venture to walk in the Streets. When this “ had happened long, it fortun'd, that a Crew “ of young and wealthy Citizens, assembling to“ gether in the Night, assaulted a Stone House
 “ of a certain rich Man, and breaking through “ the Wall, the good Man of the House, having “ prepared himself with others in a Corner, when “ he perceived one of the Thieves, named Andrew “ Bucquint, lead the Way, with a burning “ Brand in one Hand, and a Pot of Coals in the “ other, which he assayed to kindle with the “ Brand, he flew upon him, and smote off his “ right Hand, and then with a loud Voice, cried, “ Thieves: At hearing whereof, the Thieves “ took to Flight; all, save him, who had lost his “ Hand, whom the good Man delivered, the “ next Morning, to Richard de Lucie, the “ King's Justice. This Thief, upon Warrant
 “ of his Life, impeached his Confederates, of “ whom many were taken, and many fled.
 “ Among the rest that were apprehended, a “ certain Citizen of great Countenance, Credit,
 “ and Wealth, named John Senex, who, not “ being able to acquit himself by the Water-“ Dcom, (as that Law was then termed,) offered
 “ the King 500 Pounds of Silver for his Life:
 “ But, forasmuch, as he was condemned by Judg“ ment of the Water, the King would not “ take the Offer, but commanded him to be “ hanged on the Gallows, which was done, and “ then the City became more quiet for a long “ Time after.

The Judgment of Fire and Water, called Ordeal.

IN the Beginning of King Edward III's Reign, a dangerous Insurrection happened of the Bakers, Tavern-Keepers, Millers, Cooks, Poulterers, Fishmongers, Butchers, and of divers other Trades and Mysteries: For suppressing and punishing of whom, the King sent his Letters to the Mayor and Sheriffs. In which Letters their Misdemeanors are thus described: “ That they went “ through the City by Night and by Day, with “ Swords and Bucklers, and other Arms, either
 “ by the Instigation of others, or their own Ma“ lice; and some they beat and mis-used, and “ committed other Wickednesses, and manifold “ Enormities against the King's Peace, to the “ no small Damage and Grievance of his faithful “ Subjects.

FOR a full Remedy of the Enormities in the Night, Henry III. in the Year 1253, commanded Watches in Cities, and Borough Towns to be kept, for the better observing of Peace and Quietness among his People.

AND further, by the Advice of some of Savoy, he ordained, That if any Man chanced to be robbed, or by any Means damnified, by any Thief or Robber, he to whom the Charge of keeping that Country, City, or Borough chiefly appertained, where the Robbery was done, should competently restore the Loss, which was after the Custom of Savoy.

IN the Months of June and July, on the Vigils of Festival Days, and on the same Festival Days in the Evenings, after the Sun-setting, there were usually made Bonfires in the Streets, every Man bestowing Wood or Labour towards them. The wealthier Sort also, before their Doors, near to the said Bonfires, would set out Tables, on the Vigils, furnished with sweet Bread, and good Drink; and on the Festival Days, with Meat and Drink plentifully; whereunto they would invite their Neighbours and Passengers also to sit and be merry with them in great Familiarity, praising God for his Benefits bestowed on them. These were called Bonfires, as well of good Amity amongst Neighbours, that being before at Controversy, were there by the Labour of others reconciled, and made of bitter Enemies loving Friends; as also for the Virtue that a great Fire hath, to purge the Infection of the Air. On the Vigil of St. John Baptist, and on St. Peter and Paul the Apostles, every Man's Door, being shadowed with green Birch, long Fennel, St. John's Wort, Orpin, white Lillies, and such like, garnished upon with beautiful Flowers, had also Lamps of Glass, with Oil burning in them all the Night. Some hung out Branches of Iron curiously wrought, containing hundreds of Lamps lighted at once, which made a great Shew, namely in new Fish-street, Thames-street, &c.

BESIDES the Standing Watches, all in bright Harness, in every Ward and Street in this City and Suburbs, there was also a Marching Watch, that passed through the principal Streets thereof; to wit, from the little Conduit by Paul's Gate, through West-Cheap, by the Stocks, through Cornhill, by Leadenhall to Aldgate; then back down Fenchurch-street, by Grass Church, about Grass Church Conduit, and into Cornhill, then into West-Cheap again, and so broke up. The whole Way ordered for this Marching Watch extended to 3200 Taylor's Yards. For the Furniture whereof with Lights, there were appointed 700 Cressets, 500 of them being found by the Companies, the other two by the Chamber of LONDON. Besides which Lights every Constable in LONDON, above 240 in Number, had his Cresset; the Charge of every Cresset in Light was two Shillings and four Pence, and every Cresset had two Men, one to bear, or hold it, another to carry a Bag, and serve it: So that the poor Men pertaining to the Cressets taking Wages, were almost 2000 in Number, who had each a Straw Hat, with a Badge painted, and a Breakfast in the Morning.

THERE were also divers Pageants, Morris-Dancers, Constables; the one half, which was 120, on St. John's Eve, the other half on St. Peter's Eve, in bright Harness, some gilt, and every one a Jorret of Scarlet thereupon, and a Chain of Gold, his Henchman following him, his Minstrels before him, and his Cresset Light passing by him; the Waits of the City, the Mayor's Officers for his Guard before him, all in a Livery of Worsted or Sea Jackets, party-colour'd; the Mayor himself well mounted on Horseback, the Sword-Bearer before him in Armour, well mounted also; the Mayor's Footmen, and the like Torch-Bearers about him, and two Henchmen, upon great Horses following him. The Sheriffs Watches came one after the other in like Order, but not so large in Number as the Mayor's: For where the Mayor had, besides his Giants, three Pageants, each of the Sheriffs had besides their Giants, but two Pageants, each their Morris-Dancer, and one Henchman, their Officers in Jackets of Worsted, or Sea party-coloured, differing from the Mayor's, and from each other, but having harnessed Men a great many, &c.

THIS Midsummer Watch was thus accustomed yearly, Time out of Mind, until the Year 1539, the 31st of Henry VIII. in which Year, on the 8th of May, a great Muster was made by the Citizens at the Mile's-End, all in bright Harness, with Coats of white Silk or Cloth, and Chains of Gold, in three great Battels to the Number of 15000, which passed through LONDON to

Westminster,

Westminster, and so through the Sanctuary, and round about the Park of St. James, and returned home through Holbourn.

KING Henry then considering the great Charges of the Citizens, for the Furniture of this unusual Muster, forbade the Marching Watch, provided for at Midsummer for that Year; which being once laid down, was not raised again 'till the Year 1548, the 2d of Edward VI. Sir John Gresham then being Mayor, who caused the Marching Watch, both on the Eve of St. John Baptist, and of St. Peter the Apostle, to be revived and set forth in as comely Order as it had been accustomed; which Watch was also beautified by the Number of more than 300 Demilances and light Horsemen, prepared by the Citizens, to be sent into Scotland, for rescuing the Town of Haddington.

THIS Watch affording a great Cavalcade and Shew, brought Abundance of all Degrees of People together, and among the rest, Rogues, Pick-Pockets, Quarrellers, Whoremongers, and Drunkards, which was found to have much Inconvenience: Therefore in the Year 1569, Sir Thomas

Row, Mayor, with the universal Consent of the Aldermen, agreed to lay it aside for that Year, at least, and in the Room thereof, to have a substantial Standing Watch, for the Safety and Preservation of the City. And that chiefly, as was pretended, to prevent the spreading of the Plague into the Country, which might happen, the City being at this Time not quite free from it; and the Mayor being also so weak, that he could not go in his own Person, the Recorder acquainted the Queen and Council with this Resolution; but it was signified back, that the Queen disliked it, and that it was her Pleasure to have a Marching Watch: Whereupon the Mayor sent the Recorder to Sir William Cecil, the Secretary, earnestly desiring his Interest with the Lords, that this Order might take Place, at least for that Year, upon the weighty Reasons aforesaid; and from thenceforward, this Marching Watch was laid aside, nor was ever after used in the City, tho' some Attempts were made to revive it, particularly in 1585, when a grave Citizen wrote a Book in Commendation of it, and dedicated it to Sir Thomas Pullison, then Lord Mayor.

C H A P. XVI.

A Recital of many Worthy ACTS of the City and Citizens of LONDON.

“THE City of LONDON, saith William Fitz-Stephen, hath bred some “ who have subdued many Kingdoms, “ and also the Roman Empire. It brought forth “ that noble Emperor Constantine, who gave the “ City of Rome, and all the Imperial Ensigns, “ to GOD, St. Peter, and Pope Sylvester, to “ whom he performed the Office of a Soldier, “ choosing rather to be called a Defender of the “ Church than an Emperor. And lest the Peace “ of the Pope might be violated, by Occasion “ of his Secular Presence, he retired from Rome, “ and built the City of Bizantium, called from “ him, Constantinople.

LONDON hath also brought forth Kings, and other illustrious Persons, among whom, Fitz-Stephen names St. Thomas, as he calls him, the Archbishop of Canterbury, “ That glorious Martyr of CHRIST, than whom, he says, there “ was none more innocent, nor by whom any “ could be more bound for all the good Things “ of the whole Latin World”. Such was the Language of a bigotted Monk, in Praise of Thomas à Becket, who died indeed a Martyr for Church Authority, but had certainly no true Religion, but was the greatest Traitor, and most turbulent Priest that ever got into Power.

IN the Year 1197, Walter Brune, a Citizen of LONDON, and Rosia his Wife, founded the Hospital of our Lady, called Domus Dei, or St. Mary the Spital, without Bishopsgate in LONDON, an House of such Relief to the Needy, that there were found standing in it, at the Surrender thereof, ninescore Beds, well furnished, for the Reception of poor People.

IN the Year 1216, the Londoners sending out a Navy, took 95 Ships of Pirates and Sea Robbers, besides innumerable others that they drowned, which used to rob upon the River Thames.

IN the Year 1247, Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, founded the Hospital of St. Mary, called Bethlem, also without Bishopsgate.

VOL. I.

IN the Year 1283, Henry Wallis, then Mayor, builded the Tun upon Cornhill, to be a Prison for Night-Walkers; and a Market-House, called the Stocks, both for Fish and Flesh, standing in the midst of the City. He also builded divers Houses on the West and North Side of St. Paul's Church-Yard, the Profits of all which Buildings are to the Maintenance of London Bridge.

IN the Year 1332, William Elsing, Mercer of LONDON, founded Elsing Spital, within Cripplegate, for Sustainment of an hundred poor blind Men; and became himself the first Prior of that Hospital.

SIR John Poultney, Draper, four Times Mayor, 1337, builded a Chapel in St. Paul's Church, wherein he was buried. He founded a College in the Parish Church of St. Laurence, called Poultney. He built the Church called Little Alhallows in Thames-street, and the Carmelite Fryars Church in Coventry; he gave Relief to Prisoners in Newgate, and the Fleet, and ten Shillings a Year to St. Giles's Hospital, by Holbourn, for ever.

THE Wealth of the Citizens had made them once like to have filled the City with Knights; King Edward III. Anno 1344, requiring all them who had 40 l. per Annum, to take Knight-hood upon them, within about six Weeks after. And of this, publick Proclamation was made in LONDON by the Sheriffs, that such as were concerned should take Notice of it.

AND this the King required, either for the Honour of the City, or perhaps to get Money out of the wealthier Sort; who, as it appeared by the Sequel, had no Inclination to this Honour, nor the Consequences of it.

THIS Command of the King was grounded upon a Statute made in the first Year of King Edward II. whereby it was ordered, That all such as ought to be Knights, that is, that had 20 l. yearly in Fee, or for Term of Life, should take the Arms of the Knight upon him.

THE said King's Brief to the Sheriffs of LONDON, for this Purpose, was as followeth:

O O O

EDWARDUS,

King Edward III, requires the Citizens to take Knight-hood.

EDWARDUS, &c. Vicecomitibus, &c.

i. e. "EDWARD, &c. to the Sheriffs of "LONDON, Greeting.

"WE Command, firmly enjoining you, That "in the City aforesaid, when you shall think con"venient, ye cause it publickly to be proclaim"ed, That all who have 40 l. of Land, or Rent,
"as they have Revenue by Year, and have held
"them for three whole Years, and are not "Knights, take upon them the Order of * August 10. "Knighthood, about the Feast of St. * Laurence "next, or at most on the Feast, upon Danger
"which followeth. And that ye diligently en"quire of the Names of those who have 40 l.
"of Land or Rents per Annum, in the said Ci"ty: And that ye certify Us of those Names,
"in our Chancery, before the foresaid Feast.
"And by no means omit ye this.

"Witnes myself at Westminster, the 30th
"Day of June; in the Year of our Reign
"over England the 18th; but of our Reign
"over France, the 5th.

To which Brief, the Sheriffs returned this Answer.

Proclamari fecimus, &c.

i. e. "WE have caused to be proclaimed
"throughout our whole Bailiffwick, all the Ar"ticles contained in the Brief, as it is com"manded in the same. We have caused also In"quisition to be made, by the Oath of honest
"and lawful Men of our said Bailiffwick, if any "have 40 l. of Land, or Rent, by Year, in our "said Bailiffwick, and have held them for three "whole Years; and of those that hold a Part in "our Bailiffwick, and a Part elsewhere, of the "said Value: By whose Oath we find, that all
"the Lands, and Rents, in the said City, are "held of the Lord the King in Capite, as Free
"Burgage in Fee Farm. Nor is there any that "hath 40 l. of Land, or Rent, in the same, by "the Year certain: Because the Lands in the "said City, some are Let for more, some for "less; and often stand empty, and are not Let:
"Yet frequently have divers Burthens, and re"quire Repairs and Amendments. And for "those Causes, and the Burning of Houses, and "divers other Dangers happening, the Certain"ty of the true Value of them cannot be known.
"And as to the Lands, and Rents, which the "Citizens have out of our Bailiffwick, the Sworn "Men say, That they know nothing of them by
"the Year, nor can enquire.

THESE Diminutions and Abatements of the Estates of the Citizens, were given in (as it seems) with respect to the Exceptions in the aforesaid Statute of 1 Edward II, wherein such were excused from Knighthood, who had held their Lands but a small Time, or who were bound in certain Debts to the Exchequer, to be paid yearly out of their Lands; and that held in Manors, in antient Demesne of the Crown, as a Sokeman; and that must give Tallage, when the King's Demesnes were tallied; and such as held Burgage Lands, altho' they did amount to 20 l. yearly.

SUCH another Writ came from that King [E. III.]
about twelve Years after, to the Sheriffs, Walter Forster, and Thomas de Brandon, the first of August, the 30th of that King's Reign over England, but of France the 17th, and the Sheriffs Return was the same.

John Stody, Vintner, Mayor 1358, gave to the Vintners all the Quadrant, wherein the Vintners Hall now standeth, with all the Tenements round about, from Stodys Lane, where is founded thirteen Alms-Houses, for so many poor People, &c.

Henry Picard, Vintner, Mayor 1357, in the Year 1363, did, in one Day, sumptuously feast
Edward III, King of England; John, King of France; David, King of Scots; the King of Cyprus, then arrived in England; Edward Prince of Wales; with many other Noblemen; and after kept his Hall for all Comers, that were willing to play at Dice, and Hazard. In like Manner the Lady Margaret his Wife, kept her Chamber to the same Intent, &c.

John Lofken, Fishmonger, four Times Mayor, 1367 built an Hospital, called Magdalen's, at Kingston upon Thames, gave thereunto nine Tenements, ten Shops, one Mill, 125 Acres of Land, ten Acres of Meadow, 120 Acres of Pasture, &c. More, in LONDON he built the Church of St. Michael in Crooked Lane, and was there buried,

John Barnes, Mayor 1371, gave a Chest, with three Locks, and a thousand Marks therein, to be lent to young Men, upon sufficient Pawn, and for the Use thereof to say, De Profundis, or Pater Noster, and no more. He was also a great Builder of St. Thomas Apostle's Parish-Church, as appeareth by his Arms there, both in the Stone and Glass.

IN the Year 1378, John Philpot, sometime
Mayor, hired, with his Money, 1000 Soldiers, and defended the Realm from Incursions of the Enemy, so that in a small Time his hired Men took John Mercer, a Sea Rover, with all his Ships, which he before had taken from Scarborough, and fifteen Spanish Ships, laden with great Riches.

IN the Year 1380, Thomas of Woodstock, Hugh Caverley, Robert Knowles, and others, being sent with great Power to aid the Duke of Bre-tagn, the said John Philpot hired Ships for them at his own Charge, and released the Armour which the Soldiers had pawned for their Victuals, more than a thousand in Number.

This most noble Citizen (saith Thomas Walsingham) that had travelled for the Commodity of the whole Realm, more than all other of his Time, had often relieved the King by lending him great Sums of Money, and others, deceased in the Year 1384, after he had assured Lands to the City, for the Relief of 13 poor People for ever.

IN the Year 1381, William Walkworth, then Mayor, a most provident, valiant, and learned Citizen, did, by his Arrest of Wat Tyler (a presumptuous Rebel, upon whom no Man durst lay Hands) deliver the King and Kingdom from the Danger of most wicked Traitors, and was for his Service Knighted in the Field, as before hath been related.

Nicholas Brember, John Philpot, Robert Laund,
Nicholas Twyford, and Adam Francis, Aldermen, were then for their Service likewise Knighted, and Sir Robert Knowles, for assisting of the Mayor, was made Free of the City.

SIR Robert Knowles, thus worthily enfranchized, a Citizen, founded a College, with an Hospital at Pontefract: He also built the great Stone-Bridge at Rocheſter, over the River of Medway.

John Churchman, Grocer, one of the Sheriffs, 1386, for the Quiet of Merchants, built a certain House upon Woolwharf in Tower-Ward, to serve Tronage, or Weighing of Wools, and for the Customer, Comptroller's Clerks, and other Officers to sit.

Adam Bamme, Goldsmith, Mayor 1391, in a great Dearth, procured Corn from Parts beyond Sea, to be brought to LONDON, in such Abundance as sufficed to serve the City and the Country

Country near adjoining. To the Furtherance of which good Work, he took out of the Orphans Chest in Guildhall, 200 Marks, to buy the said Corn, and each Alderman laid out 20 l. to the like Purpose.

Thomas Knowles, Grocer, Mayor 1400, with his Brethren the Aldermen, began to new-build the Guildhall in LONDON, and instead of an old little College in Aldermanbury-Street, made a fair and goodly House, nearer to St. Laurence's Church in the Jury. He re-edified St. Anthony's Church, and gave to the Grocers his House, near unto the same, for Relief of the Poor for ever. More, he caused Water to be conveyed to the Gates of Newgate and Ludgate, for Relief of the Prisoners there.

John Hinde, Draper, Mayor 1405, newly built his Parish-Church of St. Swithin, by London-Stone; his Monument is defaced, save only his Arms in the Glass Windows.

Thomas Falconer, Mercer, Mayor 1414, lent to King Henry V., towards the Maintenance of his Wars in France, 10000 Marks upon Jewels. More, he made the Postern, called Moorgate. Caused the Ditches of the City to be cleaned, and did many other Things for the Good of the same City.

William Sevenoak, Grocer, Mayor 1419, founded in the Town of Sevenoak, in Kent, a Free-School for poor Mens Children, and 13 Alms-Houses. His Testament saith, 20 poor Men and Women.

Richard Whittington, Mercer, three Times Mayor, in the Year 1421 began the Library of the Grey-Fryars in LONDON, to the Charge of 400 l. His Executors, with his Goods, founded and builded Whittington College for the Poor, with Alms-Houses for 13 poor Men, and Divinity-Lectures to be read there for ever. They repaired St. Bartholomew's Hospital in Smithfield. They bore some Charges to the Glazing and Paving of the Guildhall; they bore half the Charges of Building the Library there, and they built the West Gate of LONDON, of old Time, called Newgate, &c.

John Carpenter, Town-Clerk of LONDON, in the Reign of Henry V., caused (with great Expences) to be curiously painted upon Board, about the North Cloister of St. Paul's, a Monument of Death, leading all Estates, with the Speeches of Death, and Answer of every Estate. This Cloister was pulled down 1542. He also gave Tenements to the City for the finding and bringing up of four Mens Children, with Meat, Drink, Apparel, and Learning at the Schools in the Universities, &c. until they might be preferred, and then others in their Places for ever.

HIS Name stands at the Beginning of the Liber Albus (a Book of great Account in the Records of LONDON) and it seems to have been writ by him.

Richard Chickley, Grocer, Mayor 1422, appointed by his Testament, that on his Birth-Day a competent Dinner should be ordained for 2400 poor Men, Householders of this City, and every one to have Two-pence in Money. More, he gave one large Plat of Ground, thereupon to build the new Parish-Church of St. Stephen, near unto Walbrook, &c.

John Rainwell, Fishmonger, Mayor in the Year 1427, gave Tenements to discharge certain Wards of LONDON of Fifteens, and other Payments.

John Wells, Grocer, Mayor 1433, a large Contributor to the Building of the Chapel and College of the Guildhall, was there buried: In the Year 1432, he caused fresh Water to be conveyed from Tyburn to the Standard in West-Cheap, for the Service of the City.

In the Year 1438, William Fastfield, Mercer, Mayor, conveyed Water to the Conduit in Fleet- street, to Aldermanbury, and to Cripplegate, appointing his Executors, out of his Effects, to convey sweet Water from Tyburn, and to build a handsome Conduit by Aldermanbury Church; which they performed, as also made a Standard in Fleet-street near Shoe-Lane End, and also conveyed Water to Cripplegate, &c.

Stephen Brown, Grocer, Mayor 1439, sent into Prussia, causing Corn to be brought from thence to LONDON in great Quantities; whereby he brought down the Price of Wheat, from three Shillings the Bushel, to less than half that Money: Corn had before been so scarce in England, that poor People were forced to make Bread of Fern Roots.

Philip Malpas, one of the Sheriffs, 1440, gave by his Last Will, 125 l. to the Relief of poor Prisoners, and every Year, for five Years, 400 Shirts and Smocks, 40 Pair of Sheets, and 150 Gowns of Freeze to the Poor. To 500 poor People in LONDON, every one 6 s. and 8 d. To poor Maids Marriages, 100 Marks: To Highways, 100 Marks: 20 Marks a Year to a Graduate to preach: 20 l. to Preachers at the Spital, on the three Easter Holydays.

Robert Large, Mercer, Mayor 1440, gave to his Parish Church of St. Olave in Surrey, 200 l. to St. Margaret's in Lothbury, 25 l. to the Poor, 20 l. to London-Bridge, 100 Marks. Towards the Vaulting over the Water-Course of Walbrook, 200 Marks: To poor Maids Marriages, 100 Marks: To poor Householders, 100 l. &c.

Edward Rich, Mercer, one of the Sheriffs, 1442, founded Alms-Houses at Hodsdon in Hertfordshire.

Simon Eyre, Draper, Mayor 1346, builded the Leadenhall, for a common Garner of Corn, to the Use of this City, and left 5000 Marks to be bestowed in charitable Actions for Relief of the Poor.

Godfrey Bullein, Mayor of LONDON, 1451, by his Testament gave liberally to the Prisons, Hospitals, and Lazar-Houses; besides 1000 l. to poor Householders in LONDON; and 200 l. to poor Householders in Norfolk.

In the Year 1471, John Stofton, Mayor, and 11 Aldermen of LONDON, with the Recorder, were all made Knights in the Field, by Edward IV., for their good Service done unto him.

Richard Rawson, one of the Sheriffs 1477, gave by Will large Legacies, to the Prisoners, Hospitals, and Lazar-Houses: To other Poor, to Highways, to the Water-Conduits, besides to poor Maids Marriages, 340 l. and his Executors were to build a large House in the Church-Yard of St. Mary Spital, wherein the Mayor, and his Brethren, used to sit to hear the Sermons in Easter Holydays.

Thomas Ham, one of the Sheriffs, 1480, built the great Conduit in Cheap, at his own Charge.

Edward Shaw, Goldsmith, Mayor, 1483, caused Cripplegate to be new built out of his Goods.

Thomas Hill, Grocer, Mayor 1485, built the Conduit in Grass-Street.

Hugh Clopton, Mercer, Mayor 1492, built the great Stone arch'd Bridge at Stratford upon Avon, in Warwickshire.

Robert Fabian, Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs 1494, collected out of divers good Authors, Latin and French, a large Chronicle of England and of France, which he published in English, at a great Expence, for the Honour of the City, and Profit of the whole Realm.

SIR John Percivall, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor 1498, founded a Grammar School at Macclesfield in Cheshire, where he was born. He endowed the same with sufficient Lands, for finding a Priest, Master, there to teach freely all Children sent thither, without Exception.

THE Lady Thomasine, his Wife, founded such another Free-School, at Marywike in Devonshire, where she was born.

Stephen Gennings, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor 1509, founded a handsome Grammar School at Ulfrimbampton in Staffordshire, left good Lands, and also builded great Part of his Parish-Church, called St. Andrew's Undershaft in LONDON.

Henry Keble, Grocer, Mayor 1511, in his Life a great Benefactor to the new Building of old Aldermary Church, and by his Testament gave 1000 l. towards the finishing thereof. He gave to Highways 200 l. to poor Maids Marriages, one hundred Marks; to poor Husbandmen in Oxford and Warwickshires, one hundred and forty Plowshares, and one hundred and forty Coulters of Iron; and in LONDON to seven Alms-Men, Six-pence the Week for ever.

John Collet, a Citizen of LONDON by Birth, and by Dignity Dean of St. Paul's, Doctor of Divinity, erected and built one Free-School in St. Paul's Church-yard 1512, for 353 poor Mens Children, to be taught free in the same School, appointing a Master, a Sur-Master, and a Chaplain, with sufficient Stipends, to endure for ever; and committed the Oversight thereof to the Mercers in LONDON, because himself was Son to Henry Collet, Mercer, Mayor of LONDON; and endowed the Mercers with Lands, to the yearly Value of 120 l. or better.

SIR William Fitz-William the Elder, being a Merchant Taylor, and Servant sometime to Cardinal Wolsey, was chosen Alderman of Breadstreet Ward in LONDON, Anno 1506. Going afterward to dwell at Milton in Northamptonshire, in the Fall of the Cardinal his former Master, he gave him kind Entertainment there at his House in the Country: For which Deed being called before the King, and demanded, How he durst entertain so great an Enemy to the State? His Answer was, That he had not contemptuously or wilfully done it; but only because he had been his Master, and (partly) the Means of his greatest Fortunes. The King was so well pleased with his Answer, that saying, Himself had too few such Servants, immediately he Knighted him, and afterwards made him a Privy Counsellor.

THIS worthy Knight dying, gave 100 l. to poor Maids Marriages. His Debts and Debtors (over whose Names he had written, Amore Dei remitto) he freely forgave. He gave to the Universities 40 l. to the Poor 30 l. to mend the Highways betwixt Chigwell and Copersall in Essex, 50 l. to mend other Highways, about Thorney and Sawtry Chapel, and the Bridge, 50 l. more: And to the Merchant-Tailors, his Brethren, he gave his best standing Cup, as a friendly Remembrance of him for ever.

To mention a few more of this noble Knight's Legacies. He gave to King Henry VIII. his great Ship, with all her Tackles, &c. and his Collar of the Garter, with his best George, beset with Diamonds. He gave to Sir Thomas Wriothesley, Knight, Chief Secretary of State, the best of his gilt Cups.

To Mabel, Daughter of Sir Anthony Brown, his Brother, for her Advancement in Marriage, 100 l. per Annum, going out of his Manor of Coudray, &c.

To the Poor within four Miles of his Manor of Guilford, 100 l.

HE bequeathed his Body to be buried in the Church of Midhurst in Sussex, if he died within an hundred Miles of it: And willed his Executor should build a new Chapel, joining to the said Parish-Church, and a Tomb to be erected therein for himself and Mabel his Wife.

HE died Anno 1542. His Will was proved on the 16th of February that Year.

WHEN he died he had all these Places and Honours. He was Knight of the Order of the Garter; Lord Keeper of the King's Privy Seal; and Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster.

John Tate, Brewer, then a Mercer, Mayor 1514, caused his Brewhouse, called the Swan, near adjoining to the Hospital of St. Anthony in LONDON, to be taken down, for the enlarging of the said Church, then new builded, being a great Part of his Charge. This was a goodly Foundation, with Alms-Houses, a Free-School, &c.

George Monox, Draper, Mayor 1515, re-edified the decayed Parish-Church of Walthamstow in Essex. He founded there a Free-School, and Alms-Houses for thirteen Alms-People. He made also a Causeway of Timber over the Marshes from Walthamstow to Lock-Bridge, upon the River Ley.

SIR John Milborn, Draper, Mayor 1522, builded Alms-Houses, fourteen in Number, by the Crossed Fryars Church in LONDON, there to be placed fourteen poor People, and left to the Drapers certain Messuages, Tenements, and Garden Plats, in the Parish of St. Olave in Hart-street for Performance of Stipends to the said Alms-People and other Uses. See more in Aldgate Ward.

Robert Thorn, Merchant-Taylor, deceasing a Batchelor in the Year 1532, gave by his Testament to charitable Actions, more than 4440 l. and Legacies to his poor Kindred, more, 5142 l. besides his Debts forgiven, &c.

SIR John Allen, Mercer, Mayor of LONDON, and Council to King Henry VIII. deceased 1544, buried at St. Thomas of Acres, in a Chapel by him builded. He gave to the City of LONDON a rich Collar of Gold, to be worn by the Mayor, which was first worn by Sir William Laxton. He gave five hundred Marks, to be a Stock for Sea Coal; his Lands, purchased of the King, the Rent thereof to be distributed to the Poor in the Wards for ever.

HE gave besides, to the Prisons, Hospitals, Lazar-Houses, and all other Poor in the City, or two Miles without, very liberally, and too long to be recited.

SIR William Laxton, Grocer, Mayor 1545, founded a Free-School at Oundle in Northamptonshire, with six Alms-Houses for the Poor.

SIR John Gresham, Mercer, Mayor 1548, founded a Free-School at Holt, a Market Town in Norfolk. He gave to every Ward in LONDON 10 l. to be distributed to the Poor: And to an hundred poor Men and Women, every one of them three Yards of Broad Cloth, of eight or nine Shillings the Yard, to be made in Gowns, ready to their Backs. He gave also to poor Maids Marriages, and to the Hospitals in LONDON, above 200 l. in ready Money.

SIR Rowland Hill, Mercer, Mayor 1550, caused to be made divers Causeways, both for Horse and Man. He made four Bridges, two of Stone, containing eighteen Arches in them both. He built one notable Free-School at Drayton in Shropshire. He gave to Christ's Hospital in LONDON, 500 l. &c.

SIR Andrew Judd, Skinner, Mayor 1551, erected one notable Free-School at Tunbridge in Kent, and Alms-Houses nigh St. Helen's Church in LONDON: And left to the Skinners, Lands to the Value of 60 l. 3 s. 8 d. the Year; for which they are bound to pay 20 l. to the Schoolmaster; 8 l. to the Usher, yearly for ever; and 4 s. a Week to the six Alms-People, and 25 s. 4 d. a Year in Coals, for ever.

SIR Thomas White, Lord Mayor of this Honourable City, Anno 1554, and a worthy Brother likewise of the Merchant-Taylors Society, being a Lover of Learning, and an earnest Furtherer thereof, first purchased the Hall in Oxford, called Glocester Hall, for Scholars and Students to receive there the Benefits of Learning; But his private Thoughts very often solliciting him, That he should (in Time) meet with a Place where two Elms grew, and that there his further Purpose should take Effect; at length he found out the Place, where (at his own Cost and Expences) he founded the famous College, called St. John Baptist College, and where these two Elms (it is said) are yet standing; endowing it with such liberal Gifts, Lands, and Revenues, as would require too much Time here to be remembered or set down, BESIDE his Provision for Learning in this worthy Place, he erected other Schools, as at Bristol, Reading, and a College at Higham Ferris: More, he gave to the City of Bristol the Sum of 2000 l. to purchase Lands, amounting to the yearly Value of 120 l. The Mayor and Citizens paying therefore yearly 100 l. 800 l. to be lent to sixteen poor Clothiers, 50 l. each Man, for the Space of ten Years, sufficient Security being given by them for the same: Afterwards that 800 l. was to pass to other sixteen poor Clothiers, according to the Direction of them put in Trust. 200 l. besides, was reserved for Provision, for Corn, and needful Occasions for the Poor, in the Order and Care of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

THEN, according to his Will, (which remaineth yet to be seen) out of this bountiful Gift to Bristol, these memorable Branches and Benevolences were (by himself) devised and thus ordered, beginning in the Year 1577, and so thence forward they went on according to his own Direction:

THEN, on the Feast of St. Bartholomew, was brought to the Merchant-Taylors Hall 104 l. The 100 l. to be lent (for ten Years Space) to four poor young Men in the City of York, Freemen and Inhabitants, being Clothiers; and the 4 l. Overplus, to be employed about the Charges and Pains, that no Man (used in the Business) might receive Discontentment.

THEN in 1578, the like Sum was to be delivered thence to Canterbury; and so, thence forward, the same Sums (yearly) to the Cities and Towns following, orderly, viz.

1579, To Reading ,	1589, To Winchester .
1580, } The Merchant	1590, Oxford .
1580, } Taylors themselves.	1591, Hereford .
1581, Glocester .	1592, Cambridge .
1582, Worcester .	1593, Skrewsbury .
1583, Exeter .	1594, Lynn .
1584, Salisbury .	1595, Bath .
1585, West Chester .	1596, Derby .
1586, Norwich .	1597, Ipswich .
1587, Southampton .	1598, Colchester .
1588, Lincoln .	1599, Newcastle .

THIS Sum of 104 l. passing thus yearly to the afore-named Places, was order'd to take Beginning again at the City of York, and so successively, for ever, to the Towns before-named; with great Care and Observance in them to whom it belongeth, that the Deed may not be abused, nor poor Mens Right injured.

He gave to the City of Coventry 1400 l. therewith to purchase Lands, to the annual Value of 70 l. Twelve aged, poor Inhabitants of that City, were to have, in free Alms, 24 l. each Man 40 s. yearly, on the 11th Day of March, or within six Days after. Four poor young Men also were to have 40 l. lent them, in free Loan, 10 l. to each Man, and for nine Years Space, upon sufficient Security given: And their Turns being thus served, then four other poor young Men were to have the like Sums, and for like Limitation: And so from nine Years to nine Years for ever.

AFTERWARDS it was ordered, in free Loan, to two poor Men of the same City; and lastly to one. In which Manner, according to the several Limitations, it doth yet, and doubtless will always continue.

Also the same Sum was appointed to one young Man in Northampton, for nine Years, in free Loan; next to one in the City of Leicester; thirdly, to one in Nottingham; fourthly, to one in Warwick; and for the like Time. Then returning again to Coventry for one Year, it re-passeth to the said Towns again, each after the other, in like Manner for ever.

AND lest his worthy Intent should fail in the Continuance, he enlarged his first Gift to Coventry, of 1400 l. to 2000 l. and 60 l. to be employed as hath been mentioned; 40 l. being yearly paid out of it to St. John Baptist College in Oxford; and Allowances also by himself given in each Place, that Bonds should be made, without any Charge to the Receiver.

Edward Hall, Gentleman, of Gray's Inn, a Citizen by Birth and Office, as Common Serjeant of L O N D O N, and one of the Judges in the Sheriffs Court: He wrote and published a famous and eloquent Chronicle, entitled, The Uniting of the two Noble Families, Lancaster and York.

Richard Hills, Merchant-Taylor, 1560, gave 500 l. towards the Purchase of an House, called The Manor of the Rose; wherein the Merchant-Taylors founded their Free School in L O N D O N. He also gave to the said Merchant-Taylors, one Plat of Ground, with certain small Cottages on the Tower-Hill, where he built Alms-Houses for fourteen sole Women.

ABOUT the same Time, Will. Lambert, Esq; of the Worshipful Company of Drapers, born in L O N D O N, a Justice of Peace in Kent, founded a College for the Poor in East Greenwich, which he named after Queen Elizabeth.

William Harper, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor 1562, founded a Free-School in the Town of Bedford, where he was born.

SIR Thomas Gresham, Mercer, 1566, built the Royal Exchange in L O N D O N; and by his Testament left his Dwelling-House in Bishopsgate-street for a College, as mentioned Chap. XI. allowing handsome Stipends to the Readers, and certain Alms-Houses for the Poor.

THIS Gentleman's Name will always be remember'd with Honour, not only for the Use he made of his own great Riches, but for supporting the Honour and Credit of his Mistress, Queen Elizabeth, to whom he was Agent, by the prudent Advice he gave her in her Negotiations with Merchants abroad. For when the Queen, and her Treasurer, were in a great Plunge, owing much Money, and having Occasion for more, and not knowing how to have it but from the rich Bankers of Antwerp; and all Correspondence with that City being broke off, by the Duke D'Alva's Government of the Low Countries, and the English therefore carrying away their Effects and Trade to Hamburgh, Secretary Cecil, who then managed the Exchequer, very much feared that the Merchants would not have Money enough to carry on their Trade, as they would have had if all were open with Antwerp; and the Money which the Queen owed to the Merchants, and to her Creditors abroad, was to be repaid out of the Customs upon Cloth, which she feared would fall short if the Trade was removed to a new Place. These Doubts the Secretary imparted to Sir Thomas Gresham, who knowing well the State of Trade, and of the Merchants, told the Secretary, that in his Opinion he need make no Difficulty of this Matter, viz. the Queen's paying her Creditors, for if she saw her Merchants well paid in LONDON, their first Payment, which was half her Debt to them, by that Time the other Part was due they would have Plenty of Money, both at Hamburg and here.

William Patten, Gentleman, a Citizen by Birth, and Customer of LONDON Port Outward, Justice of Peace in Middlesex, repaired, or rather new built, the Parish Church of Stoken Winton.

SIR Thomas Rowe, Knight, Lord Mayor of the City of LONDON, in 1568, a worthy Brother also of the Merchant-Taylors Company; beside his charitable Cost and Charges in building the new Church-Yard in Bethlem, containing near one Acre of Ground, and enclosed with a Wall of Brick; and a Sermon to be preached every Whit-Sunday in the Morning, in the Presence of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen; as also giving 100 l. to be lent to eight poor Men; gave to the Merchant-Taylors, Lands, or Tenements, out of them to be given 40 l. yearly, to maintain ten poor Men for ever; such as were not Brethren of his own Society, but chosen out of five several Companies, viz. Clothworkers, Armourers, Carpenters, Tylers, and Plaisterers: As considering, that by over-toiling, Labour, Dangers, Falls, Bruises, and such like Inconveniences, they were soonest like to become Impotent, and unable to help or maintain themselves. Therefore, to each of these 10 Men, he freely gave the Sum of 4 l. Quarterly to be paid them at Merchant-Taylors Hall, during their Lives: And then to succeed to other Men in the same Companies, according to the due Consideration of just Cause, and most Necessity.

ABOUT the Year 1570, Margaret Dan, Widow of — Dan, late one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, gave by her Last Testament more than 2000 l. to Charitable Acts.

AND about the Year 1577, Dame Mary Ramsey, Wife to Sir Thomas Ramsey, being seized of Lands, in Fee Simple of her Inheritance, to the yearly Value of 243 l. by his Consent, gave the same to Christ's Hospital, towards the Relief of the poor Children there, as appeareth by Monuments erected in Christ's Hospital: Which Gift she afterwards, in her Widowhood, confirmed, and greatly augmented. A Particular of the Charities of these two last, shall be expressed more largely afterwards.

Ambrose Nicholas, Salter, Mayor 1576, founded 12 Alms-Houses in Monkswell-Street, near Cripplegate, wherein he placed 12 poor People, having each of them 7 d. a Week, and once every Year, five Sacks of Coals, and one Quarter of a Hundred Faggots, all of his Gift for ever.

William Lamb, Esq; (sometime a Gentleman of the Chapel to King Henry VIII. and in great Favour with him) was also a free Brother of the worshipful Company of Clothworkers, and a kind, loving Citizen to the City of LONDON.

OUT of his Love to Learning and Scholars, in the Town of Sutton Valens, in Kent, where he was born, at his own proper Cost and Charges, he erected a Free Grammar-School for the Education and Instruction of Youth, in the Fear of God, good Manners; Knowledge and Understanding: Allowing yearly to the Master, 20 l. and 10 l. yearly to the Usher from Time to Time, as either Place shall be supplied by Succession, and for their yearly Stipends or perpetual Pensions.

IN the same Town of Sutton also, for the Relief of poor People, he caused to be built six Alms-Houses, having an Orchard and Gardens, and the Sum of 10 l. yearly paid them.

AT Maidstone likewise in Kent, he hath given 10 l. yearly to the Free School for ever, with this special Caution, That needy Mens Children be preferred only to the enjoying of this Benefit.

THE Gentleman foreseeing in his Life-Time, the Decay of sundry Trades and Occupations, to the utter Undoing of very many, especially poor Clothiers, whose Impoverishing deserved greatly to be pitied, freely gave to the poor Clothiers in Suffolk, in Bridgenorth, and in Ludlow in Shropshire, 300 l. to be paid by even Portions. To each several Towns of the said Counties, 100 l. a-piece, for their Support and Maintenance at their Work or Occupation.

AND as his Charity extended itself thus liberally abroad in the Country, so did the City of LONDON likewise taste thereof, not sparingly. For near unto Holbourn, he founded a Conduit, and a Standard with a Cock at Holbourn-Bridge, to convey thence the Waste. These were begun the 26th Day of March 1577, and the Water carried along in Pipes of Lead, more than 2000 Yards, all at his own Cost and Charges, amounting to the Sum of 1500 l. and the Work fully finished the 24th of August in the same Year.

MOREOVER, he gave to poor Women, such as were willing to take Pains, 120 Pails, therewith to carry and ferve Water.

BEING a Member (as already hath been said) of the Clothworkers Company, and to shew that he was not unmindful of them, he gave them his Dwelling-House in LONDON, with other Lands and Tenements, to the Value of 30 l. yearly, by them to be thus bestowed, to wit, For the Hiring of a Minister to read Divine Service thrice every Week, as Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, throughout the Year in the Chapel, or Church belonging to his House, called by the Name of St. James, in the Wall by Cripplegate, and for four Sermons there to be preached, a competent Allowance for each: And, also, out of the 30 l. yearly, it is provided, That a Deduction be made by the said Clothworkers, for apparelling of 12 Men, and as many Women, in Form as followeth.

To every of the 12 Men, a Frize Gown, one Lockram Shirt, and a good strong Pair of Winter Shoes.

To the 12 Women, likewise a Frize Gown, a Lockram Smock, and a good Pair of Winter Shoes, all ready made for their Wearing.

ALWAYS remembred, that they be Persons, both poor and honest, to whom this charitable Deed is to be extended: And this is yearly done on the first of October.

To the Parish Church of St. Giles without Cripplegate, he gave 15 l. towards the Bells and Chimes, intending a further Liberality thereto, if they had taken due Time.

To the Worshipful Company of Stationers, he gave a Legacy of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. for perpetual Relief of the Poor in the Parish Church of St. Faith, under Paul's, namely, To 12 poor People, Twelve-pence in Money among them, and Twelve-pence in Bread every Friday throughout the Year.

To Christ's Hospital in LONDON, toward the bringing up of poor Mens Children, he hath given 6 l. yearly for ever; and 100 l. in ready Money together therewith to purchase Lands, that their Relief (by the Revenues of the same) might be perpetual.

To St. Thomas's Spital, or Hospital, in Southwark, towards the Succour of the Sick and Diseased, he gave 4 l. yearly for ever.

AN Hundred Pounds he intended to the Hospital called the Savoy, but by Reason that such Agreement

Agreement could not be made as he thought convenient, his Contribution that Way (much against his Mind) went not forward.

FOR the Relief of poor Prisoners in the two Compters, Newgate, Ludgate, the Marshalsea, the King's-Bench, and the White Lion, he dealt very bountifully and discreetly, giving unto the two Compters 6*l.* a-piece, and to be paid unto them by 20*s.* each Month: To the other Prisons afore-mentioned, six Mattresses a-piece; the whole Number being two Dozen and a half.

HE was not unmindful of poor Maids Marriages, and gave 20*l.* to be equally divided among forty, by equal Portions of 10*s.* a-piece; but with this Proviso, that those poor Maids to be married, should be of good Name and Fame.

Sir Thomas Offley, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor, deceased 1580, appointed by his Testament the half of his Goods, and 200 l. deducted out of the other half, given to his Son Henry, to be given and bestowed in Deeds of Charity by his Executors, according to his Confidence and Trust in them.

IN the Year 1581, Sir James Harvey was Mayor. In his Time were great Deceits, by reason of false Weights; and that not only within the City of LONDON, but in other Cities and Places within the Realm. The Reason whereof was, because the true Standard, made according to the Statute for the Sizing of all Weights, could not be found. This was heretofore complained of to the Lord Treasurer; who took some Care for the Reformation thereof: But yet the Abuse continued. This Mayor therefore wrote to the said Lord Treasurer, to this Purport, "That, for that he was this Year charged in Conscience, by reason of his Office and Oath taken, to see that Falshood and Deceit punished, he thought it his Duty, not only to remember his Lordship thereof, but to beseech him, that he would give him his favourable Help and Advice, what Order, or Courfe, to take in the City, for the Reformation thereof.

Sir Thomas Blanke, a Merchant, and Citizen born; Mayor the next Year, viz. 1582, which being a Year of Plague in the City, the Lord Treasurer had sent an Order to the said Mayor, to make a Catalogue of all the Victualling Houses in LONDON that were infected; which Catalogue was to be set up publicly to be read, to the End that all Strangers, that resorted to LONDON about their Occasions, might avoid Setting up, or Lodging at those Houses, to prevent their carrying Infection into the Country; and so to do it, from two Months to two Months. This Sir Thomas Blanke diligently did, and employing an expert Person to draw up this Catalogue, he had special Regard to two Things; the one, to give such plain Descriptions and Notes of the Streets and Places as might serve for easy Notice to such as repaired to the City; the other, the List to be so brief and contracted as it might be brought into less than one Side of a Sheet, to be fixed in Places convenient.

THE Mayor prayed the said Lord, to consider of the proper Places which he thought good to note, having Respect to Westminster, and the Way thereto out of the Liberties, and the Entrance always into the City.

THE Mayor put him also in Mind, How in Term Time, usually, all the Houses in Fleet-street, and the Streets and Lanes adjoining, as also without Temple-Bar, did use Lodging, Victualling and Letting out of Chambers: Leaving to his Lordship's Consideration, Whether such Houses, tho' they were not Victuallers, should not be likewise noted, if they had been infected within the Space of two Months.

THEN he thanked his Lordship for his honourable and loving Care of the City, in the Matter of the Infection, and the Repair of the Queen's Subjects thither. And for his own Part, he promised, he would not fail in Diligence, according to his Direction.

AND whereas upon a Lord's Day, a great Number of People, being met for Sport at Paris Garden, all the Scaffolds fell down at once, to the slaying and wounding of a great many People; this Mayor piously looked upon it as a Judgment of God, for Breach of the Lord's Day; and wrote to the Lord Treasurer to this Tenor: "That it gave great Occasion to acknowledge the Hand of God, for such Abuse of his Sabbath Day; and moved him in Conscience to beseech his Lordship, to give Order for Redress of such Contempt of God's Service. And that he had for that End treated with some Justices of Peace of that County, who shewed themselves to have very good Zeal, but alledged Want of Commission; which they humbly referred to his Honourable Wisdom.

IN his Mayoralty, he, with his Brethren the Aldermen, and Common Council, entered upon the Business of establishing Orders, for the true and upright Use of her Majesty's Beam, with the Weights thereto belonging; which, upon Continuance, did daily wear, and needed to be renewed and seized from Time to Time: And for this End, they were humble Suitors to him, to have in Remembrance the great Want the City and the whole Realm found, for Lack of Order to size Weights, whereby the Commonwealth, as he wrote, took Detriment; and private Men presumed (without Order) to sell and use unlawful Weights, both in the City and in the Country, that were accustomed to their Affizing from LONDON: And this Opportunity the said Mayor took, because the latter Verdict, touching Weights, was long since delivered before the Treasurer, and the rest of the Court of Exchequer.

THIS Sir Thomas Blanke was commonly called The Good Knight. He died Anno 1588; his Epitaph, and his Lady's are taken Notice of in Billingsgate Ward.

IN the same Year 1582, John Haydon, Alderman, gave large Legacies, to the Amount of above 3000*l.* for the Relief of the Poor.

Bernard Randolph, Common Serjeant of LONDON 1583, gave in his Life-Time, to the Company of Fishmongers in LONDON, the Sum of 900*l.* Seven hundred Pounds towards conducting the Thames Water into the Parishes of St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Nicholas Coleabbey, near Old Fish-street. The other 200*l.* to pay yearly, for ever, the Sum of 10*l.* to wit, towards maintaining a poor Scholar in the University of Oxford, yearly, 4*l.* And to the poor People of the Parishes of St. Nicholas Olave in Bread-street, and St. Mary Magdalen near to Old Fish-street, 40*s.* to wit, 20*s.* to either Parish, for ever.

MORE, he willed and bequeathed, by his Last Will and Testament, to be bestowed in Land or Annuities, for the Relief of the Poor inhabiting in the Wards of Queen-Hith and Castle-Baynard, in the City of LONDON, and in the Parish of Titchhurst in the County of Sussex, the Sum of 1000*l.* But this Money fell into bad Hands.

Mr. Thomas Ridge, Grocer, gave 1163*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* to charitable Uses, in Form following:

IN the Year 1588, Sir Martin Calthorp was Mayor. Then the Queen had a Loan from the City, by reason of her extraordinary Charges she had been at in Preparation against the Spaniard, who attempted the Invasion of England this Year. Every Company was taxed new, by Way of Loan, to the Amount of 20,000 l. according to a Direction from the Lord Treasurer to the Lord Mayor.

IN November was paid to the Lord Treasurer hereupon, 17952 l. 10 s. But many of the Citizens wilfully absented themselves, and many had wholly left the City, and betaken themselves into to the Country; whereby the Loan amounted not to the Sum of 20000 l. which the commendable Zeal of the Mayor for the Queen, and for the City's Credit, did endeavour to raise it unto. He, and Sir George Bond, Alderman, sent the several Sums that each stood charged with unto the said Loan, with their Names and Dwellings; and acquainted the Treasurer how effectually this Business had been travailed in: And he wrote, That he was very sorry that he should be occasioned, by the Backwardness of some, to give so hard an Information unto his Lordship, against any that would be accounted good Citizens: But in respect of his Duty, he said, He could do no less, but to lay the Fault and Blame on such as committed the same: And so left it to his Lordship, to take some Course with those Citizens.

THE Queen had a Loan the same Year from the City, and chiefly from the Members of the 12 Companies, who raised 51900 l. These following lending lent 1000 l. a-piece, Sir Thomas Ramsey, Sir Wolstan Dixie, Thomas Smith, Customer, and John Spencer, Alderman; the rest subscribed, some 500 l. some 300, some 200, none under one hundred.

THE next Year [1589] there was another Loan of 15000 l. for which the Queen paid 10 per Cent. And from these Supplies of Money afforded from the City, it seems to have truly the Denomination of the Chamber of the Kings of England: And thus, from its inexhaustible Wealth, and the good Service and Use her Princes have made of it, her Citizens have received great Honour.

ONE good Service of this City to their Princes, has been lending them Money upon extraordinary Emergencies, who had great and dangerous Enemies to encounter and watch against.

Sir John Hart, Grocer, Alderman, and Lord Mayor of LONDON, in the Year 1589, erected and founded a Free-School in Yorkshire, with the Allowance of 30 l. yearly to a Master and an Usher.

KING James I, near the Beginning of his Reign, was apprehensive of a Rebellion in the North of Ireland; when the Citizens of LONDON seasonably supplied him with 20,000 l. for his Irish Affairs. It was in the Month of July 1609, or 1610, that that King offered the Lord Mayor and Citizens, a Possession and Plantation of Englishmen, in the Province of Ulster. Accordingly they advised themselves therein; and in August they sent four expert and discreet Persons, accompanied by Sir Thomas Philips (as the Lords of the Council had appointed) to survey that Province, and to observe the Profits, with the State and Condition thereof, and to report what Ruins were to be repaired; and what Cities, Castles, and Towns, were presently to be built. When these four Surveyors were returned, they certified the true State thereof, and of the Commodities, Honour, and Credit, that was likely to accrue to the City; and so they resolved to agree to the King's Offer, and levied the aforesaid Sum.

Sir James Pemberton, Goldsmith, and Lord Mayor of LONDON in the Year 1611, in his Life-Time, founded a Free-School at Heskin, in the Parish of Ekklesden in Lancashire, endowing it with 50 l. yearly.

Sir Martin Bowes, Goldsmith, some Time Mayor, built an Alms-House at Woolwich, and appointed a Sermon to be preached at St. Mary Wolnoth, on or near St. Martin's Day, before the Company. And certain Gifts of his are then to be disposed of by the said Company. He gave Plate and Houses to the Goldsmiths Company.

Sir Baptist Hicks, Mercer, some Time living in Cheapside, Viscount Campden, built at his own Charge, in St. John-street, a Shire-House, for the Justices of Middlesex to hold their Sessions at, which cost him about 900 l. He founded also an Hospital at Campden in Glostershire, which he well endowed.

THIS Hicks, upon King James I's coming in, was sworn his Servant, soon after Knighted, and before his Death, created Viscount Campden. He supplied the Court with Silk, and rich Mercery Wares, when King James, with his bare Scotch Nobility and Gentry, came to England; by which Means he got a large Estate.

HE

HE was one of the first Citizens, who, after Knighthood, kept their Shops: He had two Daughters, who were his Heirs, and said to be worth 100,000 l. a-piece.

HIS Monument remains in the Church of Campden, in Glocestershire, (that gave him his Title) with his Lady's, who erected the same: Which specifying his Rise, and his good Deeds, in the Epitaph, may deserve a Place here.

To the Memory of her dearest and deceased Husband, Baptist Lord Hicks, Viscount Campden, born of a worthy Family in the City of LONDON; who, by the Blessing of God, on his ingenuous Endeavours, arose to an ample Estate and to the aforesaid Degrees of Honour: And out of those Blessings, disposed to charitable Uses, in his Life-Time, a large Portion, to the Value of 10,000 l. Who lived religiously, virtuously, and generously, to the Age of 78 Years, and died October the 18th, 1629.

Elizabeth, Viscountess Campden, his dear Consort, born of the Family of the Maye's, lived with him in all Peace and Contentment, the Space of 45 Years, leaving Issue by her said Lord and Husband, two Daughters; Juliana, married to Edward Lord Noel, now Viscount Campden; and Mary, married to Sir Charles Morison, Knt. and Bart. hath piously and carefully caused this Monument to be erected, as a Testimony of their mutual Love, where both their Bodies may rest together, in Expectation of a joyful Resurrection.

William Parker, Citizen, and Merchant-Taylor of LONDON, who died about the Year 1616, amongst other Things which he gave to pious and publick Uses, gave 1000 l. towards the new Building of Aldersgate, which was employed therein according to the Tenor of his Will. He gave also 500 l. towards the new Glazing of the decayed Windows in the upper Part of St. Paul's Church: And the same to be done on rich coloured Glass, with Effigies and holy Stories, as it had been formerly glazed and adorned. The first Window whereof being new made, was prepared and appointed to be set up on the North Side of the Choir, in the Month of June 1618, and much of the old Glass repaired; being the Decays of divers broken Windows.

Mr. Henry Smith, Alderman, who died 1627, gave Legacies amounting to the Sum of 75000 l. to several Towns, to buy Lands, for the Relief of the Poor, and for setting them to Work, and for Redemption of Captives in Turkish Slavery. And besides, bequeathed much more, according as his Estate would bear, towards the same Uses. See his Monument in Wandsworth Church.

Richard Crosshawe, Goldsmith; an Account of his Benefactions, the Inscription upon his Monument in the Church of All Saints, Derby, will declare, from the Visitation Book of Derbysire, by Sir William Dugdale, Knight, viz. upon a large Monument erected for Richard Crosshawe, a wealthy Goldsmith in LONDON, who was a Smith's Son at Marketon juxta Derby.

“ To the Glory of God. Richard Crosshawe, “ of LONDON, Esq; some Time Master of “ the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths, and “ Deputy of Broad-street Ward: A Man pious and “ liberal to the Poor in the great Plague, 1625.
“ neglecting his own Safety, abode in the City,
“ to provide for their Relief. Did many pious
“ and charitable Acts in his Life-Time: And by “ his Will, left above 4000 l. to the Maintain“ ance of Lectures, Relief of Poor, and other “ pious Uses.

“ Since his Death, his Executors have added
“ out of his Estate 900 l. He dwelt, and lyeth “ buried in his Parish of St. Bartholomew, by “ the Exchange, where he lived 31 Years, and “ being 70 Years old, departed this Life the 2d “ of June, 1631. Having done much Good to “ this Town, and this his Native Country, his “ Executors have erected his Monument in this “ Place, to encourage others of great Estate to “ imitate his Piety and Charity:

Sir James Cambel, Knt. Senior Alderman of LONDON, who died 1641, among many charitable and other Legacies, amounting to near 50,000 l.

GAVE to repair the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, 1000 l.

To the Company of Ironmongers, to be lent to young Beginners, 100 l. a Man, upon good Security, 1300 l.

To enlarge the Hospital of St. Thomas in Southwark, with more Lodging for poor Sick, 1500 l.

To Christ's Hospital, 500 l.

To the other two Hospitals, viz. Bridewell, and St. Bartholomew's, 200 l.

To Bethlem, 100 l.

MORE, to Bridewell, for a Stock to set poor Vagrants to work, who are delivered out of the Jail, and keep them from farther Pilfering, 2000 l.

To the Governors of the Hospital, for a Dinner, 66 l. 13 s. 4 d.

FOR Relief and Release of poor Prisoners in and about LONDON, who lie in Durance for small Debts, 1000 l.

FOR the Redemption of poor Captives from Turkish Slavery, 1000 l.

IN this Year [1641] on the 25th of November, King Charles I. entertained by the City of LONDON, the City gave a most splendid and magnificent Entertainment to King Charles I. upon his safe and happy Return from Scotland, when he dined at Guildhall: The Triumphant Manner and Order whereof, and the Lord Mayor's meeting and receiving his Majesty, for an Honourable Remembrance of the City's Loyalty, was as follows:

THE Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Sir Richard Gurney, and the rest of the grave Senate of the City of LONDON, the Aldermen, his Brethren, being advertised that his Majesty, in his happy Return from Scotland, would graciously condescend to pass through the City, with his Royal Consort, the Queen, the Prince, and other of the Princely Issue, at a Court amongst themselves, took into their Consideration, how to give Entertainment fit for his Majesty's gracious Acceptance; and thereupon they selected a Committee of six Aldermen, and 12 Commoners, who should meet, consult, and order what they in their Discretion should think fit to conduce to the Honour of the City, and the Acceptance of his Majesty. Yet, before these Committees should effect any Thing, it was thought necessary to assemble a Common Council, as well to understand the Affection of the Commons, as to confirm those Committees chosen.

THE Matter being propounded there, was entertained with an unanimous Consent, and general Approbation, and the above-mentioned Committees were by the Court confirmed, who thereupon met daily, bending all their Thoughts how to satisfy the Trust reposed in them, and calling before them the Officers of the City, and directed them what they should do, charging them to leave nothing undone, which either Art, Labour, or Cost, in so short a Time could compass.

MORE particularly in the first Place their especial Care was to give Order, as well to the Steward, Cook, Butler, and Confectioner, to make make speedy Provision of all Things, fit for the Royal Feasting of their Majesties, and their Princely Train, as to the Officers of the City Works, that the Guildhall might be prepared, and made ready for the due and respectful receiving of them.

THE next was, that Precepts might be speedily directed to the several Societies and Companies of the City, that against the Day their Majesties should come, there should be some of the prime Men chosen out of the Liveries, that should be in Readiness to attend the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, in their best Array (either Velvet, Plush, or Sattin) and Chains of Gold, upon good Horses, well appointed, and each Rider to have a Footman to attend him, to meet their Majesties, and to conduct them first to Guildhall, and afterwards to his Majesty's Royal Palace of Whitehall. As also, that out of the Residue of their Companies, some should be appointed to wait in their several Standings in their Liveries, from their Majesties Entrance into the City, to Temple-Bar. To which Purpose the Committee gave Orders and Directions, where every several Companies Standings should be set up. And lastly, That others should be nominated to attend in the Guildhall upon their Majesties in their Liveries and Foins likewise, from the Time of their coming thither, to their Departure thence.

ANOTHER Care of the Committee was, that (the Way from Kingsland to Shoreditch being impassable for their Majesties, in Regard of the Depth and Foulness of it) a Way might be prepared from thence to that Place of the City, where their Majesties should enter, as might not only be fair and clean, but as pleasant also, and delightful, as the Season of the Year would permit; and that the Streets, all the Way they should pass, might be paved, where Need was, and made sweet and clean.

AND because some seditious Libels were at that Time dispersed, (which bred a panick Fear in some) Order was likewise taken, that there should be two Companies of the City's Train'd Bands, placed in several Parts of the City, upon that Day; as also, that at every Door, a Man should be placed, sufficiently appointed, to be ready upon all Occasions, to appease any Disorders.

LASTLY, Out of the said Committee, two of the City Captains were designed, as Chief Marshals for the Day; to have the Command over the other three Marshals, that were Officers of the Chamber; and to Order, Direct, and Marshal the Horsemen. And also four other of the Committee were appointed, as Comptrollers of the House, to whom all inferior Officers should have Recourse upon any Occasion, and to direct and order the Liveries, which were to attend upon their Majesties Service; and generally to dispose all other Things conducing to the Entertainment.

Now for the Entertainment itself. Upon Thursday the said 25th of Novemb. the Knights of the Grey Cloak, Mr. Recorder, and the rest of the Aldermen, the City Council, and Chief Officers, as Town-Clerk, Common Serjeant, and Remembrancer, attended the Lord Mayor, at his Lordship's House in the Old Jury, by Eight of the Clock in the Morning, from whence they advanced thro' the City to Moorgate, in this Manner.

THE Lord Mayor having the Sword-Bearer, and the two Mace-Bearers before him, on Horseback, and on Foot-Cloths, and two Footmen in Black Velvet Coats, on each Side one, his Lordship wearing a Gown of Crimson Velvet, and a Collar of SS, rode in the Front, the Knights aforementioned, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen following, according to their Seniority, two by two in Scarlet Gowns, attended by two Footmen a-piece, suited in the City Colours, each of which Footmen being appointed to carry a Truncheon in his Hand, for the Forenoon, and two Torches for the Afternoon: Next to them followed the City Council and Chief Officers, in Black Gowns upon Foot-Cloths, each of them having a Footman going by them, suited and fitted as aforesaid.

IN this Equipage they passed through the City, from his Lordship's House to Moorfields, where there waited in a Readiness to attend his Lordship and the Service, about five hundred Horsemen, selected out of the Liveries of the several Companies of the City, being Masters, Wardens, and prime Men of each Company, in Velvet, or Plush Coats, and Suits, with Chains of Gold, being well Horsed, and gallantly furnished, every Company having a Horseman in the Front, carrying a Pendant with that Company's Arms to which he did belong (for Distinction sake) and a Footman to attend each Horseman of the Livery, with Truncheons and Torches, as before: Both Horsemen with the Pendants, and Footmen being suited Cap-a-pee, with the Companies Colours on which they waited. There were also fourteen Trumpeters, with Trumpets, Banners, and Scarfs, who were placed two between every hundred of the Horse, and four at the Head of the Troop.

THE Lord Mayor being thus attended, rode on with the Knights, Mr. Recorder, the Aldermen, City Council, and Chief Officers, as before; and after them five hundred Horsemen, according to the several Ranks of the Companies, the Lord Mayor's Company, viz. the Clothworkers, being foremost; then the Mercers, and the rest according to their Order.

THEY all advanced, in a handsome Manner, through the Fields, (the Banks being cast down, and Bridges of fourteen Feet wide, being made over the Ditches, for better and more secure Passage) till they came beyond Baumes, (a retiring House of Sir George Whitmore's) in the Fields next adjoining to Kingsland. The Night before being Rainy, and the Morning Gloomy and Cloudy, the Lord Mayor commanded his Tent to be pitched in the Field, where his Lordship, the Knights, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen, were to attend their Majesties. In the Tent were Seats and Forms, where his Lordship, and some of the Nobility reposed themselves till their Majesties came.

IN the mean Time, the two Sheriffs of LONDON and Middlesex (George Garret, and George Clark) attended by seventy two Men in Scarlet Cloaks, trimmed with Silver Lace, (the Colours of the City) with Javelins and Feathers, and four Trumpeters, rode as far as Stamford-Hill, between Newington and Tottenham, (where their Majesties lay the Night before) who, after they had done their respective Duties, and kissed their Majesties Hands, conducted them to the Field, where the Lord Mayor, the Nobility, and Aldermen waited for them.

HIS Majesty came into the Field about 10 o'Clock, in a Coach, he sitting on the right Side of it, and her Majesty on his right Hand, the Prince, the Duke of York, and the Princess Mary, being within the Coach, and the Prince Elector Palatine, and the Dutchess of Richmond, sitting on the other Side; their Majesties being attended by divers Lords and Ladies.

WHEN the Coach came against the Lord Mayor's Tent, his Majesty caused it to stay, where divers of the Nobility that had attended his coming thither, presented themselves to his Majesty, and joying in his safe Return, kissed both their Majesties Hands.

AFTER which the Lord Mayor, Knights, Mr. Recorder, and Aldermen, presented themselves likewise in humble Manner to his Majesty. The Lord Mayor tendered the City Sword and Sceptre to him, who re-delivered them to his Lordship, where kneeling (together with Mr. Recorder) by the Coach-Side, Mr. Recorder made a grave, pithy, and short Speech to his Majesty, as followeth:

May it please your MAJESTY,

The Recorder's Speech to the King.

“THIS is a Day of exceeding great Joy to “ your Citizens of LONDON. Joy “ exalted to the highest Degree to see you return in “ Safety, after a long Absence, and to see this hap“ py Meeting with your dearest Consort, our good
“ and gracious Queen, and with those blessed “ Children, that are the Fruit of your Loves,
“ and Pledges to us of a fruitful and hopeful Suc“ cession.

“ I can truly say this from the Representative “ Body of your City, from whence I have my “ Warrant. They meet your Majesty with as “ much Love and Affection, as ever Citizens of “ LONDON met with any of your Royal Pro“ genitors, King or Queen of this Kingdom, and “ with as hearty a Desire to shew itself fully.
“ Pardon their Failures where you meet with “ any.

“ WE tender to you no small Present: It “ would but lessen us, I am sure, whatever it
“ were; it would be far short of our Meaning.

“ WE present to you our Hearts and Affec“ tions; Hearts of true Subjects, full of Loyalty
“ to you, our King and Sovereign.

“ 'TIS true, in this we offer your Majesty but “ your own. They were by just Right yours be“ fore: But upon this new Enlivening and Ex“ pression be pleased to take them as a new Gift.
“ We offer them cheerfully. Vouchsafe to ac“ cept them graciously, and with the Influence of “ those excellent and Princely Virtues, which we “ know, by great Assurance, to be eminent in “ your Royal Person, the Defence of our esta“ blished Religion, and the clear Current of your “ Justice, from the Fountain through the Streams, “ be pleased to cherish them.

“ VOUCHSAFE likewise to uphold and coun“ tenance that antient Form and Frame of Go“ vernment, which hath been long established in “ the City, that Power and Authority of yours,
“ which you have committed to your Lord Mayor,
“ your true and faithful Subject and Servant, and “ the fit Reverence and Respect due to the Al“ dermen, his Brethren, who are to assist him in “ his Government. We shall be thereby the “ better enabled to serve your Majesty, and con“ stantly to render to you the Fruits of a true “ Obedience, and (as our Duty binds us) we shall “ never cease to bless you, and pray for you, and “ your dearest Consort, our gracious Queen, and “ for this your Royal and Princely Offspring,
“ for your Majesty's long Life and prosperous “ Reign over us, in Peace and Glory, and with “ full Contentment, and I doubt not, but every “ true Subject will join with us in this and say, “ Amen.

“ THESE Expressions of Love of Loyalty, and “ these hearty Wishes and Desires which I have “ mentioned, I meet with every where from your “ Citizens of LONDON. They are the soft
“ and still Musick prepared for your Majesties “ Welcome, the Entertainment this Day. The “ joyful Acclamations of your People, upon the “ Sight of your Royal Person, will make it “ louder: And all cheerfully bearing their agree“ ing Parts together, shall, I hope, this Day, “ make up to your Majesty a full and pleasing “ Harmony.

VOL. I.

To which his Majesty made this gracious Answer.

Master Recorder,

“ I must desire you (because my Voice cannot “ reach to all those that I desire should hear “ me) to give most hearty Thanks to all the good “ Citizens of LONDON, for the hearty Ex“ pressions of their Love this Day to me: And “ indeed I cannot express the Contentment I “ have received therein. For now I see that all “ these former Tumults and Disorders have only “ risen from the meaner Sort of People, and that “ the Affections of the better and main Part of “ the City, have been ever Loyal and Affection“ ate to my Person and Government.

The King's Answer.

“ And likewise, it comforts me to see, that “ all these Mis-reports that have been made of “ me in my Absence, have not the least Power
“ to do me Prejudice in your Opinions, as may “ be easily seen by this Day's Expression of Joy.

“ AND now I think it fit for me to assure “ you, that I am returned with as hearty and “ kind Affection to my People in general, and to “ this City in particular, as can be desired by “ loving Subjects. The first I shall express, by “ Governing you all according to the Laws of “ this Kingdom, and in Maintaining you in your “ full Liberties, but chiefly in Maintaining and “ Protecting the true Protestant Religion, ac“ cording as it hath been established in my two “ famous Predecessors Times, Queen Elizabeth,
“ and my Father: And this, I will do (if Need “ be) to the Hazard of my Life, and all that is “ dear unto me.

“ As for the City in particular, I shall study
“ by all means their Prosperity, and I assure you
“ I willingly grant those few reasonable De“ mands you have now made unto me, in the “ Name of the City. Likewise I shall study to “ re-establish that flourishing Trade, which now
“ is in some Disorder among you, which I doubt “ not to effect, with the good Assistance of the “ Parliament.

“ ONE Thing I have thought of, as a parti“ cular Testimony of my Affection to you, which “ is to give back unto you that Part of London- “ derry, which heretofore was wrested from you;
“ this, I confess, as that Kingdom is now, is no “ great Gift. But I intend, first to recover it,
“ and then to give it you whole and entirely.
“ And for the legal Part of this, I command you,
“ Mr. Recorder, to wait upon me, to see it punc“ tually performed.

“ I will end as I began, to desire you, Mr.
“ Recorder, to give all the City Thanks in bet“ ter Expressions than I can make, tho' I must “ tell you, it will be far short of that real Con“ tentment I find in my Heart, for this real and “ seasonable Demonstration of their Affections “ to me.

HIS Majesty having ended his Speech, was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon the Lord Mayor and Mr. Recorder, with the City Sword: Both their Majesties giving their Hands to them to kifs, as also to the Knights, Aldermen, City Council, and Officers.

AFTER which, his Majesty and the Prince alighted from the Coach, and took their Horses;
the Queen, the Duke of York, Princess Mary, Prince Elector, and the Dutchess of Richmond remaining in the Coach.

THE Nobility, and others of his Majesty's
Train, were marshalled by the Officers of Arms.
So that the whole Order was in this Manner:

The City Marshal.
The Sheriffs Trumpeters.

S f f

The

The Sheriffs Men.
Citizens in Velvet Coats and Chains.
The City Council and Officers.

being a Knight, and of the Privy Council.

B A R O N S.

Lord Goring. Lord Coventry.
Lord Fielding. Lord Digby.
Lord Mowbray.
Viscount Conway.

E A R L S.

Earl Rivers. Earl of Bath.
Earl of Cumberland. Earl of Essex.
Lord Chamberlain of the King's House.
Duke of Richmond.

Clarencieux and Norroy.
Lord Keeper. Lord Privy Seal.
Serjeants at Arms : Among whom,
One for the City.
Equerries and Footmen.
The Prince's Highness.
Equerries and Footmen.
Garter.

The Lord Mayor, carrying the City's Sword, by his Majesty's special Appointment, as a Grace and Favour at this Time.

A Gentleman Usher, Daily Waiter.
Lord Great Chamberlain.

Marquis of Hertford, bearing the Sword of State.
Earl Marshal.

The King's Majesty.
The Queen's Majesty,
In her Coach richly Embroidered :
And with Her,

The Duke of York, the Princess Mary, and the Prince Elector.

Marquis Hamilton, Master of the Horse ;
Leading the Horse of State.

The Earl of Salisbury, Captain of the Pensioners.
The Gentlemen Pensioners, with their Pole-
Axes ; all mounted with Pistols at their Saddles.
The Earl of Holland, Lord General beyond
Trent.

And after him,
Viscount Grandison, with many other principal Commanders in the late Northern Expedition.
After them, divers Ladies, and other Great Personages of Note.
The Yeomen of the Guard.

THEY all entered the City at Moorgate, where their Majesties were welcomed with a Noise of Trumpets, appointed to attend there to that Purpose.

FROM which Place they proceeded to Bishopsgate, and so through Cornhill, to St. Laurence-Lane End in Cheapside.

THE Companies in Liveries stood on the Left Hand, as their Majesties passed by : The Rails of the Standings being covered with Blue Cloth ;
and the Standings themselves being richly adorned with Banners, Ensigns, and Pendants, of the Arms of each Company respectively : Nine Companies of the twelve standing in the Morning :
The Lord Mayor's Company beginning against St. Laurence-Lane End ; and the other eight, in their Order, towards Bishopsgate : The rest of the Way where they left, to Moorgate, being supplied by some of the inferior Companies.

THE Outside of the Houses, all the Way their Majesties passed, being beautified with rich Tapestry.

ON the North Side of the Street (four Feet distant from the Houses) were Rails placed, to regulate and keep the People in good Order, from Bishopsgate to Cornhill ; and so to Temple-Bar : At the Beginning of which Rails, (viz.
at Bishopsgate) by the Discretion of the two Captains, and three Marshals, the first Horseman of the Liveries began to make a Stand.
The first Rank of them placing themselves single, faced to the Liveries that were in the Standings, and the rest, passing along, placed themselves in the same Order. The Trumpets and Pendants in each Company standing in the Front, and then the Companies themselves ; the youngest being next to the Pendant, and so upwards by Seniority, to the Master of the Company, who took his Place last. Then began the Pendant, and youngest of the next Company, to make their Stand as the former, till they came to St. Laurence-Lane End. There being five Feet Distance from one Horse to another ; in which Space stood each Horseman's Footman, with a Truncheon in his Hand, making, by this Means, a Guard for their Majesties, and the rest of their Train.

AND it fell out, that most of the Companies of Horse were placed right against their own Companies in the Standings.

THE People that were Spectators in the Streets, were disposed, Part behind the Horse, and Part behind the Liveries.

AND by this good Order, their Majesties, and the Train, passed quietly without Interruption.

THEIR Majesties coming along Cornhill, several Trumpeters, that were placed in the Clock-House of the Exchange, gave them their second Welcome into the City ; and as they went, the Conduit in Cornhill, and the great Conduit in Cheapside, ran with Red Wine, to express the Joy of the City that Day.

BEING come to St. Laurence-Lane End, the Passage being strait, neither Horse nor Foot could be planted there ; so that only the Sheriffs Officers, the City Council, and Officers, the Sheriffs, Aldermen, and the Lord Mayor, conducted their Majesties, and their Train, to Guildhall :

AT their Majesties Entrance, were several Lords and Ladies, that had not given their Attendance Abroad, presented themselves to his Majesty, and conducted him and the Queen up to the New and Old Council Chambers, being appointed for their Repose, till Dinner might be served to the Table. The four Comptrollers for the Day, and about eighty grave Citizens, in Foins and Liveries, standing and making a Lane on both Sides their Passage, to whom their Majesties shewed gracious Respects ; the Musick of the City giving them their next Welcome.

THEIR Majesties, were no sooner reposed, but Word was given for serving up Dinner to their Table. The Place appointed for it was the Hufings at the East End of the Hall, which was raised almost two Yards from the Ground, the Floor being covered with Turkey
Carpets ; and all the Hall, as all the other Rooms of the Guildhall, was hanged and adorned with rich Tapestry.

IN the Middle of the Place where their Majesties dined, was hung up a Cloth of State, and two Chairs of State were set under it : Before which was placed a Table of six Yards long.
At the South End whereof (two Yards distant from the Table) was a Table of Garnish of three Yards square ; and at the North End was a Room erected for Musick of all Sorts, for the better Enter-

* In placing the Messengers, an Error was committed :
For they should have followed the Sheriffs Officers.

Entertainment and Delight of their Majesties, while they should be at Dinner.

AND four or five Steps under the Place, where their Majesties dined, was a Frame of Timber erected, and floored with Deals, a Yard from the Ground, which extended almost to the Hall Door, upon each Side whereof was a Table set from the upper to the lower End of it: At which two Tables, the Lords and Ladies that attended their Majesties were to dine. Between which was a spacious Way left, covered with Green Bays, whereon their Majesties were to pass to the Place where they should dine.

AND in the West Part of the Hall, below the Gate, on the South Side, was a long Table placed for his Majesty's Pensioners: And in other Rooms that were not for their Majesties Privacy, were likewise Tables prepared for several Sorts of their Majesties Attendants.

THE Dinner was served up in this Manner:

FROM their Majesties Table to the Dresser, which was at the West End of the Hall, stood the Eighty Livery-Men before-mentioned, in two Ranks, about two Yards distant from each other, Face to Face, one Rank of them receiving from the Dresser the King's Meat, and the other the Prince's, at one and the same Time; they never stirring, or removing from their Places, but delivering Dish after Dish, from one to another, 'till it came to the Sewers, who placed it upon the Table.

THEIR Majesties Meat was proportioned into four Services. The first consisting of 50 Dishes of cold Meats, as Brawn, Fish, and cold baked Meats planted upon the Garnish or Side-Table. The three other Services were of all Sorts of hot Flesh and Fish, boiled, roasted and baked; to the Number of 120 Dishes. After which was served up a curious and well ordered Desert.

AT the High Table dined his Majesty, his Royal Consort the Queen, the Prince, the Duke of York, the Princess Mary, and the Prince Elector Palatine, in this Order:

THE King sat under the Cloth of State, and her Majesty close to him, on his Left Hand: On his Majesty's Right Hand (about a Yard distant) sat the Prince; and about the same Distance from his Highness, sat the Prince Elector.

AT her Majesty's Left Hand (about a Yard's Space from her) was placed the Princess Mary; and not far from her, the Duke of York.

THE Service for the Tables of the Lords and Ladies was thus ordered:

THE Liveries before-mentioned (after the Meat was placed on the High Table) served up the Dinner to those Tables, but in another Posture; for whereas before they stood in two Ranks, Face to Face, they now turned Back to Back. The Reason was, because (the Meat being served up to both Tables together) the one Rank of them might face to one Table, and the other to the other.

To these two Tables were appointed ten Messes, consisting of 500 Dishes.

THESE two Tables being likewise furnished, Care was taken for the rest of the Train, that were thought fit to be entertained within the Hall, who were all served so plentifully, that not a Man was heard to go discontented away.

AND because it was conceived before-hand by the Committees, that there might come more Company with their Majesties, than could be conveniently provided for within the Hall, large Provision was made abroad for the Guard, Footmen, Coachmen, and the like, where there dined about 150 Persons of all Sorts.

HIS Majesty received such Content, as well in the Freedom of the Entertainment, as in the well Ordering thereof, that he was pleased by Words to express his Royal Thoughts, as well at Dinner as afterwards, (so did the Queen, Princes and Nobility) how great Content and Satisfaction he received from the City by it.

HIS Majesty also, after Dinner, sent for Mr. John Pettus, a Gentleman of an antient Family in the County of Suffolk, who had married the Lord Mayor's Daughter, and bestowed the Honour of Knighthood upon him; knowing that whatsoever in this Kind he should do to his Lordship, or his, must necessarily redound to the Honour of the City, and be an Expression of his Grace and Favour to it.

THEIR Majesties having reposed themselves a while after Dinner (the Days being short) the Word was given for their Departure; and by this Time the three Companies of the Twelve, and the rest of the inferior Companies, that had not waited in the Morning, had taken their Standings from St. Laurence-Lane End, Westward towards Temple-Bar.

THE two Captains also, with the three Marshals, had ordered the Horsemen after this Manner.

THEY first drew up the Sheriffs Men in the Front, by two and two; then they caused the Rear of the Horsemen, that had made the first Stand at Bishopsgate in the Morning, to pass thro' the rest of the Companies, after the Sheriffs Men, and so the rest according to their former Order, 'till the Number of 500 were ranked again, by two and two, as in the Morning, and so passed thro' Cheapside, 'till the Rear of the first Company, which was the Lord Mayor's, came even with St. Laurence-Lane End; and in this Order they staid 'till their Majesties were ready to come out of Guildhall, which was about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon.

THE Lord Mayor carrying the Sword before his Majesty, as in the Morning, and the rest that conducted him from Cheapside to Guildhall, led his Majesty thither again, where the Word was given for the Horse to advance, which they did, and every one fell into the same Order, in which they were in the Morning; the greatest Difference being, That whereas in the Forenoon the Footmen carried Truncheons in their Hands, they now went with lighted Torches, which gave so great a Light, as that the Night seemed to be turned to Day.

AS their Majesties passed along, the Trumpets and City Musick were placed in several Parts sounding and playing; which, together with the several continual and joyful Acclamations of the People, gave great Content to both their Majesties.

THE little Conduit in Cheapside, and the Conduit in Fleet-street, running with Wine, as the other two Conduits had done in the Morning; and in their Passage by the South Door of St. Paul's Church, the Choir (with Sackbuts and Cornets joining with them) sang an Anthem of Praise to God, and Prayers for their Majesties long Lives, which pleased his Majesty so well, that he gave them an extraordinary Respect.

AND in their Passage to Temple-Bar, he made such Expressions of his gracious Acceptance of the City's Love, that the People could not sufficiently make manifest the Joy they conceived at it: So that by this Time, the whole Day seemed to be spent in a Kind of Emulation, as it were, between their Majesties and the City; the Citizens blessing and praying for their Majesties, and their Princely Issue; and their Majesties returning the same Blessings upon the Heads of the Citizens, with innumerable Thanks added thereto; insomuch, that it is hard to resolve, whether the Citizens were more joyed with the gracious Acceptance of their weak, tho' hearty and loyal Endeavours, or their Majesties, with the Performance of the Day's seasonable Service.

vice. Both their Majesties, and the Citizens, (seeming as it were) not well satisfied, to whom the Thanks of this Day's Work were properly due.

BUT to proceed :

WHEN the Sheriffs Men ( who were in the Front ) were come as far as the May-Pole in the Strand, they began to make a Stand, and singled themselves by falling off at the Right Hand of the Street, their Company extending in Length as far as Exeter House, and after them the Horsemen did the like, in the same Order, and Posture, as they had done in the Morning ; and so continued to the Tilt-Yard, over-against his Majesty's Palace at Whitehall; to which Place the Lord Mayor, Knights, and Aldermen, conducted their Majesties.

After the ENTERTAINMENT.

AND now by this Time, it might be conceived, that a Period might be set to this Relation; and that his Majesty had given ample and sufficient Testimony, of his gracious Acceptation of the City's Love, and loyal Affection, towards him. But Manet altâ mente repòstum, in a better Sense than the Poet spoke it. His Majesty had taken so deep Impression of his poor Subjects Love, that he thought he had not sufficiently expressed himself by all that he had already so graciously been pleased to demonstrate. And therefore, when the Lord Mayor had brought their Majesties into Whitehall, and was taking his Leave in humble Manner, his Majesty most graciously embraced and thanked him, and withal gave him in Charge, That in his Name the whole City might be thanked.

WHEREUPON, against Tuesday Morning following, being St. Andrew's Day, the Lord Mayor caused a Common Council to be warned, where Mr. Recorder, in an eloquent and pithy Speech, related the Charge and Command that his Majesty (by the Lord Mayor) had imposed upon him. And withal (as was thought fit) he read his Speech to his Majesty, and his Majesty's most gracious Answer, (both which are before set down) which so much revived and increased the Joy of all the Commons, that an Act was there made, and the Lord Mayor was intreated to appoint Mr. Recorder, and so many Aldermen and Commoners as his Lordship should think fit, to attend his Majesty, and to return their humble Thanks for all his great and Princely Favours to the City; and to prefer to his Majesty such other Desires of the City, as should be thought necessary and convenient.

IN the mean Time, his Majesty (studying, as it were, how to add more Honour to the Lord Mayor, and in his to the whole City) had sent to his Lordship his gracious Letters Patents, whereby he created him a Baronet.

THE Lord Mayor, according to the Power given unto him, by the Act of Common Council, called a Committee to him House, where he appointed how many Aldermen (besides those of the Committee for the Entertainment,) should attend his Majesty, with Mr. Recorder, in Pursuance of the said Act; where it was concluded, what Desires they should humbly represent to his Majesty, on the City's Behalf.

UPON Friday the 3d of December, Mr. Recorder, with these Aldermen, viz. Sir George Whitmore, Alderman Cordal, Alderman Soames, Alderman Gayer, Alderman Garrard, Alderman Wollaston, and the two Sheriffs (being Aldermen likewise) with eight of the Commoners of the said Committee, went by his Lordship's Appointment to Hampton-Court; where they were received by the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorset, Lord Chamberlain to her Majesty,

Sir Peter Wyche, Comptroller of his Majesty's Household, and other Officers and Gentlemen of Quality, till they should be admitted into his Majesty's Presence. And after some small Stay, his Majesty, with his Consort the Queen, (attended by the Duke of Richmond, Marquis Hamilton, and the Earl of Dorset) came into her Majesty's Presence Chamber; and soon after, Mr. Recorder, the Aldermen, and Commoners were called in, where, after their humble Duties tendered, Mr. Recorder, in an elegant Speech, presented the loyal Affections, and humble Thanks of the City to their Majesties, together with two humble Petitions, formerly agreed on to be preferred to his Majesty, in Words to this Effect:

" THAT according to his Majesty's Commandment, given to the Lord Mayor and himself, they had published that which his Majesty had graciously expressed at his Entry into the City, not only to particular Men thereof, but at a Common Council, which is the Representative Body of the City: And there made known the most gracious Acceptance, by both their Majesties, of the Endeavours of the Citizens, for their Welcome and Entertainment that Day.

" THAT after the publishing of it, they all forthwith, with one Heart, and one Voice, earnestly entreated, and pressed the Lord Mayor, that by his Means, and in such Way as he should think fit, their most humble and hearty Thanks might be tendered and presented to both their Majesties, for that singular Honour they have done the City, in vouchsafing their Presence among them, and for those real Testimonies his Majesty had given of his Princely Favour and Affection towards them, tending so much to their Profit and Advantage. And especially for both their Majesties gracious Acceptance of their poor, (tho' hearty) Endeavours: With these, and the like Expressions, which came from among them; That if they had done a thousand Times more, it had been but their Duty. That the Memory of this Honour, and these Favours, should ever live among them. That it should be preserved to Posterity. That their Desires and Studies should be, as much as in them lay, that they might be thought worthy of these Honours and Favours, and of so good and gracious a King and Queen.

" THUS the Lord Mayor had required us that were present, to attend their Majesties with this Message from the City; and to make this thankful Acknowledgment to them: Beseeching their Majesties (as an Addition to their former Favours) to take it in good Part from them: And this was the first Part of our Errand.

" THAT we had two humble Petitions to prefer to both their Majesties: And we had the Rise and Encouragement to both, from that which his Majesty was pleased to deliver to us.

" OUR first Petition was, That their Majesties would vouchsafe this Honour to the City, (if it might stand with their good Pleasures) to make their Residence at this Season of the Year, at the Palace at Whitehall. Their Presence was very joyful to us; and his Majesty was pleased to tell us, That he would study our Prosperity, and restore the Trade of the City, which of late had been in some Disorder. Their Residence there would give a good Quickening to the Retailing Trade, and by Consequence to the Merchant.

" OUR Second was, Whereas since his happy Return hither, there had been some late Disorders about Westminster, among some People that

“ that met there, that their Majesties would not “ impute this to the Body of the City, or to “ the better Sort of Citizens. We held it a “ Misfortune and a Scandal upon us, that when “ these Disorders were mentioned, the City was “ named with it; and that our Desire was to “ vindicate and redeem it, by some publick dis-“ avowing it; and we could not begin better, “ than in the Presence of their Majesties, to “ take it into their Considerations, that the “ Skirts of the City, where the Lord Mayor,
 “ and Magistrates of LONDON, have nei“ ther Power, nor Liberty, are more populous
 “ than the City itself, and fuller of the meaner “ Sort of People: And if any Dwellers in the
 “ the City should be Actors in it, (as, who can “ deny, but among Millions of People some “ there may be?) yet their Purpose was un“ known to us: And to give their Majesties some “ Assurance herein, there were some present
 “ there among us; Men that had lived in the “ City above forty Years together, that knew the “ City, and the better Sort of Citizens, and were
 “ at Westminster, attending other Occasions,
 “ when those People met there, and took a heed-
 “ ful View of them: And they have affirmed,
 “ that they knew not the Face of one Man a“ mong them.

Mr. Recorder having ended, his Majesty presently, and graciously gave Answer, thus, in Effect:

“ THAT he was very well pleased with the “ hearty and loyal Affections of the Citizens.
 “ For which he gave them Thanks: And for the “ first Petition, though he and her Majesty had “ before purposed to Winter at Hampton-Court;
 “ yet being now fully persuaded, that the Lord “ Mayor and Aldermen, and the most considera“ ble Part of the Citizens of LONDON, had “ not any Hand in the Disorder mentioned by Mr.
 “ Recorder, in his second Petition, he intended
 “ (and so he knew her Majesty would) to alter
 “ his Resolution, and with all convenient Speed “ repair to Whitehall, there to keep their Christ- “ mas, and be ready to do any Thing else that “ might promote the Trade of the City: De“ siring Mr. Recorder to join with him, in taking “ some Course for Prevention of the like Disor“ ders for the future.

AFTER his Majesty had ended his Answer, and that Mr. Recorder, and Sir George Whitmore had kissed his Royal Hand, the next Alderman, in Seniority, kneeled down, to receive the like Princely Favour; when suddenly, and unexpectedly, his Majesty drew a Sword, and instead of giving him his Hand to kiss, he laid his Sword upon his Shoulder, and Knighted him: The like he did to all the other Aldermen, and the two Sheriffs, being in Number seven.

THIS done, their Majesties gave them their Hands to kiss: The like Princely Favour vouchsafed they to the Commoners of the Committee:
 And after many gracious Demonstrations of Love to them, and the whole City, his Majesty commanded that they should dine before they left the Court.

HIS Majesty's Command was fully and effectually performed; for as soon as they had, in most humble Manner, taken their Leaves of their Majesties, they were brought by the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorset, and by Mr. Comptroller, and other Officers of the Court, into a Room, where a Table was prepared for them, and no others, to dine at; where they were bountifully Feasted, being honoured with the Presence of the Earl of Dorset, who vouchsafed to dine with them, and, in their Majesties Name, gave them exceeding great Welcome, expressing to them that Love, which he ever had abundantly manifested to the City. Mr. Comptroller likewise dined with them; using them with very great Respect.

WHILE they were at Dinner, there came two Gentlemen to them, one from his Majesty, the other from the Queen, to let them know, their Majesties had remembered the Health of the Lord Mayor, and the whole City: Which they entertained with due Respect, returning humble
 Thanks, for their Majesties extraordinary Favour.

DINNER being over, they took their Leaves of the Earl, and other Officers of Quality, and departed, returning to the Lord Mayor, to whom they gave a Relation of their Majesties Grace and Favour to his Lordship, the whole City, and themselves.

THUS have you seen the City's Love and Loyalty to King Charles I. And however afterwards, upon that unfortunate Monarch's being put to Death, they were forced to comply with the Government that was set up by a strong Hand;
 yet, for a lasting Memorial of the City's Sted-fastness to the antient Kingly Government, and Maintenance of English Freedom, we must relate how the Lord Mayor, and several of the Aldermen, utterly refused to publish an Act, made by the Commons, soon after the King was beheaded, intituled, An Act for the Exheredation of the Royal Line, the Abolishment of Monarchy in the Kingdom, and the setting up of a Commonwealth. These that so refused, were Sir Abraham Reinardson, Mayor; Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen: For which the Mayor was put out of his Mayoralty, and he, with those Aldermen, committed to the Tower. In April following, the three Aldermen were to be brought to the Bar of the then Governing Lords; which they hearing of, bravely and stoutly, as good Citizens, and true Englishmen, refused their Authority, and signified to the Lieutenant of the Tower, that they would not obey his Order to bring them before the Bar of that House, declaring their firm Resolution to stand for the Defence of the established Laws of the Land, and their Protestation against the Lords Jurisdiction over them, or any other Commoners in Criminal Cases: With an Appeal from the said Lords to their proper and competent Judges, i. e. a Jury of their Equals, and Judges sworn to proceed according to the known Laws of England. All this may be seen by the Letter and the Petition following:

A Salva Libertate, sent to Colonel Tichburn, Lieutenant of the Tower, on Sunday, April 23, by Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen of LONDON, now Prisoners in the Tower: Being occasioned by the Receipt of a Paper sent unto them by the said Lieutenant; wherein the said Lieutenant was seemingly authorized to carry them before the Lords on Tuesday the 25th of April.

To our Honoured Friend, Colonel Tichburn, Lieutenant of the Tower.

S I R,

“ WE received a Paper from you, seeming
 “ to authorize you to carry our Persons “ before the Lords, to answer to a Charge: We “ are constrained to inform you hereby, That our “ Persons ought not to be hurried to and fro, or “ disturbed at the Pleasure of any Man, neither “ can we yield Obedience to the Commands of “ any, which are not legal: And therefore in “ case you intend to disturb us on Tuesday next,

 “ we expect to see a legal Warrant from some “ Person, or Court, which have Jurisdiction
 “ over us, in case of a real or supposed Crime :
 “ And we must acquaint you, That the Lords
 “ have no legal Power to summon us to answer to “ any Crime whereof we are accused or suspected :
 “ And therefore you must expect to answer for “ whatsoever Injury you offer to our Persons :
 “ And know hereby, That we shall not voluntarily “ go from hence to Westminster, by Virtue of the “ Paper received, but shall suffer you to carry “ us, if you shall send Force which we cannot “ resist.

Your Friends and Servants,

From our Chambers in the Tower of LONDON, April
 the 23d, 1648.

Thomas Adams,
 John Langham,
 James Bunce.

*To the Right Honourable the Lords Assembled in Parliament : The humble Petition of Thomas
 Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen of LONDON, &c.*

SHEWETH,

“ THAT if your Petitioners shall submit to “ your Lordships Jurisdiction over Com“ moners in those Criminal Cases, or Novalisms “ in Law, intituled, Articles of Impeachment of “ High Treason, and other Misdemeanors, they “ shall not only be Feloes de se, but also shall “ murder the Persons, and ruin the Estates of “ all the Free-born People of England; and that “ which is more, they shall betray the Common “ Law, which is the Supreme Authority (under “ GOD) of the Nation, and the Inheritance of “ every Freeman’s Posterity : And that which is “ worst of all, they shall be instrumental to “ pull down all the Judicatories of the King“ dom, and re-edify an Arbitrary Government,
 “ many Stories higher than ever the Star-Cham“ ber, High-Commission, or Council-Table
 “ were. And by the same Rule that your Lord“ ships have fined several Commoners 500 l. a “ Man for not kneeling, or submitting to your “ Lordships Jurisdiction in Criminal Cases, for “ which there is no Law; nay, which is abso“ lutely, and apparently, against the funda“ mental Laws of the Land, and the ordinary “ Rule of your own Court of Judicature; usual“ ly referring those Causes which appertain to “ the Common Law, to the other Courts of “ Justice, especially if the People desire it; so “ you may fine their Fellow Citizens, and “ Commoners of England, as many Millions,
 “ and take away the Lives and Estates of all, as “ well as some, to the perpetual Destroying and “ Enslaving the whole Kingdom. By the 29th
 “ Chapter of the great Charter, all Commoners “ are to be tried by their Equals; and there are “ thirty Sessions of Parliament, which confirm
 “ the great Charter, being a Statute Declarato“ ry of the Common Law; especially those emi“ nent Laws, wherein your Lordships had your “ Shares in making them; viz. The Petition of “ Right, 3 Caroli, and the Act for abolishing
 “ the Star-Chamber, and regulating the Coun“ cil-Table, in the 17th Caroli, in which many “ Statutes are enumerated; that Commoners “ ought to be tried by their Equals, by Bill of “ Indictment, or Writ Original, and by those “ of their Neighbourhood: And all Decrees and “ Judgments made contrary thereto, are decla“ red thereby to be null and void in Law, which “ bars all Precedents. And by several Decla“ rations and Ordinances your Lordships have “ declared, That Ordinances are no Laws, but “ Temporary, during the Wars, and the Case

 “ of Necessity being taken away, your Lord“ ships have promised the Free People of Eng- “ land, That they shall be governed according “ to the known Laws of the Land, as it appears “ in the Ordinance, dated the 15th of Janu- “ ary 1647. And it is against the Law of God, “ Nature, and Nations, that any Person, or “ Persons, should be Judge and Parties, Exa“ miners, or Accusers, in their own Cause; or “ to be tried any otherwise than by a known “ Law; for, where there is no Law there is no “ Transgression. It is declared by Sir Edward “ Coke, That the Parliament cannot make a “ Law against the Law of Nature, which is “ Custom, according to Right and necessary Rea“ son. That Precedents are nothing in Com“ parison of the Common and Statute Laws.
 “ These being known Maxims in Law, A facto
 “ ad Jus non valet Argumentum. Gubernandum
 “ est Legibus non Exemplis. Articles are nothing
 “ in Law, but meer Innovations, and Prerogatives “ extrajudicial, especially when ordinary Persons “ are in Question. The old Maxim in Law is, “ Non recurrendum est ad Extraordinaria quando
 “ fieri potest per Ordinaria. And your Lord“ ships are not only Sworn, but have imposed “ several Oaths, as the Protestation, and so“ lemn League and Covenant, upon the Free
 “ Commoners of England, to defend the Fun“ damental Laws of the Land: And they are “ confident your Lordships will be very tender “ of the Preservation of the great Charter, in “ which is wrapped up our Lives, Liberties, and “ Estates. Your noble Predecessors being so “ glorious and famous Instruments in assisting
 “ this People in purchasing the same.

“ CONCERNING the Point of Precedent, “ which is all can be said for your Lordships, we “ shall give you the Answer:

“ I. IT is observable, That all such Commo“ ners, which have submitted to your Lordships “ Jurisdiction, were in the Time of the Civil “ Wars, Flagrante Bello, not by Compulsion,
 “ but by voluntary Petitions of the Commons,
 “ in a summary Way to the King in Person.

“ II. ONE Precedent against your Lord“ ships Jurisdiction, is of more Consequence than “ a thousand for it. The Reason is plain; be“ cause all Courts of Judicature are bottomed “ upon the Law of the Land, and it cannot be “ supposed, that any Court can be miscognizant “ of its own Jurisdiction. Your Lordships have “ confessed in Sir Simon de Benisford’s Case, That “ it is against the Law, for Peers to try Com“ moners; and your Predecessors have promised,
 “ upon Record, that they will never do the like “ again, though that Occasion were superlative.
 “ Rot. 2. Rot. Parl. 5. Numb. 45.

“ III. THE Corporation of Cambridge was ac“ cused before the King and Lords, for comply“ ing with the Rebels of Essex, Kent, and Hert-
 “ ford; their Counsel pleaded against the Juris“ diction of the Lords House, in the Point of “ Treason, and the King and Lords allowed the “ Plea.

“ IV. As there are many Precedents, more
 “ may be alledged, that Commoners have de“ nied your Lordships Jurisdiction, and that your “ Lordships have transmitted such Causes to “ the Common Law, if desired by the Free Peo“ ple, so there can no Precedent be shewn, that “ Commoners, which have refused to be tried by “ your House, have been over-ruled by them in “ Point of Jurisdiction.

“ V. There was never any Precedent since
 “ there were Parliaments in England, that the same “ Session

“ Session of Parliament hath imprisoned, fined,
 “ or any otherwise disseized, or destroyed any “ Man, for obeying or executing the Laws, Or“ dinances, or Orders of the same Parliament:
 “ And there are many Ordinances in Force,
 “ which indemnify all those which have acted by
 “ the Authority of Parliament, viz. May 26, “ 1642. 1 P. Book Decl. P. 281, June 14,
 “ 1642, P. 377.

The Premises considered.

Y O U R Petitioners being Free Commoners of England, according to the known Laws of the Land (de Jure) claim their Birthright, which is, To be tried by God and their Country, in his Majesty's Court of Justice, by the sworn Judges of the Law, and a Jury of their Equals, of their own Neighbourhood, where the pretended Fact was done:
 The Courts of Justice being open.

And your Petitioners shall pray.

A N D how forward and instrumental the City was in bringing back King Charles II. after his long Banishment, and in restoring the antient Constitution of the Kingdom, after the Usurpation, may appear by their promoting a Free Parliament, and other notable Things done by them, at a Common Council, December 29, 1659.

To this Common Council was presented a Report by Alderman Fowke, the Tenor whereof fol-loweth :

At the Committee of Common Council, &c.

V O T E D,

I. T H A T this Committee conceive the City of LONDON is at this Time in imminent and extraordinary Danger.

II. T H A T they judge it absolutely necessary, at this Time, for the Court of Common Council to put this City forthwith in a Posture of Defence.

III. A N D in Order thereto, That the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, settle six Regiments of Train'd Bands, with their respective Commanders and Officers.

IV. T H A T the Naming of those Commanders and Officers be left to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council.

T H A T the said Commanders and Officers Commissions, shall be under the Common Seal of the City, to be Sealed in open Court, before the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council.

T O U C H I N G the Letters received from Portf- mouth, and the Fleet, the Opinion of the Committee is,

T H A T several Commissioners be forthwith appointed to confer with the Lord Fleetwood, with Sir Athur Haslerig, Colonel Morley, and Colonel Walton, and with Vice-Admiral Lawson, and other Officers of the Fleet, in order to the Safety of the City, and the Peace and Settlement of the Nation, and in due Time to give an Answer to General Monk's Letter.

T H A T in order to the obtaining of that Peace and Safety, the Common Council do empower those Commissioners to propound the Convening of a Free Parliament, according to a late Declaration of this Court.

Voted, That these Votes be reported to the Common Council by Alderman Fowke.

W H I C H Report being read, and every Part thereof severally debated, was by this Court confirmed and approved of, saving the Right of the Court of Aldermen.

Alderman Fowke, } Appointed Commissioners to
 Mr. Richard Ford, } confer with Vice-Admi-
 Will. Bateman, Esq; } ral Lawson.

Alderman Tompson, } Appointed Commissioners to Colonel Bromfield, } confer with Sir Arthur Maximil. Beard, } Haslerig, &c.

Alderman Bateman, } Appointed Commissioners to Will. Vincent, Esq; } confer with the Lord Fleet-
 John Jolly, Esq; } wood, and the Speaker.

Instructions for the Commissioners.

To acquaint them that this Court hath received their Letters, and do return Thanks for their good Expressions, touching the Peace and Welfare of the Nation.

To acquaint them what the Court hath resolved for the Peace and Safety of the City.

A N D in Pursuance of the Declaration of December the 20th, to confer of the best Way to settle the Nation in a Way of Free Parliament, and to offer what they conceive conducing thereto, and to mediate Agreement and Peace between all Parties, in order to a Free Parliament.

December the 27th 1659, Alderman Fowke, and Commissioners to Vice-Admiral Lawson, made a Report of their Conference. A Committee appointed to attend the Parliament.

T H E Council of State, (as the governing Party, then called themselves) finding the City of LONDON thus generally inclined to bring in the King, and in order to that, standing for a Free Parliament, and perceiving how ill they stood affected to the present Power, made some Resolutions: And these Votes past February the 9th 1659.

T H A T the Commissioners for Government of the Army do appoint Forces to be in LON-DON, for preserving the Peace thereof, and of the Commonwealth; and for reducing the City to the Obedience of the Parliament. And that the Commissioners take Care, that the Posts and Chains in the said City be taken away, and the Gates of the City forthwith destroyed: And these Resolves of the House were sent to General Monk, and that he should put the same in Execution; who, however dissatisfied with the ungrateful Work, executed their Orders: And in the Sight of the Citizens, (to be punished for their Loyalty) took down their Portcullises, and Gates, and took away their Posts and Chains;
 and Monk and his Forces quartered in the City;
 where, notwithstanding, he had many Visitants of the chief Citizens, and of the secluded Members.

A N D further, to prevent the City's good Intention for the Restoration of the King and an-tient Government, the Parliament finding the Common Council of LONDON to be against them, ordered, it should be discontinued, and an Act brought in to constitute a new Common Council. Yet notwithstanding the City brought their Councils to bear soon after: And a Free Parliament was proclaimed in LONDON, which

which voted in the King. Wherein (as we see) the City had a prevailing Hand.

AND further, after the Restoration, the Citizens to shew their Abhorrence of the Arbitrary Doings of those Times, formally made an Act of Common Council, Anno 1683, Sir William Pritchard, Mayor, for Repealing the treasonable and disloyal Acts and Proceedings of that Court in the Time of the late Rebellion, a certain Number of eminent Citizens, Aldermen, and Commoners, having been appointed diligently to look over all past Acts of Common Council, made in those Times, and to report them; as appears more at large, by the said Act of Common Council, viz.

THE 6th of June 1683, at a Common Council this Day, a Report was brought into this Court, by the Committee appointed to inspect the Acts and Proceedings entered into the Journals of this Court, in the Times of Usurpation, or at any Time before or since, that might be fit to be explained or repealed. The Tenor of which Report is as followeth; that is to say,

To the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of LONDON. "Whereas by a late Order of this Honourable Court, it was referred unto them, whose Names are subscribed, [these were Sir William Turner, Sir James Edwards, Sir John Moor, Sir Henry Tulse, Sir Thomas Langham, Francis Griffith, Nathaniel Hawes, Henry Loads, Peter Ailworth, Nicholas Charlton, and Thomas Vernon] to inspect the Acts and other Proceedings entered in the Journal of this Court, in the Times of Usurpation, or at any Times, &c. that may be thought fit to be explained or repealed, they did humbly certify, that in Pursuance of the said Order, they had perused and examined those Journals, wherein they found not only many Innovations and Irregularities brought into that Court, and the Government of the City, but also most pernicious and abominable Proceedings, in Abetting and Carrying on those wicked and unnatural Divisions then raised in the Kingdom, and serving the Usurpations of those Times; all or most of which, they persuaded themselves could never have had Place in this Court, had not Violence been offered to the Government of the City. The Lord Mayor first arraigned, and imprisoned, divers loyal Aldermen and Commoners were, some imprisoned, others displaced, and all loyal Citizens generally discountenanced and discouraged; and others of factious, unquiet, and turbulent Spirits got themselves into the Common Council, and made up the greater Number therein. That all these Actions and Proceedings might (as they deserved) be obliterated and wholly expunged, that no Remembrance thereof might be transmitted to Posterity, to the Shame and Dishonour of this Court and City, but that other Matters were therewith all intermixed, which (for the Substance of them) were, in their Opinion, inoffensive, useful and fit to be continued. That several Committees had been appointed formerly by this Court, to obliterate the said unjust Proceedings, and there were Lines crossed over divers of them, which they presumed were made by the said Committees. But not being thereby obliterated, but still remaining in the Books of the Acts and Proceedings of this Court, and having never been particularly proclaimed, and repealed by any Vote or Act of this Court, that they had observed, they thought it were fitting, that the said and all other like disloyal and irregular Proceedings, should, by an express Act of this Council, be renounced, repealed, and made absolutely null and void. Which Proceedings, or the most of them, they set down and presented to this Court for that Purpose: And desired that some few of them might be openly read, to beget in this Court, as it had done in them, a just Abhorrence and Detestation of such Proceedings.

AND then follow'd a Catalogue of them, from the Year 1641, and so yearly down to the Year 1657.

ALL which Particulars (as the said Committee did proceed) being highly disloyal, and favouring of the Faction and Usurpation of those unhappy Times, they thought fit should by Act of this Court be disclaimed, revoked, abrogated, and repealed to all Intents and Purposes whatsoever: Both to demonstrate the Love to, and good Affection of the present Members of this Court to his Majesty, and the establish'd Government, and to vindicate them from all Imputation of the like pernicious Principles and Practices, and express their Dislike of all factious Innovations. So also will it prevent any ill Use that may be made in Time to come of the said irregular Actions.

AFTER the Reading of which Reports openly in the Court, they were approved of and agreed to and confirmed; and it was enacted by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons in that Common Council assembled, That all the several Acts, Orders, and Proceedings therein propounded should be disclaimed and repealed, and made void. And they, and every of them, were by the Authority of this Court disclaimed, repealed and made null and void.

BUT to return to the Time of the Restoration. (The Triumphant Arches erected by the City of LONDON, in the Year 1661, when his Majesty made his Cavalcade from the Tower to Westminster, in order to his Coronation, have been already described in Chap. X.)

IN the Year 1664, the City of LONDON lent his Majesty 100,000*l.* towards carrying on the Dutch War; for which, at the Meeting of the Parliament, they were voted the Thanks of both Houses.

IN the Year 1666, the Loyal London was launched at Deptford, a Ship carrying 100 Guns, built at the Charge of the City of LONDON, for the Service of his Majesty; the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, upon the London Frigate's being blown up in the Dutch War, having obtained Leave of his Majesty to build this Ship, and to honour it with the Epithet of Loyal.

IN the Year 1671, the City of LONDON, having all its publick Buildings recovered out of the Ruins of the dreadful Fire, to a greater Splendor and Beauty than before, made an humble Invitation to his Majesty to honour their Lord Mayor's Feast with his Presence, which the King accepting of, was entertained accordingly in their Guildhall.

IN the Year 1674, his Majesty having been pleased to honour the City again with his Presence at an Entertainment in Guildhall, and to accept of his Freedom of the City, by the Hands of Sir Thomas Player, their Chamberlain; the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen waited upon him at Whitehall, and presented him with the Copy of the Freedom of the City in a Box of Massive Gold, the Seal thereof hanging in a golden Box, set over with Diamonds of a considerable Value.

Sir Robert Viner, Lord Mayor in the Year 1675, erected at his own Charge, at Stocks-Market Conduit, upon a Pedestal, eighteen Feet high, an Equestrian Statue of King Charles II. represented trampling on an Enemy with his Horse's Feet; on the Pedestal are his Arms, within a Compartment of Fishes.

THE City, altho' thus Loyal to their Princes, has yet been jealous of the Invasion of their Religion and Liberty ; which was the Cause they so readily came into the Measures of the Revolution, in the Year 1688, as appears by their Address to the Prince of Orange, which was to this Purpose :

To his Highness the Prince of ORANGE :
The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of LONDON, in Common Council assembled.

May it please your Highness,

“ WE taking into Consideration your Highness's fervent Zeal for the Protestant Religion, manifested to the World in your many and hazardous Enterprizes, in which it hath pleased Almighty God to bless you with miraculous Success : We render our deepest Thanks to the Divine Majesty for the same, and beg Leave to present our most humble Thanks to your Highness, particularly for your appearing in Arms in this Kingdom, to carry on and perfect your glorious Design, to rescue England, Scotland, and Ireland, from Slavery and Popery ; and in a Free Parliament to establish the Religion and Laws of these Kingdoms, upon a sure and lasting Foundation. We have hitherto looked for some Remedy, for the Oppressions and imminent Dangers we, together with our Protestant Fellow Subjects, laboured under, from his Majesty's Concessions and Concurrences with your Highness's just and pious Purposes, express'd in your Gracious Declarations : But herein finding ourselves finally disappointed, by his Majesty's withdrawing himself, we presume to make your Highness our Refuge ; and do, in the Name of this Capital City, implore your Highness's Protection, and most humbly beseech your Highness to vouchsafe to repair to this City, where your Highness will be received with universal Joy and Satisfaction.

IN the Year 1689, his Majesty King William III. was made Free of the Grocers Company ; and the same Year, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen published an Order, offering 500 l. to discover the Person who offered an Indignity to his Picture in Guildhall.

AFTER the Accession of Queen Anne to the Throne, she was entertained in a most splendid Manner by the City at Guildhall ; and the City, to shew their Loyalty to that Princess, and their Regard to the glorious Actions of her renowned General John Duke of Marlborough, invited him to a publick Dinner, after his Return from the Battle of Ramellies ; Sir Robert Bedingfield being Lord Mayor. The Entertainment was magnificent in every Respect ; and an Ode was made on Purpose for the Occasion, set to Musick by Mr. Weldon, and performed in the Guildhall by Mr. Elford and Mr. Leveridge.

WERE we to mention all the Acts of Piety, Loyalty, and Munificence of the worthy Citizens of LONDON, that one Article would swell our Work to a Size far beyond what we propose ; and having said enough, as we think, of the City in general, we shall hasten to Particulars, and conclude this First Book with a List of Offices belonging to the City, which are great Marks of its Magnificence, they being so large a Number, and of so considerable a Value : To some of them are placed the Prices they have sometimes been sold at.

BOOK II.

Containing a Particular Inspection into the Thirteen WARDS on the East Side of Walbrook.

---

CHAP. I.

The Division of the CITY into Four Parts; and Twenty-six Wards, or Aldermanries, Within and Without the Walls.

---

HAVING thus in general treated of the City, the Walls, Gates, Rivers, and Conduits; the Bridges, Towers, and Castles; the Schools, Houses of Learning, Inns of Courts, Colleges and Hospitals in and about LONDON; the antient Customs, Manners, Recreations, and memorable Acts of the Citizens; we are now to set down the Distribution of the City into Parts; and more especially to shew the Antient and Modern State of every one of the same; and afterwards how both the Whole and the Parts have, from Time to Time, been ruled and governed.

THE City of LONDON, taking in that also of Westminster, with the adjacent Parts, which begirt them, may not improperly be divided into four Parts. The First is, the City of LON-DON, within the Walls and Freedom, which is chiefly inhabited by wealthy Merchants and Tradesmen, with a Mixture of Artificers, as depending on Trade and Manufactures. Secondly, The City, or Liberty, of Westminster, and the adjacent Parts, which are taken up by the Court and Gentry, yet not without a Mixture of Tradesmen and Artificers. Thirdly, That Part beyond the Tower, which compriseth Part of St. Catharine's, East-Smithfield, Wapping, Shadwell, Ratcliff, Limehouse, and so Eastward to Blackwall: This Part is principally inhabited by Seafaring Men, and those, who by their Trades, or otherwise, have their Dependance thereon: And, Fourthly, Southwark, which, taking in all the Borough, almost as far as Newington, Southwards, to Rotherhithe in the East, and to Lambeth in the West, is generally inhabited by Tradesmen, Artificers, Mariners, Mariners, Watermen, and such as have their Subsistence by and on the Water.

BUT now, to shew how the First Part, viz. LONDON, was antiently, and is, to this Day, divided :

THE antient Division of this City, was into Wards or Aldermanries :

Wards in LONDON, 24.
THE Number of these Wards in LONDON, were, both before, and in the Reign of Henry III. 24 in all; whereof 13 lay on the East Side of Walbrook, and 11 on the West of the same. Notwithstanding, these 11 grew much larger and bigger than those on the East : And therefore, in the Year of Christ 1393, the 17th of Richard II. Faringdon Ward, which was then one entire Ward, but mightily increased in Buildings without the Gates, was, by Parliament, appointed to be divided into two, and to have two Aldermen; to wit, Faringdon Within, and Faringdon Without, which made up the Number of 12 Wards on the West Side of Walbrook; and so came the whole Number of 25 on both Sides.

Wards in LONDON, 25.
MOREOVER, in the Year 1550, the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, purchasing the Liberties of the Borough of Southwark, appointed the same to be a Ward of LONDON; and so became the Number of 13 Wards on the East, 12 on the West, and one on the South of the River Thames, lying in the said Borough of Southwark, in the County of Surrey; which, in all, arise to the Number of 26 Wards, and 26 Aldermen of LONDON to govern them.

Wards in LONDON and the Borough of Southwark, 26.

The Names of the WARDS on the East Part of Walbrook, are these :

PORTSOKEN WARD.

Portsoken Ward.

THIS Portsoken, which signifieth a Franchise at the Gate, was some Time a Guild, and had its Beginning in the Reign of King Edgar, between seven and eight hundred Years ago, when thirteen Knights, well beloved of the King and Realm, for Services by them done, requested to have a certain Portion of Land on the East Part of the City, left desolate and forsaken by the Inhabitants, by Reason of too much Servitude. They besought the King to have this Land, with the Liberty of a Guild, for ever. The King granted their Request on the following Conditions, to wit, That each of them should victoriously accomplish three Combats, One above the Ground, One under Ground, and the Third in the Water : And after this, at a certain Day, in East Smithfield, they should run with Spears against all Comers ; all which was gloriously performed : And the same Day the King named it, Knigheten Guild, and so bounded it from Aldgate, to the Place where the Bars now are, toward the East, on both the Sides of the Street, and extended it towards the North, and the Gate, now since called Bishopsgate, unto the House then of William Presbyter, after of Jeffrey Tanner, and then of the Heirs of Colver; after that, of John Easeby; but since of the Lord Bouchier, &c. And again, towards the South, unto the River Thames, and so far into the Water as a Horseman, entering the same, might ride at Low Water, and throw his Spear : So that all East-Smithfield, with the Right Part of the Street that goeth to Dodding Pond into the Thames; and also the Hospital of St. Catharine, with the Mills that were founded in King Stephen's Days, and the outward Stone Wall, and the new Ditch of the Tower, are of the said Fee and Liberty : For the said Wall and Ditch were made in the Time of King Richard I, when he was in the Holy Land, by William Longshampe, Bishop of Ely, as before has been noted.

Knigheten Guild, or Portsoken Ward: Its Bounds.

THESE Knights had no other Charter all the Days of Edgar, Ethelred, and Canutus, until the Time of Edward the Confessor, whom the Heirs of these Knights humbly besought to confirm their Liberties, whereunto he graciously granted, and gave them a Deed thereof, as appeareth in the Book of the late House of the Holy Trinity : The said Charter was fairly written in the Saxon Letter and Tongue.

AFTER this, King William, the Son of William the Conqueror, made a Confirmation of the same Liberties, unto the Heirs of these Knights, in these Words.

“ WILLIAM, King of England, to Maurice, Bishop, and Godfry de Magnum, and Richard de Parre, and to his faithful People of LONDON, Greeting: Know ye me to have graunted to the Men of Knigheten Guild, the Guild that belonged to them, and the Land that belonged thereunto, with all Customes, as they had the same in the Time of King Edward, and my Father. Witness, Hugh de Bucke, at Rething.

AFTER him, King Henry I, confirmed the same by his Charter to the like Effect. After which Time the Church of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, being founded by Queen Matilda, Wife to the said Henry, the Multitude of Brethren praising God Day and Night therein, in short Time so increased, that all the City was delighted in beholding of them; insomuch that in the Year 1115, certain Burgesses of LONDON, of the Progeny of those Noble English Knights; to wit, Radulphus Fitzalgod, Wilmarde de Devereſſe, Orgare le Rude, Edward Hupcornehill, Blackſtanus, and Alwine his Kinsman, and Robert his Brother, the Sons of Leafstanus the Goldsmith, Wizo his Son, Hugh Fitzvulgar, and Algare Secusme, coming together into the Chapter-House of the said Church of the Holy Trinity, gave to the same Church and Canons, serving God therein, all the Lands and Soke, called in English, Knigheten Guild, which lieth lieth to the Wall of the City without the same Gate, and stretcheth to the River Thames: They gave it (taking upon them the Brotherhood and Participation of the Benefits of that House) by the Hands of Prior Norman.

AND the better to confirm this their Grant, they offered upon the Altar there, the Charter of Edward, together with the other Charters which they had thereof; and afterward they did put the aforesaid Prior in Seisin thereof, by the Church of St. Botolph, which is built thereon, and is the Head of that Land. These Things were thus done before Bernard, Prior of Dunstable, John, Prior of Derland, Jeffrey Clinton, Chamberlain, and many other Clerks and Laymen, French and English. Orgare le Prude (one of their Company) was sent to King Henry, beseeching him to confirm their Gift, which the King gladly granted by this Deed following:

Henry, King of England, to R. Bishop of LONDON, to the Sheriffs and Provost, and to all his Barons, and faithful People, French, and English, of LONDON and Middlesex, greeting: Know ye me to have granted and confirmed to the Church and Canons of the Holy Trinity of LONDON, the Soke of the English Knighten Guild, and the Land which pertaineth thereunto, and the Church of St. Botolph, as the Men of the same Guild have given and granted unto them: And I will and straightly command, that they may hold the same well, and honourably and freely, with Sack and Soke, Toll and Thea, Infangthefe, and all Customes belonging to it, as the Men of the same Guild in the best Sort had the same in the Time of King Edward; and as King William my Father, and Brother, did grant it to them by their Writs. Witness, A. the Queen, Jeffrey de Clinton, the Chancellor, and William of Clinton, at Woodstock.

THIS Charter was afterwards confirmed by Gilbert, William, and Roger, Bishops of LONDON, Then by St. Alphage, Archbishop of Canterbury. Then by Alexander and Innocent, Popes. Innocent also granted to the Prior and Convent, that the aforesaid Church and Parishioners of the same should be served by one of the Canons, to be removed at the Prior's Pleasure.

THE Prior and Canons of the Holy Trinity being thus seized of the said Land and Soke of Knighten Guild, a Part of the Suburb without the Wall, (but within the Liberties of the City) the same Prior was for him, and his Successors, admitted, as one of the Aldermen of LONDON, to govern the same Land and Soke. According to the Customs of the City he sat in Court, and rode with the Mayor, and his Brethren, the Aldermen, as one of them in Scarlet, or other Liveries, as they used, until the Year 1531, at which Time the said Priory, by the last Prior there, was surrendered to King Henry VIII. in the 23<sup>d</sup> of his Reign, who gave this Priory to Sir Thomas Audley, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England, and he pulled down the Church. Since which Dissolution, the said Ward of Portoken hath been governed by a Temporal Person, one of the Aldermen of LONDON, elected by the Citizens, as the Aldermen of other Wards.

THUS much for the Out Bounds of Knighten Guild, or Portoken Ward, and for the Antiquity and Government thereof. We are next to mention the Places therein, which are of special Note. First, The East Part of the Tower standeth in this Ward; and then the Hospital of St. Catharine, which is already spoken of [Book I. Chap. XIV.] This is a Collegiate Church, consisting of a Master, three Brethren, and three Sisters. The Master, who is generally a Layman, is some Person of Fashion, and nominated by the Queen. The three Brethren are Clergymen, who officiate in their Turns, reading Prayers every Day at 11 o'Clock in the Morning, and preaching every Sunday.

VOL. I.

THERE lie buried in this Church the Countesses of Huntington, Countess of March in her Time, 1429. John Holland Duke of Exeter, and Earl of Huntington, 1447, and his two Wives in a Tomb on the North Side of the Choir, under a stately Arch.

DAME Margaret, Dutcheß of Exeter, bequeathed her Body to be buried in the Chapel, within the Chancel of the College of St. Catharine's, beside the Tower of LONDON, whose Will was proved Anno 1458.

THE said Duke of Exeter's Monument here is one of antientest remaining within, or without the City, excepting those in the Temple Church: And for the preserving of the Memory of this great Peer, there hath been hung up against a Pillar, hard by a Tablet, expressing his Titles, his Offices, and who his Wives were; done by Mr. John Gybbon, Blue-Mantle. The Effigies of him lying on the Right Hand, and his two Wives on his Left, are engraven in Stone, each with their Hands together in a praying Posture. The Duke hath on his Right Hand three Rings, one on his Fore Finger, another on his Fourth Finger, both worn under the second Joint, and a third on the Middle Finger, worn under the first Joint. His first Wife's Hands are broken. On the Fingers of his second Wife appear likewise three Rings (which it seems to have been the Fashion of the Nobility in those Times) the Ring on the Fore Finger, and that on the Fourth being on the first Joint, that on the Middle Finger, worn under the Second, Coronets on all their Heads.

THERE are also in this Church buried Thomas Walsingham, Esq; and Thomas Ballard, Esq; by him, Anno 1465, Thomas Flemming, Knt. 1466.

AGAINST the North Wall in the Chancel are these Monuments more modern. For George Montagu, Son of Henry Earl of Manchester, and Master of this Hospital. He repaired this Church, buried July 23, 1681.

ON the South Wall hangeth a Table for Margaret Garret, Daughter of Robert Garret, Senior Brother of this College, and Anne Mudd, his Wife. A Virgin above those of her Age, comely, tall, agreeable, proportioned in her Limbs and Body, amiable in the Loveliness of her Face. All those Exterior were exceeded by her Internal excellent Parts, and the Sweetness of her Disposition, beloved and lamented by all.

THIS Jewel (so her Name signifieth) died November 25, 1683, in the Morning, being 16 Years and 8 Months old.

Dear was she living, but being dead more dear,

The Grief of very many made this clear;

Thus we by Want, more than by Having, learn

The Worth of Things, in which we claim Concern.

Johann. Gibbon, Collegii Heraldorum Socius et Introductionis ad Latinam Blazoniam Author; ob eximium erga defunctam respectum, quam tanquam suam ipsius dilexit Filiam, hoc tantillum Memoriale proponi voluit. Cujus Parentum Corpora in Ecclesiæ St. Mariæ Aldermarj, apud Londinensis reconduntur

WHICH Inscription may also serve for the Monument of the said John Gibbon himself, a Member of this Hospital, a Pursuivant named Blue Mantle, of a great Age, of good Learning in History and Heraldry.

William Cutting, a good Benefactor, died March 4, 1599, Ætat. 50.

Frederick Becker, a Gentleman of Holland, drowned by Falling out of a Ship into the Thames near near Gravesend, hath a handsome Monument of black Marble set up for him by Adriana Vernatti: He died May the 30th 1663, Ætat. sue 40.

NEAR this, in a white Marble Table, hangs up the following Inscription:

The Monument of Joanna, Wife to John Rampayn, Gent. and Daughter to Robert Caesar, Esq; she died in Childbed, December the 15th, 1694.

Passenger stay, this richest Grave
A small Delay, may justly crave.
Virtue adorned with Wit and Beauty,
Religious Love, Conjugal Duty,
In this small Cabinet lies enshrined,
While Glory gilds her purer Mind.
Both her Parents near her lye,
And bear her Relicks Company:
Kind Death which used Friends to part,
Joined these, who, living, had one Heart.
Renowned Sir Julius Caesar lent
Unto them all noble Descent;
Dying, she did a Son bequeath,
In whom she lives in spite of Death:
Thus, when the old Phoenix sweetly dies,
The New does from her Ashes rise:
Her Husband's Love this Monument rears,
Her Sister writes these Lines with Tears.

At the West End of the North Isle is a Vault for the Family of the Mounts, over which was a Stone, placed when the last was buried there: Mr. Richard Mount, Citizen of LONDON, and Stationer, who departed this Life, the 29th of June 1722.

HERE is a good Organ, with two Bells; a Free School for 25 Boys, and 15 Girls, all cloathed, and taught Writing and Arithmetick; and put out Apprentices by Subscription, and the Rent of four Houses in Cash-Court, and Charity Sermons, viz. 8 in the Year; also a Workhouse for the Poor. The Vestry is Select, consisting of those who have passed the Office of Upper Overseer. The Parish Officers are, two Overseers, and four Sidesmen. The Peace Officers, two Constables, and four Headboroughs.

IN this Hospital Raimundus Lullius, the famous Hermetic Philosopher, wrote his Testamentum Novissimum: As by the latter End of that Work appears. It may not be amiss to add, for the Honour of this antient House, that Richard Verstegan, that wrote the Restitution of decayed Antiquities, was born in St. Catherine's. Whose Grandfather Theodore Rowland Verstegan was of Guelderland, descended of an antient and worshipful Family: And, by reason of the War, came into England the latter End of King Henry VII.

THIS House was valued in the King's Books at 315 l. 14 s. 2 d. It is now inclosed about with small Tenements and homely Cottages, having more Inhabitants, English, and Strangers, than some Cities in England.

MANY of these Strangers had been Inhabitants of Calais, Hammes, and Guisnes; which Places being lost in the Reign of Queen Mary, the poor People, Tradesmen, and others, were glad to fly over into England, where wanting Habitation, a Place belonging to St. Catharine's (now a Lane) was allowed them, which, from the Countries whence they came, was called Hammes and Guisnes; and is the same with that Place, which at this Day, by a strange Corruption, is called Hangman's Gains.

AMONG many Foreigners that lived here in St. Catharine's, was one Crokebay, a Man of Credit and Substance, who inhabited here in Queen Mary's Days, and his Wife Gertrude, being a Protestant, was troubled upon her Deathbed by Dr. Mallet, then Master of St. Catharine's, because he could not persuade her to receive the Unction, or the Sacrament; excusing this last, in that she was subject to vomit, and so was sure, she said, to cast up their God again: He therefore refused her Christian Burial when she was dead, and said she should be buried in some Highway, and a Mark set upon her, in Token that she was an Heretick; but her Husband, at last, obtained Leave to bury her in his Garden: For there were Gardens then in St. Catharine's. This Account is in Foxe's Martyrology.

BEHIND Hangman's Gains is the Flemish Church-yard, which was appropriated for the Burial of those of Hammes and Guisnes, and other poor Flemings, that came over afterwards under Queen Elizabeth; and is still a Churchyard for the poorer Sort.

SOMEWHERE within the Liberties of the Tower, and as it seems in this Part of St. Catharine's, was a Place called Judaismus, the Jewry, which being a Place of Privilege, such as were Jews (as well as others) resorted thither for their Safety, who fell off from the Religion then professed and practised; and particularly Priests that had taken Wives, and so esteemed Apostates from the Unity of the Catholick Church. Among the Collections of the Tower Records, taken by Mr. Prynn, we have this:

“ THAT Anno 1279, 8 Edward I. upon the Archbishop's Request, the King issued a Writ to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LONDON, “ to

“ to apprehend certain Apostates, qui recesserunt ab unitate Catholicæ Fidei: But they were in Judaismo, i. e. the Jewry; and so out of the Power and Jurisdiction of the Magistrates of LONDON. Upon this the Archbishop wrote to the Bishop of Bath and Wells, who was Chancellor, signifying, that those Enemies of the Faith were yet in Balliva Majoris & Vicecom. Lond. sed in Judaismo sub Custodia & Potestate Constabularii Turris, ubi ingredi non possunt, ut dicitur, sine speciali mandato”. Some of these Enemies of the Faith, and Apostates from Catholick Unity, seem to be such Priests as had Wives; for in the same Letter it is added, that he would take away that Word Dudum in his former Writ, Quoniam nunc ipsorum Uxores sunt sicut prius.

THE Circuit of this Hospital, or Free Chapel of St. Catharine, is as follows: From the East Gate of the Tower by the Thames, unto the Bank beyond St. Catharine's Dock Eastward; and from thence through all the Lane which leadeth from the said Dock, and in and by every Part of the said Lane, unto the King's Highway Northward; which Way lieth between the Abbey of Grace, and the said Hospital, or Free Chapel, and leadeth from the City of LONDON unto Ratcliff: And also from the said Way, against the same Lane, unto the Tower Ditch Westward, and from thence to the River Thames Southward.

THERE are several antient Records concerning this Knighten Guild, or Portsofen, that afterwards came into the Possession of the Canons of Trinity Church, and likewise concerning the Hospital of St. Catharine; and many Charters of Kings of England, setting out the Liberties Extent, and Privileges of them; authentick Copies whereof are still remaining in certain old written Books in the Guildhall of LONDON; among which is one, To prove that the Hospital of St. Catharine, with the Mills, and all that belong to it, together with the Tower Ditch, all East-Smithfield, without the Postern, before the Abbey of Grace, with the Right Hand Part of the Street leading along by Dudding's Pond, are, and Time out of Mind have been, within the Liberty of the City of LONDON; and Parcel of Portsofen Ward, without Aldgate, in the Suburbs.

THE Mayor and Commonalty of the City of LONDON affirm, that in the Time of the Conqueror, and long before, the said Ward of Portsofen was called the Ward of Anglisch Knightgilden: And that afterwards, about the eighth of King Henry I, Ralph, the Son of Algode, Wolfard le Deverish, Orgar le Prude, with divers other substantial Citizens of LONDON, descended of the antient Race of the Anglisch Knights, being Lords of the Liberty of the said Guild, in the Soken aforesaid, and were seized of all the Lands in the said Soken, (as by the Charter of the said King Henry it appeareth) did bequeath the said Soken and Lands unto the Church and Canons of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, LONDON; which Gift, the said Henry, by his Charter (which the Mayor and Commonalty have here to shew) also confirmed. Upon Pretext of which Gift and Confirmation, Norman, at that Time Prior, and the Convent of the Church aforesaid, as also their Successors, stood a long Time possessed. Afterwards, among other Things, Ralph the Prior, with the Canons of the said Church, did grant unto Maud, Queen of England, Wife to King Stephen, a certain Parcel of Land in the said Soken, (the very same, namely, upon which the said Hospital of St. Catharine is now founded) together with all the Mills there in the Shambles, in Lieu of six Yard

Land in the Manor of Braching, in the County of Hertford; as by two Patents of the said King and Queen made upon that Occasion, is manifestly declared. Moreover they affirm, That whereas the Lord Edward I, sometime King of England, had not any Piece of Ground of his own proper Lands near enough to his Tower of LONDON; whereupon to build up his Wall, and to make his Ditch about the Tower, which he purposed to do anew, he purchased of the Master, Brethren, and Sisters of the Hospital of St. Catharine, by the Tower aforesaid, a certain Plat of Ground, with the Appurtenances, in East-Smithfield, adjoining unto the Tower; both for the laying of the Sand, Gravel, and Marle, which should be digged out of the Ditch, and that which should serve for the repairing the Wall aforesaid: And that he paid unto the Master, Brothers, and Sisters aforesaid, five Marks, six Shillings, and nine Pence, both for the Purchase of the said Plat, and the Recompence of their Loss, long since sustained by the Enlargement of the Ditch, and Reparation of the Wall aforesaid; which he caused, for himself, and his Successors, to be yearly payable out of the Exchequer; which five Marks, six Shillings and nine-pence, the Master, Brothers, and Sisters (for the Time being) of the said Hospital, have ever since the said Grant received, and do actually at this Time receive by Virtue of the said Patent, which they now have by them, &c. The Copy whereof was entered upon Record in the Chamber of Guildhall; and acknowledged by them before Nicholas Brembre, then Mayor, and the Aldermen. They affirm also, that in the 14th Year of King Edward II. at such Time as he held Assizes in the said Tower, it was proved that the said Ward of Portsofen (heretofore called Englisch Knightgeld) was in, and of the Liberties of LONDON; and that, so often as any Tax was to be raised for the King, or to be assessed for the Commonalty of LONDON, upon the Commoners of the said City, or that any other Assessment was to be made by the said Commonalty, either for the raising of some Wall, making of any Enclosure, or for the Defence of the City, that all the People inhabiting the said Ward, were accustomed to pay the said Taxes, like other Freemen of the City; and the said Assessments were wont to be levied upon them, as upon other Freemen of the City, as by the Transcript of the Rolls of the said Assizes of the Kings, now remaining in the Treasury of the Guildhall of the same City, most clearly appeareth.

THEY further affirm, that the Lord Edw. III. King of England, in the 17th Year of his Reign, directed by his Letter unto John Hamond, at that Time Mayor of his City of LONDON, and his Majesty's Escheator in the same, in which Letters he made Rehearsal of all the former Business concerning the Wall and Ditch of the Tower, made in his Grandfather's Time. He rehearsed also, how Ralph of Sandwich, and John de Weston, Constables of the Tower, did let out the same Place by Parcels unto divers Men, without Leave or Licence had, either from the Kings, his Grandfather, Father, or himself, and that the said Place was then built upon, and rented out for 40 s. a Year, and that himself had given out Commissions to enquire into the Reasons, Manner, Right, and Value of every Thing, &c. And that the said John Hamond, making Enquiry hereupon, made Return of all into the Chancery, &c.

THEY affirm moreover, that all the Lands and Tenements upon the aforesaid Right Hand of the Way by Dudding's Pond, and about the said Places of East-Smithfield, Tower-Hill, and Romeland, circularly situated, were, and have been, in

in the Time of holding the Assizes of the said King, impleaded and sued within the said City, and not elsewhere, as by the Evidences of the said Lands and Tenements, upon Record enrolled in the Guildhall, &c. appeareth.

THEY further say, That in the Times of all the former Kings, and Assizes (Time out of Mind) so often as any Mishap or Casualty, such as Murder, Drowning, or other indirect Death of any Person, in any of the said Places aforementioned, hath fallen out, upon which there was any Enquiry to be taken, or any Summons, Attachment, or Execution to be made in any of the said Places, yea, and which is more, even within the Tower itself, and at such Time as the King (now and then) hath been present, have the Sheriffs, Coroners, and other Officers of the said City of LONDON, for the Time being, and no other used to make such Quests of Enquiry, Summons, Attachments, and Executions and had Right so to do, as is it is most manifestly to be proved by divers Rolls of the Crown, and other Records of the Times aforesaid, now in the said Treasury.

THEY say moreover, that amongst other Liberties granted by the King's Predecessors unto the Citizens of LONDON, and ratified in divers Parliaments, this expressly is one. "That no Arrest, Attachment, or Execution, be made by any Officers of the King's within the said Liberty, either by Writ, or without Writ, but only by the Officers of the City." By all which Charters, Letters, Patents, Bills, Acts of Assize, Writs, Inquests, Returns, Rolls of the Escheators, and Crown-Office, Assizes, Pleadings, Enrollments, Freedoms, and most plentiful other Kinds of Records, and Proofs, it may easily and undoubtedly be concluded, that the said Hospital of St. Catharine's, with the Mills, and other its Appurtenances, as also the whole Tower-Ditch, with the Lands of East-Smithfield, without the Postern before the Abbey of Grace, together with the Right Side of the Street going by Dudding's Pond, as also the whole Ditch and Plain without the Tower, called Romeland, with all the Houses and Gardens round about them, have all the Time aforesaid been within the Compass of the Liberty of the City.

THE self same Copy of what is last above, is something differently recorded also in Book Duntborn.

THAT the Hospital, Ditch, and the Tower-Hill, are of the Parish of St. Botolph Aldgate, and Part of Portsoken Ward. That another Part by Romeland, and the Thames, towards the Postern by St. Catharine's Hospital, were of the Parish of Allhallows-Barking, and of the Ward of the Tower of LONDON. That Queen Maud was the Foundress of Trinity Church within Aldgate; that the Ditch begun by the Citizens in Richard I's Time, was for the Defence of the City. That there is another Soken within the Walls of the City, called the Inner-Soken, which reacheth from Aldgate, even unto that Gate of the Tower called Cinigate, which Soken is within the Liberties of the City, as by some Records kept by the Prior doth appear. That the Inhabitants of Portsoken and the Tower, are to be impleaded only in the Courts of the City, for all Matters, Causes, and Contracts howsoever arising. That the Tower hath no proper Court of its own, but only the Court of the Baron, which is no Court of Record, as by Records exemplified in the King's-Bench appeareth. That when any Murder, or Drowning hath been within the said Hospital, or Tower, the City Officers have attached the Malefactors within the Tower, and have carried the said Men so arrested into some of the King's Prisons within the City. That when the Justices Itinerant have used to come to keep Assizes in the Tower, the Officers of the City have had the keeping both of the Inner and Outer Gates of the said Tower, which pertained to the Office of a Servant, but a Servant of the City. That the Sheriff of LONDON hath had the Charge of all the Prisons in the Tower, so often as the said Justices Itinerant have come, as appears in many Rolls of the Crown, and of the said Itinerant Justices.

ON the East, and by North of the Tower, lie East-Smithfield and Tower-Hill, two Plats of Ground so called, without the Wall of the City. And East from them both was sometime a Monastery, called New Abbey, (and the Abbey of Graces) founded by King Edward III. in the Year 1359, upon Occasion as followeth.

IN the Year 1348, 23 Edward III. the first great Pestilence in his Time, began and increased so fore, that for Want of Room in Church-yards, to bury the Dead of the City, and of the Suburbs, one John Corey, Clerk, procured of Nicholas, Prior of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, a Spot of Ground near East-Smithfield, for the Burial of them that died, with Condition that it might be called the Church-yard of the Holy Trinity; which Ground he caused, by the Aid of divers devout Citizens, to be inclosed with a Wall of Stone. Robert Elsing, Son of William Elsing, gave 5*l.* thereunto, and the same was dedicated by Ralph Stratford, Bishop of LONDON, where innumerable Bodies of the Dead were afterwards buried, and a Chapel built in the same Place, to the Honour of God. To which King Edward setting his Eye (having before, in a Tempest on the Sea, and Peril of drowning, made a Vow to build a Monastery, to the Honour of God, and our Lady of Grace, if God would grant him Grace to come safe to Land) built there a Monastery, placing an Abbot and Monks of the Cistercian, or White Order. The Bounds of this Plat of Ground, together with a Decree of Tithes thereof, are expressed in the Charter.

THIS Abbey of St. Mary of Graces, had a Charter from King Edward III. in the 25th of his Reign. Another Occasion of the Foundation seems to appear thence:

Rex dilectis sibi in Christo Abbati et Conventui de Bello loco Regis, Salutem. Quia ad invocationem, omnipotentis Dei et Domini Jesu Christi ac gloriosissime matris sue Marie pluries tam in terra quam in Mari, in bellis et in periculis aliis, sensimus nos adjutos, Volentes provide in memoriam Graciarum hujus modi, cultum ipsius Dei et genetricis sue, &c. The Substance of which Record is, "That the King founded this House in Remembrance and Acknowledgement of the Goodness of Almighty God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ, and of the Blessed Virgin Mary, whom he had often called upon, and found helpful to him, by Sea and by Land, in Wars and other Perils, and therefore ordered this House to be called, The King's Free Chapel of the Blessed Virgin of GRACES, in memoriam Graciarum, i. e. In Memory of these Graces, or Favours, which he had received from her." Therefore, the more amply to dilate the Worship of the said God, and his Mother, he now began to found and endow this Free Chapel of the Cistercian Order, as a filial House to be subject to the Monastery of Beaulieu, of the same King's founding, and appointed the Abbot and his Successors yearly to visit it, or as Need should require, and duly to correct what should require the Rod of Correction. He order'd the same Abbot to send some of his Fellow Monks of his Convent, to serve God and the Blessed Virgin, in the said Chapel, under the regular Observance of the said Order. And he appointed Walter de Sta Cruce, i. e. Holy-Cross,

Crofs, to be the first President of the said Chapel, whom he enjoined kindly to receive and treat the said Religious, who were to profess Religion at the said Free Chapel.

By a Patent of 19 R. II, it appears, That there belonged to this Monastery of St. Mary de Graciis, the Manors of Gravesend, and several other Manors in Kent, also Rents in Woolwich, and the Manor of Poplar. And by a Patent 1 H. IV, it had divers Manors in the Counties of Devon, Cornwall, and Somerset.

Joan Hull, Wife of Stephen Hull, Citizen and Pannarius [Draper] of LONDON, by her Will, dated January 1425, gave a Tenement called Blackleste, in the Parish of St. Bennet Fink, LONDON, for ever, to John, Abbot of the Monastery of St. Mary de Graciis, of the Cistercian Order, and the Convent of the same, to pray for her Soul.

THIS House at the general Suppression, was valued at 546 l. 10 d. it was surrendered in the Year 1539, 30 Henry VIII, since which Time, the said Monastery being cleaned, pulled down by Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. and others of late Time, in the Place thereof is built a large Storehouse for Victuals, and convenient Ovens are built there for baking of Bisket to serve his Majesty's Ships; this is now called the Victualling Office, and is under the Management of Commissioners, appointed by the Treasury, who, at present, are,

William Fisher, Esq;
Henry Parsons, Esq;
Thomas Revell, Esq;
John Berkeley, Esq;
Thomas Brereton, Esq;
William Thompson, Esq; And
George Crowle, Esq;

THESE have each a Salary of 500 l. per Ann. and are to receive Proposals, and agree for sufficient and wholesome Victualling for every Fleet of his Majesty's Ships, which are allowed in Proportion to the Men they carry, and the Length of their Voyages.

THEY have also Agents at Portsmouth, Plymouth, Gibraltar, and other Places used as Harbours for the King's Ships.

BESIDES the Commissioners are the following Officers, at the Office, near Tower-Hill.

Seth Jeremy, Esq; Secretary.
Mr. John Bishop, Accomptant-General.
Mr. James Lovelace, Accomptant for Stores.
Mr. Henry Lock, Clerk of the Issues.
Mr. Thomas Scadding, Cheque upon the Treasurer.
Mr. John Harper, Clerk of the Cheque.
Mr. Joseph Leaper, Master-Cooper.
Mr. Thomas Marston, Clerk of the Bakehouse.
Mr. Charles Mason, Clerk of the Cutting-house.
Mr. Robert Farr, Clerk of the Brewhouse.
Mr. Ralph Thorowgood, Clerk of the Mills.
Mr. Daniel White, Hoy-taker.
Mr. Benjamin Glanvill, Surveyor.
Mr. John Haywood, Clerk of the Short Allowance.
Mr. Paul Debell, Master-Brewer.

THE Grounds adjoining, and belonging to the said Abbey, are employed in building of small Tenements.

King Henry III. in the 13th of his Reign granted, That a Fair should be held at East-Smithfield for 15 Days, viz. from the Eve of Pentecost to the Octaves of Trinity; and the said King sent his Briefs to the several Sheriffs of Lincoln, Glocester, Kent, Worcester, York,
VOL. I.

Norfolk, and Suffolk, and to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LONDON to proclaim the same: Et ideo tibi precipimus, quod predict feriam, &c. i. e. "And therefore we command you, that you cause to be proclaim'd the before said Fair throughout the whole Bailiwick, as is aforesaid, causing all Merchants of your Bailiwick to know, that they may securely come to the Fair. Witness the King at Westminster the 8th Day of February.

AND 30 Ewd. III. there was a Grant to the Master, Brethren, and Chaplains and Sisters of St. Catharine, that they for ever shall have one Fair upon Tower-Hill, [now called Little Tower-Hill] over-against the Abbey of St. Mary Graces. There was also a Charter for this 20 Henry VI.

FOR Tower-Hill, as the same greatly diminished by building of Tenements and Garden Plats, so it was in the Year of Christ 1593, on the North Side thereof, and at the West End of Hog-Street [or Hog-Lane] beautified by certain Alms-houses there, strongly built with Brick and Timber, and cover'd with Slate for the Poor, by the Merchant-Tailors of LONDON, in the Place of some Cottages, given to them, by Richard Hill, some time a Master of that Company. Certain Timber, for that Use, being also given by Anthony Radcliffe, of the same Society, Alderman.

IN these Alms-houses 14 charitable Brethren of the said Merchant-Tailors, placed 14 poor sole Women, which received each of them of their Founders 16 d. or better, weekly, beside 8 l. 15 s. yearly, paid out of the common Treasury of the same Corporation for Fuel.

Alms-houses
at Tower-Hill.

IN this Hog-Lane, now mentioned, lying on the Back-side of Whitechapel, were eight Acres of Land, which about the Year 1574 were in the Possession of one Benedict Spinola, a rich Italian Merchant; whereof he made twenty Tenter Yards and certain Gardens. These, some pretended, were first inclosed by him, being before open and common. And hence it came to pass, that in the Year 1584 it was presented as an Annoyance to the Archers, and all the Queen's Liege People; and a Precept was awarded to the Tenants and Occupiers of the Premises to remove their Pales and Fences, and all Buildings made thereupon: For now many Clothiers dwelt here, who hereupon applied themselves to the Lord Treasurer of England, and brought Witness to the contrary, shewing, that the same Field, before it was so converted, as then it was, was a Piece of Ground several, not common, nor ever commonly used by any Archers, being very unfit for Archers to shoot in, by reason of standing Puddles, most noisome Lay-stalls, and filthy Ditches in and about the same. Also the Way called Hog-Lane was so foul and deep in the Winter-time, that no Man could pass by the same. And in Summer-time Men would not pass thereby for fear of Infection, by Means of the Filthiness that lay there; so that the Presenters were utterly deceived, and not well informed in their Presentments.

Afterwards Benedict Spinola bestowed great Cost and Charges upon levelling and cleansing the Premises, and made divers Tenter Yards, by means whereof the common Ways and Passages, about the said Ground, were greatly amended and enlarged, and poor Clothworkers much relieved, because several Tenter Yards in and about LONDON were decayed and pulled down, and the Ground converted to other Uses; and because Queen Elizabeth had just before restrained, by Proclamation, all future Buildings and Enclosures in the Suburbs.

From the West Part of this Tower-Hill, towards Aldgate, being a long continued Street, among

Abbey of Nuns called the Mi-nories.

among other smaller Buildings in that Row, was some time an Abbey of Nuns of the Order of St. Clare, called the Minories, founded by Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, Leicester, and Derby, Brother to King Edward I, in the Year 1293, the Length of which Abbey was 15 Perches and seven Feet, near the King's Highway, as appeareth by a Deed, dated 1303. A Plague, or Pestilence, being in this City in the Year 1515, there died in this House of Nuns professed, to the Number of 27, besides other Lay-People, Servants in the House. This House was surrender'd by Dame Elizabeth Salvage, the last Abbess there, to King Henry VIII, in the 30th Year of his Reign, and in the Year of Christ 1539.

Record. Turr.

THE Licence for Founding this House, bore Date 21 Edward I, to the Abbess of St. Clare without Aldgate. There was a Charter granted, 9 Edward II, that the Sisters Minoreffes, without Aldgate, sint Quiete de Tillagie, &c. i. e. Be quit of Tallage on Account of their Lands and Tenements in the City of LONDON. In another Charter, 14 Edward II, it is called The Abbey of the Minoreffes of St. Mary of the Order of St. Clare, without the Walls of the City: In which Charter are confirmed certain Messes of theirs in the Vintry, in Woodstreet, Lad-Lane, Old Fishstreet, and one Mess and two Shops in Lombard-Street, Christ-Church-Lane, and Shirburgh-Lane; gotten of divers well-affected Persons: What the Charters and Liberties of these Minoreffes were, may be seen by the Confirmation thereof in 1 Henry V. also 16 and 25, and 2 Henry 4, which remain in the Tower Records. The Manor of Apeldercome was granted to the Priores of the Minoreffes without Aldgate, 1 Henry IV, and 22 Henry VI, a Mess called the Herteshorn, in the Parish of St. Mary Matfelon, was granted to them by Nicholas Walske, 7 Edward IV. To all the rest let this be added,

These Nuns at first brought over by Blanch, Queen of Navarre.

THAT this House was first erected to receive Nuns that were to be brought over by Blanch Queen of Navarre, Wife to the abovesaid Earl Edmund: And they were professed to serve God, the blessed Virgin, and St. Francis, as appears by this Charter of Licence, which the said Edmund obtained of the King his Brother, the 21st of his Reign, viz.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Volentes Edmundo fratri nostro gratiam facere specialem, dedimus ei licentiam, &c. quod ipse placeam quam habet ex dono Thomæ de Bredestrete in Parochia Sancti Botolphi extra Aldgate, dare possit, &c. Monialibus de Ordine Minorum quæ per Nobilem Dominam Blancam Reginam Navarre, consortem ejusdem Fratris nostri in Angliam sunt venturæ & merituræ, ac Deo & beate Marie ac beato Francisco servituri, ad quandam Domum ibidem construendam, & habitandam, &c.

THIS dissolved Monastery being a large old Messuage, became a Dwelling-House for divers great Men successively, whom the King pleased to allow to reside there. One of these, and the first, was John Clark, Bishop of Bath and Wells, who was buried in the Minories Church; and afterwards his Corpse rested in Aldgate Church, as an old Inscription there in Brass testified: Afterwards, some Officers of the Tower had their Dwelling there. In the Year 1552, it came to Henry Duke of Suffolk by Patent from King Edward VI, "Granting the chief Messuage, or "Mansion, called The Minory House, within the "Precinct of the said Monastery, called the Minories, without Aldgate, LONDON; and "divers Houses in LONDON belonging to "the said Monastery, which extend to the clear "Value of 36*l.* 11*s.* 5*d.* ob. to hold in free So-

"cage; and the aforesaid capital House in Ca-
"pite.

A perfect Account of the Monuments of such Persons of Quality as were buried in this Monastery, is wanting. One Matild Trussell was here interred, and the Lady Elizabeth Keryel, who bequeathed her Body, by Will, Ann. 1419, to be buried in the Minories Church, LONDON, near the Tomb of her Mother, the aforesaid Matild Trussell: And Elizabeth, Dutches of Norfolk, in the Year 1506, by her last Will, ordered her Body to be laid in the Nuns Choir, in the Minories without Aldgate, LONDON; nigh unto the Place where Anne Montgomery lay buried.

LADY Ellen, Minorissa Domus Sanctæ Clare; Aldgate, Lond. Anno 1381, Sister to Lord John de Nevyl, Lord of Raby.

IN the Place of this House of Nuns is built several Storehouses for Armour, and Warlike Provisions, with divers Workhouses to the same Purpose.

WHILE England was called a Commonwealth, in the Minories was a great Workhouse set up, belonging to a Corporation for the Poor of the City of LONDON, and Liberties thereof; which had a President and Governors: To which also belonged a small Parcel of Ground, which the said President and Governors intended to improve by Building, for the Increase of the Revenue, to be employed for the Education of poor Children, and employing and relieving the Poor belonging to the said Corporation: For the allowing of which there was a Proviso in the Act, made Anno 1656, against multiplying Buildings in and about the Suburbs.

The TRINITY MINORIES.

HERE is a small Parish Church for the Inhabitants of the Close, or such as dwell within the Precincts of the dissolved Monastery, called St. Trinity. This Church being greatly decayed, was repaired at the Charge of the Parish several Times between the Years 1618, and again in 1636, as appears by a North Window. It escaped the Violence of the remarkable Fire in 1666, and being very old, was in the Year 1706 taken down, and rebuilt from the Ground, as is hereafter described. This new Church cost re-erecting about 700*l.* towards which 200*l.* was given by Daniel King, Esq; 100*l.* by the Lady Prichard, Widow of Sir William Prichard, Knt. Alderman and Lord Mayor, Anno 1683, and the other 400*l.* was raised by a Pound Rate, assessed on the Parishioners.

Parish Church
of St. Trinity.

THE Walls of this new Church are Brick, the Roof flat, covered with plain Tile, the Floor is paved with Stone, and there are two Isles.

As to its Ornaments, the Church is new pewed with Oak, and there are Galleries on the South, and Part of the West Sides. It is wainscotted about six Feet high, and the Pulpit finier'd. The Altar-Piece (which was erected Anno 1706) is adorned with four Pilasters, their Entablature and Compass Pediment, under which is a Glory, in the Resemblance of a Dove descending, the Rays, &c. carved; as is also a Lamp on the Pediment, between two others on the Cornice. The Intercolumns are the Commandments done in Black, on Gold, under a painted Glory; and the Pater-Noster and Creed are Gold on Black, each under two carved Cherubims. The Communion Table is placed on a Foot-pace of White Marble, vein'd with Blue, which is inclosed with Rail and Ballister.

THE Dimensions of this little Church are in Length 63 Feet, Breadth 24, Altitude about 20, there is no Steeple built in Form of other Towers, but but this at the West End is a little higher than the rest of the Church, with a handsome Turret.

MONUMENTS.

ON the North Wall of the Chancel is a handsome Monument, with two Figures of a Man and Woman kneeling, and a Child behind the Man, thus inscribed:

Death first did strike Sir John, here tomb'd in Clay,
And then enforc'd his Son to follow fast;
Of PELHAM's Line, this Knight was Chief and Stay:
By this, behold! all Flesh must die at last.
But BLET SOW, Lord, thy Sister most may moan;
Both Mate and Son hath left her here alone.

Sir John Pelham, died the 13th of October, 1580.
Oliver Pelham, his Son, died the 19th of January, 1584.

ABOUT a Marble Stone in the Chancel, close by the Communion Table, were these Words (engraven in Brass, most of which is now gone.)

Constantia Lucy, D. Thomæ Lucy, Junioris, Militis Aurati, &c. D. Constantia Uxoris [selestæ] Fæminæ Filia, natu maxima, Annum agens plus minus undecimum pridie Idus Februarii in Domino, quàm felicissime, hic posita fato fungitur Anno Dom. 1596.

ON the midst of the Stone is the Effigy of a Woman in Brass, praying, and these Verses:

Nascitur & Morimur: Non exorabile Fatum,
Vita fugax, fragilis, lubrica, vana, brevis;
Ocyus in Campis flos formosissimus aret,
Optima prætereunt, deteriora manent.
Rapta immaturo fato CONSTANTIA LUCY,
Nunc jacet; & quondam lucida, Luca caret,
Ante Annos Constans, humilis, mansueta, modesta,
Dixeris, & Paphia, membra polita manu.
In vere ætatis presensit frigora brumæ;
Sic, Sic præproperè præcoqua poma cadunt!

ON another Stone, near the last is this Inscription:

Hic jacet Corpus Francis Martuni, Generosi, qui obiit 14 die Septembris, Anno Domini 1606.
Hæc Verba sæpissime in ore illius viventis. O Domine, secundum merita mea, noli me, judicare. Deprecor Majestatem tuam ut misericorditer deleat iniquitas meas.
Credo Videre bona Domini in Terra Viventium.

IN the Body of the Church is a Monument with this Inscription:

Vivere Cornices multos dicuntur in Annos:
Cur nos angustâ concidione sumos?

The Figure of a Child.

Henricus Nowelus, filius D. Johannes Noweli Doctoris Medici, Optimæ Indolis puerulus, unicæ patris solatium. Natus 23, Julii 1598. & mortuus ex Atrophia 4 Augusti, 1599. hic sepultus jacet.

Melioribus utere Fatis.

ON the North Side of the Chancel, also is a Monument in Memory of Colonel William Legge, eldest Son of six to Edward Legge and Mary

Walsb, which Edward was only Son to William Legge, and Anne Bermingham, of the only noble and antient Family of the Berminghams of Athenree in the Kingdom of Ireland. He was Groom of the Bedchamber, and Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance to King Charles I. and in the Civil War was Governor of Chester and Oxford, and, upon the happy Restauration of the Royal Family in 1660, was, in Consideration of his untainted Fidelity to the King, and many and great Sufferings, restored to his Place of Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance, and Groom of his Majesty's Bedchamber, by King Charles II; and as a farther Mark of his Royal Favour, Superintendent and Treasurer to the Ordnance. He married Elizabeth, eldest Daughter to Sir William Washington, and Anne Villars, Daughter to Sir George Villars, and Sister to the most noble Prince, George, Duke of Buckingham; by whom he had three Sons and two Daughters. He died October 13, 1672, in the 83d Year of his Age, and lieth in a Vault under this Place.

A little Westward of the last, is a handsome white and veined Marble Monument, adorned with a Cornice, Cartouch Pediment, and an Urn, under which is the following Inscription:

To the Memory of the Right Honourable George Lord Dartmouth, distinguished by his early and eminent Deserts, and many high Marks of Royal Trust and Favour; he was Governor of Portsmouth, Master of the Ordnance, Privy Counsellor and Cabinet to King Charles and King James II. and Master of the Horse to King James. After many singular Proofs of his Courage, Conduct, and Affection to his Country, given in several Engagements at Sea; he commanded in chief, and carried the Flag, as Admiral of the whole English Fleet, in two solemn Expeditions.

He died October 25, 1691, in the 44th Year of his Age, and lies interred near this Place.

He married Barbara, Daughter and Coheir of Sir James Archbold in Staffordshire, by whom he had Issue one Son and seven Daughters, two of which lie in the same Vault, as do also his Lordship's Father and Mother aforesaid, and Philip, eldest Son of Sir Christopher Musgrave, of Ednal in Cumberland, who married Mary, the eldest Daughter, and deceased August 2, 1688.

THE Incumbent or Curate of this Parish, (for it is neither Rectory nor Vicarage institutive) holds the same by an Instrument of Donation under the Great Seal of England, but of late, saith Mr. Newcourt, in his Repertorium, these Curates have pretended Exemption from being subject to the Bishop of LONDON, as Ordinary, on Purpose to defend their Marrying without Banns or Licence, notwithstanding the Restoring the Place by the Letters Patents of King Edward VI. and Queen Mary.

THE Minister hath 25 l. per Ann. collected by the Parish, besides Surplice Fees, and there was formerly more paid by the Master of the Ordnance, which is lost for want of being claimed.

THE Curate is the Reverend Dr. Palmer, and here are two Lecturers, Mr. Lee, of St. Catharine's and Mr. Morris, Lecturer of St. Bartholomew's, near the Royal Exchange. Each of these Gentlemen are paid 20 s. for every Sermon, by a Subscription, raised by Persons who resort to this Church. The Curate preaches a Preparation Sermon Gratis, every Friday at 5 o'Clock in the Afternoon, before the first Sunday in the Month.

PRAYERS are Wednesdays, Fridays, and Holidays throughout the Year.

THE Vestry is general.

The Parish Officers are,

Two Church-Wardens,
One Overseer of the Poor,
One Constable,
One Headborough, and
One Scavenger.

THE Bounds of this Parish are, on the West Side, all within the Rails by the Great Minories, and from the South End of the Rails, Haydon-Yard, both Sides the Way, with the new Square, and Parker's-Garden, built into Warehouses; and at the North End of the Rails, extend down the Little Minories to the Church, taking in all Yards, Courts, &c. comprizing in all 123 Houses.

At the Upper End of the Street called the Minories, East of Aldgate, lieth a large Street and Highway; on the North Side of which, the first Building was the Parish Church of St. Botolph, in a large Cemetary or Church-Yard.

The Parish Church of ST. BOTOLPH ALD GATE.

St. Botolph's
Aldgate.

IT is so called from being dedicated to St. Botolph the Briton.

IN this Church was founded a Fraternity, or Guild of the Holy Trinity, as before-mentioned, to which belonged a Messuage and House, called Trinity-Hall, otherwise the Common Hall of the said Fraternity; to which belonged eight Messuages, commonly called Trinity-Alley, sold with other Things to Edward VI. for 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

THE Steeple is towered with Spires at each Corner, a Lanthorn standing in the Middle: Into the Street a convenient Dial, for the Use of Passengers, extends itself from the Side of the said Steeple.

WE may gather some Knowledge what this Church of St. Botolph was about 300 Years ago, and how enlarged, from an antient Will, bearing Date September 5, 1418, in the Registry of the Bishops of LONDON; viz. That there then was an Isle added to it, called the new Isle of St. Catharine's; and a new Chapel, dedicated to St. Mary, made equal and like to the said St. Catharine's Isle; and also a new Steeple. The Donor was Robert Burford, a Bell-Founder, a wealthy Man, as it seems of this Parish, and charitably disposed, who, by Will, gave 40*l.* towards the building the new Isle of St. Catharine, and towards the making and raising of St. Mary's Chapel to the same Height and Form of the new Isle of St. Catharine, 40 Marks; and towards the building of a new Steeple 40*l.* more; and left it to his Executors, to see the whole Covering of the new Isle of the Chapel of St. Catharine, in the said Church, to be compleatly finished, in the Carpentry, at his proper Cost and Charges. All which appear by the Words of the Will.

THE Church was new built at the special Charges of the Priors of the Holy Trinity, Patrons thereof, as appeareth by the Arms of that House, engraven on the Stone Work. It was repaired and beautified in the Year of our Lord 1621; and in the Year 1633 all the Ground thro' the Church was new laid and levelled. In doing of which, where before, from the lower End of the Church to the upper End, it was all but one even Floor, without any Ascent or Rising, they have made an easy Ascent at the Beginning of the Chancel; and in that another at the Place where they give the Communion. Farther gracing and enriching it with a handsome new Table, and the whole Chancel with new Pews, very decently wrought and disposed.

THERE are but few Monuments in this Church.

Henry Jordan founded a Chantry there. John Romany Ollarie, and Agnes, his Wife, were buried thereabout, Anno 1408. Richard Chester, Alderman, one of the Sheriffs, 1484. Thomas Lord Darcy of the North, Knight of the Garter, beheaded 1537. Sir Nicholas Carew of Bedington in Surrey, Knight of the Garter, beheaded 1538. Sir Arthur Darcy, youngest Son to Thomas Lord Darcy, deceas'd, at the new Abbey on Tower-Hill, were all buried here.

THERE is a Vault under Ground, purposely made (as appeareth) for the whole Family: Over which Vault (being in the East End of the Chancel, but leaning somewhat to the North) is an antient Tomb of Alabaſter, being the Figure of a Man, lying along, as in a Sleep, with a white Sheet wrapt about him, only the Face, Breast and Arms naked, having these Lines thereon.

Here lieth Thomas Lord Darcy of the North, and some Time of the Order of the Garter.. Sir Nicholas Carew, Knt. some Time of the Garter. Lady Elizabeth Carew, Daughter to Sir Francis Brian, Knt. And Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. younger Son to the above-named Lord Darcy. And Lady Mary his dear Wife, Daughter to Sir Nicholas Carew, Knt. who had ten Sons and five Daughters. Here lie Charles, William, and Philip, Mary and Ursula, Sons and Daughters to the said Sir Arthur, and Mary his Wife, whose Souls God take to his infinite Mercy. Amen.

ON the North Side of this Tomb there is a small Monument, fixed in the Wall, bearing this Inscription.

Here lieth Sir Edward Darcy, Knt. third Son of Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. of the Privy Chamber to the late Queen Elizabeth. He married the Daughter of Thomas Asteley, Esq; by whom he had fifteen Children. Sir Robert Darcy, Knt. his eldest Son, caused him to be buried in this Vault among his Ancestors, according to his Desire. He died at his House called Dartford Place in Kent, Octob. 28, Anno Dom. 1612, he being 69 Years old.

THIS Thomas Lord Darcy, and Sir Nicholas Carew (who was Master of the King's Horse) were both beheaded on the Tower-Hill: The former because he was one (howsoever constrained thereto by the Rebels) of the Commotion in Yorkshire; who opposed the Alienation of the Abbey Lands, by King Henry VIII. Ann. 1536. The Second for being of Council with Henry (Courtney) Marquis of Exeter, and Henry Poole, Lord Mountague, who were indicted and found guilty of High-Treason, for contriving to maintain, promote, and advance, one Reginald Poole, Dean of Exeter, a great Enemy to the King, then beyond the Sea, and to deprive the King, and set up the said Poole in his Room, Anno 1539.

Sir Arthur Darcy, here mentioned, was first buried in the new Abbey of Eastminster, where he he deceased ; for what reason he was removed is not related ; most likely, on the Account of this being the Burial-Place of his Ancestors. See Weaver's Antient Funeral Monuments, Printed in 1635, p. 426. See also Stow's Annals.

Fuller, in his Church History, Book VI. p. 324. in order to vindicate the Name and Character of this Lord Darcy, from the Aspersions cast on him by King Henry VIII., as a Person of a mean Extraction, gives an honourable Account of the Family of the Darcys.

ANOTHER smaller Monument is also fixed in the same Wall, but somewhat more toward the South, having this Inscription :

Here lieth buried the Corpse of Robert Taylor, of Silverdale, in the Parish of Warton, in the County of Lancaster, Gentleman, the Father of John Taylor, Citizen and Draper of LONDON, and of this Parish, Beer-Brewer. He departed this Life about the Age of 80 Years, Feb. 15, Anno Dom. 1577.

NEAR this is another small Monument for Capt. Robert Silk.

UPON the Ground, under the Head of the Communion-Table, lieth an antient Stone, and these Lines engraven thereon in Brass :

Hic jacet Johannes, Episc. Bathon. & Wellensis, quicum obiisset plures infig. Legation. ——— tandem obiit summum in Legatione Clevenfis ———
Januar. M,CCCCC,XL. Cujus animæ propitiatur Altissimus.

THERE is a Remark in Mr. Weaver's antient Funeral Monuments upon this John Clark, Bishop of Bath and Wells, viz. That he was supposed to be poisoned in Germany, when he went Ambassador to the Duke of Cleve, to render a Reason of the King's Divorce from the Lady Anne of Cleve. See Weaver, p. 426.

NEAR unto the Place where the Minister reads Divine Service, there is a small Brass Plate, fixed in the Wall, which contains these Lines following:

Here before this Pew lieth buried the Body of Robert Dow, Citizen and Merchant-Taylor of LONDON, with Lettice his Wife, and Thomas his Son ; which Robert deceased May 2, in the Year 1612, his Age was 89 Years ; who, amongst other his Charities done in this City, and elsewhere sundry Ways, as to several Hospitals abroad and at Home, Prisons, and to pay 19 poor Householders of the Merchant-Taylors Company in perpetuum, gave to this Parish of St Botolph's without Aldgate (whereof he was a Member) the Nomination of two Alms-Women freely relieved, and twenty Pounds yearly, to be distributed to three-score poor aged and impotent Men and Women, by Nobles a-piece upon every St. Thomas's Eve for ever. Ad Gloriam Dei.

Per Nepotem ac Heredem Zachariam Dow, Posthumum.

BUT the Merchant-Taylors honoured his Memory by a handsomer Monument upon a Pillar on the South Side of the Chancel, over-against the Pulpit, being the Figure of an antient Gentleman in his Gown and Cap, and a long forked Beard, resting his Hand on a Death's Head :

A Memorial erected by the Right Worshipful Company of Merchant-Taylors for Robert Dove, Esq; Citizen and Merchant-Taylor of LONDON, Master of the same Company, and one of the Customers of the Port of LONDON.

HE gave in his Life-time 3528*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* to perform divers charitable Deeds for ever, to divers poor Brethren of the same Company, and other Uses for the said Company, viz.
N<sup>o</sup> 19. VOL. I.

To Christ's Hospital, to St. Sepulchre's Parish, to the two Compters, to Ludgate and Newgate, to the Poor of this Parish, to St. John Baptist's College in Oxford, and to Queen Elizabeth's Hospital at Bristol, 2958*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*

—— To the Company.

300*l.* to Christ-Church Hospital.

50*l.* to St. Sepulchre's.

100*l.* to St. John's College in Oxford.

100*l.* to the City of Bristol.

HE lived virtuously all his Life-time, and died in the true Faith of our Lord Jesus, on the 2d Day of May, Anno Domini 1612, being full of Days, at the Age of near 90 Years.

HIS Arms under him being 3 Doves, according to his Name.

By his Arms, we may suppose, his real Name was Dove; but it is difficult to be certain whether That or Dow; for he is mentioned often by Stow, and sometimes in the same Page, by both those Names, as he is in two Parts of this Church.

HERE follows an Account of his Charity to this Parish. It is worthy to be observed, for the farther illustrating the Character of this worthy Citizen, what pious and prudent Care he had taken for the Choice of fit Persons to receive such his Charity. As particularly in his Directions to the Wardens and Antients, for the Choice of two Alms-Women, which he added to the Merchants-Taylors Alms-house on Little Tower-Hill, and left a competent Provision for their Maintenance, and in that other Direction for the Choice of the sixty Poor.

AN Exhortation drawn up by himself, and by his particular Order, to be repeated to the Poor, who receive his Charity, at the Time of the Distribution of it, is full of Christian Simplicity and Primitive Piety.

THERE are also two other Exhortations of his to be repeated to the condemned Prisoners in Newgate, which are to be found in Book I. Page 20 and 21.

Vicesimo Octavo die Augusti Anno Domini 1605. Anno Regni Domini nostri Jacobi Dei Gratia Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, Regis Fidei Defensoris, &c. (viz.) Angliæ Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, tertio & Scotiæ tricesimo nono.

“WHEREAS I Robert Dow, Citizen and Merchant-Taylor of LONDON, now dwelling in the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate (minding always to help the Poor, and thro' the Goodness of Almighty God, from whom all holy Desires, all good Counsels, and just Work, do proceed) have contracted with the Worshipful Company of Merchant-Taylors, under their common Seal, upon due Satisfaction to them made, to perform for me certain Deeds of Charity, by God and Grace, for ever: Amongst the which, 6*l.* per Annum is to be paid to one poor Widow of this Parish, placed by me in their Alms-house here adjoining, during her Life and good Behaviour; and after her Decease, to a poor Widow, to be from Time to Time for ever elected out of this Parish; according as in a Writing made between the said Company and me is mentioned: And perceiving the Multitude of Poor increaseth in this Parish, I have further agreed with the same Company, to pay the Sum of 10*l.* 6*s.* yearly, in Manner and Form following, viz.

“THE said Master and Wardens shall yearly appoint one of their Renter-Wardens and common Clerk of the said Company to pay the same 10*l.* 6*s.* upon the Eve or Vigil Z z z “ of

“ of St. Thomas the Apostle, next before the “ Birth of our Saviour, Jesus Christ, by nine “ o’Clock in the Forenoon, unto the Church-“ Wardens of the same Parish, within the same “ Church. At which Time the four Church-“ Wardens, for the Time being, or three of “ them at the least, shall be yearly ready there
 “ to receive the same Sum; and by them so “ received, the Sum of 10*l.* Part thereof shall “ be distributed to the Poor of the same Parish, “ in Manner and Form following, viz. The “ same Distribution is appointed to be always “ made forthwith upon the Receipt thereof, be“ fore 12 o’Clock of the same Day, to 60 poor “ People of the same Parish, by 3*s.* 4*d.* to “ each of them: Of which Number 30 shall be “ of the Ward, called the Upper End of the “ Parish, and 30 of the Lower End, called the “ Lordship of East-Smithfield.

“ ALL the said poor People shall be warned;
 “ they of the Upper End by the Parish-Clerk,
 “ and they of the Lower End by the Sexton, to “ be at the Church before nine o’Clock of the “ same Day: And if any of them, by Sickness,
 “ or other great Lett, cannot come to the Church,
 “ they shall desire some known Neighbour to be “ at the Church, and receive the same for him or “ her. The Poor of the Upper End shall always “ be first called; and as they answer to their “ Names, they shall go up into the North Isle of “ the Choir, and shut the Partition Door to them,
 “ and see that no other be amongst them. Then “ shall they of the Lower End be called; and as “ they do answer, go up into the South Isle, and “ shut the like Partition Door to them, and re“ main as aforesaid.

“ IF any Person remain in the Church that “ come to ask Alms, more than is appointed, the “ Church-Wardens shall warn them all forth; and “ being gone, lock all the Church Doors, that “ they may the more quietly distribute the Cha“ rity. Then the Church-Wardens, being with“ in the Choir, shall distribute first to them of “ the Upper End; and as they be paid, the Pa“ rish-Clerk shall cross their Names in the Book,
 “ and they shall go down into the Body of the “ Church, that they may not crowd the Choir:
 “ And they of the Lower End being next paid,
 “ and so crossed, shall also go down into the “ Body of the Church. This done, then the Pa“ rish-Clerk shall call them up near the Choir “ Door, and the Minister, in Presence of the “ Church-Wardens, shall exhort them to come “ to the Church to serve GOD at the Time of “ Common Prayers appointed, and especially “ upon Sundays and other Holidays not to fail:
 “ And if any be found negligent of the same, or “ be of any other Misdemeanor, the Church-“ Wardens in their Precinct shall exclude such “ Person, and bestow such Charity upon some “ more worthy Person.

“ THIS Exhortation being done, the said “ Poor shall all kneel down, and humbly, with “ Heart and Hand lifted up to GOD, say, with “ the Minister openly, the Lord’s Prayer; and “ lastly, they shall say, God reward all good Be“ nefactors and bless the worshipful Company of “ Merchant-Taylors: Then shall the South “ Church Door and Gate be set open, that they “ may all go out quietly three and three toge“ ther.

“ THE 6*s.* Residue of the 10*l.* 6*s.* shall be “ disposed of in this Manner. First, To the “ Company’s Clerk, who bringeth the Money,
 “ and payeth it, from the Merchant-Taylors
 “ Hall, 8*d.* the Minister, or Curate, for his Pre“ sence and good Exhortation to the Poor, shall “ have 8*d.* the four Church-Wardens shall have “ for their Pains, 8*d.* a-piece, amounting to “ 2*s.* 8*d.* Whensoever any of the Poor do de“ cease, marry, or depart from the Parish, the “ Parishi-Clerk shall enter the Day of their Buri“ al, Marriage, or Departure upon their Names,

 “ and shall yearly, eight or ten Days before St.
 “ Thomas’s Eve, shew the same to the Church-“ Wardens, that they may yearly make up the “ full Number of 60 Persons; which being so “ prefitted, the same Clerk shall enter them in “ two Sides of this Book, as now it is begun:
 “ And he shall keep the Book safe in the Vestry,
 “ and have for his so doing 12*d.* more. The said “ Clerk and Sexton for warning the said Poor,
 “ and Attendance at the Church at that Time, “ shall have each of them 6*d.* which several “ Sums amount to the said 6*s.* And if the Mini“ ster, or Curate be absent, and does not give the “ Exhortation after the Distribution, the Parish “ Clerk shall do the same, and have the said 8*d.*
 “ for his Labour: And if any of the Church-“ Wardens be absent at the said Distribution,
 “ then his Part shall likewise be given to them
 “ that be present. The poor Persons now set “ down, and hereafter to be chosen, shall re“ ceive the same Charity yearly, during their “ Lives, except they marry, depart the Parish,
 “ or some other lawful Impediment or Misde“ meanor prevent it, or that they have such bet“ ter Preferment, as the Church-Wardens shall “ think it meet to bestow it on other more needy:
 “ And as any die, marry, or depart the Parish,
 “ the Church-Wardens, in their Precinct, shall “ appoint the most poor and honest Persons to “ this Charity, respecting and preferring aged “ poor Widows before others.

THE Copy, verbatim, of this above-written, remains in the Merchant - Taylors Register, with a Proviso in the Contract, in these Words,
 or to this Effect:

“ PROVIDED always, and it is ordained and “ agreed by me the said Robert Dow, That if “ the Church-Wardens of the Parish of St. Bo“ tolph, aforesaid, or their Successors, Church-“ Wardens for the Time being, shall be found “ negligent in the due Paying of the said Sum
 “ of 10*l.* 6*s.* or in observing the Orders before-“ mentioned, or if the poor Widows, the Com“ pany’s Alms-women, shall not, or may not “ quietly enjoy the Pews, which, at the Charges
 “ of the Company, have been built for their Use,
 “ within the said Church, without being dis“ placed or removed for the same; that then it “ shall, and may be lawful, to the Master, War“ dens, and Assistants, of the Company of Mer“ chant-Taylors aforesaid (upon due and con“ venient Warning, first given to the said Church-“ Wardens for the Time being, and the same “ not reformed) to retain the said 10*l.* 6*s.* and
 “ to pay it no more unto them for their Poor;
 “ but to give and bestow the said Charity, to,
 “ and upon whom, and in what Order and Sort
 “ they shall think most expedient, for ever.

“ AND the Order of electing the said poor
 “ Alms-women is appointed by the Writing un“ der the Company’s Common Seal, to be per“ formed in this Manner following, viz. The “ Alderman’s Deputy, and eight antient Pa“ rishioners of the said Parish, shall, for ever, “ within four Days after the Decease of such “ Widow, called Mr. Robert Dow his Alms-“ woman, present to the Master, or one of the “ Wardens of the said Society of Merchant-Tay“ lors for the Time being, three antient poor
 “ Widows inhabiting within that Part of the said “ Parish which lieth within the Freedom of “ LONDON, being of honest Behaviour and “ Conversation, and of the Age of 56 Years “ at the least; wherein they shall prefer the “ Widows of Merchant-Taylors, if any such “ shall “ shall be qualified as aforesaid. Out of “ which three Names so presented as afore-

 “ said, the said Master, Wardens, and Assistants, “ shall elect one to supply the said Room:
 “ And from Time to Time, upon the Death
 “ of every such Widow, to be called Mr.
 “ Robert Dow his Alms-Woman. This Order
 “ and Course to be held and observed for ever.

“ AND if within the said Parish, there shall “ not be such poor Widows as aforesaid, or if “ the said Alderman's Deputy and eight Anti“ euts, shall not within the said four Days next
 “ after the Decease of every such poor Widow, “ present unto the said Master and Wardens, the “ Name or Names of such poor Widow, or Wi“ dows, as aforesaid; That then it shall, and “ may be lawful to, and for the said Master,
 “ Wardens, and Assistants, at every such Time
 “ to prefer and elect such poor aged Merchant-“ Taylors Widows, of such Age and Condition
 “ as aforesaid, as in their Wifdoms shall be “ thought fit, as in, and by the said Writing
 “ may appear. In Witness whereof, I the said
 “ Robert Dow, and the Curate, Church-War“ dens, and Vestry-Men, hereunder-named,
 “ have hereunto subscribed our Names, in the “ Vestry-House of the said Parish, the Day and “ Year above-written.

By me, Robert Dow,

Henry Rigges, Curate.

THE Church-Wardens, Common-Council, and Vestry-Men, are subscribed in Order.

THE abovesaid Sum of 10*l.* 6*s.*, was augmented in Mr. Dow's Life-time, to 20*l.* 10*s.*
 as the following Memorandum, signed by his own Hand, will farther shew.

MEMORANDUM. “ That upon St. Tho- “ mas's Eve, Anno 1609, this Benevolence of “ Mr. Robert Dow's Gift was augmented, so
 “ that every poor Body of the threescore receiveth “ yearly 6*s.* 8*d.* And the former 6*s.* was then “ increased to 10*s.* and given to the Bringers
 “ of the Money, the Church-Wardens and others “ attending there, signed in the Margin.

Robert Dow,

John Clerke, Parish-Clerk.

The EXHORTATION that is to be made to the threescore Poor by the Minister, and in his Absence by the Parish Clerk, after the Charity of Mr. Dow is given, is either to be spoken or read to them in these Words, viz.

“ GOOD People, mark what I say to you, the “ Giver of this Charity, with the Advice of the “ Church-Wardens, and other good Men of the “ Parish, have thought you most worthy of the “ same, where a great many other have need of “ it. You are, therefore, to give GOD Thanks,
 “ and to behave yourselves in this Manner, that “ is to say, you shall upon the Sundays come to “ Church, to Morning and Evening Prayer, with“ out you have great Let, and upon other Holi“ days appointed for Prayer; and there you shall,
 “ with all Reverence and Devotion, give your“ selves to hear the holy Prayers and Command“ ments of GOD, with other the Divine Scrip“ tures read unto you; and likewise to the holy “ Word of GOD, when it is preached there.
 “ You shall live in all Charitable and Christian “ Sort with your Neighbours, and be in Peace,
 “ and Love-makers to your Power; considering “ with yourselves, that you be aged, and therefore “ most meet for you to give good Example, and

“ be ready prepared to go hence, when GOD “ shall call you. If you observe, and follow this “ good Counsel, you shall all have this Pension,
 “ so long as you live and have Need of it: But if “ you be found in any Default, this Charity, and “ any other Charity given you in this Parish, “ shall be taken from you for ever, and shall be “ bestowed upon more worthy Persons: There“ fore see that you forget not this good Lesson.
 “ Now kneel you all down, and with all Humi“ lity and Reverence, lift up your Hearts and “ Hands to GOD, and with loud Voices say, de“ voutly after me (Our Father which art in Hea- “ ven, &c.) Now say you all, (GOD reward
 “ all good Benefactors, and blest the Worshipful “ Company of Merchant-Taylors.) Rise you all
 “ now up in GOD's Name, and go you quietly “ three and three together, till you be all out of “ the Church Gate, and GOD blest you all,
 “ and increase the Number of good and cha“ ritable Men.

IN the North Isle of the Chancel, lieth a Stone with this Inscription upon it, engraven in Brass:

“ HERE lieth the Body of William Cowch, Other Funeral
 “ one of the ordinary Yeomen of her Majesty's Inscriptions.
 “ Chamber, Citizen, and Innholder of LON-“ DON. He deceased the 13th Day of July, “ Anno Dom. 1583, who hath given (after the “ Decease of Joan his Wife) the House called
 “ the Crown, being at the East End of this “ Church, called St. Botolph without Aldgate, “ unto Christ's Hospital forever. Out of the
 “ which House, after the Decease of the said
 “ Joan his Wife, is to be paid by the Governors “ of the said Hospital, 5*l.* yearly for ever, to “ the Poor of Portfoken Ward within the said “ Parish.

IN the Middle Isle of the Church, before the Entrance into the Chancel, lieth a Grave Stone on the Ground, having this Inscription engraven upon it in Brass:

Dies mei sicut umbra declinaverunt, & ego sicut
fenum aresco.

“ Here, under this Stone, lieth buried the “ Body of Robert Cockes, late Citizen and Tal“ low-Chandler of LONDON, who, by his “ Last Will and Testament, gave to this Ward “ of Portfoken (wherein he dwelt) the Sum of “ one hundred Pounds, to be employed for the “ Use and Benefit of the Poor of the said Ward.
 “ He departed this mortal Life the 20th Day of “ September, Anno Dom. 1609, and was here “ interred the 3d Day of October next following.
 “ Ætatis sue LXVII.

Vixi dum volui, volui dum, Christe, volebas;
Christe, mihi Spes, es, Vita, Corona, Salus.

IN the same Isle, but a little lower, lieth another Grave Stone, having (in a whiter Kind of Stone) a Coat of Arms upon it, and a Description in well formed Letters, speaking thus:

“ HERE, underneath this Stone, lieth the “ Body of Daniel Balgay, sometime an Inhabi“ tant of this Parish, of good Account and Cre“ dit, being a Citizen of this honourable City “ of LONDON, and Free of the worshipful “ Company of Mercers, who departed this mor“ tal Life the 25th Day of December, in the Year
 “ of our Lord 1608, being the Day of the Na“ tivity of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Christus mihi Vita;

IN the Chancel, at the South East Corner, near the Altar, is a Monument set up in Memory of Mr. Prat, a very diligent and well deserving Curate of this Parish, with the following Inscription:

“ UNDER this Pavement lieth Benjamin Prat, A. M. for above xvi Years late Curate of this Church. He affected to end his Days in Celibacy, and departed this Life the 3d Day of March, A. D. 1715.

R E S U R G A M.

THESE few pious Words above, were all he desired should be here subscribed: Yet it ought not to be concealed, that he bequeathed to the Right Reverend Father in God the Lord Bishop of LONDON, for the Time being (only in Trust) the perpetual Advowson of the Rectory of the Parish and Parish Church of Greensted, juxta Chipping-Ongar, in the County of Essex; the first Presentation to an intimate Friend, and after him to the immediate Reader, or most inferior Minister of this his Native Parish-Church for ever; and other Churches afterwards, which may hereafter be built in this Parish, as may be seen more at large in his Will.

HIS Soul was adorned with great Stedfastness to the most Orthodox Principles. He was a Person of great Piety, Lenity, and Charity, and in all his Actions constantly signalized himself in the several Offices of his Sacred Ministry. He continually endeavoured to illustrate his Veneration and Esteem for the most Glorious and Adorable TRINITY, and his High-Calling of God in Christ Jesus.

AND so he proceeded, till he was just arrived at the Prime of his Age, and then was taken from his Labours, to receive an exceeding great Reward.

THUS does he still speak, and yet propose an eminent and illustrious Example to all his succeeding Brethren.

Nunquamque Oblivioni traderentur.

A Grave-Stone at the Upper End of the North Isle over Henrietta Caldecot, Daughter of Philip Caldecot, of this Parish, Esq; She died November 2, 1714.

IN the Church-Yard, Southward, and towards the Street, stands a handsome Tomb, fenced over from the Weather, and a Grave-Stone upon it: Beneath, on the Outside of the Tomb, are engraven the Arms belonging to the Vintners, and Barber Chirurgeons: Upon the Grave-Stone is a Plate of Brass, with these Lines engraven on it.

“ HERE, under this Stone, lieth the Body of George Clarke, Citizen and Vintner of LONDON, who, by his last Will and Testament, gave for divers good and charitable Uses, these Legacies hereafter following:

“ First, For a publick School in the University of Oxford, the Sum of 200 l.

“ To the Use of the Poor of the four Precincts of the Ward of Portoken, being in the Parish of St. Botolph's without Aldgate, the Sum of 293 l. 6 s. 8 d.

“ To the Parish of Whitechapel, for the Relief of the Poor there, the Sum of 230 l.

“ To the Parish of St. Leonard in Shoreditch, to the Use of the Poor there, the Sum of 106 l. 15 s. 4 d.

“ To the Company of the Vintners he gave the Sum of 10 l.

“ AND to the Poor of Christ's Hospital he gave the Sum of 5 l.

“ HE deceased the 19th Day of April, Anno Dom. 1606, and was here buried the 24th Day of the same next following. Ætatis sue 63.

“ Coppedhall in Parochia Sancti Bothi extra Aldgate. An. 1413.

EAST of this Parish-Church, there were several Inns for the Reception of Travellers, up towards Hog-Lane End, somewhat within the Bars, and a Mark was there, shewing how far the Liberties of the City extend.

THIS Hog-Lane, now called Petticoat-Lane, and Artillery-Lane, stretcheth North to Bishopsgate-street; in Mr. Stow's Time (about 1598) it had Rows of Elms on each Side, with Bridges and Stiles to pass over into pleasant Fields; but now is a continued Building from Houndsditch to Whitechapel, and farther.

THE South Side of the Highway from Aldgate, had then some few Tenements, thinly scattered here and there, with much void Space between them, up to the Bars: But now that Street is not only fully replenished with Buildings outward, but also with Yards and Alleys behind, as far as Whitechapel also.

AMONGST the Buildings in Stow's Time, he saith, one memorable for the Commodity of that East Part of the City, was a Water Conduit, just without the Gate; for Building whereof, in the Year 1535, Sir John Allen, being Mayor, two Fifteens were granted by the Citizens, for making and laying Pipes to convey Water thither from Hackney.

It was repaired, and much ornamental and useful Stone Work added to it, in the Year 1546.

Monday, in his Edition of Stow, saith, “ That altho’ this Water Conduit was very beneficial to the People inhabiting there round about, yet in regard of the Situation, being upon the Street’s South Side, and immediately descending down many Steps, or Stairs of Stone, it was troublesome to the poor People fetching Water there, in coming up laden with their Tubs, Pails, and Tankards. Besides, until the Turn of each Party came by Order and due Course, their Tankards, Tubs, and Pails, did greatly pester the Passage about, and thorough the Gate, endangering divers personal Harms, and other great Inconvenience; which since then, at the taking down of the old Gate, that a new might be built in the same Place, is exceeding commendably amended, to the City’s Honour, their Credit that had Care for the disposing of the Work, and great Ease of the poor Water Bearers, and all Passengers: For now there is a spacious Court, wherein all the Tankards, and other Vessels, orderly stand; without any Annoyance to the Street; and the Descent to the Conduit is made very convenient, free from offending one another in their Labour, the Passage to and fro is so aptly ordered, and the Room so large for their Attendance.

As to the taking down the old Gate, and building that which is now standing, it has been fully described, Book I. Page 16.

FROM Aldgate, North East to Bishopsgate, lay the Ditch of the City, called Hounds-Ditch, because that in old Time, when the same lay open, much Filth conveyed out of the City, especially dead Dogs, was there laid or cast.

INTO this filthy Ditch King Canutus commanded Edrick, a noble Saxon, who had basely slain his King and Lord, Edmund Ironside, to be drawn by the Heels from Baynard's Castle, through the City, and thrown in, after he had first been tormented to Death by lighted Torches:

OF later Time a Mud Wall; on the other Side of the Street, was a Field, some Time belonging to the Priory of the Trinity, and since, by Sir Thomas Audley, given to Magdalen College in Cambridge,

THIS Ground contained a Messuage, a Dove-House, and a Garden of about seven Acres. There was also adjoining to this Garden, a great Gate, and a Building over it, and a Street or Lane leading from Houndsditch thither. For all this, Sir Thomas Audley obtained of King Henry, Special Letters Patents, dated March 23, in the 25th of his Reign, as belonging to the Priory, to this Tenor :

Henricus Octavus, Dei Gratia, &c. Omnibus ad Quos, &c. Sciatis quod Nos, &c. dedimus & concessimus, &c. i.e. “ Know ye, that we have “ given and granted to Sir Thomas Audley, one “ Messuage, one Dove-coat, and one Garden, or “ Parcel of Land, with the Appurtenance, containing, by Estimation, seven Acres of Land, “ whether more or less, as they lay, and are in “ the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, “ LONDON, viz. between a certain Street “ or Lane called Hog-Lane on one Part, and divers Messuages by the King’s Highway, called “ Houndsditch, adjoining and built on the other “ Part. He gave also and granted to the said Sir “ Thomas a certain great Gate, with an Edifice “ built upon it, and adjacent; and a certain Street “ or Lane, extending from the aforesaid King’s “ Highway, called Houndsditch, to, in, and as “ far as the said Garden, or Parcel of Land, containing seven Acres, with all Edifices, Walls, “ Ditches, and Clofes, in and about the said “ Garden, or Parcel of the Lands there being : “ Which Messuage, Dove-coat, Garden-Gate, “ Street, or Lane, and the other Premises with “ their Appurtenances, lately belonged to the “ Prior and Convent of the Monastery or Priory “ of the Holy Trinity, LONDON, by the “ Right of that Monastery, and which among “ others, is come to our Hands by the Authority “ of Parliament, as well on the Account of the “ Gift of Nicholas Hancock, late Prior, as on “ the Account of the Dissolution of the said Monastery.

THE next Year, that is, the 26th of the King’s Reign, the same Sir Thomas Audley obtained of the King other Letters Patents, dated December 29, wherein, among other Gifts, he granted him Licence to give and grant lawfully the said Messuage, Dove-House, and Garden to Henry Parker, Knt. Tho. Barnardiston, Knt. John Christmas, Esq; Tho. Pope, Arthur Clerk, and Tho. Spilman, Gentlemen. Yet it seems these Persons possessed not the Premises, at least not the Garden of seven Acres, since Mr. Stow (as above) writeth that Sir Thomas Audley gave it to Magdalen College, of which he was Founder.

THIS Field (as all other about the City) was inclosed, reserving an open Passage into it, for such as were disposed. Towards the Street were some small Cottages of two Stories high, and little Garden-Plats backward for poor bed-ridden People, (for in that Street dwelt no other) built by some Prior of the Holy Trinity to whom that Ground belonged.

Mr. Stow saith, He remembers in his Youth, that devout People, as well Men as Women of this City, were accustomed oftentimes (especially on Fridays weekly) to walk that Way purposely, and there to bestow their charitable Alms, each poor Man or Woman lying in Bed within their Window, which was towards the Street open so low, that any one might see them, a clean Linen Cloth lying in their Window, and a Pair of Beads, to shew that there lay a bed-ridden Body, unable to do any thing but pray. This Street was first paved in the Year 1503.

ABOUT the latter End of the Reign of King Henry VIII, three Brethren that were Gun-Founders, Surnamed Owens, got Ground there to build upon, and to enclose for Casting of Brass Ordnance; these occupied a good Part of the Street on the Field Side, and in short Time, divers others also built there; so that all the poor bed-ridden People were worn out, and in Place of their homely Cottages, such Houses built as do rather want Room than Rent.

THIS Street is very remarkable for having in it a great Number of Pawnbrokers, and seems to have been so a long Time; for Monday, in his Edition of Stow, published an hundred Years ago, viz. Anno 1633, hath these Words :

“ THESE Men, or rather Monsters in the “ Shape of Men, profess to live by lending, and “ yet will lend nothing but upon Pawns; neither to any, but unto poor People only, and “ for no less Gain than after fifty or threescore “ Pounds in the Hundred. The Pawn of the “ poor Borrower must needs be more than double “ worth the Money lent upon it; and the Time “ of Limitation is no longer than a Month; albeit they well know, that the Money need “ not be repayed back until a Twelvemonth’s “ End: By which Time the Interest grows to be “ so great, that the Pawn, which (at first) was “ better than twice worth the Money borrowed “ on it, doth not (in the End) prove to be valuable to the Debt, which must be payed before the poor Party can redeem it. By which “ extorting Means of proceeding, the poor Borrower is quite cheated of his Pawn, for less “ than the third Part, which it was truly worth “ indeed.

“ IT is a great Error (in my poor Opinion) “ that in so antient and famous a City, abounding (otherwise) in most Christian Alms and “ Works of Mercy, that among so many worthy “ Liberalities bestowed on the Poor in divers and “ distinct Parishes, no Order is taken for such a “ publick Stock for the truly Poor; that when “ in their urgent Necessity, either by Want of “ Means, Sicknefs, and other Hindrances, their “ Pawns may not go to the Cut-throat Usurer; “ but remain to their own Good (living or dying) “ or to theirs, without any other Benefit, than “ that it may still serve for the like Relief.

“ AND let me not here be mistaken, that I “ condemn such as live by honest buying and “ selling, and make a good Conscience of their “ Dealing: No truly, I mean only the Judas “ Broker, that lives by the Bag, and (except “ God be more merciful to him) will follow him “ that did bear the Bag.

THE Sum Total of the yearly Gifts belonging to the Parish of St. Botolph Aldgate, amounts to 15 l. 15 s. 8 d. as may be seen by a Table in one of the Pews of the said Church.

THESE Gifts were partly for Sermons, partly for Coals and Firing, and partly for Bread, and partly in Money, to be distributed.

LECTURES given to this Parish, besides what is already mentioned, with the Sums allowed for Preaching them.

THERE is a Gift Sermon preached in the Month of August, by a Person in Holy Orders, who has been educated at Christ's Hospital; at which Time the Boys of that Hospital attend and sing an Anthem.

To this Parish belong neither Parsonage-House, Vicarage-House, nor Glebe.

IT is an Impropriation; the present Improprator is the Reverend Dr. Kynaston, who is also Vicar; and the Lecturer is the Reverend Mr. Harris. The Tithe paid is about 700 l. per Ann.

PRAYERS are at 11, and 7, daily; here is a good Organ and six Bells. The Vestry consists of those who have served the Office of Churchwarden.

The PARISH-OFFICERS are :

THERE are two Charity Schools, one in the Freedom for 50 Boys, and 40 Girls: This School was erected by Sir John Cals, Alderman. The other, for 40 Boys and 30 Girls, founded by Sir Samuel Starling, Knight, and Alderman of the City of LONDON; who, by his last Will and Testament, bearing Date the 7th Day of August, Anno Dom. 1673, gave certain Copyhold Lands and Tenements, lying in East-Smithfield, in the Parish of St. Mary Whitechapel, belonging to the Manor of Stepney, in the County of Middlesex, the Rents amounting to the Value of 22 l. yearly, as a Foundation of a Charity School, for the better Education of the poor Youths of the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate; which Lands and Tenements he surrendered to the Use of his Will to Mr. Corfellis, Brewer; Mr. John Parsons, Brewer; and Thomas Heath, Scrivener, Trustees of the said Charity. The Schoolmaster to be a Batchelor of Arts of the University of Cambridge, and to teach School in a Brick House, which he, the said Sir Samuel Starling, built at his own Charge at the East End of the Town-House, or Quest-House, upon Little-Tower-Hill, in the Manor of East-Smithfield. The Schoolmaster to be chosen by the Inquest of the Ward of Portoken, and the Leet Jury of the Manor of East-Smithfield; and to be subject to such Rules and Orders as they shall, from Time to Time, establish for the due Government of the said School; on Pain of being removed and forfeiting his Right to receive the said Rents: The Rules and Orders so concluded on by the Wardmote Inquest and Leet Jury, to be engrossed and hung up in two Tables; the one in the Vestry-House of the Parish Church of Aldgate, the other in the Quest-House upon Little-Tower-Hill.

Extracted from Sir Samuel Starling's last Will and Testament.

The ORDERS follow.

ORDERS made by the Wardmote Inquest of Portoken Ward, LONDON, and the Jury of Court Leet of the Manor of East-Smithfield, to be observ'd and kept by the Schoolmaster for the Time being, for the Teaching of certain poor Boys of the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, in Manner following; being the Gift of Sir Samuel Starling, Knight, by his last Will and Testament.

Imprimis, The said Schoolmaster shall teach sixteen poor Boys of the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, that is, eight of the Upper Ward, and eight of the Lower End, or more or less as the Estate will bear; such as shall be nominated and appointed by the said Trustees, whom the Wardmote Inquest, and Leet Jury have chosen: And the said Master shall have for Teaching the poor Boys, twenty Shillings each Boy per Annum.

II. The said Master shall teach the said Boys to Read. And after they can read competently well, shall teach them to Write, and the Grounds of Arithmetick, to fit them for Servants or Apprentices.

III. The said Master shall, together herewith, instruct the said poor Children in the Knowledge and Practice of the Christian Religion, and teach them the Principles thereof, as they are laid down in the Church Catechism; and this shall be done twice a Week: And the said Master shall be obliged to bring the said Children, once in five Weeks, to Church, to be catechized.

IV. The said Master shall take particular Care of the Manners and Behaviour of the poor Children, and study all proper Means to discourage and correct the Beginners of Vice; and particularly, Lying, Swearing, and Cursing, Taking God's Name in Vain, and the Prophanation of the Lord's Day, &c.

V. The said Master shall bring the said Children to Church twice every Lord's Day, and once on Holidays; and teach them to behave themselves with all Reverence in the House of God.

VI. The Master shall constantly attend his proper Business in the School, during the Hours appointed for Teaching, viz. from seven to eleven in the Morning, and from one to five in the Afternoon, the Summer half-year; and from eight in the Morning to eleven, and from one to four in the Afternoon, in Winter.

VII. The Names of the Children shall be called over every Morning and Afternoon, and if any be missing, they shall be taken Notice of: And the said Master shall go to Prayers with the said Children Morning and Evening, and shall order the said Children so to do at Home.

VIII. The said Master shall not teach above 30 Scholars, besides the said 16, without taking to his Assistance an able Person to be his Usher.

IX. It is ordered, That no Body shall be admitted into the said School under eight Years old; and also, that the said Schoolmaster shall not make any Demand, nor take Money of any Person, for any Boy's Entrance into the said School.

X. As often as any of the 16 Children shall be removed from the said School, that then the said Master shall give Notice to the Trustees of the said School, that another may be sent in his Place.

XI. That the Parents of the said Children be put in Mind to take Care to send their Children clean washed and comb'd to School.

XII. It is ordered by the aforesaid Inquest and Leet Jury, That the abovesaid Rules and Orders be set up in the said School, that the said Master may take Notice thereof, and govern himself accordingly.

XIII. And Lastly, It is ordered, That there shall be a Copy of these Orders put up in the Vestry-House of the said Parish, and another put up in the Quest-House upon Little Tower-Hill, in the said Parish; and that the Names of the present present Trustees of the said Estate be under-written.

THERE is a Church-yard for the Burial of the Dead in this Parish, besides that which joins to the Church; this is near Rosemary-Lane, and was consecrated by Dr. King, Bishop of LONDON, in the Year of our Lord 1615.

THERE are about 1300 Houses in this Parish within the Freedom, and about 1200 without.

NOW concerning the Bounds and Limits both of the Parish and Ward, and how far they extend themselves every Way; there can be no better Direction than following the Order of their own yearly Perambulation, which is thus:

WALKING down Houndsditch, Northward, they cross the Way Eastward into Still and Hand-alley; passing on along by a Garden Wall, they proceed to Petticoat-lane, in the Middle of which is the Partition between the two Parishes of Whitechapel and St. Botolph: There they go on to the Bars in the common Street, and crossing the Way Southward, go through a Tavern, some Time the Castle; and then turning Westward, pass on to the Minories till they come to the Bars.

THERE, at the farther End, they turn down into an Alley, called Brown's-alley, and so as far as Goodman's Fields, then turn up the Street again and go down Red-Lion-alley, passing directly into Rosemary-lane, and thence down Nightingale-lane, on the West Side to the Hermitage-Bridge, and so round St. Catharine's, and then pass over Tower-Hill, and then go directly up the Minories Northward till they come under Aldgate.

IN this Ward the principal Streets and Places are Whitechapel, the Minories, and Houndsditch, together with the West Side of Petticoat-lane; in which Streets are divers Alleys, Courts, &c. of which in their Order.

Whitechapel. Whitechapel is a spacious Street for Entrance into the City Eastward, and somewhat long, reckoning from the Lay-stall East unto the Bars West, where the Ward ends. It is a great Thorough-fare, being the Essex Road, and well resorted to, which occasions it to be well inhabited, and accommodated with good Inns for the Reception of Travellers, Horses, Coaches, Waggon, &c.

HERE on the South Side is a Hay-Market three Times a Week.

THE South Side within the Bars, as well as a little Way without, is taken up by a great many Butchers, who carry on a great Trade, and kill excellent Meat, lying so conveniently to have their Cattle from Rumford Market.

ON the North Side are divers considerable Inns, much resorted to, as the Three Nuns, the Crown, the Black-Bull, the Blue-Boar; with several Shops which have great Trade out of the Country.

ABOUT the Bars, ply a great Number of Stage-Coaches, for the Conveniency of carrying Passengers to Stratford, Bow, Low-Layton, Layton-Stone, West Ham, East Ham, Walthamstow, Woodford, Wansted, Barking, &c.

PLACES of Name in this Street within the Bars are as follow, beginning at St. Botolph's Church, and so Eastward.

First, Hatchet-alley, pretty well built, but hath a narrow Entrance; White Bear-alley, hath a long, narrow, and dark Passage into it, but within are new Brick Buildings; Sun and Trumpet-alley, very ordinary; near unto this Alley is the Bell Brewhouse, of a good Trade; and near unto the Blue-Boar-Inn, is the Boar's-Head Tavern, being a House of a pretty good Trade; Red-cross-court, well built, with new Brick Houses, hath a pretty large Passage into Petticoat-lane; Anchor and Harp-alley, both narrow and ordinary. Harrow-alley; containing two large Courts, and a long Alley that leads into Goodman's Fields, and at the Upper End of this Alley, is a Place called the Blue Gate, all but indifferently built and inhabited; Chequer-yard, also but ordinary; and a new Street is now building, which leads also into Goodman's Fields, to be called Somerset-street.

Houndsditch is now built into Houses, and besides the Street, which is taken up by Brokers, Joiners, Brasiers, Salesmen, and such as deal in old Cloathes, Linen and Upholstery Ware, for which, at present, it is a Place of considerable Trade; here are a great many Courts and Alleys. We shall only take Notice of these in this Ward, beginning at Still-alley, the others which lie in Bishopsgate Ward being there treated of.

Still-alley, hath a narrow Entrance, but is very large, containing several Turnings to other Places; as, the Lower Ground, which hath a Passage into Gravel-lane, and Gutteridge Rents, which hath pretty good Buildings, and out of this Place is a Passage down Steps into a Court, which leads into Devonshire-Square, treated of in Bishopsgate Ward; Greyhound-alley, small and ordinary; Flower-de-lis-court, a square Place, with old decayed Buildings, ill inhabited; Wool-sack-alley, leads into Gravel-lane, a large Place, with pretty good Buildings, and contains several Places, as Crab-court, where there is a large Brewhouse, and over-against this Place is Pine-apple-court, which hath a Free-Stone Pavement, and contains four good Brick Houses; here is also Star-court, with three or four indifferent Places without a Name; Hand-alley, small and ordinary; Skinners-alley, also small and ordinary, with old Timber Houses; Castle-yard, hath a long turning Passage with good Houses, indifferently well inhabited; Ball and Shear-court, small and mean, and adjoining to this is another small Place without a Name; Angel-alley, long and narrow, falls into Gravel-lane; Fire-ball-alley, big, but ordinary; Fire-ball-court, a handsome open Place, well built and inhabited with a Passage into Gravel-lane; Cock and Hoop-yard, a large open Place, with Buildings fit for good Inhabitants; Red-lion-court, a square Place, with indifferent good Buildings; Shepherd and Dog-alley, both small and mean; Three Bowls-court, small and ordinary; Walnut-tree-yard, but small; Joiner's-court hath tolerable good Buildings with a Free-Stone Pavement; Harrow-alley, but small; Cock and Wheat-sheaf-alley, likewise small and separate each from the other by a Pale; Rose and Crown-court, a neat Place with good Buildings, well inhabited, with a Free-Stone Pavement; Seven-star-alley, indifferent good; and to some of these Houses there are Gardens: Here is a Calender's, which is enclosed from the rest by a great Gate.

Church-lane, very large and open, the North Side fronting St. Botolph's Church, and Church-yard, hath a Row of good Buildings, of which two are large, and at the Upper End is a Carpenter's Yard with Livery-Stables over-against it. Gun-yard, a very handsome square Court, with good large Houses very well inhabited with an Entrance wide enough for Coach or Cart.

Gravel-lane, very large, branching itself into several Parts, as Seven-step-alley, Blackamore-court, which fall into Petticoat-lane, Srewsbury-court, a pretty handsome square Place; Honey-lane, somewhat long, and falls into Petticoat-lane; Sutton's Rents, small and ordinary; Wood Greens-court, a pretty handsome open square Place indifferently well inhabited; Harrow-alley, long and narrow, falls into Petticoat-lane; Clark's court, pretty handsome; Hand and Crown-court, a good open Place; New George-court, hath indifferent good Brick Buildings with a Free-Stone Pavement; Vine-court, a handsome square Place, with with new Brick Buildings, and a Free Stone Pavement; Pease-Porridge-alley, small and ordinary; King's-Head-court, pretty large. Almost over-against this Court is Oliver's-court, small and ordinary; Hand-alley, hath a Passage into Bishopsgate-street. Petticoat-lane, formerly called Hog-lane, is near Whitechapel-Bars; and runs Northward towards St. Mary Spittle.

ON both Sides this Lane, in antient Times, were Hedge Rows and Elm Trees, with pleasant Fields to walk in; insomuch that Gentlemen used to have Houses there for the Air; and Mr. Strype saith, when he was a Boy, There was one commonly called the Spanish Ambassador's House, who, in King James I's Reign, dwelt there, and whom he takes to be the famous Count Gondamer: And a little Way off this, on the East Side the Way, down a paved Alley, now called Strype's Court, from his Father's inhabiting there, was a large House with a good Garden before it, built and inhabited by Hans Jacobson, the said King James's Jeweller, wherein Mr. Strype was born.

BUT after, many French Protestants, who in the said King's Reign, and before, fled their Country for their Religion, and planted themselves here, viz. in that Part of the Lane near Spittle-Fields, to follow their Trade, being generally Broad Weavers of Silk, it soon became a contiguous Row of Buildings on both Sides of the Way.

So that of later Years all is converted into Buildings, even all the Spittle-Fields, wherein are several Streets, with Courts and Alleys, replenished with Inhabitants, especially Silk Throwsters and Weavers, and Dependants on them; of which many are Walloons, and French Refugees. This Lane hath the West Side in this Ward, the East being Part in the Parish of Whitechapel, and Part in the large Parish of Stepney. In this Petticoat-Lane are divers Courts and Alleys, most of which on the West Side, which are in this Ward, have their Passage into, or out of Gravel-Lane; but those that have not are five: Inkhorn Court, a pretty open Place, with indifferent Inhabitants. Near this Court is White-Hart Court, which is but indifferent. Bates's Yard, very mean; and Red Cross Court, which hath a Passage into Whitechapel Street. This Part of the Lane coming out at the Bars, is not mighty well inhabited; those of the most Account are Horners, who prepare Horns for other petty Manufacturers.

The Minories.

THE Minories, of which there are the Great and the Little; the Great is a broad and spacious Street, the Entrance into which is out of Aldgate-Street, over-against St. Botolph's Church, and runneth Southward into Little-Tower-Hill; having on the West Side London-Wall, where antiently the City Ditch went, as in Howard's ditch, and was used to cast Filth in, and so lay open; which being found inconvenient, noisome, and dangerous, it was filled up, and the Ground converted to other Uses; there being now a Row of Buildings next the Wall, and another on the back of the Minories, it is become a Street, and bears the Name of the Vineyard, and hath a broad Passage into it out of the Minories, which is chiefly noted for the Gunsmiths, who dwell there, and drive a considerable Trade.

THE Little Minories are the Buildings erected upon the Site of the Abbey of Nuns, called Minories, containing two or three Courts, all pretty well inhabited: And here also is the Trinity Minories Church, which pretends to Privileges, as Marrying without Licence: Out of this Place is a Passage into Heydon Yard.

NEAR this Nunnery, or Little Minories, was a large Field and Farm, at which, Mr. Stow saith, He himself, when a Lad, fetch'd many a Half-penny worth of Milk, and had never less than three Pints in the Summer, nor less than a Quart in the Winter, for that Money. This was kept by one Goodman, whose Son afterwards let it out, and lived like a Gentleman upon the Rent of it. It still retains the Name of Goodman's Fields, tho' it is now converted into Streets, with very good Brick Houses, inhabited by several Merchants and Persons of Repute, and of late has had a Theatre, or Play-House in one of them, built in a pretty good Taste; but the said Goodman's Fields, not being in this Ward, does not properly come under our Cognizance in this Place.

Theatre in Goodman's Fields.

TO return therefore to this Street called the Minories: Therein are several Courts or Alleys; beginning towards Aldgate there is Black Boy Court, being long, narrow, and ordinary. Maidenhead Alley, small, nasty, and beggarly. Three Kings Alley, pretty large, containing two Courts, one within another, and both indifferent good. Fountain Alley, very mean. Ship Yard, an indifferent large square Court, but very mean, with old Houses. Well Alley, but small, with a long and narrow Passage to it. Shippey's Yard, indifferent large, and pretty good, especially the upper Part. Heydon Yard, being broad enough for Coach or Cart; at the Upper End is a good large Square, or open Place railed about, with a Row of Trees, very ornamental in the Summer Season, having on the East Side Coach Houses and Stables, on the West Side a very handsome Row of large Houses, with Court Yards before them, and are inhabited by Merchants, and Persons of Repute; on the North, a Square of good brick Houses: Out of this Yard, on the West, is a Passage into the Little Minories, on the East another into Goodman's Fields. Brown's Yard, indifferent good, with a Passage down Steps into some Part of it. Squirrel's Alley, pretty well built, with a narrow paved Passage that goes down Steps. Swan Alley, long, nasty, and narrow, hath a Passage into Mansel-Street. Goodman's Yard, very large, and leads into Goodman's Fields, almost over against Peascod-street, hath pretty good Buildings, and indifferently well inhabited. Red Lion Alley, long and narrow, with old built Houses. Red Gate Court, but small, with a Passage down Steps into Heathen's Court. Wheeler's Yard, a pretty open Place. Bullock's Court, a very handsome open Place, having at the Lower End a Timber-Yard. Hammer-smith Alley, very ordinary, with a Passage to it down Steps. Wall's Court, a handsome Place, with a Passage to it paved with Pebble Stones. Black Horse Alley, containing two small Courts, which are but ordinary. Fales's Court, pretty open, with a Passage for a Cart; and the Houses are indifferently well inhabited. Weeden's Rents, with a descending steep Passage, very mean. Gooding's Yard, a handsome open Place, indifferently well built. Bellows's Yard, indifferent, with a Passage to it down Steps. Star Alley, but ordinary; at the Lower End is another Court down Steps, also very mean. Three Crown Court, also but ordinary, both as to Houses and Inhabitants.

THIS Portfoken Ward hath an Alderman and his Deputy, and six Common Council Men.

TO the Fifteen it is assessed 4*l.* 10*s.*

THERE are to Watch at the several Stands within this Ward, every Night, besides a Constable and the Beadle, sixty Watchmen.

THE Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward, are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts of Guildhall in the Month of January.

THE Alderman of this Ward is Humphrey Parsons, Esq;

THE first Ward in the East Part of this City within the Wall, is called Tower-street Ward, and extendeth along the River Thames, from the said Tower in the East, almost to Billingsgate in the West; one half of the Tower, the Ditch on the West Side, and Bulwarks adjoining, do stand within that Part where the Wall of the City of old Time went strait from the Postern Gate, South to the River Thames, before the Tower was built. From and without the Tower-Ditch, West and by North, is the said Tower-Hill, upon which was used always to be standing, (and made at the Charge of the City) a large Scaffold and Gallows of Timber, for the Execution of such Traitors, or other Transgressors, as are delivered out of the Tower, or otherwise to the Sheriffs of LONDON, by Writ there to be executed. In the fifth of King Edward IV., a Scaffold and Gallows was there set up by other the King's Officers, and not at the City's Charge, whereupon the Mayor and his Brethren complained, but were answered by the King, That the Tower-Hill was of the Liberty of the City, and whatsoever was done in that Point, was not in Derogation of the City's Liberties, and therefore commanded Proclamation to be made, as well within the City as in the Suburbs, as followeth:

FORASMUCH as the seventh Day of this present Month of November, Gallows were erected and set besides our Tower of LONDON, within the Liberties and Franchises of our City of LONDON, in Derogation and Prejudice of the Liberties and Franchises of this City, the King, our Sovereign Lord, would have it be certainly understood, that the Erection and setting up of the said Gallows was not done by his Commandment: Wherefore the King our Sovereign Lord, willeth, That the Erection and Setting up of the said Gallows be not any Precedent, or Example, thereby hereafter to be taken, in Hurt, Prejudice, or Derogation of the Franchises, Liberties, and Privileges of the City, which he at all Times hath had, and hath in his Benevolence, under Favour and good Grace, &c.

MANY Controversies have been in Times past betwixt the Lord Mayor and Citizens of LONDON on the one Part, and the Lieutenant of the Tower of LONDON on the other Part, touching their Liberties; the Lieutenant usurping divers Privileges, which were against the Laws of the Realm. As for Example:

If A. B. were indebted to C. D. dwelling in the Precinct of the Tower, and would suffer himself to be arrested and prosecuted by the said C. D. in the Court held within the Tower, and there to have Judgment upon the said Debt obtained against him: After which Judgment obtained, a Precept was awarded under the Seal of the Office of the Lieutenant, re-directed unto the Porter of the Tower, or to his Deputy, to take A. B. in Execution for the same Debt. And after that, A. B. is so taken in Execution, there is Return made of the Execution of the said Precept, and thereupon the Lieutenant not only appointeth about a Dozen, or more, Keepers to the said A. B. and such as the said A. B. will nominate, but also suffereth the said A. B. to go at Liberty, giving unto him a Protection under the Seal of his Office, and thereby commandeth all Officers in any wise to forbear to arrest or trouble the said A. B. for the Space of one whole Year, being his Prisoner. Then if it shall happen that the said A. B. shall be arrested, being in the Custody of any of his Keepers, and having the said Protection to shew, if immediately upon the shewing of the same he be not set at Liberty again, in such Case the Lieutenant pretendeth, that he hath Power to Arrest the Body of any Person dwelling in such City or County wherein the said A. B. was so arrested and troubled, if any such Person can be found within the Liberties of the Tower; and the Body of the same Person to detain in safe Custody, until such Time as the said A. B. shall be enlarged.

VOL. I.

By which Means the Execution of the Laws of the Realm is hindered, and the Subjects wronged.

The Form of a PRECEPT of the Lieutenant of the Tower, for the taking of one in Execution, with the Return of the same Precept.

Edward. Warner.

Also in the Year of our Lord 1585, Sir Owen Hopton, Knt. Lieutenant of the Tower of LONDON, by Colour of his Office, pretending Title to a Garden Plat near the Tower, caused his Servants forceably to take Possession thereof, and bring the Persons before him, who kept the same, whom he imprisoned in the Tower; whereupon a Writ of Habeas Corpus was sued out of the King's Bench, for removing the Body of Robert Shapely, one of the Prisoners, which Writ was brought and delivered unto the Lieutenant, by Robert Smith, then Solicitor of the City of LONDON; but the Lieutenant would not receive nor obey the Writ, but would have compelled the said Robert Smith to carry it back again with him, which he refusing, the Lieutenant put the Writ in his Pocket, and abused and imprisoned also the said Robert Smith in the Tower: For Redress of which Wrongs, and of many others, there was Complaint made to the Lords of the Privy-Council, who referred the Hearing of those Controversies, and the Examination of the Rights and Privileges, which the Lieutenant pretended to belong to his Office, to the Lord Chief Justices, and to the Master of the Rolls, who were to certify their Opinions thereof in Writing, as by the Letters of the Lords of the Council in that Behalf sent, and directed to them, the following Tenor appeareth:

The Council's LETTER to the Lord Chief Justices, and to the Master of the Rolls.

“ AFTER our very hearty Commendations, &c. There hath been complaint made “ unto us in the Behalf of the Lord Mayor and Citizens of LONDON, against Sir Owen “ Hopton, Knt. Lieutenant of the Tower, whom

“ they charge with some disordered Dealing by him used towards one Robert Smith, a Solicitor for the City, sent lately unto him with a Writ of Habeas Corpus, out of the Court of her Majesty's Bench, for the removing of the Body of one Robert Shapely, a Servant to one William Wikins, a Citizen, imprisoned by the Lieutenant upon some pretended Quarrel of Privilege; the Manner whereof shall best appear unto you by the several Complaints and Articles herein inclosed, exhibited unto us by the said Smith and Wikins.

“ AND forasmuch as the Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of LONDON, have heretofore oftentimes found themselves grieved, with sundry Actions of unkind and violent Dealings, offered by the said Lieutenant and his Officers, as they have informed us, to the Breach of their Charters and Liberties, whereby there is grown some Division and Dissension between them, (which we desire by all good Means to have removed) and whereas the Lieutenant seemeth to warrant his Doings by antient Privileges and Customs of the Tower, whereunto the Citizens on their Parts, upon Opinion of the Validities of their Charters, refuse to yield. We considering what Inconvenience may ensue of the private Dissension between them, have thought good to require you, calling Master Lieutenant before you, and the Parties, whose Complaints are herewith sent unto you, with such Proofs and Witness as may be produced, effectually to examine the Matters thereby informed against him; and that you also take Knowledge of such other Complaints and Controversies, as the Recorder of LONDON shall deliver unto you against the Lieutenant of the Tower, concerning their former Debates and Strifes, for Matters of Liberties, Prescriptions and Customs, and the like on the Behalf of the Lieutenant against them, praying you to take some Pains to hear the Matters at large on both Sides, and to see upon what Privileges, Customs, and Prescriptions, their several Claims are grounded and pretended; as also to consider of their Strength and Validity in Law, wherein after you shall have spent some Time, and heard and understood the Matters at large, we require you then to make Report unto us what you shall have found on both Sides, as well touching the Complaints of Smith and Wikins, as of the Lord Mayor and Citizens, with your Opinions of their said Complaints and Controversies, and what Course were fittest to be taken between them; which we pray you to do with as convenient Speed as you may. And so bid you heartily Farewell.

Directed to the Lords Chief Justices, and to the Master of the Rolls.

UPON the Receipt of which Letters, the said Lord Chief Justices and Master of the Rolls did at large hear the Allegations and Proofs of both Parties, and did accordingly certify their Opinions thereof to the Lords of the Privy Council in Manner following:

The

The CERTIFICATE touching as well the Articles and Complaints made to your Honours, by Robert Smith, and William Wikins, against Sir Owen Hopton, Knt. Lieutenant of the Tower, as the Controversies between the Mayor and Citizens of LONDON, and the said Lieutenant.

FIRST, Upon Examination of the Matter touching the said Smith and Wikins, mentioned in your Honours Letters, it appeareth unto us, that (some Controversy being between the Mayor and Citizens, and the said Lieutenant, touching a Garden Plat near the said Tower) on Ralph Gasken, Servant to the said Lieutenant, violently did draw forth of the said Garden one Shapeley, Servant to the said Wikins, then labouring there for his said Master, in such a violent Manner, as thereby Blood was drawn of him, in several Places, and carried him to the Tower, and there kept him in Prison eight Days; and that one Shaw, another of the Lieutenant's Servants, was present with the said Gasken, aiding him, but that he did not hurt the said Shapeley; which Gasken and Shaw did detain some of the Apparel of the said Shapeley, and yet do, for any Thing known to us.

AND that likewise one Payne was taken forth of the said Garden, and carried to the Tower, and there imprisoned three Days, and then delivered upon Bond to render his Body to the Tower, when he should be required, and that Payne hath left a Pawn of the Value of 10s. for his Meat and Drink.

AND that her Majesty's Writ of Habeas Corpus for the Body of Shapeley, was sued forth of her Bench, directed to the Lieutenant to make Allowance thereof, and paid him the Fee due therefore. But forthwith he would have forced the said Smith to have the Money again, and the Writ, which Smith refused to do, praying him not to be offended for bringing of her Majesty's Process.

AND thereupon Master Lieutenant said, he would put his Writ in his Pocket, as he had done many, and therewith rubbed Smith on the Cheeks, and threatened to imprison him, if he would not carry back the Writ again and the Money; whereupon the said Lieutenant imprisoned Smith, and detained him above three Hours, until, upon a Bill of his Hand to return to Prison when the Lieutenant should send for him, he was delivered, which Matter the Lieutenant confesseth to be true.

AND touching such Liberties as Master Lieutenant claimeth to have been used for the Officers and Attendants in the Tower, as not to be arrested by any Action in the City of LONDON, and Protections to be granted to them by Master Lieutenant, and not obeying the Writs of Habeas Corpus, we think such Persons as are daily Attendants in the Tower, serving her Majesty there, are to be privileged, and not to be arrested upon any Plaint in LONDON. But for Writs of Execution, or Capias ut ligatum, and such like, we think they ought to have no Privilege.

MOREOVER, touching Protections granted by Mr. Lieutenant, for such as be condemned in any Action in the Court kept in the Tower, to go at large, and not to be arrested by any Process out of the Queen's high Courts, or elsewhere, or any other Protection to that Effect, for any privileged Person; we think the same against her Majesty's Laws and Dignity.

Item, That Mr. Lieutenant ought to return every Habeas Corpus, out of any Court at Westminster, so as the Justices before whom it shall be returned (as the Cause requires) may either remand it with the Body, or retain the Matter before them, and deliver the Body as Justice shall require.

As touching the Jurisdiction of the Court in the Tower, and the Controversies for certain Liberties upon the Tower-Hill, and the Soil there, and divers Places about the Tower, we are not yet fully resolved, but desire your Lordships to have some farther Time to consider thereupon. For, that there be many Matters alleged, and to be shewed in Writing for the same, as we are informed, which we have not yet seen.

Item, The said Lieutenant doth claim a Liberty, that if any Person privileged in the Tower, be arrested in LONDON, that he may take the Body of any Citizen that shall come within the Liberties of the Tower, and keep his Body there until the other be delivered; which we think altogether against the Laws of this Realm.

Christopher Wray.
Edmond Anderson.
Gilbert Gerrard.

AFTER the Lords of the Privy-Council had received the same Certificate, they thereupon made this final Order and Decree following, viz.

At Nonsuch, the 3d Day of October, 1585.

P R E S E N T,

Lord Treasurer,	Master Treasurer,
Lord Admiral,	and
Lord Chamberlain,	Master Secretary.

WHEREAS sundry Variances and Contentions have heretofore arisen, and have of late Years depended betwixt the Lord Mayor and Commonalty of the City of LONDON, on the one Part, and the Lieutenant of her Majesty's Tower of LONDON, on the other Part, touching Matters of Liberties, Prescriptions, Customs, and other Claims and Pretences; by Reason whereof, and for Lack of Order for Stay of those Variances and Contentions, divers Tumults have heretofore grown, and her Majesty's Peace hath many Times been in Hazard to be dangerously broken, whereupon several Complaints have been heretofore exhibited to the Lords and others of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, by the Lord Mayor and Commonalty aforesaid, against the said Lieutenant, for divers Injuries alledged to be offered on his Part to the Citizens of LONDON, with Order of Law or Equity: After Consideration had of which several Complaints, it pleased their Lordships, (having Care to procure an End of those Controversies, for avoiding of Inconveniencies that might ensue) by their honourable Letters, to give Order to Sir Christopher Wray, Knt. Lord Chief Justice of England; Sir Edmond Anderson, Knt. Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas; and to Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Knt. Master of the Rolls, that they (calling the said Lieutenant and the Parties Complainants before them) should effectually hear and examine the Controversies (on both Sides) and certify their Lordships what they should find, together with their Opinions touching the same, who having called the Parties accordingly before them, and advisedly, and with good Deliberation, sundry Times heard their Allegations and Answers, as well

by

“ by Writing as by Word, with Counsel learned “ on all Parts, have signified their Opinions of “ the said Controversies in Writing, as hereafter “ followeth :

“ First, Touching such Liberties as Master “ Lieutenant claimeth to have been used for the “ Officers and Attendants in the Tower, as not “ to be arrested by any Action in the City of “ LONDON, and Protections to be granted
 “ to them by Master Lieutenant, and not obeying “ of Writs of        we think such Persons as be “ daily attendant in the Tower, serving her Ma“ jesty there, are to be privileged, and not to “ be arrested upon any Plaint in LONDON,
 “ but for Writs of Executions, or
 “ and such like, we think they ought to have no “ Privilege.

“ Secondly, Concerning Protections granted by “ Master Lieutenant for such as be condemned in “ any Action in the Court, kept in the Tower,
 “ to go at large, and not to be arrested by any “ Process out of the Queen's High Courts, or “ elsewhere, or any other Protection to that Effect
 “ for any privileged Person, we think the same “ against her Majesty's Laws and Dignity.

“ Thirdly, That Master Lieutenant ought to re“ turn every Habeas Corpus out of any Court at “ Westminster, so as the Justices, before whom it “ shall be returned (as the Cause shall require) “ may either remand it with the Body, or retain
 “ the Matter before them, and deliver the Body
 “ as Justice shall require.

“ Lastly, Whereas the Lieutenant doth also “ claim a Liberty, that if any Person privileged “ in the Tower be arrested in LONDON, he “ may take the Body of any Citizen that shall “ come within the Liberties of the Tower, and “ keep his Body there until the other be deliver“ ed; we think the same to be altogether against “ the Laws of the Realm.

“ THE Lords therefore of her Majesty's said “ Privy Council, upon grave and deliberate Con“ siderations had of the Certificate and Opinions “ of the said Lords Chief Justices and Master of “ the Rolls, and to that Occasions of Con“ tention, Trouble, and Disorder, and the Dan“ ger of Breach of her Majesty's Peace, which “ have heretofore of late Years arisen and grown “ upon the Controversies aforesaid, may from “ henceforth cease, and be altogether removed “ and taken away,

“ IT was this Day, by their Lordships ordered
 “ and decreed, betwixt the Lord Mayor, Com“ monalty and Citizens of LONDON, and “ their Successors, and the Lieutenant of her “ Majesty's said Tower of LONDON, and “ all other Lieutenants and Officers of the Tower
 “ at any Time hereafter to succeed, That the “ Matters, Points, and Articles, contained in “ the Certificate of the said Justices and Master “ of the Rolls before-mentioned, wherein their “ Resolutions, Opinions, and Determinations, be “ set down, declared, and signified, shall at all “ Times from henceforth stand and remain for “ Rules and Resolutions and final Determination “ and Decision : For so much and so many of the “ Points of Controversies as are contained in the “ said Certificate (whereof they have delivered “ their Opinions) to be for ever hereafter duly “ observed and kept; and that nothing be here“ after at any Time done, or attempted on either “ Part, to the violating or interrupting of the “ same.

THERE was a Place within the Liberties of the Tower, called the Jewry, because it was inhabited by Jews, where there happened, 22
Henry III, to be a Robbery and a Murther committed by William Fitz-Bernard, and Richard, his Servant, who came to the House of Joce, a Jew, and there slew him and his Wife Henna.

 The said William was taken at St. Saviour's for stealing a certain Silver Cup, and was hanged.
Richard was called for, and outlawed. One Miles le Espicer, who was with them, was wounded, and fled to a Church, and died in it. No Attachment was made by the Sheriffs, because it happened in the Jewry; and so belonged not to the Sheriffs, but to the Constable of the Tower.

BUT now to come to the Parish Churches, and other Things worthy of Note in this Ward.

The Parish Church of ALHALLOWS - BARKING.

AT the East End, and on the North Side of Alhallows-
Tower-street, is the Church of Alhallows- Barking.
Barking, which stands in a large, but sometime had a much larger, Cemetery, or Churchyard. It hath a handsome Dial extending over the Street from the Steeple. It was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary and All Saints.

THERE being many Churches in LONDON called Alhallows, we shall here give an Account The Meaning of the Rise of that Name and Festival, which is of Alhallows.
 yearly celebrated on the Kalends, or First of November, and happened on this Occasion.

THE Emperor Phocas, at the Desire of Pope
Boniface IV, commanded, That on the old Temple, which was called Pantheon, formerly erected in Honour of all the Pagan Gods, by the Emperor Domitian, purging it from the Dregs of Idolatry, the Church of the Virgin Mary, and of All Martyrs should be built; that where formerly the Worship, not of all Gods, but of all Devils, was celebrated; there afterwards should be celebrated the Memory of All Saints; which from that Time was solemnized in Rome, First, on the Kalends of November, which was about the Year of our Lord 608, afterwards about the Year 834, by the Persuasion of Pope Gregory IV, the most pious Emperor Ludovicus, ordained, with the Consent of all the Bishops of his Kingdom and Empire, that in France, the Festivity of All Saints should yearly, on the said Day, be solemnly celebrated for ever; which holy Constitution the whole Church with reverend Love embraced.

THE Church we are now to speak of was, of old, in the Gift of the Abbess and Convent of Barking, in Essex, whence, for Distinction-sake, from the other Churches in this City, which had the same Dedication, it was called Alhallows
Barking, and the Rectory being in antient Time appropriated to that Monastery, here was a Vicarage thereupon ordained and endowed, which seems to be not long before the Year 1317.

THE Patronage of this Vicarage continued ever after in the said Abbess and Convent till their Suppression; upon which the Advowson thereof (inter alia) was given and granted by King Henry VIII, in the 37th Year of his Reign, by Way of Exchange to the Archbishop of Can- terbury and his Successors, in whom it hath continued ever since, but is subject to the Archdeacon of LONDON, saving only as to Wills, and Administrations, which belong to the Commissary.

ON the North Side of this Church was an-tiently built a handsome Chapel, founded by King Richard I, confirmed and augmented by Edward I. King Edward IV, gave Licence to his Cousin, John Earl of Worcester, to found there a Brotherhood for a Master and Brethren; and he gave to the Custos of that Fraternity, which was Sir John Scott, Thomas Colt, John Tate, and John Crooke, the Priory of Tetingbecke, and
 the

the Advowson of the Parish Church of Strettham, in the County of Surrey, with all the Members and Appurtenances, and a Part of the Priory of Okeburne, in Wiltshire, both Priors Aliens, and appointed it to be called, the King's Chapel or Chantry, in Capella Beatæ Mariæ de Barking.

BUT what was most remarkable in the said Chapel, was the Image of the Glorious Virgin, erected there by Edward I. The Story of which is among the Archives of the Bishop of LONDON, in a large Instrument, the Purport whereof is as follows:

"IN the Chapel above-mentioned, King Edward I., before the Death of King Henry III., his Father, being directed by a Vision in his Sleep, caused the Image of the Glorious Virgin to be erected, upon his Visiting whereof five Times every Year, when in England, and keeping the Chapel in Repair, he was assured by the said Vision, to be most victorious over all Nations wherever he was; to be King of England when his Father was dead; and to be a Subduer of all the Welsh, and all Scotland. The like Success was promised to every just English Monarch upon the like Performances. After this, the said King Edward voluntarily making Oath before the Pope's Legate, that all Things shewn unto him in his Sleep, as aforesaid, he had hitherto found to be most true; they thereupon, that the said Chapel might with due Honour be frequented, released 40 Days Penance to all true confessing Penitents, who out of Devotion should come and contribute to the Lights, Repairs, and Ornaments of the said Chapel; and for the Soul of King Richard, whose Heart lay buried there under the High Altar (cujus cor in eadem Capella sub summo Altari requiescit humatum, are the very Words in the Instrument) and for the Souls of all the Faithful deceased, should say the Lord's-Prayer, with the Salutation in English, as often as they should with a pious Mind say the same.

ONE Thing is very remarkable in this Instrument, and that is, the Intimation it gives that King Richard's Heart lay buried in this Chapel under the High Altar, because the Generality and most Authentick of our Historians have written that King Richard's Heart was buried at Roan, according to his own Will and Command, at least they do not contradict it. What Credit therefore may be given to the said Passage, or indeed the whole Instrument, is left to the Reader's Judgment. However, this Image of our Lady of Barking, was of great Repute, and great Numbers of People came to her in Pilgrimage, till it was suppressed.

KING Richard III. new built this Chapel, and founded therein a College of Priests, consisting of a Dean and six Canons; all which that King placed there. The Deanry he gave to Edmund Chaderton, a great Favourite of his: The Canonries he disposed, at the Time that Chaderton was made Dean, to these Persons following, viz. Mr. Tho. Cowton, Richard Baldry, Mr. Jane, James Molineux, Richard Selfie, and Maculin Cofin. Hamond de Lega was buried in this Chapel. Robert Tate, Mayor of LONDON 1488, and others, were there buried.

THIS College was suppressed and pulled down in the Year 1548, the second of King Edward VI. The Ground was employed as a Garden Plat during the Reigns of King Edward, Queen Mary, and Part of Queen Elizabeth, till at length a large strong Frame of Timber and Brick was set thereon, and employed as a Storehouse for Merchants Goods brought from Sea, by Sir William Winter, &c.

THIS Church had a Chapel also called St. Mary de Berkingshaw, as appears by this antient Will, dated 1500 Jul. 26. Ego Dionysius Spicer, Capellanus in Capella, B. Mariæ de Berkinghare, juxta Turr. Lond. condo Testamentum meum. Imprimis, Lego animam meam Deo omnipotenti, &c. Corpusque meum sepeliendum in Capella prædict. ante introitum Chor. ejusd. Capellæ. Item, Lego pro Lapide marmor. ad tegend. Corpus meum & pro pavimento ejusd. 40 s. Item, Lego ad Constructuor. ejusd. Capellæ, si ante 3 annos ad ejus reparationem vel confirmationem — Gardiani & Confratres 5 l. expendend. Si autem distulerint ulterius construere, tunc volo dist. ummam 5 l. expendend. in alios pios usus juxta discretionem Executorum meorum.

BUT from this Barking Chapel we return to Barking Church, which was repaired and beautified in the Year of our Lord GOD 1613, and within some few Years before and after (in their several Times) other Wants were supplied and furnished; viz. a new Pulpit set up, many convenient Pews, a decent Communion Table, with other graceful Ornaments to it. This Table was the Gift of Mr. John Burnell; all the rest at the Charge of the Parish. Also in the South Isle, over the Entry into the Church, in the Year 1627, was a handsome Gallery erected at the Cost and Charge of the Parish.

Thomas Covel,
And
John Shaw, } Church-wardens.

THE Steeple of Brick was erected and built from the Foundation, and a sixth Bell added, and the Church new laid with Ten-Inch Tiles, and beautified at the Cost of the Parishioners, and some others, (as appears in the Register Book) 1659. And there is a Table in the Church, containing a List of the Names of sundry Parishioners, and others, that contributed toward building the Steeple, Anno 1659.

It was again repaired in the Year 1701; an Account whereof is given in a Table hanging in the Vestry; "This Church was new paved with Purbeck Stone, and the two Portals thereof were erected at the Charge of the Parish, and voluntary Contribution of Dr. John Gas-karth, and other worthy Persons, in the Year 1701.

William Alexander,
And
Stephen Slade, } Church-wardens.

Lastly, It was again sumptuously repaired, and new Pewed, in the Year 1704.

THE Pillars and Windows are mostly of the modern Gothic Order, but some of the Pillars towards the West and on the South Side, are of the Tuscan, and very strong.

ALL the Capitals are gilt with Gold. The Roof is neatly ceiled with Timber and Board, painted with various Figures, especially that Part over the Middle Isle. There is also an Organ Gallery at the West End, and the Church is very regularly pewed with right Oak, and Part is finely carved; it is wainscotted seven Feet high round the Church.

THERE is likewise a handsome Organ-Case, enriched with Fables, and the Figures (about six Feet high) of Time and Death, carved in Bassò Relievo, and painted.

HERE are also two handsome spacious Wainscot Door-cases, adorned with fluted Pilasters, Entablature, and Pediment of the Corinthian Order, and also three Brass Branch-Candlesticks.

THE Altar-piece is mostly carved, and neatly adorned with four Columns, and their Entablature blature of the Corinthian Order. The inner Columns are the Commandments, done in Gold, on Black, between Moses and Aaron, finely painted, and without the Columns are the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer, done in Black on Gold, each under a Pediment, with a Dove descending. Over the two inner Columns are Acroters, and between them, an open Pediment, under which is a Glory painted on the expanded Figure of a holy Lambskin (alluding to Leviticus vii, and viii, compared with Hebrews ix. 25, 26.) done in Basso Relievo, between two gilded Cherubims; over each of the outer Columns is a Lamp, and the whole has curious Enrichments of Cartouches, Leaves, Fruit, Palm-Branches, &c. Over this Carving is a Window with painted Glass, surrounded with a Crimson Festoon Curtain, edged with Gold Fringe painted, and in the Upper Part three Cherubims. The Communion Table is neatly finnier'd, and the Frame carved and adorned with Eagles, &c. standing on a Marble Foot-pace, enriched with Rails and Ballisters.

DIRECTLY West from the Altar at the West End of the Church is a Marble Font, whose Type or Cover has the Enrichments of Cherubs, Fruit Leaves, a Dove, with an Olive Branch in her Mouth, &c. round which are these Words done in Gold Letters, Suffer Little Children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of God. Mark x.

THE Dimensions are 108 Feet long, broad 67 Feet, high 35 Feet, and the Altitude of the the Tower, (wherein are six Bells to ring in Peal, which chime at Four, Eight and Twelve, Daily) and of the Turret about 80 Foot.

MONUMENTS for the Dead are as follow :

Sir Thomas Studington, of Norwich, Knight, 1469.

Mr. Thomas Gilbert Draper, Merchant of the Staple, 1483.

Sir John Stile, Knight, Draper, 1500.

Mr. William Denham, one of the Sheriffs in 1534.

Mr. Humphrey Monmouth, Draper, one of the Sheriffs, 1535; was buried in the Church-Yard. He was a great Ornament, as well as Alderman of this City, being a Person as of good Wealth, so of great Charity, especially towards the promoting of the Knowledge of the Gospel. He harboured Tindal, and encouraged his English Translation of the Testament, and contributed largely towards the Printing of it, and of other pious Books against the Errors of Rome: For which in the Year 1528 he was put to great Trouble by Sir Thomas Moore, then Lord Chancellor, and put into the Tower. He made his Will in the Year 1537, and therein appointed Bishop Latimer, Dr. Barnes, Dr. Crome, and Mr. Taylor (all Gospellers and famed Preachers) to preach in his Parish Church of Alhallows Barking, two Sermons a Week, 'till they had preached 30 Sermons, which he thought would do more good than saying so many Masses for his Soul: For which he allotted them a Legacy. In his said Will he forbad the ordinary Superstitions of Candles, and Singing Dirige, and Ringing of Bells at his Funeral. He seems to have been favoured by the Lord Cromwel, and Audley Lord Chancellor (Favourers of the Gospel) to whom he gave Legacies.

Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, beheaded 1546.

Sir Richard Devereux, Son and Heir to the Lord Ferrers, of Chartley.

Richard Brown, Esq; 1546.

William Robinson, Mercer, Alderman, 1553.

Philip Dennis, Esq; 1556.

BEFORE the Entrance into the Vestry (now worn out) is this Inscription.

Nicholas Andrews, to his dearest Wife Anne, doth this last Office of Love, for she was Religious, Chaste, Discreet, Loving, Fair, Obedient: She lived but 25 Years, and died at Chigwell in Essex, 12 June, 1606.

Henry Polsted, Esq; and Alice his Wife, he deccased December 10 1556.

Also Mary Burnel, late Wife of John Burnel, Merchant, only Daughter to Matthew Brownrig, of Ipswich, Esq; a Woman sincerely living in the Fear of GOD, and dying constant in the Faith of Jesus Christ, 5 April 1612, aged 20 Years, having been married two Years five Months, bearing him Issue, one Son, whereof she died in Child-bed, and expecteth now, with the Elect of GOD, a joyful Resurrection.

THERE are these memorable Monuments, Inscriptions, and Arms following, besides many others not remarkable.

AT the East End of the Church, a little Southerly from the Altar, is a white Marble Monument with Enrichments of Cherubims, Voluta's, Urns, &c. with this Inscription :

Quod Mori potuit Johannis Kettlewell, A. M. Ecclesiae Anglicanae Presbyteri integerrimi instructissimique, vivi Pietatis & Modestiae singularis, ut Verbo omnia vere Christiani, qualem fateare par est, qui totius Officii nostri (Rationes Annum adhuc agens Vigessimum Quartum) feliciter ad eo atque ex Animo explicuit, ut dictu haud sit facile Mores alienos ad Virtutem Evangelicam formaverit magis, an ad Vivum depinxerit, sui Ecclesiae Paroch. de Colehill, in Agro Warwic. per Anno septem invigilavit Pastor fidiissimus prudentissimusque; Fortunae tandem utriusque Victor, Animam Deo reddidit, Apr. 12, 1695, Aetat. 42.

Morte Tali Vita digna

BETWEEN the South-East Corner of the Chancel, an old Tomb with Figures in Plano, on a brass Plate, but nothing remarkable appears thereon.

ON the South Side of the Church is a pretty small white Marble Monument in Memory of Charles Beauvoir, Esq; one of the Searchers of the Custom-house, descended from a Family of that Name in the Island of Guernsey, &c. but not farther remarkable. Here are these Arms, Argent, a Chevron between three Cinque-Foiles, Gules impaled with Sable, a Griffin Rampant Segreiant, between three Crosses, Patty, fitched Or; and for the Crest, a Demi-Dragon, Vert.

ON the South Side of the Church a spacious white Marble Monument, adorned with Columns and Entablature of the Corinthian Order, and an open Pediment, whereon lie two Cupids, with this Inscription.

Near this Place lieth the Body of James Hickson, Esq; who died 16 June, in the Year of our Lord 1689, of his Age 82; who in his Life-time built an Alms-house for six poor People in the Parish of South-Mims, in the County of Middlesex: And at his Death endowed the said Alms-house with a Salary of 24l. per Annum, with some other Advantages.

He also founded a School in Plough-yard, in this Parish, for the Educating 20 poor Children, to the Head-Master, of which he appointed 20l. his Dwelling-house, and two Chaldrons of Sea-Coal, and to a Writing-Master, 8l. per Ann.

He also gave to the poor Freemen of the Brewers Company, 10l. per Ann.

To the Poor of the Hamlets of Wapping, Whitechapel, 3l. per Annum: And to 15 poor People of this Parish, two Shifts, one Pair of Hose, and one Pair of Shoes, yearly.

Also to the Minister of this Parish, 20s. per Annum, for a Sermon, to be preached yearly on New-year's-Day; and to the Clerk and Sexton 5s.

For the Performing of which he gave all his Manor of Willatts, and certain other Lands and Tenements in South-Mims aforesaid, in Trust to the Worshipful Company of Brewers in LONDON.

He also gave several other charitable Legacies, to be paid by his Executors: In Memory of which pious and charitable Acts, and as a Testimony of their Gratitude, Elizabeth Peach and Dorothy Wright, Executors of his last Will, erected this Monument.

THE Arms Or, two Eagle's Legs in Saltier erased alaguise Sable.

ON the South Side of the Church, a Monument with the carved Figures of a Man and a Woman in a Praying Posture, under which are these three Inscriptions, for the Father, Mother and Son, viz.

In the Isle against this Place lieth the Body of Francis Covell, Citizen and Skinner of LONDON. He lived in this Parish 52 Years, was married to his Wife 42 Years, had Issue by her Thomas his only Son. He had born all Offices in his Company, and this Ward, with good Reputation, was in his Life, Religious, Peaceable, and Charitable; and at his Death gave Cloathing to the Poor of this Parish yearly for ever; he lived 69 Years, and rendered his Soul in Peace to GOD, Sept. 7, 1625.

As also in the same Isle lieth Margery his Wife, who lived a Widow by the Space of 19 Years, and having attained to the Age of 85 Years, peaceably surrendered her Soul into the Hands of her Redeemer, the 20th of February 1643, leaving behind her a good Remembrance of her pious Life to the Poor of this Parish for ever upon Record.

In this Isle lies buried Capt. Thomas Covell, Son of the said Francis, Citizen and Skinner of LONDON, who likewise bore all Offices in his Company, and in this Parish, with good Esteem, having lived well, died to the Lord, 16 January, 1644.

HERE is the Arms of LONDON, and another Coat, Ermine.

ON one of the South Pillars, fronting Southward, is a large brass Plate with an Inscription, in Memory of William Arma, Esq; Servant to Henry VIII, Edward VI, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1560.

ARMS: On a Chevron, inter three Dexter Hands erected, Or, two Palets between three Demy Flower-de-Lis.

AT the North-East Corner of the Chancel, an old spacious Tomb of the Gothic Order, having 12 brass Figures in Plates, and these Words following:

Stapulo fuit Seniorum & unius Londiniis habitans Sermone fidelis cum Margareta Domina Castaq; beata Hunc rapuit Michael ad Cæli Gaudia lleti, &c.

AND here are these Arms: Azure, a Chevron ingrayled between three Eagles displayed, Or.

CLOSE by the last is a Monument with a Figure in a Kneeling Posture, and this Inscription:

Hic Jacet Hieronimus Benalius Bergami Natus, qui dum vixit Pietatem coluit et futuræ Vitæ Resurrectionem expectat. obiit, 4 Die Martis Anno Dom. 1585, Ætat. 58.

WITH these Arms: Argent, a Chevron Sable, between two Cocks Combatant in Chief, and a Lion Rampant in base Gules.

ON a very spacious Grave-Stone in the Chancel, with the Figures of a Man and a Woman in Brass, and the Stone verged with Plates of the same, with this Inscription, for William Thinne, Esq;

Pray for the Soul of M. William Thinne; Esquire, one of the Masters of the honourable Household to King Henry VIII, our Sovereign Lord. He departed from the Prison of this frail Life the 10th Day of August, An. Dom. 1546. in the 38th Year of our Sovereign Lord the King. Which Body, and every Part thereof, in the last Day, shall be raised up again, at the Sound of the Lord's Trumpet. In whose Coming, that we may all joyfully meet him, our heavenly Father grant us, whose Mercy is so great towards us, that he freely offereth to all them that earnestly repent their Sins, everlasting Life, through the Death of his dearly beloved Son Jesus: To whom be everlasting Praise. Amen.

And these Arms: On a Chevron between three Martlets, as many Mullets on a Chief, three Mascles.

ON a grey Marble Grave-Stone in the Chancel, by the Rails of the Communion-Table, this Inscription:

Here lieth the Body of Roger Hatton, Esq; late Alderman of this City, who died 26 of July, 1666.

HIS Arms: A Chevron between three Garbs, and for a Difference, a Crescent surmounted by another.

ON the North Side of the Church, near the Chancel, a fine spacious white Marble Monument; in the Middle whereof is a large Column of the Tuscan Order, supported by two Cupids, and having Enrichment of Fruit, Leaves, Death's Head, and an Urn; on the Shaft of which Column is this Inscription:

Near this Place lieth the Body of Giles Lytcott, late of Stratford Langthorne in the County of Essex, Esq; younger Son of Sir John Lytcott, of Moulsey in the County of Surrey, by Mary, Daughter of Sir Nicholas Overbury, and Sister to Sir Thomas Overbury, who was poisoned in the Tower. He was born 21 of Nov. 1633, and died Aug. 11, 1696, in the 63d Year of his Age. He was the first Comptroller-General of all the Accounts of the Customs of England, and of all the English Colonies in America; which Office he executed from Michaelmas, Anno 1671, to the Time of his Death. He married Sarah, Daughter and Heir of Richard Culling of Woodlands in the County of Devon, Gent. by whom he had five Sons and five Daughters; his eldest Son Giles died in the East Indies, in the Streights of Molucca, going to China, in the Year 1688. His second Son died in the West Indies, Commander of his Majesty's Ship the Pembroke, 10 Months after his Father, and aged 27 Years. He had served his Majesty King William in all the War with France, and was in all Engagements by Sea, during the War; but died in the Squadron under the Command of Admiral Nevil, in the fatal Sicknes, wherein so many brave Men lost their Lives.

The Arms here are: Or, two Barrs, Varry Argent and Sable, with a Mullet for a Difference, impaled with Sable, a Griffin Rampant Segreiant Or.

ON the North Side the Church, on the Convexity of an Elliptical Monument, this Inscription:

D. O. M.
S.

Baldwinus Hamey post adeptum summo cum honore apud Lugdunenses in Batavis supremum Medicine Gradum, post superata prima Præcos pericula tanta cum peritia & favore in magni Muscovitarum Ducis Aula, ut ægerrime demitteretur. Dimissus semel iterumque iterumque per amplissimos Legatos repeteretur. A terrible Accident by Gun-powder.

OVER-AGAINST the Wall of Barking Church-yard, a sad Accident befel by Gun-powder, in this Manner: One of the Houses in this Place was a Ship-Chandler's, who, upon the 4th of January 1649, about seven of the Clock at Night, being barrelling up Gun-powder, it took Fire, and blew up not only that, but all the Houses thereabouts, to the Number (towards the Street and in back Alleys) of 50 or 60. The Number of Persons destroyed by this Blow could never be known, for the next House but one was the Rose Tavern, a House, never (at that Time of Night) but full of Company; and that Day the Parish Dinner was in it: And for three or four Days after, digging, they continually found Heads, Arms, Legs, and half Bodies, miserably torn and scorched, besides many whole Bodies, not so much as their Cloaths singed. Among the rest they found the Mistress of the Rose Tavern, sitting in her Bar, and one of the Drawers standing at the Bar's Side, with a Pot in his Hand, only stifled with Dust and Smoak; their Bodies being preserved whole, by means of great Pieces of Timber falling cross one upon another. And another thing, hardly credible, was, that the next Morning there was found upon the upper Leads of Barking Church, a young Child lying in a Cradle, as newly laid in Bed, neither the Child, nor Cradle, having the least Sign of Fire, or any Hurt about them. It was never known whose Child it was, but one in the Parish kept it for a Memorial; and Mr. Strype says, that in the Year 1666, he saw the Child, who was then a tall Maid, being 17 Years of Age, and came to the Man, who had kept her all that Time, where he was drinking with him at a Tavern, with other Company.

THIS Parish contains in Mark-lane six Houses Northerly from the Dolphin Tavern, and eleven Houses on the East Side of that Lane, and in Tower-street, from Mark-lane End to Tower-hill on the North Side, and from the Hill to Water-lane on the South Side. All the East Side of Water-lane, and fronting Tower-hill, it extends Northward from Tower-dock to Muscovy-court by the Navy-Office, and that Court, and one House more; five Houses in Crutched-fryars, Mortimer's-yard, Brown's-court, Barking-alley, Seething-lane, Black-raven-court, Catharine's-court, which is new built with very handsome Houses, having a fine Pair of Iron Gates at each End, one upon Tower-hill, and the other in Sydon, or Seething-lane; and other Courts in this Compass. Likewise Beer-lane, and in Thames-street, from Water-lane on the North Side, and Custom-house-court on the North Side, it extendeth Easterly to Tower-dock, including the Custom-house and Keys in that Compass.

THE Number of Houses 319.

IN Sydon, or Seething-lane, as it is now corruptly called, are now, and were antiently, several large and handsome Houses, particularly one built by Sir John Allen, sometime Lord Mayor of LONDON, and of the Privy Council to King Henry VIII. in which dwelt Sir Francis Walsingham, Knight, Principal Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth; and also the Earl of Essex.

Mr. Strype says, He does not know whether it was that very House, but he is sure that there was a Capital Messuage thereabouts called Sharington-house, forfeited to King Edward VI. from Sir Edward Sharington, belonging to the Mint, attainted the 3d of his Reign: Which House the King gave to Henry Earl of Arundel.

St. OLAVE HART-STREET CHURCH.

THIS Church is situated on the South Side of Hart-street, at the West End of Crutched-Fryars; it is so called in the Memory of St. Olave, but when it was first founded is not easily accounted for, Stow and others Writers being silent there in. It hath a Dial over the Street, and a Church-yard behind it.

THE many decayed Parts of it were repaired, and ornamented at the proper Cost and Charge of the Parishioners, in the Years of our Lord 1632 and 1633.

IN the former Year,

Thomas Redding,
and
Roger Dreyton, } Church-wardens.

IN the next,

Roger Dreyton,
and
Christoph. Wigley, } Church-wardens.

THIS Church escaping the dismal Flames in 1666, the North Portico was built Anno 1674 (that Date being on it) and the Water-Pipes were put up in 1693.

THE Church is built partly of square Stone, and of Brick and Boulder, the Walls having Battlements, and Windows, &c. of the Gothic Order: The Floor is paved with Stone, and the Roof cieled with Wood.

It has Galleries on the West and Part of the North and South Sides; the first adorned with an handsome Almshouse for the Poors Bread, the others with painted Niches, and the Figure of Justice carved, also with Pilasters, Festoons and the King's-Arms painted and carved in Relief.

THE Roof is divided into Quadrangles, where several Coats of Arms are depicted. The Pews are fronted with Oak for the most Part, and the Walls wainscotted about six Feet high. The Altar-piece is adorned with two fluted Pilasters, their Entablature and Compass Pediment, a Vase, &c. The Intercolumns are filled with the Commandments between the Pater-Noster and Creed; the Former done in Gold on Black, the Latter in Black Letters on Gold. Within an arched Space, under the Pediment, is the Effigies of an old Man, between two Glories, all which is inclosed with Rail and Ballisters. There is in this Church also a handsome Table of Fees.

THE Length of the Church is 54 Feet, Broad 54, Altitude 30; and that of the Steeple about 60 Feet, wherein are six Bells to ring in Peal.

MONUMENTS in this CHURCH are these:

Richard Cely, and Robert Cely, Felmongers, principal Builders and Benefactors of this Church.

Dame Johane, Wife to Sir John Zouch, 1439.

John Clarentiaulx, King of Arms, 1427.

Thomas Sawle.

Sir Richard Haddon, Mercer, Mayor, 1512.

Thomas Burnall, Mercer, 1548.

Thomas Morley, Gent. 1566.

Sir John Radcliffe, Knt. 1568. And Dame Anne, his Wife 1585.

Chapone, a Florentine Gent. 1582.

Sir Hamond Vaughan, Knt.

George Stoddard, Merchant, &c.

IN the Wall, on the North Side, is an antient Monument, but very much defaced, appearing to belong to Sir Richard Haddon, Mercer and Lord Mayor of LONDON, with some Shew of two Wives, two Sons, and three Daughters: But the Plates of Memory are gone.

NEAR the Communion Table is a Marble Stone with this Inscription fairly engraven:

GEORGIUS Schraderus Brunswigæ, An. 1580. Mens. Februarii, nobili Familia Patre Autore Schradero, a Consiliis secretissimis Illustrissimorum Duc. Brunswig, & Luneb. Matre Catharina a Veckelt Natus, in vera Dei Notitia educatus, postquam maximam Germaniæ Partem, totam Galliam, Brabant. Fland. vidisset, in Angliam se recepit, inde Domum ut rediret, Febri vere correptus, placide in Domino obdormivit, Octob. 3.

An. Salutis, 1605. Ætatis suæ 24. & in hoc Tumulo requiescit.

TWO fair Marble Stones lie something near to this, bearing these Inscriptions:

ORATE pro Anima Roberti Byrche, Woolpacker: Qui obiit vicesimo septimo Die Julii, Anno Dom. 1433. Cujus Animæ propitiatur Deus.

D. O. M.

Matthæo Babalio, Nobili Ragusino, Pietate ac Probitate insigni, immaturaq; Morte Vita defuncto, Anno Ætatis suæ 27, Domini vero 1567. Mens. Junio.

Nicholaus Gozzius Amicus posuit.

A fair Marble Tomb, with a Knight in Armour lying along on it, and his Wife kneeling by him, thus inscribed:

HIC jacet Johannes Radcliffe, Miles, Filius Roberti, Comititis Suffexiæ: Qui obiit (nullis susceptis Liberis) nono Die Novembris, Anno Dom. 1568.

HERE lieth Dame Anne, the Wife of Sir John Radcliffe, Knt. who died the 10th of December, Anno Dom. 1585.

A Monument erected behind the Tomb of Sir John Radcliffe, but somewhat higher, with half the lively Figure of the Party it concerneth, inscribed thus:

Memoriæ Sacrum.

Petro Turnero, Gulielmi Turneri Patris inclyto Filio, Probitatis ac Eruditionis fama, illustriq; Medicinæ Doctore peritissimo; quem Cantabrigia aluit, Heidelbrigia Doctoris insignibus honoravit, Oxonium cohonestavit, Pascha Turnera Conjugis mœstissima æternum Pietatis, Amoris ac Doloris sui Monumentum. L.M.P.

Henricus Parreus, Episc. Wigorniensis,

Paschæ Turneræ Frater Mœroris Consors,

Piis defuncti Manibus hoc Epicedium parentavit. Obit Maii 27, Anno Dom. 1614, Ætatis suæ 72.

THE afore-mentioned William Turner, Father of Peter, was an antient Gospeller, Contemporary, Fellow Collegian and Friend to Bishop Ridley the Martyr. He was Doctor of Physick in King Edward VI's Days, and domestick Physician to the Duke of Somerset, Protector to that King. He was also a Divine and Preacher, and wrote several Books against the Errors of Rome; and was preferred by King Edward to be Dean of Wells: And being in Exile under Queen Mary I. returned Home upon her Death, and enjoyed his Deanry again. He was the first that, by great Labour and Travel into Germany, Italy, and other Foreign Parts, put forth an Herbal in English, Anno 1568, (the Ground-work of Gerard's Herbal) and then lived in Crutched-Fryars. From whence he dated his Epistle Dedicatory of that Book to the Queen. His Epitaph followeth.

IN the South East Wall, a Stone engraven, without any Plate, bearing this Inscription:

Gulielmo Turnero, Medico ac Theologo peritissimo, Decano Wellens. Per Annos triginta in utraq; Scientia exercitissimus, Ecclesiæ & Reipublicæ profuit, & contra utriusque perniciosissimos Hostes; maxime vero Romanum Antichristum fortissimus Jesu Christi Miles acerrime dimicavit, ac tandem Corpus Senio & Laboribus *comptum, in Spem beatissim. Resurrectionis hic deposuit; devictis Christi Virtute mundi carnifq; Civibus cap. triumphat in æternum.

Forte, confectum.

Obiit 7 die Julii, An. Dom. 1568.

UNDER it, upon a small Plate, is thus engraven :

IN GOD is my whole Trust, J. O. 1591.
John Orgen, and Helen his Wife.

As I was, so be ye,
As I am, you shall be.
What I gave, that I have,
What I spent, that I had,
Thus I count all my Cost,
What I left, that I lost.

THERE is a very fair Tomb, erected in the South Wall of the Choir, whereon these Lines are engraven :

HIC juxta in Choro situs est Jacobus Deane, Eques Auratus, vir bonus & in operibus charitatis, qui primo Susannam filiam Christopherei Bumsted, Generos. Uxorem habuit, ex qua unicum suscepit filiolum. Postea Elizab. filiam Hugon. Offley Armigeri Alderm. Lond. Deinde Elizab. filiam Richardi Thornhill Armig. & viduam Christopherei Webb Armig. duxit conjugem. Ex qua duas genuit filiolas, nullam tamen relinquens prolem, se moriente superstitem. An. Ætatis 63, 15 Maii 1608. in Domino obdormivit.

TWO fair Stones plated, one by another, thus inscribed :

HERE lie buried (in the Mercy of GOD) the Bodies of Thomas Beckingham, Esq; Merchant of the Staple at Callis, and Anne his Wife. He deceased the 4th Day of December, Anno Dom. 1576; and she the 22d of May 1565.

HERE lieth Thomas Prenthoit, Citizen and Upholder of LONDON, and Joane his Wife. He deceased the 7th Day of April, An. Dom. 1521.

AN Alabafter Tomb, and the Figure of a Man kneeling on it, thus inscribed :

D. O. M.

HIC situs est Petrus Caponius Florentinus, in vita Nobilitate clarus morum integritate, summis principibus gratissimus exilium quod iniquiore fato subierat constanter tulit. Obiit An. Ætatis 32, Sal. 1582, 6 Cal. Novembris.

A fair Stone in the Middle Isle, with these Words about it:

HERE lieth the Body of Alice Hull, the Wife of Walter Hull, of LONDON, Gentleman, who was buried the 16th Day of November, Ann. Dom. 1627.

IN the Middle of the Stone, with their Arms over it, these Words:

THOUGH we are dead, yet our Lives are hid in Christ with GOD.

CHRIST is to me, both in Life and Death, Advantage.

THOUGH my Flesh faileth, and my Heart also, yet God is the Strength of my Heart, and my Portion for ever.

ON the South of the Communion Table is a Monument for Sir John Mennes, Knt. born at Sandwich in Kent, employed in great Offices of Trust in the Navy by King James, King Charles I. and II. Feb. 18, 1670.

Sir Andrew Riccard, Knt. an eminent Turkey and East-India Merchant, hath a stately Statue of white Marble against the North Wall of this Church, set up in Honour of him by the Turkey

Company. He died Sept. 6, 1672. Aged 68. He lies buried under the Communion Table.

IN the Chancel over the Bayning's Monument is a Bust of white Marble, and an Inscription under it, for Elizabeth Pepys, some Time Wife of Samuel Pepys, Esq; Secretary to the Navy, deceased November 10, 1669.

IN a neat Elliptical white Marble Monument, with Enrichments of Cherubims, Voluta's, Palm-branches, Flowers and Leaves, is this Inscription:

IN Christian Hope of a Blessed Immortality, near this Place lies interred the Body of Jane, late Wife of Matthew Humberstone of LONDON, Esq; the second Daughter of James Host of Sandringham in Norfolk, Esq; who being a Person of singular Accomplishments, and many excellent Virtues, her endeared Husband thinks this Monument a most just Debt to her fragrant Memory. She died July 17, 1694, in her 33d Year.

Her noble Soul and lovely Body join'd,
 Were once the Joy and Wonder of Mankind:
 They who have known her this, with Sighs confess,
 They wish they'd known her still, or known her less:
 Her Race was short, the longer is her Rest;
 GOD, only wise, disposes all Things best.

ARMS: Sable two Bars Argent, on a Chief of the Second, three Pellets; impaled with Azure, a Buffler's Head, couped, Argent, between two Wings, Or.

On a very spacious Black Grave-Stone, at the East End of the South Isle, is inscribed as followeth:

UNDER this Stone lie the Bodies of Mr. John Beare, and Mrs. Doufabel Beare, his Wife: They were married 34 Years, and he lived in this Parish 42 Years; they were both descended from good Families in the County of Devon. He was born at Tones in the said County, and his Wife at Barnstaple, with the Name of Harris. She departed this Life the 2d of June 1688, in the 78th Year of her Age. He followed her the 29th of July 1696, in the 81st Year of his Age.

THEY were both Examples of Piety and Sanctity, of Justice and Charity, of Temperance and Sobriety; and now they rest together in Expectation of Mercy at the great Day of Resurrection.

NEAR these, lies buried the Body of Frances Fairborn, Daughter of Sir Palmer Fairborn, Lieutenant-General of his Majesty's City and Garrison of Tangier, July 26, 1677,

IN the Middle Isle, John Newton, Merchant, together with seven Sons and four Daughters. He died 1697.

HIGH on a Pillar, on the South Side of this Isle, is a White Marble Table, with the Effigies of a young Lady in Basso Relievo, erected to the Memory of Elizabeth Gore, Daughter of Sir William Gore, Knt. and Alderman of LONDON, who died July 18, 1698, aged 18 Years and 11 Months.

NEAR the Communion Table, on a handsome Black Marble Stone, these Words are insculped:

HERE lies interred the Body of Mr. Sanfon, who died the 20th of April 1705.

WE come next to the Charities bestowed on the Poor of this Parish.

THIS Parish hath a Parsonage House, situated next the Church: No other Glebe. This Church escaped the Fire in 1666.

PRAYERS are every Wednesday, Friday, and Holiday, at 11 of the Clock; here is no Organ, but six Bells. Likewise a Lecture Sermon on Thursdays, at 11 of the Clock from Michaelmas to Midsummer.

THE present Incumbent is the Reverend Mr. Arrowsmith; and the Lecturer the Reverend Mr. Hen. Parker.

The PARISH OFFICERS are;

- 2 Church-wardens.
- 2 Sidesmen.
- 2 Collectors for the Poor.

IN Crutched-fryars are fifteen Alms-Houses belonging to the Drapers Company, for as many decayed Freemen of that Company and their Wives; to each House is allowed 5 s. per Month, and one Load of Coals per Ann. In Gun-powder-alley are 10 Alms-Houses, the Gift of the Lord Banyan, in the Year 1631; but now surrendered to the Parish, who allow to each of their Poor in that Place, from 1 s. to 4 s. per Week, and 2, 3, or 4 Bushels of Coals at Christmas.

THE most remarkable Place in this Parish is the Navy-Office, in Crutched-fryars, which is a spacious Building, wherein there are Houses for, and Apartments, to transact the Business of the Navy, under the Lords of the Admiralty, by the following Commissioners.

James Mighells, Esq; Comptroller, whose Office is to comptroll all Payments of Wages, examine and audit the Treasurer's, Victualler's, and Storekeeper's Accompts; to examine the Accompts of the Officers before they are permitted to have Commissions; to know the Market Rates of Stores for Shipping, &c. His Salary, 500 l. per Annum.

Sir Jacob Ackworth, Knight, Surveyor, whose Business is to be acquainted with the Condition of all Stores and Ships, and to estimate the Value of Supplies and Reparations, to charge every Officer with what Stores he receives, and to examine their Accompts. Salary 500 l. per Annum.

The other COMMISSIONERS are:

Thomas Pearse, Esq;

Sir George Saunders,

John Fawler, Esq;

Robert Byng, Esq;

The Lord Vere Beauclerc.

Thomas Kemptborne, Esq; who resides at Chatham-yard.

Richard Hughes, Esq; at Portsmouth.

Sir Nicholas Trevanion, at Plymouth.

THESE have each 500 l. per Annum Salary.

THIS Parish takes in all Hart-street, Three-tun-court, Crutched-fryars, Pump-court, Gun-powder-alley, and a Part of every Place following, viz. Mark, or rather Mart-lane, from a Mart being antiently kept there; Sydon, or Seeth-ing-lane, Horseshoe-court; Mincing, or Mincheon-lane, Poor-jury-lane, Danver's-yard, French-ordinary-court, Savage-gardens, Gould-square, River-street, Colchester-street, and Great-Tower-hill.

NUMBER of Houses 205.

IN Mincheon-lane, so called from certain Tenements there, sometime belonging to the Minchuns, or Nuns of St. Helen's in Bishopsgate-street; there dwelt, of old Time, divers Strangers, born at Genoa, and other Places, who were called Galley-Men, as Men that came up in the Gallies, brought up Wines and other Merchandizes, which they landed in Thames-street, at a Place called Galley-Key: They had a certain Coin of Silver among themselves, which were Half-pence of Genoa, and were called Galley Half-pence. These Half-pence were forbidden in the 13th Year of King Henry IV, and again by Parliament in the 4th of Henry V, by the Name of Half-pence of Genoa, forbidden to be taken as lawful Payment; and it was enacted, That if any Person brought into this Realm Galley Half-pence, Suskins, or Dodkins, he should be punished as a Thief; and he that took or paid such Money, was to forfeit an hundred Shillings, one half to the King, and the other to him that would sue.

AT the West End of Tower-street, and turning a little towards the North, in the Place where now stands Mr. Watts's Academy, was the House of one Grifte, who, in the Year 1449, feasted Jack Cade, Captain of the Rebels of Kent, who, like an unkind Guest, as soon as he had dined, robbed him of all that was in the said House worth carrying away.

IN Water-lane is situated the Trinity-house, The Trinity which belongs to an antient Corporation of Mariners, founded in King Henry VIII's Time, for the Regulation of Seamen, and Security and Convenience of Ships and Mariners on our Coasts.

Norden's
Middlesex

In the said King's Reign lived Sir Thomas Spert, Knight, Comptroller of the Navy to that King, who was the first Founder and Master of the said Society of Trinity-house, and died Anno 1541, and was buried in the Chancel of Stepney Church. To whose Memory the said Corporation, Anno 1622, set up a Monument there, eighty one Years after his Decease: It is on the South Wall, over the Door, but the Inscription is now almost worn out but it may be read in its proper Place. And by an Inscription antienter than that set up by the said Corporation, lost long since in the Church, but preserved by Norden*, we learn, that this Gentleman had three Wives, Dame Margery, Dame Anne, and Dame Mary, all lying in the Chancel there: And that his Coat of Arms was, Two Launces in Saltier, between four Hearts, on a Chief a Ship with the Sails furled. It is said further of this Knight, that he was Commander of the biggest Ship then that the Sea bore, namely Henry Grace de Dieu, built by King Henry VIII, near the Beginning of his Reign.

THIS House, where the Corporation usually meets, belonged to them before the great Fire, after which they took a long Lease, and rebuilt it, but pay a Ground Rent to William Russel of Stubbers in Essex, Esq; Son of Sir William Russel, Knt. sometime Alderman of LONDON. It was burnt down again and rebuilt by the Brotherhood, as appears by this Inscription, on a Square Stone in the Front:

The TRINITY-HOUSE.

THIS House was rebuilt after the Fire of LONDON: And rebuilt after the Fire in Thames-street, 1718.

THE Corporation, one of the most considerable in the Kingdom, is governed by a Master, four Wardens, eight Assistants, and the eldest Brothers of the Company, as they are called, one and thirty in all. The rest of the Company are called Younger Brothers, without any fixed Number; for any Seafaring Men that will, are admitted into the Society under that Name; but they are not in the Government.

THEY meet to chuse their Master commonly at Deptford Strond, but are not obliged to do it there; but the House there being their antient House, they meet in it by old Custom.

THEIR Meetings are commonly on Wednesdays and Saturdays, here at their House in Water-lane, but their Courts are not fixed constantly to a set Time, but as Occasion and Business require. Their Coat of Arms is, Between a Cross-Gules, four Ships under Sail. The Crest, a Demy Lion crowned, Or, with a Sword in his Right Paw. The Motto is, Trinitas in Unitate.

THEY are established by many Charters of the Princes of this Land.

THEIR Service and Use is, That they appoint all Pilots: They set and place the Buoys and Sea-Marks for the safe Direction of Ships in their Sailing. For which they have certain Duties payable by Merchant-Men. They can Licence poor Seamen, antient and past going to Sea, to exercise the Calling of a Waterman upon the Thames, and take in Fares, tho' they have not been bound to any one Free of the Watermens Company. They do maintain in Pensions at this Time 2000 poor Seamen, or their Widows; every one of which have at least Half-a-Crown paid them every first Monday in the Month, and some more, besides accidental distressed Seamen.

THEY have three Hospitals, two at Deptford, and one at Mile-End, which have been already spoken of, in Book I. Chap. 14.

AND thus, as they do a great deal of Good, so they have large Revenues to do it with, which arise, partly from Sums of Money given and bequeathed unto them for charitable Uses, partly from Houses and Lands also given them, and particularly and chiefly from Ballast. For they only have, by Act of Parliament, the Benefit of providing Ballast for Ships in the Thames; and all Ships that take in Ballast pay them 12 d. a Tun at least, and some more: For which it is brought to their Ship's Side, which the Seamen find a good Convenience in, and are very well contented to pay it. They have also certain Light-Houses, as at Scilly and Dungeness in the West, &c. To which Houses all Ships pay one Half-penny a Tun.

IN their Hall there is an old Flag hanging up, which they say was taken from the Spaniards by Sir Francis Drake, whose Picture hangeth up there. There is also the exact Model of a Ship of a great Size rigged, enclosed in a Frame glazed round; the Gift of Sir Jeremy Smith: Likewise two large Globes enclosed, as was the Model of the Ship; the Gift of Sir Thomas Allen; both Admirals of the Navy under King Charles II. Divers Tables also hang up round this Hall, containing the Names of their Benefactors with the Mention of their respective Gifts; and in their Parlour are five large Pieces drawn curiously and exactly with a Pen, describing certain Sea-Fights in King Charles II's Time. More will be said of this Corporation, among the other Companies when we come to the Temporal Government of the City.

IN this Parish is Hart, or Harp-lane, as it is commonly called, which runs down to Thames-street, and in this Lane is Bakers Hall. The Room called the Hall is beautiful and pretty large, adorned with a fine Wainscot Screen, having four Columns and two Pilasters with Entablature of the Corinthian Order. Also at the other End the Picture of St. Clement, the Patron of this Company, and that of Justice, between which are their Arms very large and finely painted.

The CHURCH of St. DUNSTAN in the EAST.

THIS Church is situated about the Middle, between Tower-street, North, and Thames-street, South; and between Idle-lane West, and St. Dunstan's-bill, East.

IT is so called, being dedicated to St. Dunstan. Fuller, in his Church-History, saith, This Dunstan was born at Glassenbury, about the Year of Christ 933, of noble Parentage; his Excellencies were Painting, Graving, Musick, and an admirable Worker in Iron and Brass: He was accused to King Athelstane for a Magician, and that he made his Harp not only to have Motion, but make Musick of itself.

*St. Dunstan's Harp fast by the Wall
Upon a Pin did hang -a,
The Harp itself with Ly and all Untouch'd by Hand, did twang-a.*

AND being hereupon banished the Court, he returned to Glassenbury, where he made himself a Cell: And (the Monks who wrote his Life have it) as he was making some Iron Trinkets the Devil appeared to him, in the Shape of a Woman; which St. Dunstan perceiving, plucked his Tongs, glowing hot out of the Fire, and with them kept the Devil a long Time by the Nose, roaring and bellowing. These must be wonderful Tongs that could have such Effect on a Spirit.

AFTER

AFTER Athelstane's Death, Dunstan was recalled to Court, but was by King Edmund soon re-banished, and afterwards out of the Kingdom by King Edwyn; who dying, St. Dunstan was again re-called by King Edgar, and made at once Bishop of Worcester and LONDON, and then Archbishop of Canterbury, where he died, and was buried under the High Altar, Anno 987.

WHEN this Church of St. Dunstan in the East was first founded is uncertain, but it must have been within these 800 Years by the Dedication. It was repaired and so beautified in the Year 1633, that it amounted almost to a new Building, for it cost 2400 l. to which many worthy Parishioners largely contributed. It was by the unhappy Flames of 1666 almost consumed to Rubbish; only some of the Walls remained; and in the Year 1668, was in a great Measure re-edified, and for the most Part restored by the pious Beneficence of the Lady Williamson, who laid out 4000 l. upon the same.

THE Steeple was erected, as it now appears, about the Year 1698, when the Church was new beautified, pew'd, and wainscotted.

THE Windows and Steeple are a modern Gothic Building, very neat; but the Pillars and Arches within are of the Tuscan Order, and the Roof within appears flat, which, and the Walls of the Nave, are Stone.

THE Roof is divided into Pannels or Quadrangles, with deep Mouldings; the Key-Stone of each Arch is adorned with Cartouches. Here is a very neat Organ Gallery, adorned with carved Cherubims.

IT is well pewed and wainscotted nine Feet high: Here is likewise a handsome Pulpit, and two inner Door-Cases, adorned with Pilasters, Entablature and Pediment of the Corinthian Order, embellished with Shields and their Compartments.

THE Altar-Piece is painted; in the Middle whereof are the Commandments, and between them the Lord's Prayer, and Creed, which are all done in Gold upon Black, with the Effigies of Moses and Aaron. Over the Commandments is a Cornice, and upon that an open Cartouch Pediment, in the Middle of which is a gilded Shield, with its compartment, whereon is done the sacred Word GOD in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and English Characters: The whole having an Enrichment of Flowers, Fruit, Leaves, &c. carved in Basso Relievo. The Foot-Pace under the Communion-Table is Black and White Marble, environed with Rail and Ballister, and the Table is supported by four Angels, on whom are painted these Words: Glory be to the Father, to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. Under the Portraiture of Moses, these Words: The Law was given by Moses. And under that of Aaron, these: But Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ.

UPON the Organ-Case are the King's Arms, and two carved Famies.

The MONUMENTS in this Church are:

IN the Choir, for John Kennington, there buried, 1374.

William Ijlip, Parson, 1382.

John Norwich, Grocer, 1390.

John Kiryoll, Esq; Brother to Thomas Kiryoll, 1400.

Robert Shelly, Esq; 1420.

Alice Brome, Wife to John Coventry, sometime Mayor of LONDON, 1433.

Thomas Barry, Merchant, 1445.

Robert Pepper, Grocer, 1445.

Thomas Bedlow, one of the Sheriffs, 1472.

Sir Bartholomew James, 1479; with this Inscription:

Hic jacet Bartholomeus James, Miles, Civis & Pannarius, ac Aldermannus, nec non quondam Major hujus inclitæ Civitatis LONDON. &c.

THE Place in this Church where this Alderman lay, was called the Chapel of the Holy Trinity, under a Tomb erected in his Life-time, situated before the Image of the Holy Trinity. He willed, that immediately after his Decease, There should be made and set up in the high Choir; a convenient and honest Presbytery, after the Advice and Discretion of Dame Alice his Wife. Item, he bequeathed to the High Altar of the said Church of St. Dunstan, for his Offering (for Duties) forgotten or neglected, or withholden in Discharge of his Soul, against our Lord GOD; and also to have his Soul, among other Souls, on Sundays recommended to the Prayers of the Parishioners there, 26 s. 8 d. Item, He bequeathed to the Sustainment of the Brotherhood of Jesu in the same Church, to pray for his Soul. Item, He willed to have at his Burying, 20 Torches of Wax, every Torch weighing six Pounds; and four convenient Tapers of Wax, to be holden by such Men as had ready their black Gowns and Hoods. Of the Torches he bequeathed to the Church of St. Dunstan four, to burn on Sundays and other Festival Days, before the Blessed Sacrament, at the sacrificing of the High Mass there to be sung, as long as they will endure. Item, Two of the Torches to the Abbey of Leyson in Kent. One to the Priory of St. Mary Magdalene of Combevel in Kent. Two to the Parish Church of St. Margaret Pattens in the City of LONDON. Two to the Chapel of our Lady of Barnet. One to the Parish Church of Albaltows in Staining-lane, LONDON. One to the Chapel of St. Mary Magdalene of the Guildhall of the City of LONDON. One other to the Parish of St. Margaret in Lothbury, LONDON. And Dame Alice his Wife, to dispose of the Remanent of the said Torches at her Pleasure. Item, He bequeathed to the Brotherhood of the Parish Clerks of the City of LONDON, 20 s. so that they were at conducting of his Body to the said Church of St. Dunstan's, and at his Dirige, and Mass of Requiem, and at his Month's Mind. Item, He bequeathed to the Brethren of the House of Fryars of the Order of St. Austin of LONDON, 20 s. for that they, the Day of his Burying, come to the said Church of St. Dunstan's, and there sing Dirige by Note, and pray for his Soul. Item, To every other of the three Orders of Fryars of the City, to pray for his Soul, 6 s. 8 d. if it may be at the Discretion of Dame Alice his Wife. Item, He willed, That there should be sung in the said Church of St. Dunstan, Dirige, and Mass of Requiem, by the Priests and Clerks of the same Church, devoutly, from the Time of his Burial, till and unto the Time of his Month's Mind were finished; and every of them to have for their Labour, 6 s. 8 d. to pray for his Soul. After his said Month's Mind was done, he willed, that the said four Tapers should be broken, and made into small Tapers, every Piece weighing one Pound, which he willed should be set before the Image of the Holy Trinity, and of our Lady in the Church of St. Dunstan, to burn at due and convenient Times and Seasons. Item, He willed, That anon after his Month's Mind done, Dame Alice his Wife, should ordain a Priest of good Name and honest Conversation, to sing and say Divine Service and Mass in the said Church, without he was otherwise letted, or occupied, by the said Dame Alice his Wife. For he willed, in any wise, That the same Priest should be at the Commandment of the said Dame Alice, to attend upon her, and to say Mass and Service before her, in such Time as should please her: The same Priest to pray for his Soul, and the Soul of Johane, late his Wife, their Father's and Mother's Children, and Benefactors Souls, and all Christian Souls, during the Term of five Years, or more, after the Discretion and Will of the said Dame Alice, next ensuing after his Decease, she giving him yearly his Wages, like as she by her Discretion should agree with him. The same Priest daily to say his Masses, as was in the same Church appointed by the same Dame Alice, at the Altar of the Holy Trinity in the said Church. Item, He bequeathed to every House of the Lazzars in the City of LONDON, 3 s. 4 d. to pray for his Soul. Item, To be distributed among poor People in the House of St. Bartholomew Spital, in Money, Bread, or otherwise, 3 s. 4 d.

AND after many other charitable Legacies given to the Prisons, the Compters, the Charter-houses at Sheene, and behind LONDON, and other Gifts, the said Sir Bartholomew James willed, and ordained, That the great Messuage, or Tenement, in which he dwelt, seated in the Parish of St. Dunstan in the East, so and so bounded, after the Decease of Dame Alice his Wife, should wholly remain to the Parson and Church-wardens of the same Parish, for the Time being, to the Use of the Reparation and Works of the same Church, for evermore, under the Conditions ensuing; that is to say, That the said Wardens of the said Parish, and their Successors, Yearly, on the Day of the Month on which he should decease, or be buried, should hold and keep in the said Church, an Obit, or Anniversary, for him, Dame Alice and Johane, his Wives, honestly, as it ought to be done, solemnly by Note, by the Priests and Clerks of the said Church, with Wax to be had and spent about the same, ringing of Bells, and all other Things belonging to the same; and the Wardens of the same Church causing the Mayor and Sheriffs of the City of LONDON yearly, to be at his said Obit: And the Mayor yearly (for the Time being, offering at his Mass of Requiem, 1 d.) to have 6 s. 8 d. paid by the Hand of the said Wardens, out of the Rents and Issues of his said great Tenement: And either of the Sheriffs for the Time being, to have 3 s. 4 d. and the Sword-bearer for warning the Mayor, 20 d. and either of the Wardens, 3 s. 4 d. for their Labour; and every of the Priests, Clerks, and Sexton of the said Church, being at his Obit and Mass of Requiem, for their Labour, 4 d. and for ringing of the Bells, and for Bread and Drink among the Ringers, 20 d. allowing yearly for Wax to be expended about his Obit, 3 s. 4 d. and distributing in Alms among poor People, Householders of the said Parish, 3 s. 4 d. and paying yearly to the Parish Priest, or Curate, abiding in the said Parish, 3 s. 4 d. he every Sunday recommending his Soul, and the Souls of Alice and Johane, his Wives; the Souls of their Father's and Mother's, or Children and Benefactors Souls, to the devout Prayers of the Parishioners there, Bread, Ale, and Cheese, yearly, at the said Obit to be expended, 3 s. 4 d. The Residue, and remaining Due, yearly, of the Rents and Profits, &c. of the said great Tenement, after the afore-said Payments, to be converted, yearly, to the Use of the Works and Reparation of the Church, and said Tenement.

THIS Will is thus largely set down from the Original, by Mr. Styve in his Edition of Stow, to shew, as he says, the Customs and Magnificence of Funerals; and withal, the Superstitious Piety of those Times.

CLOSE by this last Monument standeth another, very fair Alabaster Tomb, richly and curiously gilded, with two antient Figures of Aldermen, in Scarlet, kneeling; the one at one End of the Tomb, in an Arch; the other, at the other, in like Manner; and the Figure of a Lady between them, who was Wife to both. By one standeth a Table, with this Inscription:

Here lieth Henry Heardson's Corpse, within this Tomb of Stone:
His Soul (through Faith in Christ his Death,)
to God in Heaven is gone.
Whilst that he lived an Alderman,
and Skinner was his State,
To Virtue bare he all his Love,
to Vice he bare his Hate.
His Alms that weekly he bestow'd,
within this Parish here,
May witness to the Poors Relief,
What Good Will he did bear.
He had to Wife one Barbara, which made this Tomb you see
By whom he had of Issue store, eight Sons, and Daughters three.
Obiit 22. Decemb. An. Dom. 1555.

By the other standeth the like Table, thus inscribed:

The Corps of Richard Champion, Knight,
Mayor, and Draper, here doth rest:
Whose Soul, by most assured Hope,
with Christ in Heaven is blest.
His Life was such, and so employ'd, to Right from Wrong; that he,
Whom God did so direct in Life,
must needs with Comfort die:
Both Rich and Poor did like him well,
and yet do praise his Name:
Though he behind him left no Child,
which might declare the same.
His weekly Alms that is bestow'd,
within this Parish here:
Doth Witness to the Poor's Comfort,
the Good Will he did bear.
Obiit 30 Octobris, An. Dom. 1568.

THERE is a fair Alabaster Tomb, principally belonging to Sir Christopher Draper, Knt. yet bearing all these Inscriptions following, in regard of the several Marriages of his Daughters:

Sir Christopher Draper, Knight, Ironmonger, and Lord Mayor of LONDON, 1591, deceased, being 70 Years of Age; Lady Margaret, his Wife, made this Monument for him.

Sir William Webbe, Knight, Salter, and Lord Mayor of LONDON 1566, deceased the 4th Day of July 1599; Lady Bennet, his Wife, yet living, Daughter to Sir Christopher Draper, Knight, performed this in her Love to him.

Sir Wolstane Dixie, Knt. Skinner, and Lord Mayor of LONDON, An. Dom. 1582, deceased, being 69 Years of Age; Lady Agnes, his Wife, Daughter to Sir Christopher Draper, Knt. deceased in the 37th Year of her Age.

Sir Henry Billingsley, Knight, Haberdasher, and Lord Mayor of LONDON 1596, yet living in An. 1602. Mrs. Bridget, his Wife, Daughter to Sir Christopher Draper, Knight, deceased in the 44th Year of her Age. Mr. Christopher Woodroffe, Son to the said Mrs. Bridget, deceased 37 Years of Age.

Hoc Monumentum amoris ergo posuit Domina Benet Webbe, superstes in memoriam sui conjugis dignissimi equitis Guil. Webbe, defuncti 4 Julii 1599. Ut etiam in observantiam officii erga parentes suos Dom. Christ. Draper, & Magaretam Uxorem ejus, nec non ceteros tum sorores tum posteros præfixos.

UNDERNEATH it is an antient Marble Monument; and upon a Plate are these Words engraven:

Here lieth buried James Bacon, late of LONDON, Alderman and Sheriff, who departed this mortal Life the 5th Day of June, Anno Dom. 1573; having Issue by Mary his first Wife, one Son and three Daughters: And by Margaret his second Wife, three Sons and one Daughter: And by Anne his third Wife, no Child, &c.

THIS Gentleman was third Son of Robert Bacon, late of Drinkston in Suffolk, and younger Brother to Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper. He deceased at his House in LONDON, June 1, 1573. His first Wife Mary was Daughter of John Gardiner of Grove-Place, Bucks; and by her had Issue Anne his Daughter, Wife to John Rivet of Brampston in Suffolk, Gent. The same James married to his second Wife Margaret, Daughter to William Rawlins of LONDON, Grocer, Widow of Richard Goldston, of LONDON, Salter; by whom he had Issue, James Bacon, and William, his second Son. The said James's third Wife was a Daughter of Humphrey Packington of LONDON, Gent. Widow of Edmund Jackman, late Alderman.

ON the North Side of the Chancel is a fair Monument, erected in the Wall, bearing this Inscription:

Johannes Hawkins, Eques Auratus, clariss. Reginae Marinarum caesarum Thesaurarius. Qui cum XLIV. annos muniis bellicis, & longis periculosisque navigationibus, detegendis novis regionibus, ad Patriae utilitatem, & suam ipsius gloriam, strenuam & egregiam operam navasset, in expeditione, cui Generalis praefuit ad Indiam occidentalem dum in Anchoris ad portum S. Joannis in insula Beriquena stare, placide in Domino ad Coelestem Patriam emigravit, 12 die Novembris, Anno Salutis 1595. In cujus memoriam ob virtutem, & res gestas, Domina Margareta Hawkins, Uxor maestissima, hoc Monumentum cum Lacrymis posuit.

A fair Monument in the Isle of the Chancel, with this Inscription:

Here lyeth the Body of Richard Wyche, Merchant and Citizen of LONDON, free of the Company of Skinners: Amongst whom (having born all Offices) his Life and Carriage was exemplary.

He married Elizabeth, the Daughter of Sir Will. Saltinghal, Knt. sometime Alderman and Mayor of the Honourable City of LONDON; by whom he had Issue 12 Sons and six Daughters, viz. Richard, Thomas, Susan, Daniel, George, Samuel, Peter, Elizabeth, James, Mary, Anne, Edward, Julius, William, Henry, Abigail, Nathaniel, and Rebecca.

Sons { 4. } Deceased.
          { 8. } Living.

Daughters { 2. } Deceased.
              { 4. } Living.

He yielded his Soul in Peace, to his Maker, the 20th of November, after 67 Years Pilgrimage here amongst Men; whose latter Years were bestowed in Expectation of his End; express'd in settling his Estate here on Earth, and in Preparation of his Soul for Heaven; where it now remains in Peace and Happiness.

ANOTHER for Bernard Hyde; deceased An. 1630. Anne, his Wife, 1640. Hester; his Son's

Wife, Jan. 17, 1649; and Bernard Hyde, Esq; his Son, Jan. 5, 1655.

DAME Mary Moor, late Wife of Sir John Moor, Knt. and Alderman, hath also a Monument here. She died May 16, 1690.

AGAINST the South Wall, contiguous to the East, is erected a stately Monument for Sir William Russel, Knt. some Time Alderman of this City, with his Effigies engraven on Stone, lying on his Left Side, and well resembling him. He was a Benefactor to this Parish, leaving, by his Last Will, 3*l.* yearly to be distributed on St. Simon and Jude's Day, on which Day he was born in the said Parish, viz. 20*s.* for a Sermon on that Day to be preached, 27*s.* to the Poor, and the rest to the Clerk or Sexton, to keep his Monument clean.

THE Inscription shews, That he fin'd for Alderman and Sheriff; that he was the fourth Son of Robert Russel, Esq; some Time Deputy of the Ward; that he married two Wives: His first, Susanna, sole Daughter and Heiress of Daniel Palmer of Chesthunt, Gent. by whom he had Issue four Sons and three Daughters; and that she died November 18, 1683. His second, Mary Woods, Relict of James Woods, some Time Deputy of Langborn Ward, who survived him. That this Knight died June 10, 1705, aged 62, having lived in steady Communion with the Church of England, and with the general Reputation of an useful Citizen, a loyal Subject, an affectionate Husband and Father, a wife and good Man, and having seen a hopeful and flourishing Posterity.

THE Vault wherein he lies, is in the North Isle, where also rest divers of his Relations, as, his Father, two of his Brothers, his Father-in-Law, his first Wife, two of his Sons; Susanna Bludworth, his second Daughter, late Wife of John Bludworth of LONDON, Merchant, who died in Childbed, and her Son; seven Children of Elizabeth his eldest Daughter, Wife of John Cocks, Citizen and Mercer of LONDON, of the antient Family of the Cocks of Bentley Paunceford in Worcestershire; and one Son of his youngest Daughter Anne, Wife of Lyming Paget of Westminster, Esq;

ON a flat Stone on the Ground in the Chancel is this Inscription:

Mortalitatis Exuvias hic deposuit Franciscus March apud Limehouse in Agro Mediae Sexiae natus; Qui circa 16 Aetatis Annum Insulam Cyprum petens, ibi laudabili Industria & Parcemonia Rem familiarem auxit. Dein in Patriam reversus, & in honorabilem Mercatorum Societatem, qui commutandis mercibus Turcarum littora frequentant; co-optatus, erga Deum pium, in Negotiationibus justum, in Promissis fidum, in re familiari providum, in suos beneficum & in omnes benevolum, se praestitit. Tandem stranguria correptus postquam immanes cruciatus per aliquot menses ab ulcere vesicam depascenti, invicta animi Constantia, perpassus esset, ineluctabili morbo cessit, & Mortalitati, non vitae, valedixit 10 Novembr. 1697, Aetat. 62.

NORTH of the Communion stands this Monumental Inscription:

Bernardus Hyde Avus hic depositus, Obiit Anno Salutis 1630. Anna Uxor, filia Humfredi Walcot, Armigeri, obiit An. Sal. 1640. Bernardus Hyde, Armiger, Pater, Ob. Januar. 5, An. Dom. 1655. Hester, Uxor, filia Johannis Trot, Generosi, ob. Januar. 17. Anno Sal. 1649.

Spe Resurrectionis, in Orientali hujus Ecclesiae Adyto, prope dormiunt. Sed quoniam fatali Urbis incendio Parentum Monumenta periire, piæ Observantiæ hoc sacrum renovans Parentat.

Bernardus Hyde de Bore Place in Agro Cantiano, Eq. Auratus fil. natus maximus, Anno Sal. 1674.
 Ex quo pullulavit Bernardus unius mensis filiolus, hic inhumatus infantulus, An. Sal. 1662. Maij 12<sup>o</sup>.

Sir John Moor's INSCRIPTION.

ON the North Wall, just under the Monument of Dame Mary Moor, late Wife of Sir John Moor, is his Monument placed, being of curious Workmanship, with this Inscription :

In a Vault near this Place, is deposited the Body of Sir John Moor, Knt. some Time Lord Mayor of LONDON, one of the Representatives of this City in Parliament, and President of Christ's Hospital, who for his great and exemplary Loyalty to the Crown, was empowered by King Charles II. to bear on a Canton, one of the Lions of England, as an Augmentation to his Arms ; who out of a Christian Zeal for good Works founded and endowed a Free School at Appleby in Leicestershire, his Native Country, and was a good Benefactor to the Worshipful Company of Grocers, to the several Hospitals of this City, to his own Relations in general, and to this Parish. He departed this Life the 2d of June, 1702, aged 82.

ON the North Wall, a Monument, for the Grandfather of the Lady Williamson, the most noble Benefactrice to the Rebuilding this Church bearing this Inscription :

Pietati et Charitati sacrum.

Hic juxta depositæ sunt Reliquiæ Richardi Hale, Armigeri, in Spe beatæ Resurrectionis ; qui decessit Anno Dom. 1620.

Cujus e filio primogenito Gulielmo Neptis, Domina Dionysia Williamson, de Hales-Hall in Comit. Norfolk, pro summa Pietate et Munificentia Ecclesiam hanc incendio deletam, impensis MMMM Libris maxima ex Parte restauravit. Exiguum hoc honoris et gratitudinis ergo, Μνημόσυρον Avo posuere P.S.D. Or. Tota hæc quam extruxit Sacra Moles Ipsi erat pro sempiterno Monumento. Tuum erit Lector, e tam illustri Exemplo discere Fidem sine Operibus Mortuam esse Domine dilexi Decorem Domus tuæ Locum Habitationis Gloriæ tuæ.

UNDER a Grave-Stone in the Cross Isle of the Chancel, lies interred the Body of Sir James Dolliffe, Knt. who departed this Life the 15th of February 1704, aged 54.

AGAINST the South Wall is a Marble Monument, with this Inscription :

Near this Place lieth interr'd the Body of Sir Peter Parravicin, Knt. who departed this Life the 29th of January 1696, aged 59 Years.

ALSO in the same Vault, his Daughter, Mary Parravicin, who departed this Life, May the 3d, 1725, aged 56 Years.

Over-against the Pulpit, on one of the Pillars in the Middle Isle is erected a White Marble Table, with the following Inscription :

Here lieth the Body of Richard Cary, Esq; who departed this Life the 25th of January, 1726, aged 78 Years. He was the 2d Son of Sherbaw Cary, of the City of Bristol, Esq; by Mary, his Wife, eldest Daughter of John Scrope, of Castle Combe in the County of Wilts, Esq; by Mary, Daughter of John Hungerford, of Cadnam, Esq; Here also lie the Bodies of Jane his Wife, Richard their Son, and Jane their Daughter ; Martha, his only surviving Child, married Robert

Elwes, Junr. of the County of Hertford, Esq; who erected this Monument in Honour to his Memory.

ON the next Pillar is another Marble Table, with this Inscription :

Near this Place lieth interred, expecting the joyful Resurrection (whose Works shall follow him) Edward Belitha, Esq; Citizen of LONDON. He died April the 1st, 1717, in the 76th Year of his Age.

IN this Church of St. Dunstan in the East, in the Reign of Edward IV, were certain Holidays more solemnly kept, viz.

The Dedication of the Church, which was on the Day of the 11000 Virgins, when the Church-wardens laid out for Bread, Wine, and Ale in the Church, 15 d.

St. Fabian's and St. Bastian's Day. The Charge that Day for Bread, Wine, and Ale, was 13 d. ob.

St. Dunstan's Day, for Bread, Wine, and Ale, with Garlands, 16 d.

Ascension-Day, for Bread and Ale in the Church, 2 d.

Whitsunday and Trinity-Sunday, on the same Account, 2 d.

Corpus Christi Day, for Garlands and Ale, 11 d.

And these Obits and Memories of the Dead, were in this Church observed, by the Care of the Church-wardens in the same King Edward IV's Time.

John Maykin, and William Lyn, for rehearsing their Names in the Pulpit every Sunday, by the Priest was paid to him for one Year, 8 s. 4 d.

For keeping clean the Pardon Church-yard, and other Things necessary to the Church, 16 d.

For Easter-Even, a Quarter of Coals for the Holy Fire, 5 d.

For Bread and Ale the same Day in the Church 2 d.

Now in regard that this Parish of St. Dunstan is the last of Tower-street Ward ; we are to speak of God's Blessings there to the Poor, which were 7 s. 3 d. every Sunday through the Year, given in ready Money, besides Bread and other Gifts, according to the Wills and Dispositions of Sir Richard Champion, and Mr. Alderman Heardson, with Coals given beside at certain Times. Moreover, one Man hath given yearly for ever an whole Ox to be distributed by a Quarter thereof Quarterly, Quarterly, and a Peck of Oatmeal therewithal to the Poor. Other Charities there are, which came in Gifts of ready Money, and are accordingly duly distributed.

THIS, taken from Monday's Edition of Stow, is but an imperfect Account of the Charitable Donations to this Parish, which have been very many and large: But the Parish suffered very much in those given in the Papist Times; which having some Mixtures of Superstition, were all lost and forfeited to the Crown, by the Statute in King Edward VI's Reign: But those that are still enjoyed by the Parish, are these:

BENEFACTORS.

William Sevenoke, gave 13 Houses in Mincing-lane, and Tower-street; out of which a Beam-Light (as it is in the Will) of 13 s. 4 d. is issuing: Which with the Alms-Houses in the two Alleys in Mincing-lane, and the two poor Widows Houses there, (for which two Widows Houses, Mr. Russel gave 10 l. to free them from the Rent) amount to the yearly Rent of 29 l. 13 s. 4 d.

Matthew Earnest gave all that Capital Messuage, or Tenement, called the Horse-Head, with four Shops on either Side the same, situated in Thames-street; out of which an Obit of 1 l. 13 s. 4 d. is issuing, and also 5 d. every Sunday to the Poor. The Rent of which Premises amount unto the yearly Sum of 20 l.

Sir Bartholomew James, Knight, gave a Messuage or Dwelling-House, with another small Tenement adjoining to the same, at the West End of the Church-yard, South-Side; out of which an Obit of 1 l. 13 s. 4 d. is issuing. The Rent of which Premises amount now to the yearly Sum of 6 l.

And in Consideration whereof, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Chamberlain of LONDON, did grant an Annuity of 4 l. to be issuing out of the Chamber of LONDON, to the Use of this Parish.

William Heins gave the Moiety of his House in the Cross-lane, near this Church, which amounts to the yearly Sum of 5 l. formerly 6 l.

Sir Richard Champion, Knight and Alderman, gave 117 l. 10 s. with which Money, and 52 l. 10 s. Parish Money, was purchased and bought one Messuage, or Tenement, in Bosse-alley at Billingsgate; out of which is paid to 13 poor People, every Sunday, 2 d. a-piece, which is now of the yearly Value of 8 l.

Also there is a certain Room over a Ground-Room; which Ground-Room is the Inheritance of Mr. Edward Nun, and Partner: Which Over-Rooms are let unto the said Mr. Nun, and Partner, for 99 Years, to commence in the Year 1669, at 1 l. per Annum. This is lost.

Richard Goulston gave 100 l. to purchase Lands and Tenements; with which Money, and an Addition of the Parish Stock, two Houses were purchased in Thames-street. Out of which is paid to 13 poor People every Sunday 2 d. a-piece, which amounteth to the yearly Sum of 14 l.

George Hanger gave an Annuity of 4 l. out of certain Lands in Ruston in Berks, for the Poor of this Parish: Which is to be distributed every Year at Christmas: But instead thereof, the Vestry took 70 l. with which Money they purchased a Cellar on St. Dunstan's-bill, at 4 l. per Ann.

THERE are certain Lands and Houses, situated on the same Side of the Church, called by the Name of Cuttle's Lands, of the yearly Rent of 18 l. Formerly 23 l.

Mrs. Bennet gave 220 l. with which Money, and 50 l. given by Mr. Southerton, to assure him of 50 s. per Ann. for ever, was bought the Lands at Lewisbam, which are of the yearly Rent of 15 l. 10 s. out of which is to be distributed among the Poor every Year 5 l. at Christmas, and 5 l. at Easter.

Mrs. Anne Hyde gave 3 l. per Ann. payable by Bernard Hyde, Esq; which is to be distributed to five poor Women, every Year, 10 s. a-piece.

Also, she gave 4 l. 10 s. more, payable by the Company of Salters, every 10th Year; and accordingly it hath been received by the Churchwardens, to be distributed the same Year, when received, among the Poor, at Christmas.

Bernard Hyde, Esq; alias Sir Bernard Hyde, gave 5 l. per Ann. payable by the Worshipful Company of Salters, LONDON: Which is to be distributed to ten poor Men at Christmas, every Year 10 s. a-piece.

Edward Turvile, Esq; gave 11 l. per Ann. for ever, payable by the Company of Grocers: Out of which is paid every Sunday to thirteen poor People, 2 d. a-piece in Money, and 2 d. a-piece in Bread.

Dame Catharine, Viscountess Conway, Widow, gave 10 l. per Annum, payable from the Company of Grocers. Five Pounds whereof is to be distributed among the Poor at Christmas, and 5 l. at Whitsuntide, yearly.

Sir Thomas Hunt gave one Annuity of 2 l. 13 s. 4 d. now issuing out of Lands and Houses in Kent-street, to be distributed among the Poor at Christmas.

William Bateman, Senior, deceased, gave 200 l. to purchase Lands for the Poor and Church. And appointed 4 l. to be given yearly to the Poor at Christmas, and 4 l. at Easter. With which 200 l. and an Addition of the Parish Stock, were purchased a Close lying in Poplar-Marsh. Afterward Gilbert Keate, Esq; deceased, gave 120 l. and appointed 4 l. to be distributed at Christmas to four poor Men and four poor Women. Which 120 l. was added to the Parish Stock: And therefore the said Lands are charged with the 4 l. per Annum, and were let at 19 l. per Annum; but now for 18 l.

THE said Gilbert Keate, Esq; gave more, to be lent to three young Men, 20 l. a-piece, Gratis, for four Years; and so from four to four Years, whereof one to be of the Dolphin-Precinct.

Clothworkers Hall.

ALMOST at the End of Mincing-lane, next Fenchurch-street, is the Hall belonging to the Company of Clothworkers; of the Charter of which Company, &c. we shall treat among the other Companies, when we come to the Temporal Government of the City: But as to the Building, the Hall is a lofty Room, adorned with Wainscot to the Ceiling, where is curious Fretwork. The Screen at the South End is of Oak, adorned with four Pilasters, their Entablature and Compass Pediment of the Corinthian Order, enrich'd with their Arms, and Palm Branches. The West End is adorned with the Figures of King James and King Charles I. richly carved, as big as the Life, in their Robes, with Regalia, all gilt with Gold, where is a spacious Window of Stain'd Glass, and the King's-Arms. Also those of Sir John Robinson, Knt. and Bart. his Majesty's Lieutenant of the Tower of LONDON, Lord Mayor of this Honourable City, Anno 1663, and President of the Artillery Company, who kept his Mayoralty in this Hall, in which Year he entertained their Majesties, the King, Queen, and Queen Mother, and their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Dutches of York, and towards the redifying of this Hall was a worthy Benefactor. His Coat of Arms, 1st and 4th, Gules, and Or quarterly embatteled; the 2d and 3d, Vert Semi of Trefoils, a Buck Frissant, Or, and the like Buck for the Crest.

HERE are also painted the Arms of Samuel Pepys, Master of the Company, and a Benefactor, Anno 1677, viz. 1st and 4th, Sable on a Bend, Or, between two Horses Heads crased, Argent, three Flower de Lis, the 2d and 3d, Gules, a Lion Rampant within a Bordure ingrayled, Or.

IN another Window, finely painted, the Arms of William Hewart, Master of this Company, and a Benefactor 1687, viz. Sable, two Talbots Heads, Or, between as many Flaunces Ermin.

IN a fourth Window, the Arms of Sir Joseph Williamson, Knt. one of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, and Principal Secretary of State, Master of this Worshipful Company, Anno 1676, and a noble Benefactor, viz. Or, a Cheveron ingrafted between three Trefoils Sable.

ALSO in two small Windows, the Arms of the Honourable City of LONDON, and those of this Company, which are, Sable a Chevron Ermin between two Habricks in chief Argent, and a Tessel in Base, Or; Crest a Ram Passant, Or; Supporters, two Griffins, Or, Pelletee; Motto, My Trust is in God alone.

THE Outside is adorned with curious Brick fluted Columns, with Corinthian Capitals of Stone.

THE two Church Lanes meeting on the South Side of St. Dunstan's Church and Church-Yard, join in one, and running down to Thames-street, the same is called St. Dunstan's-Hill, at the Lower End whereof the said Thames-street (toward the West, on both Sides almost to Billinggate, but towards the East up to the Water-Gate, by the Bulwark of the Tower) is all of Tower-street Ward. In this Street on the Thames Side, are divers large Landing Places, called Wharfs, or Keys, for Cranage up of Wares and Merchandize, as also for Shipping of Wares from thence to be exported.

BY Occasion of the defrauding of the Queen of her Customs for Goods and Merchandizes, brought in or carried out, by making Use of small obscure Creeks, or Places where no Custom-house Officer was attending, or by the Corruption of those Officers, or by other fraudulent and undue Practices, and so privately conveying them away, without paying the Custom or Subsidy due, there was an Act made in the first Year of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1559, "That no Goods should be put ashore at any Place in the Kingdom, but where she should appoint and assign, by her Commission." In Pursuance of this Act, the Queen ordered her Lord Treasurer, her Under Treasurer, and Chancellor of her Exchequer, to set forth and publish her Pleasure, for the divers Ports of her Kingdom. And for the Port of LONDON, the said Commissioners drew up this Declaration, determining what particular Keys, Wharfs, and Stairs should be for lading and discharging of all Manner of Merchandizes, and what particular Goods should be landed at Billinggate, the Three Cranes, the Bridge-house, and the Stil-yard. Where Newcastle Coals, Deal Boards, Ore, Corn, &c. should be laid on Land; what Creeks, Wharfs, and Keys, from Gravesend to London-Bridge, should be no more used as lading or discharging Places, but be debarred utterly from it for ever. And that no Stranger, whether Denison or not, should henceforth inhabit upon any of the Wharfs allowed, except the Stil-yard only. And lastly, That all Keepers of Wharfs and Keys, should be bound to the Queen, in certain Sums of Money, that no Goods should be landed at their Keys or Stairs, or put thence upon the Water, to be carried abroad, before the said Goods were entered in the Queen's Custom Books, and to be laden in the Presence of some Searcher. All these Orders ran in this express Tenor following:

Wharfs and Keys.

THESE Wharfs and Keys commonly bear the Names of their Owners, which are therefore variable. In the 26th of Henry VI, there was a Tenement in the Parish of St. Dunstan in the East, called Passeke’s Wharf, and another called Horner’s-Key, in Thames-street, which were granted to William Harrington, Esq; In the 6th of Richard II, John Churchman, Grocer, for the Quiet of Merchants, built a certain House upon the Key, called Wool-Wharf, in the Tower- street Ward, in the Parish of Albhallows-Barking, betwixt the Tenement of Paul Salisbury on the East Part, and the Lane called the Water-Gate, on the West, to serve for Troynage, or weighing of Wools in the Port of LONDON : Whereupon the King granted, That during the Life of the said John, the aforesaid Troynage should be held and kept in the said House, with Easements there for the Ballances and Weights, and a Counting-Place for the Customer, Comptrollers, Clerks, and other Officers of the said Troynage, together with Ingress and Regress to and from the same, even as we had in other Places, where the said Troynage was wont to be kept, and that the King should pay yearly to the said John (during his Life) 40 s. at the Terms of St. Michael and Easter, by even Portions, by the Hands of his Customer, without any other Payment to the said John, as in the Indenture thereof more at large appeareth.

Custom-House
in Alhallows
Barking
Parish.

AND here at the Custom-House, it will be proper to shew some Things relating to its antient, as well as modern State.

ABOUT the Year 1554, or 1555, under Queen Mary I, a Commission was given to certain Gentlemen for the assessing of the new Rates; whereof the Lord Paget, and Sir John Baker, were the Chief; the one Lord Privy Seal, and the other Chancellor of the Exchequer, who observed this Rule, to under-rate the most necessary Commodities that came into the Realm, to draw them hither; and to over-rate the superfluous Commodities inward, to drive them away: And generally they did under-rate and under-prize all Foreign Commodities of that they were ordinarily current for, lest a Glut here of any of those Wares might bring them under their Rates; and that the Merchants might not say, they were valued to the utmost that before lacked a good Part of what they were then rated at: And so Peter Ofborn, Remembrancer to the Lord Treasurer, divers Years after, informed him.

There was also, long before this, a Book of Rates in King Henry VII's Time.

One Needham, about the Year 1570 and odd, wrote a Book shewing and correcting the Abuses of Customers, of Shippers, of Merchants, &c. and sent it privately to the Lord Treasurer, with his Letter, to this Tenor, That he thought it his Duty justly and truly to open to his Honour such Notes and Knowledge, as by his Service and Travel, he had gather'd in 10 or 12 Years, by searching how to reform such Abuses, Deceits, and Disorders, as were used, all England through, against the Queen's Majesty, both by her Officers belonging to the Customs, as also by Merchants and Shippers; and how they might be redressed, and her Highness justly answered her Rights and Duties. And also, his farther Opinion how to reform such Wrongs as the said Officers and their Clerks, and their Clerks used against the Merchants and Shippers, by raising new Duties, delaying them from Bills, Cockets and other Writings, and not observing the Hours and Times appointed them to be at the Custom-House, and give Attendance to receive her Majesty's Duties, and dispatch the Merchants and Shippers. All which good Orders, that had been appointed both for the good Service of her Majesty, the Merchants and Shippers, by the gentle and mild Nature of the late Lord Treasurer, (Marquis of Winchester) deceas'd, all the Officers and Clerks were suffered to break, and in a Manner did what they would, without Comptrolment. And by long Sufferance, both they, the Merchants, Shippers, Key-Keepers, and other Watermen, are now nestled, and grown into that disordered Liberty, which had been, and was so profitable to them, that it would be hard to bring them to good Order again, without some Severity to be used.

THE Method of doing which, this Man, before the present Treasurer the Lord Burleigh, in certain Articles, had offered himself to be employed in, having his Warrant from the said Treasurer, and he making it his own Device and Doing, so as it might not be known to come from him [this Proposer] for his avoiding of further Displeasure.

THIS Person the Queen put in Trust to travel in these Matters of Customs; and he, according to his Oath and Duty, without respect of Favour or Malice to any Persons, shewed his Opinion how to reform the Abuses as well of the one as the other, as one desirous to see her Majesty, truly answered her Rights and Dues, and that honest Merchants, and Shippers, might be well used, and Offenders punished.

IN the Year 1572, a List was brought in to the Lord Treasurer of the Queen's Yearly Customs, Subsidies, and Imposts, since the Beginning of her Reign, to that Time; which stood thus:

	l.	s.	d.
Anno Primo,	73846	12	10

THE Names of the Officers the same Year 1572, in and appertaining to the Custom-house of LONDON, besides Commissions appendant, were these:

For PETTY-CUSTOM.

1. Mr. Billingsley, Collector of Customs, Inwards.
2. Mr. Bird, Collector of the Custom, Outwards.
3. Mr. Ribet, Comptroller of those two.

Subsidy by Statute.

4. Mr. Thomas Smith, Collector of Subsidy Inwards.
5. Mr. Francis Robinson, Collector of Subsidy Outwards.
6. Mr. John Chapman, Comptroller of those two.
7. Mr. Colsbill, an odd Man for Surveyor, which overlooked all the rest.
8. Mr. Richard Gray, a Searcher, whose Service always was upon the Water.

9. THE Ninth was the Office of the Waiters, whose Service was always on the Land, without Head as they term'd it, because every Man catched for himself, &c. and they were in Number 16.

THE other Eight afore said, were termed Head Officers, because every one of them had their Deputies and Servants, some two, some four, and some six.

10. Mr. Yong, the Tenth was an Officer called the Packer: The Gift and Profit of which appertained to the City of LONDON. The Gift of all the rest to the Lord Treasurer of England.

Commissions Appendant.

Smith and Morley for Survey of Cloth; Daubney, for Survey of Beer; Fabian and Wanton for other Device; Broke and Hunt for barrelled Fish; Anflo and Farnham for Coney-Skins; Mr. Robinson's Lease for the Ferme Wines.

THE Queen lost considerably by Concealments of Customs, as appeared by a Note brought in about about the eighth or ninth Year of her Reign by the Customers of the Port of LONDON, of all the Value of the Goods shipped out or brought in by the English and Strangers, for the Queen's first Eight Years taken out of the Accompts delivered into the Exchequer; which one Carmarthen of the Custom-house drew up for the Queen's own Use: Wherein he set down what was, in those eight Years, concealed of Customs Inwards only, all Things allowable deducted, viz. 96,720 l. 13 s. 7 d. besides the petty Customs of Strangers Inwards, which was not herein reckoned. Whereupon there was a Commission for Concealment of Customs granted to one Edmond Matthews: But he was menaced and threatened to be made a Pattern of Destruction, if ever he attempted the like Service.

ABOUT the Year 1590, Thomas Smith was the Queen's Customer; to whom she let the Customs and Subsidies in the Port of LONDON Inwards to Farm; (who had long before been a Collector of them) for which he paid her Rent 20,000 l. per Annum: Whereas, as it was discovered, all the Incomes of those Customs amounted yearly to 30,309 l. 15 s. 5 d. so that it appeared the Queen lost yearly, by that Farm, 10,309 l. 15 s. 5 d. This the said Carmarthen cast up, thereby intending to let the Queen understand how much she lost by Farming out her Customs, viz. above 10,000 l. a Year.

A Clerk for Execution of Penal Statutes.

THERE was a new Officer propounded about the Year 1572, to be brought into the Custom-house, viz. a Clerk for the Execution of Penal Statutes, namely one Middlemore, who had moved for this Place, and obtained a Patent for it upon Pretence that Forfeitures and Penalties made by Merchants might be the better answered to the Queen; about this Time, the Lord Treasurer consulted the chief Officers of the Custom-house, who gave in their Reasons against it; which were these: First, that there was no Place for any more Officers or Clerks than were already there placed, but rather lack of Room for Expedition of the Merchants and Shippers when they came there. That there had been divers like Grants made for having of Places in the Custom-house, to whom Denial had been made by the Lord Treasurer to have any Place there: And that for Middlemore's Patent they thought it not profitable for the Queen's Service that any Penal Laws should be executed in her Custom-house, for that it would much hinder her Revenue in her Customs and Subsidies, and also grieve the Merchants, who daily did diminish in their Trades, and employed their Monies upon Exchange, whereof her Majesty had no Benefit. Finally, the Custom-house had always been a quiet Place, appointed only for Receipt of the Queen's Revenues and Duties, and not for the Execution of Penal Statutes, which were repugnant one to the other.

Present State of the Custom-house.

By the foregoing Account, we see that the Customs were once farmed, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, for 20,000 l. per Annum, which now bring in above an hundred Times as much, viz. above two Millions yearly.

THE Custom-house is situated on the South Side, and not far from the East End of Thames-street. After the Fire of LONDON, viz. in the Year 1668, a very handsome Office was built here; but that being burnt in the Year 1718, it was rebuilt in a very spacious and commodious Manner, with Brick and Stone, adorned with an upper and lower Order of Architecture, the latter is with Stone Columns and Entablature of the Tuscan Order; the former, with Pilasters, Entablature and Pediments of the Ionick Order. The Length of the Building is 189 Feet, the Breadth, in the Middle, 27 Feet; but at the End much broader.

THE present Commissioners, and other Officers of this House are:

THERE are besides these, a considerable Number of inferior Officers, as extraordinary Tidefinen, Weighing-Porters, and Watchmen, who are only paid when they are employed, and stand fairest for any Vacancy in the Establishment.

NEAR this Customer's-key, towards the East, was the Water-gate, and towards the West is Porter's-key; then Galley-key, where the Gallies were used to unlade, and land their Merchandizes and Wares; and that Part of Thames-street was therefore by some called Galley-row, but more commonly Petty Wales.

ON the North Side, as well as the South of Thames-street, were many large Houses for Stowage, built for Merchants, towards the East End of it, namely, over-against Galley-key, Wool-key, and the Custom-house. There were also some large Stone Buildings, the Ruins whereof were remaining in Stow's Time; but the first Builders and Owners of them being worn out of Memory, the common People affirmed, that they were built by Julius Caesar: Some were of another Opinion, and that more likely, that this great Stone Building was some Time the Lodging appointed for the Princes of Wales, when they repaired to this City, and that therefore the Street in that Part is called Petty Wales, which Name remaineth there most commonly to this Day; as where the Kings of Scotland were used to be lodged betwixt Charing-Cross and Whitehall, is still called Scotland-yard; and where the Earls of Britain were lodged, without Aldersgate, is still called Little-Britain.

An Hospital for Lunaticks.

IN the 44th Year of Edward III, an Hospital, in the Parish of Barking, was founded by Robert Denton, Chaplain, for the Sustentation of poor Priests, and others, both Men and Women, who were sick of the Phrenzy, there to remain till they were perfectly well, and restored to good Memory.

THERE was, in the sixth Year of Henry V, in Tower-street Ward, a Messuage, or great House, called Cobham's-Inn; and in the 37th of Henry VI, a Messuage in Thames-street, appertaining to Richard Longville. Some of the Ruins before spoke of, might very likely be of the aforefaid Hospital, belonging, peradventure, to some Prior Alien, and so suppressed among the rest, in the Reign of Edward III, or Henry V; who suppressed them all.

NOW for the modern State of this Ward, in relation to the Streets, Passages, and Places of Habitation, since the Fire of LONDON. It contains these principal Streets and Lanes, as hath been taken by a careful Survey; viz. Tower-street, Thames-street, Mark-lane, Mincing-lane, and Seething-lane, St. Olave Hart-street; then Idle-lane, St. Dunstan's-hill, Harp-lane, Water-lane, and Beer-lane, in which Places are several Courts and Alleys.

Tower-street, of which there is the Great and the Little; of which latter, but some Part is in this Ward, beginning about the Middle, near unto St. Margaret Patton's Church, and falls into Great-Tower-street, which runs Eastwards unto Tower-hill, or Dock, and is a spacious Street, well built and inhabited by able Tradesmen; and the rather, as being so great a Thoroughfare to and from Wapping, the Tower, St. Catharine's, and those Parts bordering upon the Thames, replenished with Seafaring Persons.

THE Courts in this Street are, Mercers-court, seated on the North Side, very long, with turning Passages, and but indifferently inhabited. Carpenters-hall-court, a square Place, with an open Passage into it, sufficient for a Cart. Fowk's-court, very handsome and open, with a Free-Stone Pavement, and hath good Houses, which are well inhabited. Black-swan-court, a pretty handsome open Place, with indifferent Houses. Red-cross-court, also pretty good. Beckford-court, a very handsome airy Place, with large Houses, well inhabited, especially the Upper End. White-lion-court, seated over-against Barking Church, is both small and ordinary, and hath a Passage into Chitterling-alley. Priest's-alley, both narrow and ordinary, which with a turning Passage falls into Tower-dock: In this Alley are two small Courts, very ordinary, and without Names. Rose-alley, over-against Barking Church, being long and ordinary, and hath a Passage down Steps into Chitterling-alley, as also into Gloucester-court. Then Barking Church, a Peculiar to the Archbishop of Canterbury; to which Church the Abbot of Barking was antiently Patron. The Dismes 10 s. 8 d.

ON the Backside of Barking Church-yard is an Alley, or Passage, into Tower-hill, with Houses on the one Side, which have a Prospect of the Church and Church-yard; and on this Part, being the North Side, was antiently Barking Chapel, long since dissolved. On the South East Corner of Tower-street is a Row of Houses fronting the Tower, and leading to Thames-street, being pleasantly situated, having also the Prospect of the Thames.

Thames-street is a Place of considerable Trade and taken up by great Dealers, as well by Wholesale as Retail: And, altho' the Street, since the new Building, is broad, yet on Account of the Custom-house, and the several Keys and Wharfs, it is extremely pester'd with Carts, to the great Annoyance of the Inhabitants and Passengers thro' it. This Street runneth a very great Length from East to West, even to Puddle-dock, which is about a Mile, but lies in several Wards. The Part in this Ward goeth no farther than Billingsgate.

THE present Names of the Keys or Wharfs lying on the South Side, beginning at the Tower-dock, are Brewers Key, Chester Key, Galley Key, Wool Key, Porter's Key, Custom-house Key, Great Bear Key, Little Bear Key, Wiggins's Key, Ralf's Key, Temple Key, Little Dice Key, Great Dice Key, Smart's Key, and then Billingsgate; which which said Keys are all made Use of for the Lading and Unlading of Merchants Goods, and some of these Keys are more considerable than others, particularly Bear Key, there being one of the greatest Markets in England for Wheat and other Kind of Grain, brought hither by Coasting Vessels.

ON the North Side of this Thames-street, beginning towards Billingsgate are these Courts, viz. Dog-tavern-court, a handsome and genteel Place well inhabited; Wickeler's-yard, taken up in Warehouses for stowing of Merchants Goods; Nag's-head-court, but ordinary; and here is kept the Coal-Meters Office; Smither's Coffee-house being in a Court wholly taken up by the said Coffeehouse, and hath a Passage into Water-lane; Vine-court, taken up by Warehouses.

Beer-lane, comes out of Tower-street, and turns into Thames-street, a Place of small Account. In this Lane are these Courts, viz. Glocester-court, a handsome Place with a Free Stone Pavement, and hath a Passage into Priest's-alley; Horn-alley, but indifferent, hath a Passage into Thames-street, another into Rose-alley, and another into Chitterling-alley, both indifferent Places; Custom-house-court, a handsome Place, with a Free Stone Pavement; at the Upper End of this Court is another small Court so called, which hath a Passage through the Ship Tavern into Water-lane.

Water-lane, a very great Thorough-fare, occasioned by the Custom-house, as being the ready Passage to it, and is, for the generality, taken up by Publick-Houses: This Lane is so called as running down to the Water-gate by the Custom-house; but formerly it was called Sporiar-lane; in this Lane is Orance-court, having but two Houses, the rest taken up in Warehouses; and here is the Trinity-house, and Ballast-Office, before spoken of.

Harp-lane comes out of Tower-street, and falls into Thames-street. On the East Side is Bakers-hall, already mentioned, some Time the Dwelling-house of John Chickley, Esq; Chamberlain of the City of LONDON. On the West Side of this Harp-lane is Cross-lane, which is but ordinary, and leads to St. Mary's-hill; St. Dunstan's-hill, formerly called Church-lane, runs as far as St. Dunstan's Church-yard, and from thence down unto Thames-street. On the West Side of the said Church is another Lane, called Church-lane, which turning into another towards St. Mary-hill, is called Fowl-lane. This St. Dunstan's-hill is a Place well inhabited by Merchants, especially about the Church, and on the East Side, over-against the Church is Coffin-court, which is but narrow, and not over well inhabited.

THEN St. Dunstan's Church, before described; adjoining to this Church Northwards is Church-alley, which hath a handsome Free Stone Paving, and good Buildings, on the Side fronting the Church; and this Alley leadeth into Idle-lane, which comes out of the West End of Tower-street, and falls into Thames-street. On the West Side of this Lane is Cross-lane, which falls into St. Mary-hill; by this Church is Priest's-alley, also of good Account.

Mincing-lane, antiently called Mincheon-lane, is built with good Houses, which, for the generality, are taken up by Merchants and Persons of Repute; the Street is broad, leading out of Tower-street, and going up into Fenchurch-street.

Mark-lane, or Mart-lane, a Place now well inhabited with divers large Houses for Merchants; but there are yet some old Timber-Houses in it. The greatest Part of this Lane is in this Ward, to wit, from Tower-street unto that Part where the Post and Chain is placed a-cross the Street, which is above the West End of Hart-street: And in this Part of the Lane are these Places, viz. Sugar-loaf-alley, which is but indifferent; over-against which is the Old Navy-Office, Well-alley, being both small and narrow; Pick-axe-alley, also small, and Star-alley, which is but ordinary.

Hart-street, is but short, coming out of Mark-lane, and falls into Crutched-fryars, by St. Olave Hart-street Church, belonging to the Diocese of LONDON, a Church-yard behind it: Over-against this Church is Crosseys, or Angel-court, which is an open Place, with good Buildings, well inhabited.

Seething; or Sything-lane, runneth Northwards from Tower-street unto Crutched-fryars: It is now a Place of no great Account, but amongst the Inhabitants some are Merchants. Here is the Navy-Office, but the chief Gate for Entrance is out of Crutched-fryars: And in this Lane are these Courts and Places of Name, viz. John De-veres's-yard, broad in the Middle, but ordinary, with a narrow Passage into Mark-lane; Carr-yard, a handsome open Place, but meanly inhabited; St. Catharine's-court, handsome and well inhabited; Star-alley, newly built for Warehouses and Tenements; Black-raven-court, an open Place, with new Brick Buildings, well inhabited; Plough-yard, but ordinary built and inhabited; Crown-court, but small, with a Free Stone Pavement.

Tower-hill, the West Row of Buildings, with Part of the Hill (which is in this Ward) is a handsome Structure, well inhabited and pleasantly seated in an open Air, having the delightful Prospect of the Thames and the Tower: And in this Row is Barking-alley, or Alleys, one leading into Tower-street, and the other into Seething-lane, in both which the Buildings encompass Barking Church on North and East Sides. Between Barking-alley and St. Catharine's-court, already taken Notice of, is

THE RECEIVER'S OFFICE for GREENWICH HOSPITAL of the Six-pences per Mensen on Merchants Seamens Wages.

THIS Office is under the Direction of the following Persons: The Sixpenny Office.

William Allix, Esq; Commissioner and Receiver-General, whose Salary is 300*l.* per Ann. besides a Dwelling-house, &c.

Mr. James Hudson, Comptroller, 100*l.*

Mr. William Turner, 50*l.* 2 Clerks to the Receiver General.

Mr. Isaac Giberne, 40*l.* 5

Mr. Henry Corry, Comptroller's Clerk, 40*l.*

Housekeeper, 20*l.*

THE Money received in this Office is paid Monthly to Admiral Cavendish, Treasurer of Greenwich Hospital.

NEAR this Office is a House formerly the Transport Office, which is now laid aside.

FARTHER Northwards, is Muscovy-court, an open Place, with a Free Stone Pavement. In this Court are good Brick Buildings, well inhabited, and a back Passage, with a Door, into the Navy-Office.

FORMERLY there were round the Tower, old Buildings, which inclosed the Ditch, or Moat: and there stood till the Reign of King Charles II. but being found incommodious, were all by a Command from above, Sir John Robinson being Lieutenant, pulled down, and the Moat cleansed and enlarged: So that now the Tower is not choaked up, but stands open on all Sides.

THUS

THUS much for the Bounds and Antiquity of this Ward; wherein are noted, first, the Tower of LONDON, three Parish Churches; the Custom-house, Navy-Office, and Receiver's Office for Greenwich Hospital; and two Halls of Companies, viz. Clothworkers and Bakers.

THIS Ward hath an Alderman, his Deputy, eight Common-Council-Men, 13 Constables, 12 Scavengers, 13 Wardmote Men, and a Beadle: It is taxed to the Fifteen, 261.

THERE are to watch at the Stands within this Ward every Night, a Constable and the Beadle, with 40 Watchmen.

THE Jury-men, returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward, are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of May.

THE Alderman of this Ward is Sir Charles Peers, Knt.

A L D G A T E W A R D.

THE second Ward within the Walls, on the East Side of the City, is called Ealdgate, or Aldgate Ward, taking its Name from the said Gate. The principal Street of this Ward beginneth at Aldgate, stretcheth West, where was once a handsome Well, but now a Pump is placed. From thence, the Way being divided in two, the first and principal Street called Aldgate-street, runneth on the South Side to Lime-street Corner; and half that Street down on the Left Hand, is also in this Ward.

IN the Mid-way, on that South Side, betwixt Aldgate and Lime-street, is Hart-born-alley, a Thorough-fare into Fenchurch-street; and another Alley, once called Sprinkle-alley, from an holy Water-pot, which used to hang there, but now Sugar-loaf-alley.

NEAR this was a large House, and divers Tenements near adjoining, which some Time belonged to a dissolved Priory, but afterwards given by King Henry VIII to one Mrs. Cornwallis, Widow, and her Heirs, in Reward for some fine Puddings which she made and presented to him: Such was the Princely Liberality of those Times. A littler farther was the House of Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, which is now the African-house.

THEN, somewhat more West, is Belzeter's-lane, so called from the first Builder and Owner thereof, now corruptly called Billiter-lane; a Place consisting formerly of poor and ordinary Houses, where it seems needy and beggarly People used to inhabit; whence the Proverb, A Bawdy Beggar of Billiter-lane; which is somewhere used by Sir Thomas More, in the Book he wrote against Tyndal.

BETWIXT this Belzeter's-lane and Lime-street, three new Houses being to be built, in the Year 1590, in a Place where before was a large Garden Plat, inclosed from the Street by a high Brick Wall, upon taking down the said Wall, and digging for Cellarage, another Wall of Stone was found directly under the Brick Wall, with an arched Gate-way of Stone, and Gates of Timber to be closed in the Midst towards the Street; the Timber of the Gates was consumed, but the Hinges of Iron were then remaining on their Staples on both Sides.

MOREOVER, in that Wall were square Windows, with Bars of Iron on each Side this Gate; the Wall was above two Fathoms deep under Ground: This, Stow judged to be the Ruins of some House burnt in the Reign of King Stephen, when the Fire began in the House of one Ackward, near London-stone, and consumed East to Aldgate: Whereby it appeareth, how greatly the Ground of the City hath been raised in that Place.

ON the North Side, this principal Street stretcheth to the West Corner of St. Andrew's Church, and then the Ward turneth towards the North, by St. Mary-street, on the East Side of St. Augustine's Church, in the Wall, and by Bury's-marks again, or about by the Wall to Aldgate.

THE second Way from Aldgate, more towards the South from the Pump afore said, is called Fenchurch-street, and is of Aldgate Ward, to Culver-alley, which is on the West Side of Ironmongers Hall.

AGAIN, from Aldgate, out of the principal Street, close by the Gate and Wall of the City, runneth a Lane South to Crowched-fryars, Woodrose-lane, and so to Tower-hill: And out of this Lane West, a Street called Hart-street, which in that Ward stretcheth to Sydon, or Seething-lane, by St. Olaves's Church: One other Lane more West from Aldgate, goeth by Northumberland House toward Crossed, or Crowched-fryars: Then on the same Side is the North End of Mark-lane, and Blanch-appleton, or Chappleton, where the Ward endeth.

THE antient Bounds of this Ward may be taken from the Extent of the Soke of the Priory of Christ Church; and what that is, may be known from what is wrote by one of that Convent, and preserved in an old Book, called Dunthorne; where we read, Sciendum igitur quanta sit Soka, cujus fines tales sunt. A Porta de Aldgate, &c. i. e. "We must know therefore, how great the Soke is, which hath such Bounds: "From the Gate of Aldgate, as far as the Gate "of the Bailey of the Tower, called Cungate, and "all Cheken-lane, towards Barking Church, as "far as the Church-yard, except one House "nearer than the Church-yard; and the Journey is returned the same Way, as far as the "Church of St. Olave's; and then we come "back by the Street which goes by Coleman-church; then it goes forth towards Fenchurch, and so there on this Side our Houses is "is a Lane, through which we ent unto the "the House of Theobald Fitz-Ivo, Alderman; "which Lane now is stopped, because it had "been suspected for Thieves in the Night: "Therefore because a Way was not open there, "we come back again by a Lane towards the "Church of St. Michael, and as far as Lime-street, to the House of Richard Cavel. This "therefore is our Inward Soke, and these are "the Bounds of it. This the Queen-Mother gave to us, with the Gate of Aldgate. From "Lime-street we go through the Street by the "Church of St. Andrew's, as far as the Chapel "of St. Augustine upon the Wall; then as far "as the Gate of the Church-yard. This is the "Circuit of our Inner Soke.

THUS much for the Bounds. Now for Monuments, or Places most antient and notable. First, To begin with the dissolved Priory of the Holy Trinity, called Christ Church, on the Right Hand within Aldgate. This Priory was founded by Matilda the Queen, Daughter to Malcolm,
The Priory of the Holy Trinity.

Malcolm, King of Scotland, Wife to Henry I. in the same Place, where Siredus some Time began to erect a Church in Honour of the Cross, and St. Mary Magdalene, of which the Dean and Chapter of Waltham were wont to receive thirty Shillings. The Queen was to acquit her Church thereof, and in Exchange gave unto them a Mill; King Henry, her Husband, confirmed her Gift. This Church was given to Norman; the first Canon Regular in all England.

THE said Queen also gave unto the same Church, and those that served GOD therein, the Port of Aldgate, and the Soke thereunto belonging, with all Customs, so free as she had held the same, and 25 l. Blanks, which she had of the City of Exeter, as appeareth by her Deed, wherein she nameth the House Christ-church, and reporteth Aldgate to be of her Demains; which she granted with two Parts of the Rent of the City of Exeter.

THE Deed of Queen Maud follows, as it was taken out of the Register of the said Priory, called there Prioratus de Cricchurch.

KING Stephen also confirmed this Payment of 25 l. ad Scalam, by a Charter, directed to William, Bishop of Exeter, the Sheriffs, &c.

AND when Henry II. styled Fitz-Empress, Anno 1180, and the 26th of his Reign, made a new Money current, the Sheriff of Exeter would not pay the Prior of Christ-church at Michaelmas, the Half-year's Rent, viz. 12 l. 16 s. 3 d. secundum pondus Blanc. i. e. according to the Weight Blank (this new Money being of less Weight than Money was when Queen Maud gave the said Gift) the said Prior, whose Name was St. Stephen, obtained the full Payment by a Charter from that King: For new Money was 20 d. ob. the Ounce, 20 s. 6 d. the Pound; so that now the Prior's Due was 25 l. 12 s. 6 d. i. e. 25 l. ad Scalam, at the Scale.

THERE was another Charter, whereby this Priory was privileged to inclose the Way along London-Wall, and stop the Passage, and enlarge their Priory to the very Wall.

Norman took on him to be Prior of Christ-Church, in the Year of Christ 1108, in the Parishes of St. Mary Magdalene, St. Michael, St. Catharine, and the Blessed Trinity, which now were made but one Parish of the Holy Trinity, and was, in old Time, of the Holy Cross, or Holy Rood Parish.

THE Priory was built on a Piece of Ground in the Parish of St. Catharine, towards Aldgate, near the Chapel of St. Michael, and was above 300 Feet in Length. The Soke and Ward of Aldgate was then bounded, as is before shewn. The Queen was also assistant in procuring the Land and English Knighten Guild to be given to Prior Norman. The Honourable Geffrey de Clinton was also instrumental therein, and obtained, that the Canons might inclose the Way betwixt their Church and the Wall of the City, &c. This Priory, in Process of Time, became a very large Church, rich in Lands and Ornaments, and surpassed all the Priories in the City of LONDON, or Shire of Middlesex; the Prior whereof was an Alderman of LONDON, viz. of Port-foken Ward, as has been shewn in the Account of that Ward.

AFTER this great Priory had swallowed up those four Parishes above-named, the Inhabitants of the Parish of St. Catharine's, procured themselves a Chapel, or Church, to be built in the Church-yard of the Priory, for their more convenient and quiet Resort to perform their Divine Service in; the Prior appointing them one of his Canons, according to his Pleasure, to say Mass to them: But still they were bound to Christen their Children in the Conventual Church, and to come thither at all solemn Times, that being the Parochial Church; where, for a great while before, they commonly resorted in a Part of that Church on the South, where the Altar of St.

St. Mary Magdalene was placed : So that hereby Mass was saying in two Places of the Church at one Time : Which, by the Noise of several celebrating together, a great Confusion and Disturbance was occasioned. To prevent this, the said Chapel was at length erected, where one of the Canons officiated : But in Time great Discord happened between the Priory and them, about their Neglect of Coming to the Conventual Church : And Restraint was put upon them, as to their frequenting their own Church or Chapel, and obliging them to resort to the great Church for the Christening of their Children, and upon all the Holidays, especially the Greater; as in the Night and Day of our Lord's Nativity, Good Friday, the Day of the Benediction of the Easter Wax-candle, the Morning of Easter-day, the Vespers and Vigils of the Feasts of the Holy Trinity, and the Dedication of the Conventual Church of the Holy Trinity. For these Things great Contentions arose between the Prior, Robert Exeter, and the Convent, and the aforesaid Parishioners; and continued to the Time of William Haradon, and Lord Richard Clifford, Bishop of LONDON : Who, in the Year 1414, made an Accommodation of their Differences by a Composition between them; the Terms of which were as follow, viz. That the said Parishioners of St. Catharine's, Christ's, or Creech-church, should have a Baptismal Font a-new set up in their Church, or Chapel, for Baptizing of Children, and to have other Solemnities to be there performed (about which such Contentions had before arisen among them) for all Times hereafter : That they should resort to the Conventual Church on the Festivals and Dedication of the said Conventual Church in the Eve of St. Bartholomew, yearly, and there, in Token of their Submission, and Acknowledgment, each should, in those Festivals, offer their Pence, Half-pence, and Farthings : And that they might, if they pleased, keep the Dedication of St. Catharine in their own said Chapel, or Church. Which, he the Bishop, out of his paternal Affection towards them, yielded unto. Further, That they might not ring the Bells on Easter-day, till the Office was finished at the Conventual Church. That one of the Canons, to be placed, or removed at the Pleasure of the Prior, should serve in the said Chapel, as was usual before this present Ordinance, to administer to the said Parishioners the Sacraments and Sacramentals, as antiently was done. That the Prior and Convent henceforth be not obliged to find the Ornaments, nor be at other Charges for the Chapel. All which Ordination, and Composition, the Prior and Convent, and the said Parishioners, had received and promised inviolably to observe perpetually.

Eustacius, the Eighth Prior, about the Year 1264, because he would not deal with Temporal Matters, instituted Theobald Fitz-Juonis, Alderman of Portoken Ward, under him; and William Rising, Prior of Christ-Church, was sworn Alderman of the said Portoken Ward, in the first of Richard II. These Priors sat and rode among the Aldermen of LONDON, in the same Livery, only the Prior's Habit was in Shape of a Spiritual Person, as Stow saith he himself saw in his Childhood; at which Time the Prior kept a most bountiful House, both for Rich and Poor, as well within the House, as at the Gates, to all Comers, according to their Conditions.

BUT to take Leave of this Priory : King Henry VIII, having a Desire to reward Sir Thomas Audley, Speaker of the Parliament against Cardinal Woolsey, as may be read in the Chronicle, sent for the Prior, and commending him for his Hospitality, promised him Preferment, as a Man worthy of greater Dignity; which he surely performed, and then compounded with him to surrender all the Priory, with the Appurtenances, to him, in the Month of July, Anno 1531, in the 23d Year of his Reign. The Canons were sent to other Houses of the same Order : And the Priory, with the Appurtenances, King Henry gave to Sir Thomas Audley, newly Knighted, and afterwards made Lord Chancellor.

Sir Thomas Audley offered the great Church of this Priory, with a Peel of nine well tuned Bells, (whereof the four largest are now at Stepney, and the other five at St. Stephen's, Coleman-street) to the Parishioners of St. Catharine Christ-church, in Exchange for their small Parish Church, being willing to have it pull'd down, and to have it built there towards the Street : But the Parishioners, having Doubts in their Heads of After-claps, refused the Offer.

THEN was the Priory Church and Steeple proffered to whomsoever would take it down, and carry it from the Ground; but no Man would undertake the Offer : Whereupon Sir Thomas Audley was obliged to be at more Charges to take it down, than could be made of the Stones, Timber, Lead, Iron, &c. For the Workmen, with great Labour, beginning at the Top, loosed Stone from Stone, and threw them down, whereby the most Part of them were broken, and few remained whole, and those were sold very cheap : For all the Buildings, then made, about the City were of Brick and Timber. At that Time, any Man in the the City might have a Cart-load of hard Stone, for Paving, brought to his Door, for 6d. or 7d. with the Carriage.

THE said Thomas Lord Audley built and dwelt on this Priory, during his Life, and died there, in the Year 1544; since which Time the said Priory came, by Marriage of the Lord Audley's Daughter and Heir, to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, and was then called the Duke's-place.

TRINITY-CHRIST-CHURCH,

NOW CALLED

St. James Duke's Place.

AT this Time, the Inhabitants, dwelling in the said Duke's-place, became utterly destitute of any Parish-Church for resorting to Divine Worship: But the Parish-Church of St Catharine being so near, standing in the Cœmitery, or Church-yard, of the dissolved Priory, they went thither at the Hours of Service, and Administration of the Holy Sacraments, whereby they became a Burthen to the Parish, yet well enough to be borne withal, in regard to the Benefit ensuing by them: So that they were looked upon as equal Parishioners, exercising all Duties there, even as if it had been their own Parish.
